START

Microfilmed By:

NORTHEAST DOCUMENT CONSERVATION CENTER
Andover, MA 01810

July 1994

Camera Operator:
John Sullivan

MASTER NEGATIVE NUMBER: BSO-56-054

MICROFILMED
August 1993 - April 1994

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA SCRAPBOOK MICROFILMING PROJECT

Funded in part by

THE NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE HUMANITIES

Grant No. PS-20709-93

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA MICROFILMING PROJECT

A Cooperative Project Between the Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives and the Boston Public Library (August 1993 - April 1994)

The Microfilming Project incorporates two collections of scrapbooks housed in two separate repositories. The first set of scrapbooks (80 volumes) resides within the Allen A. Brown Collection of the Boston Public Library (BPL) Music Department. Their call number is M.125.5. The second set of scrapbooks (132 volumes) resides within the Press Clippings collection of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (BSO) Archives. They have the designation Pres 56.

The BPL scrapbooks begin with the founding of the BSO in 1881 and continue, through 79 seasons, to 1960. Articles consist mainly of reviews and feature stories from Boston and New York newspapers. Occasionally, magazine articles and press releases are also included. The scrapbooks cover most aspects of the BSO.

The BSO scrapbooks run from 1889, the Orchestra's 9th season, to 1973. In addition to local reviews and features, the volumes contain articles culled from national and international publications. The scrapbooks document, in detail, all aspects of the BSO: The Symphony Orchestra (including subscription concerts, tours, and trips), the Boston Pops, the Tanglewood Festival, the Tanglewood Music Center, and Symphony Hall.

The two sets of scrapbooks have been filmed as two separate entities. Researchers wanting to look at specific seasons or subjects must examine both sets of films to ensure full coverage.

The scrapbooks do not represent the complete holdings of either location on the subject of the BSO.

Requests for positive microfilm copies of individual rolls, or of film sets, should be directed to the respective repository:

Music Department
Boston Public Library
Post Office Box 286
Boston, MA 02117

Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives
Symphony Hall
Boston, MA 02115

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA SCRAPBOOKS

1889 - 1973

132 VOLUMES

Source: Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives

FINDING AID

Boston Symphony Orchestra Scrapbooks (Series 56, Sub-Series 1)

Source: Press Office (Office of the Public Relations Director)

The BSO scrapbooks comprise part of one series in the BSO Archives. Series 56, Press Clippings, is divided by format into 3 sub-series: 1) Scrapbooks, 1889-1973 (132 volumes); 2) Loose Clippings, 1931-1991 (9 record cartons); and 3) Oversize Newspapers and Journals, 1919-1979 (1 oversize box). Each sub-series is arranged chronologically.

The scrapbooks contain concert notices and reviews, record reviews, and feature articles. Early scrapbooks may also contain programs, tickets, and subscription orders. Materials are organized by concert season into the following categories: BSO (including tours); Kneisel Quartet (and later Boston Symphony Chamber Players); Boston Pops (referred to in early years as Promenade concerts); and Tanglewood (including the Tanglewood Music Center, the Tanglewood Festival, Tanglewood-on-Parade, and the Fromm Festival of Contemporary Music).

Reviews and articles cover a wide range of subjects: Founder H.L. Higginson; BSO conductors, players, trustees, and other personnel; guest artists and composers; BSO and Pops performances and recordings; U.S. and overseas tours; BSO/Cecilia Society joint performances; open rehearsals; and special events connected to anniversary celebrations and fundraising.

Feature stories document changes in the size, composition, and location of the orchestra. Topics include the hiring of women and minorities; the unionization of players; controversies (such as the internment of conductor Karl Muck during World War II); the sale of the old Music Hall; and the construction of Symphony Hall and other structures (such as the Koussevitsky Music Shed at Tanglewood).

Reproductions of the materials in the collection may not be made without permission from the Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives.

GUIDE TO CONTENTS

Institution: BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Series Name: PRESS CLIPPINGS
Series Number: 56
Series Dates: 1889-1991

Sub-series Name: SCRAPBOOKS
Sub-series Number: 1
Sub-series Dates: 1889-1973

VOLUME LISTING

VOL	TITLE	DATES
1	BSO	1889-1890
2	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1890-1891
3	BSO	1891-1892
4	Promenade (Pops)	1892
5	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1892-1893
6	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1893-1894
7	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1894-1895
8	BSO	1895-1896
9	Promenade (Pops)	1895-1896
10	BSO	1896-1897
11	BSO	1897-1898
12	Promenade (Pops)	1897-1898
13	BSO	1898-1899
14	BSO	1899-1900
15	Pops	1899-1900
16	BSO	1900-1901
17	BSO	1901-1902
18	Pops	1901-1903
19	BSO	1902-1903
20	BSO	1903-1904
21	BSO	1904-1905
22	Pops	1904-1905
23	BSO	1905-1906
24	BSO	1906-1907
25	BSO	1907-1908
26	BSO	1908-1909
27	BSO Pops	1909-1910
28	BSO Pops	1910-1911
29	BSO Advertisements	1910-1911
30	BSO Pops	1911-1912
31	BSO Pops	1912-1913
32	BSO Pops	1913-1914
33	BSO Pops	1914-1915
34	BSO Pops	1915-1916
35	BSO Pops	1916-1917
36	BSO Pops	1917-1918
37	Karl Muck	1918
38	BSO Pops	1918-1919
39	BSO Pops	1919-1920
40	BSO Advertisements	1919-1920
41	BSO Pops	1920-1921
42	BSO Pops	1921-1922
43	BSO BSO Advertisements Pops Advertisements	1922-1923
44	BSO Pops	1922-1924
45	BSO Pops	1924
46	BSO BSO Advertisements Pops Advertisements	1924-1926
47	BSO Pops	1925-1926
48	BSO Advertisements Pops Advertisements	1926-1927
49	BSO Pops	1926-1928
50	BSO	1928
51	BSO Pops	1928-1929
52	BSO Pops U.S. Tour	1929-1930
53	BSO	1930-1931
54	BSO Pops	1931-1932
55	BSO Pops	1932-1933
56	BSO	1933-1934
57	BSO	1934-1935
58	BSO	1935-1936
59	BSO	1936-1937

VOL	TITLE	DATES
60	Pops
	Tanglewood	1936-1937
61	BSO	1937
62	BSO	1937-1938
63	Pops
	Tanglewood	1938
64	BSO	1938-1939
65	Pops
	Tanglewood	1939
66	BSO	1939-1940
67	Tanglewood	1939-1941
68	BSO
	Pops	1940
69	BSO	1940-1941
70	Tanglewood	1940-1944
71	BSO	1941-1942
72	BSO	1942-1943
73	BSO	1943-1944
74	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1944-1945
75	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1945-1946
76	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1946-1947
77	Tanglewood	1947-1948
78	BSO	1947-1949
79	Tanglewood	1949-1950
80	BSO	1949-1951
81	Tanglewood	1950-1951
82	BSO
	Pops	1951-1952
83	BSO
	Pops	1952-1953
84	Tanglewood	1952-1953
85	BSO	1953-1955
86	Tanglewood	1953-1954
87	Tanglewood	1954-1955
88	BSO
	Pops	1955-1956
89	Tanglewood	1955-1956
90	Tanglewood	1955-1956
91	European Tour	1956
92	European Tour	1956-1957
93	BSO
	Pops	1956-1957
94	Tanglewood	1957
95	BSO	1957-1958
96	BSO
	Pops	1958-1959
97	BSO	1958-1959
98	Tanglewood	1958-1959
99	Tanglewood	1959
100	BSO
	Pops	1959-1960
101	Tanglewood	1959-1960
102	Far Eastern Tour	1959-1960
103	BSO
	Pops	1960-1961
104	Tanglewood	1961
105	BSO
	Pops	1961-1962
106	Tanglewood	1962
107	BSO
	Pops	1962-1963
108	Tanglewood	1963
109	BSO
	Pops	1963-1964
110	Tanglewood	1963-1964
111	BSO
	Pops	1964-1966
112	Tanglewood	1965
113	BSO 85th Anniversary	1965
114	BSO
	Pops	1965-1966
115	Tanglewood	1966
116	BSO
	Pops	1966-1967
117	Tanglewood	1967
118	BSO
	Pops	1967-1968
119	Tanglewood	1968-1969
120	BSO
	Pops	1968-1969
121	Tanglewood	1969
122	BSO
	Pops	1969-1970
123	Tanglewood	1970
124	BSO
	Pops	1970-1971
125	Tanglewood	1971
126	BSO
	Pops	1971-1972
127	European Tour	1970-1971
128	European Tour	1971
129	Tanglewood	1972
130	BSO
	Pops	1972-1973
131	Tanglewood	1973
132	BSO
	Pops	1973-1974

MATERIALS NOT FILMED

SUB-SERIES NUMBER	SUB-SERIES NAME	SUB-SERIES DATES
2	Loose Clippings	1931-1991
3	Oversize Newspapers and Journals	1919-1979

COPYRIGHT STATEMENT

The copyright law of the Unites States - Title 17, United States Code - concerns the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted material.

Under certain conditions specified in the law, libraries and archives are authorized to furnish a photocopy or other reproduction. One of these specified conditions is that the photocopy or other reproduction is not to be "used for any purpose other than private study, scholarship, or research." If a user makes a request for, or later uses, a photocopy or reproduction for purposes in excess of "fair use," that user may be liable for copyright infringement.

This institution reserves the right to refuse to accept a copy order if, in its judgment, fulfillment of the order would involve violation of the copy-right law.

TECHNICAL DATA

IMAGE PLACEMENT: (IA) IB IIA IIB

REDUCTION RATIO: 14X

FILM STOCK:

REEL 54

Volumes 90

Tanglewood

1955-1956

PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm

A3

A4

A5

1.0 mm

1.5 mm

2.0 mm

2.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

MULTIPLE EXPOSURES DUE TO COLOR VARIATIONS AND OVERLAPPING MATERIAL

VOLUME 90

Tanglewood

1955 - 1956

TANGLEWOOD

1956

1041

NATIONAL FLAT BACK SCRAP BOOKS

NATIONAL Made in U.S.A.

FULL DUCK COVER, MANILA PAPER

Without Index, Ruling, Paging or Title

NUMBER	THICKNESS	SIZE
1032	72 Leaves	12⅝ × 10¼
1033	72 Leaves	15 × 10
1034	100 Leaves	15 × 10
1036	90 Leaves	16 × 11⅜
1038	150 Leaves	16 × 11⅜
1039	90 Leaves	18 × 13
→ 1041	150 Leaves	18 × 13
1042	150 Leaves	25 × 20

To duplicate this book Order Number indicated by arrow

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News
WEST HARTFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,000
JUL 5 1956

FOOTLIGHTS IN THE FIELDS

'Three Wishes' Is Artful Show

Sophie Maslow, brilliant choreographer who has appeared with the New York City Center Opera Co., the New London Dance Festival, the New York City Center Dance Theatre, and the Martha Graham Co., will stage the unique dances in the Oakdale production of "Three Wishes For Jamie" playing through July 14, with an emphasis upon integrating the Irish and American background of the story.

"Three Wishes For Jamie" was originally a book by Charles O' Neal, who won the Christopher Award for his novel about Jamie McRuin, an Irish lad who is visited by the Fairy Queen Una and granted three wishes. How he gets them is artfully portrayed in music and lyrics by Ralph Blane, with dances by Miss Maslow, and dialogue by Abe Burrows.

Patricia Wilson, Judy Tyler's understudy for the current Broadway production of Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Pipe Dream", will portray the beautiful Maeve, to whom Jamie sings the lovely and romantic "My Heart's Darlin'." Mildred Cook is cast as Tirsa, the gal who has her eye on Jamie, and defends her lack of beauty with the comical "Love Has Nothing To Do With Looks."

Jean Handzlik, her son, Jan Handzlik, and Jack Leon, are also featured in the cast.

Highlights of the stirring, emotional musical play are two lively ensemble numbers, "Goin' On A Hayride", and "Trottin' To The Fair", and the heartwarming "Wishing World" which ends the show is a song that caps off a delightful evening with a lift in spirits and renewed faith in life and love.

Composer-lyricist Ralph Blane, who has been compared with Irving Berlin and Cole Porter, has given the musical world such song hits as "Trolley Song", "Buckle Down Winsocki", and "The Boy Next Door".

Jazz At a Pops Concert? Never!

This was the case a few years ago. But in 1956, jazz at outdoor concerts has become fashionable.

Duke Ellington's appearance at Yale Bowl Tuesday evening, July 10, in the second concert of the 1956 Pops season underlines it. But Ellington will bring into the Bowl for the first time a jazz orchestra of 17 men. What's more, they will perform three original Ellington jazz compositions, plus all-time "standards" as encores. Duke and his men will take over the entire second half of the July 10 program.

This won't be Ellington's only Pops appearance this summer. He will appear later in July with the Cleveland pops orchestra, the Connecticut Symphony at Fairfield and at the Shakespeare Festival in Stratford, Ont. There he will lead two of 10 jazz concerts.

Frank Brieff, regular conductor of the New Haven Symphony Orchestra's winter series, will share the conductor's role with Ellington. The Symphony will play four numbers the first half of the program.

The pattern of the 1956 Berkshire Festival, which commenced with a chamber music concert on Wednesday is the same as in recent years.

Six Wednesday evening concerts of chamber music will feature noted soloists and ensembles. In the final four week ends of the Festival, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony assembles at Tanglewood for 12-week end concerts. Chamber orchestra concerts, the popular "Bach-Mozart series," are given during the first two week ends in July.

This week on the 200-acre pine-clad estate of Tanglewood, at Lenox in Western Massachusetts, the Boston Symphony Orchestra of 104 musicians under the baton of Charles Munch, its music director for the past seven years, and the 400 students of the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, will commence the annual program of 24 public concerts and some 30 student demonstrations.

The Berkshire Hills is the mec ca for more than 130,000 music lovers each summer for the past decade and a half during the concentrated six weeks in July and early August that is the period of the Berkshire Festival. Classical and modern symphonic music, works for chamber orchestra, choral pieces, chamber music and opera will once more lure the city tourist over highways and railway lines to the cool green of the Berkshires, from July 4 to August 12.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2325
JUL 5 1956

B ton Symphony pens 1956 Season

Chamber Music Concert Last Night Was Inaugural

Noted Soloist and Ensembles Will Feature Wednesday Evening Offerings.—Full 104-Piece Orchestra Scheduled for Four Week-end Performances.

This week the Boston Symphony Orchestra of 104 musicians under the baton of Charles Munch, its music director, and the 400 students of the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, begins the annual program of 24 public concerts and some 30 student demonstrations.

Classical and modern symphonic music, works for chamber orchestra, choral pieces, chamber music and opera will once more lure the city tourist over highways and railway lines to the cool green of the Berkshires, from now to August 12. This year marks the nineteenth summer, since 1937, that the Boston Symphony has directed the Berkshire Festival, which grew from a local project for outdoor concerts first undertaken in 1934 under canvas by citizens of Berkshire county, and which now sets the pace throughout this country for great symphonic music by orchestras in their full winter amplitude.

The pattern of the 1956 Berkshire Festival, which began with a chamber music concert of works by Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet in the intimate 1200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall last night, is the same as in recent years. Six Wednesday evening concerts of chamber music will feature noted soloists and ensembles. Chamber orchestra concerts, the popular "Bach-Mozart series," performed in the same auditorium by principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Dr. Munch, are given during the first two week-ends in July. In the final four week-ends of the Festival, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony assembles at Tanglewood for 12 week-end concerts. In 1955 an attendance at these was registered of 108,336, an average of 9028 persons, more than one-third again the capacity of the 6000-seat Shed.

The Berkshire Festival concerts for 1956, as planned by Charles Munch, will pay homage to the current season's 75th Anniversary of the Boston Symphonic Orchestra in performances for the first time at Tanglewood of four works commissioned by the orchestra, symphonic pieces by Goffredo Petrassi (the noted modern Italian who is composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center this summer), Aaron Copland (assistant director of the music school), Howard Hanson and Walter Piston.

The three American symphonies will be brought by the Boston Symphony to Europe immediately after Tanglewood's season ends, when the orchestra makes a five-and-a-half week tour of 13 countries, including a week at the Edinburgh Festival and a six-day concert tour of the Soviet Union, becoming the first American orchestra ever to perform in the U. S. S. R. The commissioned symphonies are: Petrassi, Concerto for Orchestra No. 5; Copland, Symphonic Ode; Hanson, Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; and Piston, Symphony No. 6.

Tanglewood premieres—music given for the first time by the Boston Symphony in the Berkshire Hills—will include this summer a number of works performed in observance of the world-wide celebration of Mozart's bicentennial: the Concerto for Clarinet, K. 622, in which the soloist will be the celebrated jazz musician Benny Goodman in his Tanglewood debut; the Sinfonia Concertante featuring Boston Symphony first-desk men Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; Sherman Walt, bassoon; the Concerto in A major for piano, K. 488, in which the soloist will be the Berkshire Music Center's opera department head, Boris Goldovsky; the Concerto in F major for three pianos, K. 242, featuring Mr. Goldovsky and duo pianists Luboshutz and Nemenoff; and the massive Mass in C. minor, K. 427, Kyrie and Gloria, which Leonard Bernstein will conduct as a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, former conductor of the orchestra.

Two contemporary choral works will have their first performances at Tanglewood, sung by the Yale Glee Club in its initial appearances in the Berkshire Festival, with Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, the conductor: Bohuslav Martinu's Military Mass, and Henry Cowell's A Thanksgiving Psalm from "The Dead Sea Scrolls."

Two all-Wagner programs have been planned by Charles Munch during which concert versions will be given of "Die Walkure," Act 1, with Metropolitan Opera stars Margaret Harshaw and Albert Da Costa, and basso James Pease, as soloists; and of the opening and final scene of "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," Act III, with Miss Harshaw, Mr. Da Costa, Mr. Pease and soprano Marguerite Willauer. In both concerts the Boston Symphony will be backed by the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center, trained by Hugh Ross.

Other contemporary music includes: Irving Fine, Serious Song for Strings; Alexei Haieff, Divertimento; Charles Ives, "The Unanswered Question"—these three on a chamber orchestra program conducted by Lukas Foss; also, Bartok, Concerto for Orchestra; Barraud, "La Kermesse"; Moevs, Variations for Orchestra; Freed, Festival Overture; Enesco, Suite for Orchestra, Op. 9.

Symphony Turn to tenth page

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News
STRATFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,575
JUL 5 1956

Tanglewood Untangles .

This week on the 200-acre pine-clad estate of Tanglewood, at Lenox in western Massachusetts, the Boston Symphony Orchestra of 104 musicians under the baton of Charles Munch, its music director for the past seven years, and the 400 students of the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, will commence the annual program of 24 public concerts and some 30 student demonstrations which have made the Berkshire Hills a mecca for more than 130,000 music lovers each summer for the past decade and a half during the concentrated six weeks in July and early August that is the period of the Berkshire Festival.

Classical and modern symphonic music, works for chamber orchestra, choral pieces, chamber music and opera will once more lure the city tourist over highways and railway lines to the cool green of the Berkshires, from July 4 to August 12. This year marks the nineteenth summer, since 1937, that the Boston Symphony Orchestra has directed the Berkshire Festival, which grew from a local project for outdoor concerts first undertaken in 1934 under canvas by citizens of Berkshire county, and which now sets the pace throughout this country for great symphonic music by orchestras in their full winter amplitude.

The pattern of the 1956 Berkshire Festival, which commences with a chamber music concert of works by Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall on Wednesday evening (July 4), is the same as in recent years. Six Wednesday evening concerts of chamber music will feature noted soloists and ensembles. In 1955 these performances, once considered for special tastes only, attracted a total of 9,561 persons to average 1,593 or more than the capacity of the auditorium. Chamber orchestra concerts, the popular "Bach-Mozart series," performed in the same auditorium by principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Dr. Munch, are given during the first two week-ends in July, and last year attendance at these six events totaled 18,190, an average of 3,032, again considerably above average.

In the final four week-ends of the Festival, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony assembles at Tanglewood for twelve week-end concerts, and in 1955 an attendance at these was registered of 108,336, an average of 9,028 persons, more than one-third again the capacity of the 6,000-seat shed.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
FRAMINGHAM, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 11,200
JUL 5 1956

Night of Mozart By Goodman at Tanglewood

LENOX, July 5—A memorable night of Mozart, topped off with a "Concerto For Clarinet" performance by the one and only Benny Goodman, is the reward in store for weekend visitors to the famous Berkshire Symphonic Festival at beautiful Tanglewood in Lenox.

The performances will start at 8:30 p.m. on Friday, according to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce. The following evening, visitors again will be treated to a night of Mozart plus selected pieces.

On Sunday, the day's program will get underway at 2:30 p.m. At that time, according to officials of the Boston Symphony orchestra sponsors of this famous musical festival, Haydn's Symphony No. 6 and a "Fine Serious Song For Strings" will be among the featured numbers.

Berkshire Eagle, Thursday, July 5, 1956

Notes and Footnotes

WAS MIGHTILY impressed at the goodly number of folk who turned out last night for the opening of Tanglewood, an annual event of however many years we scarcely dare to compute. The great Music Shed is not employed for these early programs, but rather the much smaller Theater-Concert Hall for more intimate music-making, if one dare call 1,500 to 2,000 people an intimate lot.

Indeed, these early weeks are become known as the "little season" but like most little ones, has grown steadily. Fell talking with Mr. and Mrs. Peter Pianarosa, who retold the early struggles to launch a music season hereabouts. Money was not flowing as now, and it was uphill all the way to sell folk the idea, and a $5 season ticket. It was "music under the moon" at the Hanna Farm, now Stockbridge School, and opening night was so chill that ladies went attired in fur coats and overshoes.

Folks remembering the start of music in the Berkshires allow that even today's little season draws greater audiences than attended the first faltering steps toward today's big music under Munch. The founders who did the leg-work and selling enjoyed the flush of first success. Their only reward, of course, is seeing their infant grow into a giant, and as any grown child, it no more needs their ministrations. Now it's a casino.

Perhaps many of the early promoters of music in the Berkshires attend and even prefer the little season because of nostalgia. It recalls the music under the moon when most everybody on hand knew everybody else. It was gemutlich, cozy and satisfying. The Music Shed concerts with thousands swarming onto the grounds rather frightens anyone who spent weeks once upon a time ringing doorbells and pushing $5 tickets. The little season suits them best.

1100 PRESENT AT OPENING OF TANGLEWOOD

Kroll String Quartet Given Ovation at Berkshire Music Festival

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Lenox, July 4—Tanglewood greeted its first guests tonight with open arms. Everything was spic and span, just waiting to be admired, and it was. The honor of opening this Berkshire Music Festival went to the Kroll string quartet, one of the finest of the string quartets now to be heard. The first of six chamber music recitals, to be given each Wednesday night, was heard by an audience of 1100 in spite of a holiday. We have always felt that the audiences for these chamber music recitals were the most discriminating.

Members of the Kroll string quartet are William Kroll, first violin; Louis Graeler, second violin; David Mankovitz, viola, and Avron Twerdowsky, cello. This appearance is the third which the quartet had made in the concert hall.

Lacked Spontaneity

The program opened with a good routine performance of Mozart's so-called "Dissonant" quartet, the C Major, K 465. There was a good tonal balance, fine phrasing and for the most part sure intonation, but the performance lacked the charm and spontaneity which marks Mozart's music.

Next came Prokofieff's "Quartet No. Opus 50" and to it, the quartet brought its superb virtuosity; its exciting rhythmic sense and plan of colors. Tunes fell naturally from Prokofieff's pen, tunes which one could remember. But this composer had a certain impish humor which sometimes caused him to dip his pen in acid and produce a series of sounds that assailed the ear with all the horrors of a cross cut saw.

Continued On Page 8

1100 Present

Continued From Page 1

There is not too much of this sort of thing in the first quartet and under the skillful playing of the artists it became a natural part of the whole. It was an exciting performance of a full-blooded and rewarding work.

The pinnacle of performance came in the last number, Beethoven's "Quartet in C Major, Opus 59" in the last of the three "Rasoumovsky" quartets. Every devotee of chamber music can find in this quartet something personal. It represents a point of quartet composition no other composer has reached.

The Kroll quartet provided a superb interpretation, rich in understanding and powerful in execution, a resounding ovation was the result.

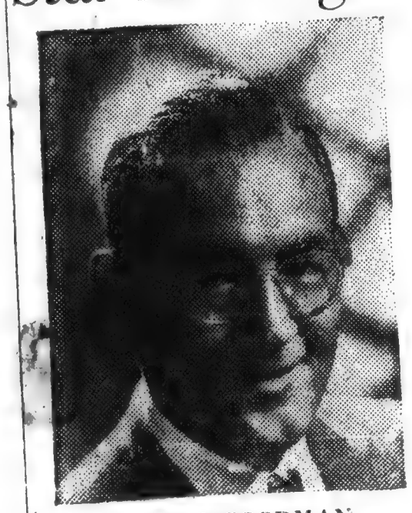
Artists to Follow

Mr. Kroll and such artists to follow on the chamber music series as Benny Goodman, Margaret Harshaw, Ralph Berkovitz, Rudolf Serkin, Zino Erancesatti and the members of the Boston Symphony string quartet, are donating their talents, and the concerts thus benefit the Tanglewood Music School's revolving scholarship fund.

On Friday and Saturday evening, Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, inaugurates two week ends of chamber orchestra concerts, devoted largely to the music of Bach and Mozart. Lukas Foss, associate professor at the University of California will direct the Sunday afternoon concert.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Farmington Valley Herald
COLLINSVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,126
JUL 5 1956

Star At Tanglewood



BENNY GOODMAN

CHARLES MUNCH

The 1956 season of the Boston Symphony series at Tanglewood, known as the Berkshire Concerts, opened Wednesday, July 4, with several string quartet concerts.

Tomorrow, Friday, Benny Goodman, famed jazz clarinetist, will be featured with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony, conducted by Charles Munch, in an all-Mozart program. Goodman will make his debut at Tanglewood as a soloist, and will be featured in a Mozart clarinet concerto.

Additional concerts will be held during the following week by chamber orchestras in the 1200 seat Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, which is located just outside Lenox, Mass., thirty-odd miles from the Farmington Valley.

The Festival concerts will pay homage to Mozart's bi-centennial with programs arranged by Charles Munch, and will feature such concert artists as Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshut, Adele Addison, soprano of Sprinfield, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony.

Music

The Kroll Quartet

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST program of the season at Tanglewood was played in the Theater-Concert Hall last night by the Kroll String Quartet, consisting of William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mankovitz, viola; and Avron Twerdowsky, cello.

Enclosing Prokofieff's first quartet between two of the best known and most highly revered of the repertory's classics, the Mozart C major (K 465) and the Beethoven C major, Opus 59, No. 3, the Krolls satisfied their large and cordial audience with works in which their excellence would be most apparent. Indeed, it would be difficult to find an area in this specialized field in which they would not be peerless.

* * *

EVERYTHING the Krolls play has the stamp of authenticity and of the finest traditions, especially in the classics; and in the contemporaries, they match it with audacity and poise.

The Mozart "Dissonant" had character in every movement, and yet not a stiff scholarly approach. There was vigor and brilliance in the animated sections and a gentle grace and elegance in the more songful movements. One might quibble with the violinistic liberties into which, it may be, Kroll's personal command of the instrument lures him, but the over-all suavity can not obscure the fundamental insight.

* * *

THE PROKOFIEFF had not been heard previously at Tanglewood. It was written 25 years ago and re-states many of the attributes for which the late Russian is best known: a sense of humor, a large reserve of lyricism and an exceptional sense of timbre. This last factor permits him to use the same material in other dress to make it appear new and fresh. For instance, in the recapitulation, he gives the second violin the identical theme with which the first opened the quartet, but he indicates a mute this time and alters the registers of the accompanying instruments. The effect is a peak of beauty but it is achieved by craftsmanship without calling on other capacities.

* * *

THE THIRD Rasoumovsky was played with grand perspective. The conception of details was not always agreed upon within the quartet, but the performance was big and convincing. Tempi and moods were established in a definitive way and the final fugue was built up to spine-tingling excitement; and in all the driving insistence on the accumulating momentum, the statement of the second violin was allowed to be heard above the increasing tension, an exhibit which is too rarely observed.

To combine authentic tradition with spontaneity is a fine and thin distinction, and the success of the Krolls is due to their achievement of these very factors. They added two delightful encores after the Beethoven, a Mozart minuet and a highly diverting march from Kroll's own pen. They were unfortunate choices, if the practice of adding to quartet programs is to be maintained at all. The Mozart is the least chamber-musical of all that composer's minuets, and the clever and amusing march, coming after the Beethoven fugue, seemed like a risqué story told by a preacher, or, in other words, Benny Goodman in reverse.

Chamber Music Concerts At Tanglewood Sundays

The first of six Sunday morning chamber music concerts by students of Richard Burgin, William Kroll and Boston Symphony principals will be given in the Chamber Music Hall at Tanglewood at 10 a.m. this Sunday. In 1955 a similar six concerts attracted 3,400 music lovers.

TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • JULY 4 to AUG. 12
OPENING CONCERTS
Berkshire Festival
BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
THEATER-CONCERT HALL
FRI., July 6, at 8:30—MOZART PROGRAM (MUNCH)
Soloist: BENNY GOODMAN
SAT., July 7, at 8:30: MOZART—MARTINU—COWELL (MUNCH)
SUN., July 8, at 2:30: HADYN—FINE—HAIEFF—IVES—BACH (FOSS)
Soloist: LUKAS FOSS, piano
Tickets Wed., $2, $3; Fri., Sat., Sun., $4, $5. (Admission $2)
Tickets Wed., $2, $3; Fri., Sat., Sun., $4, $5.
Reserved seats for July 13 and 14 all taken; For July 15, $5 only
Baldwin Piano
RCA Victor Records
For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Phone Lenox 600

BENNY GOODMAN will make his Tanglewood debut tomorrow night at 8:30 at the opening of the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Noted jazz clarinetist will display his classical side as soloist in Mozart's Concerto for clarinet, K.622.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
SOUTHBRIDGE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 4,688
JUL 5 1956

Annual Music Festival On In Berkshires

LENOX, Mass., July 5— Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its music director, Charles Munch. For the seventeenth Summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old Summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts began last evening with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 6), Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist.

The Saturday evening (July 7) concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon (July 8) a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood, and Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11-13-14-15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 p. m. Sunday afternoons at 2:30 p. m.

All-Time Record

1955, an all-time record attendance year at the Berkshire Festival, which marked Charles Munch's fifth Summer at Tanglewood, saw an attendance of 136,087 music lovers and total paid admissions of $307,665. Six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts by noted ensembles and soloists averaged an audience of 1,593 or more than the capacity of the auditorium. Chamber orchestra concerts, the popular "Bach-Mozart" series during the first two week ends of the Berkshire Festival, drew an average last Summer of 3,032 persons, again considerably above the capacity of the Theater-Concert Hall.

For the final four week ends of the Berkshire Festival, which has annually attracted crowds from all over the Eastern United States and Canada, the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to Tanglewood for 12 week-end concerts, July 20-August 12, in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, open on three sides so the thousands extra who attend may hear the orchestra on the extensive Tanglewood lawns, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine. In 1955, an average attendance of 9,028, more than one-third again the capacity of the Music Shed, was noted at these programs.

The Festival concerts for 1956, as planned by Charles Munch, will feature during the Shed series two all-Wagner programs in which concert versions of "Die Walkure", Act I, with the opening and final scene of Act III of "Die Meistersinger" will be given, with the assistance of Metropolitan Opera stars, other soloists and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students. The Shed series will also feature Tanglewood first performances of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for this, its seventy-fifth anniversary year, symphonic pieces by Goffredo Petrassi, Howard Hanson, Aaron Copland and Walter Piston. These symphonies will be brought by the Boston Symphony to Europe immediately following the close of the Tanglewood season, when the orchestra makes a five-and-one-half week tour of 13 countries in Europe, including a week at the Edinburgh Festival and a six-day concert tour of the Soviet Union.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
The Barre Gazette
BARRE, Mass.
Weekly Republican
Circ. 1,500
JUL 5 1956

Benny Goodman At Tanglewood

A memorable night of Mozart, topped off with a Concerto for Clarinet performance by the one and only Benny Goodman, is the reward in store for weekend visitors to the famous Berkshire Symphonic Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox. The performances will start at 8:30 p.m. on Friday, July 6th, according to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce. The following evening, visitors again will be treated to a night of Moztr plus selected pieces.

On Sunday, July 8th, the day's program will get underway at 2:30 p.m. At that time, according to officials of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, sponsors of this famous musical festival, Haydn's Symphny No. 6, and a "Fine Serious Song for Strings" will be among the featured numbers.

Bring the entire family to Tanglewood where the beauty of the music is matched by the beauty of the surrounding countryside. Plan a weekend stay enjoying the many available recreational facilities.

Lenox is located on Route 7, in the heart of the scenic Berkshires. Main east-west Routes 2, 9 and 20, all connect with Route 7.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Italian News
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 12,414
JUL 6 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUL 6 1956

Benny Goodman In Tanglewood Debut Tonight

The first orchestral concert of the 1956 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood in Lenox, when Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Mozart program which will feature the Tanglewood debut of famed jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman. As was the pattern last season, the six concerts in this series, known popularly as the "Bach-Mozart" concerts, will be given during the first two weekends of the festival, with programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

For tonight's all-Mozart concert, Dr. Munch has scheduled two symphonies—the G Minor, No. 40, K. 550; and the D Major, No. 38, K. 504; known as the "Prague" Symphony. Mr. Goodman, who will play the Clarinet Concerto in A Major, K. 662, is no stranger to the field of serious music even though he has spent the major part of his career as one of the most important figures in jazz music. He has performed Mozart's two great clarinet works, the Concerto and Quintet, both of which he will play at the Berkshire Festival within the next five days, the Concerto tonight, the quintet next Wednesday evening.

The first half of the concert tomorrow night will again be devoted to music by Mozart conducted by Dr. Munch, the "Haffner" Symphony and Woodwind Sinfonia Concertante. On the second half of the program, Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's chorus department, will conduct two contemporary works new to Tanglewood, one of them, indeed, a world premiere; they are Martinu's "Military Mass" and Cowell's A Thanksgiving Psalm from "The Dead Sea Scrolls" (i nits first performance anywhere). Assisting in these two works will be the Yale Glee Club (Fenno Heath, director) of 50 voices making its Tanglewood debut.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Lukas Foss, who is a member of the composition faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct a concert of music by Haydn Fine, Haieff and Ives, and he will also be the soloist in Bach's Piano Concerto in D Minor.

Petrassi's work to be performed at Tanglewood Festival on July 27

A performance of the symphony by Goffredo Petrassi, written for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be given its first performance at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this summer.

Petrassi's Fifth Concerto for Orchestra will be performed at a shed concert on Friday, July 27.

This work will be played in Europe when the Symphony goes abroad following the Tanglewood concerts.

The Festival concerts for 1956, as planned by Charles Munch, will pay homage to Mozart's bicentennial in the chamber orchestra concerts, and will feature during the Shed series two all-Wagner programs in which concert versions of "Die Walkure", Act I, and the opening and final scene of Act III of "Die Meistersinger" will be given, with the assistance of Metropolitan Opera stars, other soloists and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students.

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts began on Wednesday evening with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. Tonight, Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist.

The Saturday evening concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11, 13, 14, 15, will all be given in the intimate 1,2000 seat Teatre Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 P.M., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 P.M.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
JUL 6 1956

Festival Program Spots Home Talent

It is not every day a composition by a member of the faculty of the Boston Symphony's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, is played on a Berkshire Festival program at Tanglewood. This summer there are three such, by Aaron Copland (Symphonic Ode—August 5), Goffredo Petrassi (Concert No. 5 for Orchestra—July 27), and this Sunday afternoon's piece by Irving Fine, which his fellow in the Tanglewood composition department, Lukas Foss, will conduct.

Mr. Fine's "Serious Song for Strings" was composed last year, while he was on sabbatical from Tanglewood—he has been a member of the faculty since 1947—for the Louisville, Ky. Orchestra, and it had its premiere there in 1955. A native of Boston, born 1914, Mr. Fine studied piano with Frances Grover, majored in music at Harvard University (A.B. 1937, A.M. 1939) where he studied theory and composition under Walter Piston, Edward Burlingname Hill and A. Tillman Merritt. He continued his studies with Nadia Boulanger in Cambridge and France. For several years he was assistant conductor of the Harvard Glee Club and Choir, later was an assistant professor of music at Harvard, and is now Frederick F. Mann Professor of Music at Brandeis University. Some of his dozen compositions have been performed by the Boston Symphony in Boston, but none has previously been at Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866
JUL 6 1956

Benny Goodman with Munch this Evening

The first orchestral concert of the 1956 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood in Lenox, at 8:30, when Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Mozart program which will feature the Tanglewood debut of famed jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman.

For tonight's all-Mozart concert, Dr. Munch has scheduled two symphonies—the G Minor, Number 40, K. 550, and the D Major, Number 38, K. 504, known as the "Prague" Symphony. Mr. Goodman, who will play the Clarinet Concert in A Major, K. 662, is no stranger to the field of serious music even though he has spent the major part of his career as one of the most important figures in jazz music. He has performed Mozart's two great clarinet works, the Concerto and Quintet, both of which he will play at the Berkshire Festival within the next five days, the Concerto tonight, the Quintet next Wednesday evening, on numerous occasions in the past, inEurope as well as the United States.

[6]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
SOUTHBRIDGE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 4,688

JUL 5 1956

Annual Music Festival On In Berkshires

LENOX, Mass., July 5— Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its music director, Charles Munch. For the seventeenth Summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old Summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts began last evening with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 6), Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist.

The Saturday evening (July 7) concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon (July 8) a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood, and Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11-13-14-15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 p. m. Sunday afternoons at 2:30 p. m.

All-Time Record

1955, an all-time record attendance year at the Berkshire Festival, which marked Charles Munch's fifth Summer at Tanglewood, saw an attendance of 136,087 music lovers and total paid admissions of $307,665. Six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts by noted ensembles and soloists averaged an audience of 1,593 or more than the capacity of the auditorium. Chamber orchestra concerts, the popular "Bach-Mozart" series during the first two week ends of the Berkshire Festival, drew an average last Summer of 3,032 persons, again considerably above the capacity of the Theater-Concert Hall.

For the final four week ends of the Berkshire Festival, which has annually attracted crowds from all over the Eastern United States and Canada, the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to Tanglewood for 12 week-end concerts, July 20-August 12, in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, open on three sides so the thousands extra who attend may hear the orchestra on the extensive Tanglewood lawns, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine. In 1955, an average attendance of 9,028, more than one-third again the capacity of the Music Shed, was noted at these programs.

The Festival concerts for 1956, as planned by Charles Munch, will feature during the Shed series two all-Wagner programs in which concert versions of "Die Walkure", Act I, with the opening and final scene of Act III of "Die Meistersinger" will be given, with the assistance of Metropolitan Opera stars, other soloists and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students. The Shed series will also feature Tanglewood first performances of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for this, its seventy-fifth anniversary year, symphonic pieces by Goffredo Petrassi, Howard Hanson, Aaron Copland and Walter Piston. These symphonies will be brought by the Boston Symphony to Europe immediately following the close of the Tanglewood season, when the orchestra makes a five-and-one-half week tour of 13 countries in Europe, including a week at the Edinburgh Festival and a six-day concert tour of the Soviet Union.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

The Barre Gazette
BARRE, Mass.
Weekly Republican
Circ. 1,500

JUL 5 1956

Benny Goodman At Tanglewood

A memorable night of Mozart, topped off with a Concerto for Clarinet performance by the one and only Benny Goodman, is the reward in store for weekend visitors to the famous Berkshire Symphonic Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox. The performances will start at 8:30 p.m. on Friday, July 6th, according to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce. The following evening, visitors again will be treated to a night of Moztr plus selected pieces.

On Sunday, July 8th, the day's program will get underway at 2:30 p.m. At that time, according to officials of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, sponsors of this famous musical festival, Haydn's Symphny No. 6, and a "Fine Serious Song for Strings" will be among the featured numbers.

Bring the entire family to Tanglewood where the beauty of the music is matched by the beauty of the surrounding countryside. Plan a weekend stay enjoying the many available recreational facilities.

Lenox is located on Route 7, in the heart of the scenic Berkshires. Main east-west Routes 2, 9 and 20, all connect with Route 7.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Italian News
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 12,414

JUL 6 1956

Petrassi's work to be performed at Tanglewood Festival on July 27

A performance of the symphony by Goffredo Petrassi, written for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be given its first performance at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this summer.

Petrassi's Fifth Concerto for Orchestra will be performed at a shed concert on Friday, July 27.

This work will be played in Europe when the Symphony goes abroad following the Tanglewood concerts.

The Festival concerts for 1956, as planned by Charles Munch, will pay homage to Mozart's bicentennial in the chamber orchestra concerts, and will feature during the Shed series two all-Wagner programs in which concert versions of "Die Walkure", Act I, and the opening and final scene of Act III of "Die Meistersinger" will be given, with the assistance of Metropolitan Opera stars, other soloists and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students.

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts began on Wednesday evening with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. Tonight, Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist.

The Saturday evening concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11, 13, 14, 15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200 seat Teatre Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 P.M., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 P.M.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

JUL 6 1956

Festival Program Spots Home Talent

It is not every day a composition by a member of the faculty of the Boston Symphony's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, is played on a Berkshire Festival program at Tanglewood. This summer there are three such, by Aaron Copland (Symphonic Ode—August 5), Goffredo Petrassi (Concert No. 5 for Orchestra—July 27), and this Sunday afternoon's piece by Irving Fine, which his fellow in the Tanglewood composition department, Lukas Foss, will conduct.

Mr. Fine's "Serious Song for Strings" was composed last year, while he was on sabbatical from Tanglewood—he has been a member of the faculty since 1947—for the Louisville, Ky. Orchestra, and it had its premiere there in 1955. A native of Boston, born 1914, Mr. Fine studied piano with Frances E. Grover, majored in music at Harvard University (A.B. 1937, A.M. 1938) where he studied theory and composition under Walter Piston, Edward Burlingame Hill and A. Tillman Merritt. He continued his studies with Nadia Boulanger in Cambridge and France. For several years he was assistant conductor of the Harvard Glee Club and Choir, later was an assistant professor of music at Harvard, and is now Frederick R. Mann Professor of Music at Brandeis University. Some of his dozen compositions have been performed by the Boston Symphony in Boston, but none has previously been at Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

JUL 6 1956

Benny Goodman with Munch this Evening

The first orchestral concert of the 1956 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood in Lenox, at 8:30, when Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Mozart program which will feature the Tanglewood debut of famed jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman.

For tonight's all-Mozart concert, Dr. Munch has scheduled two symphonies—the G Minor, Number 40, K. 550, and the D Major, Number 38, K. 504, known as the "Prague" Symphony. Mr. Goodman, who will play the Clarinet Concert in A Major, K. 662, is no stranger to the field of serious music even though he has spent the major part of his career as one of the most important figures in jazz music. He has performed Mozart's two great clarinet works, the Concerto and Quintet, both of which he will play at the Berkshire Festival within the next five days, the Concerto tonight, the Quintet next Wednesday evening, on numerous occasions in the past, inEurope as well as the United States.

New England Newscop Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

JUL 6 1956

Benny Goodman In Tanglewood Debut Tonight

The first orchestral concert of the 1956 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood in Lenox, when Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Mozart program which will feature the Tanglewood debut of famed jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman. As was the pattern last season, the six concerts in this series, known popularly as the "Bach-Mozart" concerts, will be given during the first two weekends of the festival, with programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

For tonight's all-Mozart concert, Dr. Munch has scheduled two symphonies—the G Minor, No. 40, K. 550, and dthe D Major, No. 38, K. 504, known as the "Prague" Symphony. Mr. Goodman, who will play the Clarinet Concerto in A Major, K. 662, is no stranger to the field of serious music even though he has spent the major part of his career as one of the most important figures in jazz music. He has performed Mozart's two great clarinet works, the Concerto and Quintet, both of which he will play at the Berkshire Festival within the next five days, the Concerto tonight, the quintet next Wednesday evening.

The first half of the concert tomorrow night will again be devoted to music by Mozart conducted by Dr. Munch, the "Haffner" Symphony and Woodwind Sinfonia Concertante. On the second half of the program, Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's chorus department, will conduct two contemporary works new to Tanglewood, one of them, indeed, a world premiere; they are Martinu's "Military Mass" and Cowell's A Thanksgiving Psalm from "The Dead Sea Scrolls" (i nits first performance anywhere). Assisting in these two works will be the Yale Glee Club (Fenno Heath, director) of 50 voices making its Tanglewood debut.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Lukas Foss, who is a member of the composition faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct a concert of music by Haydn, Fine, Haieff and Ives, and he will also be the soloist in Bach's Piano Concerto in D Minor.

The Berkshire Eagle

Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Friday, July 6, 1956.

Petroved

CLARINETIST Benny Goodman rehearses with the Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra with Dr. Charles Munch conducting, in preparation for the famed jazz band leader's debut as a soloist tonight at Tanglewood. Mr. Goodman will play the concerto for clarinet in the all-Mozart concert in the Theater-Concert Hall beginning at 8:30.

$25,000 Music Festival Assets Go to Local Scholarship Funds

By JOHN G. W. MAHANNA

The Pittsfield Community Music School and the Berkshire Music Center Revolving Scholarship Fund will benefit financially from the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., upon its dissolution by Dec. 31.

This was announced today by Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, president of the Festival corporation and the prime mover behind the original plan for outdoor concerts in the Berkshires, following a meeting at her home yesterday afternoon of the board of trustees.

The board voted to give $5,000 to the Berkshire Music Center Revolving Scholarship Fund and approximately $20,000 to the Pittsfield Community Music School Inc., from assets of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., accumulated from profits through the years from 1934 to 1945.

Gave Shed to BSO

In 1945 the Berkshire Festival organization turned over its physical assets, including the $80,000 Music Shed at Tanglewood, to the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Since that time the Tanglewood operation has been conducted solely by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, including the Berkshire Music Center, founded in 1940 by the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years musical director and conductor of the BSO, who was succeeded by Dr. Charles Munch.

Dr. Koussevitzky retired at the end of the 1948-1949 season as conductor of the BSO but continued as director of the Music Center until his death on June 4, 1951, at the age of 77.

President's Report

In her final report to the trustees yesterday, Miss Robinson Smith proposed, and the trustees approved, the following:

1. That the sum of $5,000 be given to the Berkshire Music Center Revolving Fund, the income to be used for scholarships to be known as the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Scholarship. (The president and trustees expressed the hope that this amount will be matched by the Rockefeller Foundation grant and that this matching fund will become an integral part of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Scholarship Fund). Miss Robinson Smith, in making the proposal, told the trustees that this move was made "in order that the name of this great Festival, founded in our Berkshires, shall remain alive and be an inspiration to all students receiving scholarships."

Fund of 'All Strings'

2. That the balance of the financial assets of the corporation, which may approximate $20,000, be given to the Pittsfield Community Music School Inc.; that it be placed in the Agricultural National Bank of Pittsfield in an account to be known as the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Scholarship Fund and that Laurence Connor, or an officer of the bank, be a trustee of this fund, along with two or more members of the board of the Pittsfield Community Music School Inc. (The Festival president proposed, and it was approved, that: "It would further be the wish connected with this gift that the board of the Pittsfield Community Music School be free to give one or more scholarships each year to those scholars they deem sufficiently talented and that they may decide quite freely when and how these students are to benefit." The board of trustees of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival wish this gift to be free of "all strings" in order that with changing conditions in the years to come, the persons then in charge of the Community Music School may act and decide in accordance with then existing conditions. It is to be hoped that the total sum donated may be considered as capital and that only the income will be used for scholarships. Should any persons in the future care to make a financial addition to this fund it may be accepted, provided the name of the scholarship fund is in no way changed.)

3. That the interest of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival in the book, "Music Under the Moon," a history of the Festival, written by John G. W. Mahanna, be turned over to the Pittsfield Community Music School and that the account now established in the trust department of the Agricultural National Bank be transferred after Jan. 1, 1957 to the Berkshire Symphonic Festival

Scholarships
Continued on Second Page

Scholarships

Continued From First Page

Scholarship Fund of the Music School.

In 1934 when the Berkshire Symphonic Festival was organized by a small group of Berkshire men and women, spearheaded by Miss Robinson Smith, the first and only president, the bylaws specified that all assets of the Festival, upon dissolution, should become the property of the American Red Cross in Washington, D.C. However, because the purpose of the organization was to encourage education in the arts in the Berkshires and to develop musical and artistic talents in this area, Miss Robinson Smith pointed out to the board in her report that there now is in Berkshire County the Pittsfield Community Music School, whose purposes are similar to those outlined in the Festival bylaws. In view of this, the board members approved her proposal to establish the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Scholarship Fund.

Expresses Appreciation

In closing, the Festival president's report said:

"Were I a great poet or even a prose writer, I would know how to express myself at this last meeting of the board of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival. But you all know me too well to think for a minute that I could be able to put into words the many feelings of appreciation and affection I have in my heart for you members of the board and the many Berkshireites who have been the known and unknown supporters of our efforts.

"Just let me thank you and hope that I may, for many years, be among you all. Thanks for taking me in with you and thanks for letting us help one another to make possible this great and beautiful Festival which is now being carried on successfully by others."

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

JUL 6 1956

315 Registered For University's Summer School

AMHERST—Three hundred and fifteen students have registered for the summer session at the University of Massachusetts, according to figures released today from the registrar's office.

At the same time, the special events program of the recreation committee was announced by Chairman Benjamin Ricci.

The program includes a band concert on Memorial Hall lawn at 8 p.m., Wednesday, July 11. Music will be provided by the Northampton American Legion Post 28 band.

On Friday, July 20, the Country Dance Festival will be held on Alumni Field at 8 p.m. In case of rain the event will be moved to the physical education building cage.

A trip to Tanglewood has been planned for Friday, July 27. Students will have the opportunity to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch. On Wednesday, Aug. 1, a trip to Old Sturbridge Village will start at 12:30 p.m. Buses will leave from the university commons.

On Monday, Aug. 6, the committee has arranged for a visit to the "Three's A Family" at Mountain Park Casino. A car pool is being formed and students are expected to leave from the Hicks physical education building at 6:30 p.m.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

JUL 6 1956

Students To Present Chamber Music Concert

Sunday morning at 10 in the Chamber Music Hall at Tanglewood students of Richard Burgin, William Kroll and Boston Symphony Orchestra principals will give their first chamber music concert, one of six Sunday morning programs during the Berkshire Festival season. Like all other student performances at Tanglewood, the public is invited and may attend through membership in the Friends' organization. Sunday's concert will consist of music by Haydn, Hindemith and Dohnanyi. The program is:

String Quartet — Haydn

Nancy R. Cirillo, violin, Brooklyn, N.Y.; John Crofut, violin, Bethel, Conn.; Charlene Hecker, viola, Boston; Janet McCarron, cello, Havertown, Pa.

Quintet for Winds — Hindemith

John Oberbrunner, flute, Syracuse, N.Y.; Wilfred Burkle, oboe, Bellmore, N.Y.; Lawrence Bocaner, clarinet, Wisconsin Rapids, Wis.; Ruth Moss, bassoon, Newport News, Va.; Esther Sweigart, French horn, Kutztown, Pa.

Quintet No. 1 — Dohnanyi

Betty Crossley, violin, Grinnel, Iowa; Leo Fondelick, violin, Chicago, Ill.; Robert Glazer, viola; David Spinks, cello, Albany, N.Y.; Joy Pottle, piano, Los Angeles, Calif.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

JUL 6 1956

Munch To Conduct Tonight With Goodman as Soloist

TANGLEWOOD — The first orchestral concert of the 1956 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert when Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Mozart program which will feature the Tanglewood debut of famed jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman. As was the pattern last season, the six concerts in this series, known as the "Bach-Mozart" concerts, will be given during the first two weekends of the Festival, with programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon. In 1955 the six Chamber Orchestra concerts attracted a total audience of 12,190, an average of 3,032 per concert, or more than twice capacity, meaning as many heard the performances on the spacious lawns of the Tanglewood estate as inside the 1,200-seat auditorium.

Two Symphonies

For tonight's all-Mozart concert, Dr. Munch has scheduled two symphonies — the G Minor, Number 40, K. 550, and the D Major, Number 38, K. 504, known as the "Prague" Symphony. Mr. Goodman, who will play the Clarinet Concerto in A Major, K. 622, is no stranger to the field of serious music, even though he has spent the major part of his career as one of the most important figures in jazz music. He has performed on numerous occasions Mozart's two great clarinet works, the Concerto and Quintet, both of which he will play at the Berkshire Festival within the next five days — the Concerto tonight, the Quintet next Wednesday evening. He has also commissioned works from several of the leading contemporary composers, among them "Contrasts" for violin, clarinet and piano by the late Bela Bartok, and the Concerti of Copland and Hindemith.

Tomorrow's Program

The first half of the concert tomorrow night will again be devoted to music by Mozart conducted by Dr. Munch, the "Haffner" Symphony and Woodwind Sinfonia Concertante. On the second half of the program Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's Chorus Department, will conduct two contemporary works new to Tanglewood, one of them a world premiere. They are Martinu's "Military Mass" and Cowell's A Thanksgiving Psalm from "The Dead Sea Scrolls" (in its first performance anywhere). Assisting in these two works will be the Yale Glee Club (Fenno Heath, director) of 50 voices, which is making its Tanglewood debut.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Lukas Foss, who is a member of the composition faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct a concert of music by Haydn, Fine, Haieff and Ives. He will also be the soloist in Bach's Piano Concerto in D Minor.

Remaining seats for tonight's concert and the succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival, which concludes Aug. 12, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box office. Telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert. In case of rain the programs will be held in the Music Shed, which will also seat the lawn audience.

Berkowitz' One-Man Show Opens at Museum

Petroved

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the music school at Berkshire Music Center, and an accomplished pianist, is having his first one-man show of 35 paintings at the Berkshire Museum. With the artist at the opening are his wife, at right, and two of the exhibits' sponsors, Mrs. Sidney Howard of Tyringham and New York, left, and Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky of Lenox.

Petroved

Among guests at the preview of Mr. Berkowits' paintings on Tuesday were Noah Greenberg of Pro Musica Antiqua, who chats with Mrs. Jay C. Rosenfeld, wife of The Eagle music critic, and Mrs. Willem Willeke, director of South Mountain concerts. The show opened yesterday and will continue until Aug. 25.

Berkshire Eagle

ttsfield, Massachusetts, Friday, July 6, 1956.

Petroved

THE STUDENT ORCHESTRA at the Berkshire Music Center, gives concerts every Thursday night in the Music Shed at Tanglewood for the Friends of the Music Center. Eleazar deCarvalho, head of the Department 1 Orchestra, rehearses students for next week's performance.

SYRACUSE HERALD-JOURNAL, Friday, July 6, 1956

Chamber Concert in 'Tanglewood' Offers 'Dead Sea Scrolls'

The world premiere of the first musical setting of 'Dead Sea Scrolls," with debut by the Yale Choristers, is scheduled for tomorrow night in the theater-concert hall in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass. Dr. Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will conduct the first half of the concert to be played by members of the orchestra. Works by Mozart will comprise the chamber group's selections.

Hugh Ross, head of the chorus department of Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the first musical setting of a text from the Dead Sea Scrolls—Henry Cowell's "A Thanksgiving Psalm." This number, with Martinu's "Military Mass" will enlist, in addition to orchestral forces, the Yale singers, 50

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

JUL 6 1956

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 6, 1956

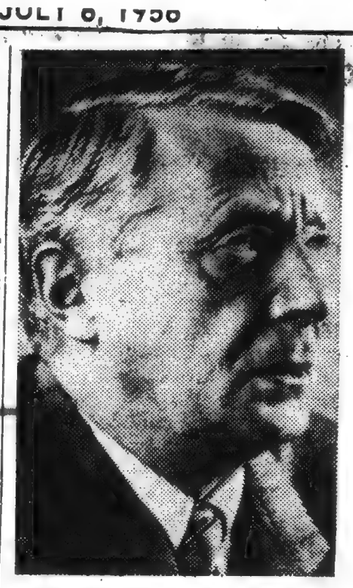
Goodman to Make Tanglewood Debut In Concert Tonight

Benny Goodman, famed jazz clarinetist, will move into the classic precincts of Tanglewood, Ienox, this evening when he will appear as soloist with a chamber orchestra composed of Boston Symphony orchestra musicians, in the first of this season's Berkshire Music festival orchestral concerts.

Munch to Conduct

Mr. Goodman and the orchestra will perform the Clarinet concerto in A major, K. 622, on the all-Mozart program which Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will conduct. Also on the program are two symphonies, the G minor, No. 40, K. 550, and the D major, No. 38, K. 504.

This evening's concert at 8:30 is the first of six in the so-called "Bach-Mozart" series which will continue on Saturday evening at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 and on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon next week. Thereafter the full Boston Symphony orchestra will move into the big music shed at Tanglewood for the series of 12 major festival concerts on four successive weekends. Meantime, the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts, started this week, will continue through the six weeks of the festival, with Mr. Goodman appearing as guest soloist again next Wednesday evening.



CHARLES MUNCH

BENNY GOODMAN

Tomorow evening's concert which Mr. Munch will direct will present Mozart's D major symphony, K. 385, and his Sinfonia Concertante K. 297b, Martinu's Military Mass and Cowell's Hymn and Fuguing Tune with the Yale Glee club, conducted by Hugh Ross, assisting. The Sunday afternoon program, which Lukas Foss will conduct, will include Haydn's Symphony No. 86 in D major, Fine's "Serious Song for Strings," Haieff's Diverimento, Ives "The Unanswered Question," and Bach's Piano concerto in D minor with Mr. Foss as soloist.

Monday "Extra"

Five principals of the Boston Symphony orchestra, assisted by a number of noted guest artists, will participate in a concert of modern chamber music, to be played in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood, on Monday evening at 8:30. This is the first of two concerts — the second is Monday, July 23 — under the auspices of the Fromm Music foundation, Chicago, donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music center, the school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony orchestra in conjunction with its annual Berkshire festival. The two concerts are open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the Berkshire Music center, whose contributions help support the music school, and to the general public.

Music of Igor Stravinsky, Ben Weber, Benjamin Britten, Arnold Schoenberg, Anton Webern, Alvin Epstein and Aaron Copland will be performed at Monday's concert by the following members of the Boston symphony: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello; Georges Moleux, bass. Guest artists are: Ruth Posselt, violin; Irving Fine, Seymour Lipkin, Ralph Berkowitz, William Masselos, Aaron Copland, pianos; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Arthur Schoep, tenor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

JUL 6 1956

Tenor, Bass In Lead Roles At Tanglewood

John McCollum, tenor, will replace David Lloyd in the role of the Evangelist in the Berkshire Festival concert performance of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," which will have its first performance at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon, July 15, at 2:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Hugh Ross, will participate; also, soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. All, including Mr. McCollum, are former students of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood.

David Lloyd has been prevented by illness from fulfilling this engagement, and Mr. McCollum will also assume his role in the Mozart Mass in C minor, K. 427, with Phyllis Curtin and Eunice Alberts as other soloists, which Leonard Bernstein will conduct as a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky on August 4. Mr. Lloyd's teaching duties with the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center are being assumed by James Lucas.

Mac Morgan, concert bass-baritone, will have the male solo in Bohuslav Martinu's "Military Mass," which will have its first performance at a Berkshire Festival concert on Saturday evening. Hugh Ross will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, and the Yale Glee Club, which is also making its Tanglewood debut. The concert is in the Theatre-Concert Hall at 8:30 p.m. A Tanglewood neighbor, a resident of Stockbridge, Mr. Morgan is a former student of Tanglewood, and is scheduled to sing one of the two bass roles in "The Passion According to St. John" of Bach at the Berkshire Festival concert of Sunday afternoon, July 15. Mr. Morgan last week sang "Rigoletto" in an open-air performance in Rochester, N. Y., and besides his full schedule of Community Concert, oratorio and orchestral concerts last winter sang twenty performances with fifteen symphony orchestras in a staged concert version of Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047

JUL 6 1956

Music

The Berkshire Quartet will give one of its series of weekly Sunday afternoon chamber music concerts on July 8 at 4 o'clock. These concerts will be presented every Sunday afternoon through September 2. For information write Music Mountain, Falls Village, Conn. The phone number is TAylor 4-7126.

The New Haven Pops Concerts, Tuesdays, July 10, through August 28.; July 10, Duke Ellington; July 24, Eileen Farrell; July 31, John Raitt; August 14, Roger Williams; August 28, Rise Stevens.

Connecticut Symphony Orchestra Summer Pops series, Fairfield University Field, opens on Friday, July 6, with Gustave Haenschen conducting. Representing Newtown for tickets sales and reservations is Mrs Charles Schuck of Kings Highway, Westport.

Berkshire Festival, Theatre-Concert Hall, Tanglewood,, Lenox, Mass. Chamber music, July 6 and 11, Benny Goodman and Boston Symphony Orchestra; three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings, July 13 and 14 and Sunday afternoon, July 15. For information write Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Boston, Mass. Hatch Memorial Shell, Charles River. Concerts on Friday, July 6 and Sunday, July 8 at 8:30 by Boston Pops Orchestra.

NEW YORK TIMES, FRIDAY, JULY 6, 1956.

BERKSHIRE FETE BEGINS

Kroll Quartet Plays Opening Concert of 17th Festival

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 4—The seventeenth Berkshire Festival opened Wednesday night with a chamber music concert devoted to quartets of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven. It wis performed by the Kroll String Quartet in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood. Despite threats of rain the 1,200-seat auditorium was filled to capacity.

On Friday, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's music director, Charles Munch, who arrived here Wednesday from his Paris home, will open the festival's two week-ends of Bach-Mozart concerts.

William Kroll, who teaches chamber music at the orchestra's Berkshire Music Center, headed his quartet tonight in its third consecutive appearance at a festival concert. The quartet, consisting also of Louis Graeler, violin; David Mankovitz, viola, and Avron Twerdowsky, 'cello, performed Mozart's "Dissonant" Quartet, the C major (K. 465); Prokofieff's Quartet No. 1, Opus 50, and Beethoven's Quartet in C major, Opus 59, No. 3, the last of the three "Rasoumovsky" Quartets.

NEW YORK TIMES, SATURDAY, JULY 7, 1956.

Music: Festival Opens

Goodman Is Soloist at Tanglewood Concert

By EDWARD DOWNES

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 6—A throng of 2,051 music-lovers crowded the Tanglewood Theatre-Concert Hall and spilled out onto the rain-dampened grass tonight to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra open its Berkshire Festival series of orchestral concerts.

The clarinetist, Benny Goodman, monarch in another realm of music, made his debut with the Boston Symphony in Mozart's A major Clarinet Concerto. Although Mr. Goodman first met the Boston Symphony in rehearsal yesterday, his acquaintance with the Mozart concerto is a long one, and he played it smoothly.

More emotional warmth in the first movement would have been welcome, and a more tender caress for the phrases of the second. But it was a chilly night.

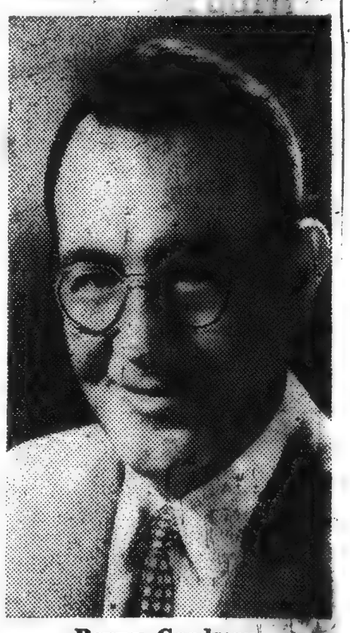
●

This may have been a reason for the somewhat athletic performance of the great C minor Symphony (K. 550) with which the program began. Charles Munch was in a forceful mood. Admittedly this is one of Mozart's more dramatic, even tragic, works, but its inner poignance did not quite come across tonight. Even the tone of the famous Boston Symphony strings seemed a bit rough.

●

Mozart's "Prague" Symphony ended and redeemed the evening, for this was a performance that put across the exuberance and excitement with which we know Mozart wrote the work. Mr. Munch's men fairly sang the slow movement and the finale sparkled so that one hardly missed the stars in the clouded sky over Tanglewood.

Two months and five nights from tonight, on Sept. 11, the Boston Symphony will be playing the "Prague" Symphony in Prague. We think the Czechs will like it.



Benny Goodman

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

JUL 7 1956

'Dead Sea Scrolls' At Berkshire Fete

The second Chamber Orchestra concert in the 1956 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30 p.m. Charles Munch, Music Director of the orchestra, will conduct the first half of the concert, and Hugh Ross, head of the Chorus Department of the Berkshire Music Center, the second half. A highlight of the program will be the world premiere of the first musical setting of a text from the Dead Sea Scrolls — Henry Cowell's A Thanksgiving Psalm from "The Dead Sea Scrolls." This and the "Military Mass" by Martinu, the other work which Mr. Ross will conduct, will enlist, in addition to the orchestral forces, the services of the Yale Glee Club, 50 voices trained by Fenno Heath. The Yale choristers are making their Tanglewood debut. On the first half of the program Dr. Munch will conduct two works by Mozart, whose bi-centennial is being observed this year: the "Haffner" Symphony in D Major, Number 35, K. 385, and the Woodwind Sonfonia Concertante in E Flat Major, K. 297b, with Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

[9]

Music

Student Orchestra Debuts In Tanglewood Music Shed

ELEAZAR DE CARVALHO returned to the Music Shed at Tanglewood last night for his first conducting role there in several years. The energetic Brazilian led the newly formed student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center in a solid performance of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony.

The concert was the season's first in the Music Shed and the first public performance by this summer's students. The modest audience which filled the Shed's forward sections included several groups from near-by camps.

The student orchestra made its bow with a girl as concertmaster, Nancy Cirillo of Brooklyn, N.Y. An unusual number of girls appeared in the string sections.

FIRST PIECE on the 90-minute program was Berlioz' overture to "Benvenuto Cellini," with student conductor Clayton Westermann. The orchestra, less than a week old, seemed more of a unit in the second work, Brahms' "Variations on a Theme of Haydn." Kenneth Schermerhorn, last year's prize-winning student conductor, won an ovation after his Bernstein-styled workout on the podium.

Under Mr. De Carvalho's baton, the orchestra resembled an experienced unit. Contrasts and climaxes were well built up, and the finale was a rouser, bringing prolonged applause.

The concert was open without charge to members of the Friends.

A.D.H.

Festival Program Spots Home Talent

It is not every day a composition by a member of the faculty of the Boston Symphony's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, is played on a Berkshire Festival program at Tanglewood. This summer there are three such, by Aaron Copland (Symphonic Ode—August 5), Goffredo Petrassi (Concert No. 5 for Orchestra—July 27), and this Sunday afternoon's piece by Irving Fine, which his fellow in the Tanglewood composition department, Lukas Foss, will conduct.

Mr. Fine's "Serious Song for Strings" was composed last year, while he was on sabbatical from Tanglewood—he has been a member of the faculty since 1947—for the Louisville, Ky. Orchestra, and it had its premiere there in 1955. A native of Boston, born 1914, Mr. Fine studied piano with Frances L. Grover, majored in music at Harvard University (A.B. 1937, A.M. 1938) where he studied theory and composition under Walter Piston, Edward Burlinghame Hill and A. Tillman Merritt. He continued his studies with Nadia Boulanger in Cambridge and France. For several years he was assistant conductor of the Harvard Glee Club and Choir, later was an assistant professor of music at Harvard, and is now Frederick R. Mann Professor of Music at Brandeis University. Some of his dozen compositions have been performed by the Boston Symphony in Boston, but none has previously been at Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUL 6 1956

Berkshire Festival Offers Modern Chamber Music

Five principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, assisted by a number of noted guest artists, will participate in a concert of modern chamber music, to be played in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Monday evening. This is the first of two concerts—the second is Monday, July 23—under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, generously donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Center, the school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its annual Berkshire Festival. The brace of concerts is open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose contributions help support the music school, and to the general public.

Music of Igor Stravinsky, Ben Weber, Benjamin Britten, Arnold Schoenberg, Anton Webern, Alvin Epstein and Aaron Copland will be performed on Monday's concert by the following members of the Boston Symphony: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins, Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello; Georges Moleux, bass. Guest artists are: Ruth Posselt, violin; Irving Fine, Seymour Lipkin, Ralph Berkowitz, William Masselos, Aaron Copland, pianos; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Arthur Schoep, tenor. The program follows:

Igor Stravinsky (b. 1882)
Duo Concertante (1932)
Ruth Posselt, violin;
Irving Fine, piano.

Ben Weber (b. 1916)
Serenade for Strings, Op. 46 (1956)
(Commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation)
Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins;
Joseph de Pasquale, viola;
Samuel Mayes, cello;
George Moleux, bass.

Benjamin Britten (b. 1913)
Canticle II, "Abraham and Isaac" Op. 51 (1953)
Florence Kopleff, contralto;
Arthur Schoep, tenor;
Seymour Lipkin, piano.

Arnold Schoenberg (1874-1951)
Klavierstucke, Op. 33 a & b (1929, 1932)

Anton Webern (1883-1945)
Variations, Op. 27 (1926)
William Masselos, piano.

Alvin Epstein (b. 1930)
"Sabina Fair," a suite of songs (1956)
(Commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation)
Sabrina Fair (Milton); The Constant Lover (Suckling); Grace for a Child (Herrick); Sigh No More, Ladies (Shakespeare).
Arthur Schoep, tenor;
Richard Burgin, violin;
Joseph de Pasquale, viola;
Samuel Mayes, cello;
Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

Aaron Copland (b. 1900)
Vitebsk, Study on a [illegible]
Theme
Richard Burgin, violin;
Samuel Mayes, cello;
Aaron Copland, piano.

Munch To Conduct Tonight With Goodman as Soloist

TANGLEWOOD — The first orchestral concert of the 1956 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert when Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Mozart program which will feature the Tanglewood debut of famed jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman. As was the pattern last season, the six concerts in this series, known as the "Bach-Mozart" concerts, will be given during the first two weekends of the Festival, with programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon. In 1955 the six Chamber Orchestra concerts attracted a total audience of 18,190, an average of 3,032 per concert, or more than twice capacity, meaning as many heard the performances on the spacious lawns of the Tanglewood estate as inside the 1,200-seat auditorium.

Two Symphonies

For tonight's all-Mozart concert, Dr. Munch has scheduled two symphonies — the G Minor, Number 40, K. 550, and the D Major, Number 38, K. 504, known as the "Prague" Symphony. Mr. Goodman, who will play the Clarinet Concerto in A Major, K. 622, is no stranger to the field of serious music, even though he has spent the major part of his career as one of the most important figures in jazz music. He has performed on numerous occasions Mozart's two great clarinet works, the Concerto and Quintet, both of which he will play at the Berkshire Festival within the next five days — the Concerto tonight, the Quintet next Wednesday evening. He has also commissioned works from several of the leading contemporary composers, among them "Contrasts" for violin, clarinet and piano by the late Bela Bartok, and the Concerti of Copland and Hindemith.

Tomorrow's Program

The first half of the concert tomorrow night will again be devoted to music by Mozart conducted by Dr. Munch, the "Haffner" Symphony and Woodwind Sinfonia Concertante. On the second half of the program Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's Chorus Department, will conduct two contemporary works new to Tanglewood, one of them a world premiere. They are Martinu's "Military Mass" and Cowell's A Thanksgiving Psalm from "The Dead Sea Scrolls" (in its first performance anywhere). Assisting in these two works will be the Yale Glee Club (Fenno Heath, director) of 50 voices, which is making its Tanglewood debut.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Lukas Foss, who is a member of the composition faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct a concert of music by Haydn, Fine, Haieff and Ives. He will also be the soloist in Bach's Piano Concerto in D Minor.

Remaining seats for tonight's concert and the succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival, which concludes Aug. 12, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box office. Telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert. In case of rain the programs will be held in the Music Shed, which will also seat the lawn audience.

Mozart Scenes To Be Presented At Tanglewood

The first major production by the opera department this summer will be an evening devoted to scenes from 14 Mozart operas in the Theater-Concert Hall on Tuesday, July 24. Many music lovers may not be aware some of these exist, particularly "Bastien and Bastienne," which the composer wrote as a child; "Lucio Silla," composed when he was 14; "Il Re Pastore" (The Shepherd King); or an unfinished work, "L'Oca del Cairo" (The Goose of Cairo), since the latter three have never been performed in this country.

Bicentennial Fete

The Mozart panorama planned by Mr. Goldovsky, in observance of the composer's bicentennial this year, will include high lights from the five well-known operas, "Don Giovanni," "The Magic Flute," "The Marriage of Figaro," "Cosi Fan Tutte" and "The Abduction From the Seraglio." It will also revive pleasant memories amongst local opera-lovers, for the evening will include excerpts from five Mozart works given their first performances in the U. S. at Tanglewood, "Idomeneo," "Titus," "La Finta Giardiniera," "Zaide" and "The Impresario."

Every active opera department singer, 29 in all this year, will participate. A uni-decorative setting will be designed by Robert O'Hearn, and costumes will be by Leo Van Witsen. Mr. Goldovsky will provide the piano accompaniment. Some of the opera excerpts will be in German, some in Italian, some in English translation.

Students To Present Chamber Music Concert

Sunday morning at 10 in the Chamber Music Hall at Tanglewood students of Richard Burgin, William Kroll and Boston Symphony Orchestra principals will give their first chamber music concert, one of six Sunday morning programs during the Berkshire Festival season. Like all other student performances at Tanglewood, the public is invited and may attend through membership in the Friends' organization. Sunday's concert will consist of music by Haydn, Hindemith and Dohnanyi. The program is:

String Quartet — Haydn
Nancy R. Cirillo, violin, Brooklyn, N.Y.; John Crofut, violin, Bethel, Conn.; Charlene Hecker, viola, Boston; Janet McCarron, cello, Havertown, Pa.

Quintet for Winds — Hindemith
John Oberbrunner, flute, Syracuse, N.Y.; Wilfred Burkle, oboe, Bellmore, N.Y.; Lawrence Bocaner, clarinet, Wisconsin Rapids, Wis.; Ruth Moss, bassoon, Newport News, Va.; Esther Sweigart, French horn, Kutztown, Pa.

Quintet No. 1 — Dohnanyi
Betty Grossley, violin, Grinnel, Iowa; Leo Pondelick, violin, Chicago, Ill.; Robert Glazer, viola; David Spinks, cello, Albany, N.Y.; Joy Pottle, piano, Los Angeles, Calif.

Paul Fromm, of Chicago, president of the Fromm Music Foundation, which has donated two concerts of modern chamber music to the Berkshire Music Center, will be a guest of Tanglewood at the initial concert in the Theater-Concert Hall Monday.

Morgan to Sing At Tanglewood On Saturday

Lenox, July 5—Mac Morgan, concert bass-baritone, will have the male solo in Bohuslav Martinu's "Military Mass," which will have its first performance at a Berkshire Festival concert on Saturday evening.

Hugh Ross will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, and the Yale Glee Club, which also is making its Tanglewood debut. The concert is in the Theatre-Concert Hall at 8:30 p. m.

A Tanglewood neighbor, a resident of Stockbridge, Mr. Morgan is a former student of Tanglewood, and is scheduled to sing one of the two bass roles in "The Passion According to St. John" of Bach at the Berkshire Festival concert on Sunday afternoon, July 15.

Mr. Morgan last week sang "Rigoletto" in an open-air performance in Rochester, N. Y., and besides his full schedule of Community Concert, oratorio and orchestral concerts last winter sang 20 performances with 15 symphony orchestras in a staged concert version of Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047
JUL 6 1956

Berkshire Music School Opens With 400 Students

The Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. opened its 14th season on July 1, with a student enrollment of 400. Students have been enrolled from 37 states, Canada and 13 foreign countries.

Students at Tanglewood study orchestra playing and conducting under Eleazar de Carvalho of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro; choral singing and conducting under Hugh Ross; composition from Composer Aaron Copland and Italian modern composer Goffredo Petrassi and opera under Boris Goldovsky. The course runs for six weeks, ending August 12. Students may also enroll in the Tanglewood Study Group under Ingolf Dahl.

The students have been chosen from 600 applicants, which resulted from some 1,500 inquiries. Berkshire Music Center scholarship grants have been awarded to 175, including 100 who comprise the student symphony orchestra which gives weekly full-scale symphonic concerts. The students also have an opportunity to sing in the Festival Chorus with the Boston Symphony in the Berkshire Festival concerts.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 4,751
JUL 6 1956

Interesting Notes: Christina Cardillo of North Adams, who has been heard as soloist with the Boston Symphony orchestra at Tanglewood, has been signed by Columbia Artists. She will complete her studies at the Katherine Long School of the Metropolitan Opera company in New York in a few weeks. She will be remembered as having won the Metropolitan Opera Auditions of the Air in 1954. ...Mary Hess of Arlington was among the 4-H Club members pictured in the Burlington Daily News recently as a group visited the Daily News plant. The girls were in town to attend the annual Junior Leaders conference....Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, national director of Selective Service is scheduled to visit Montpelier July 13, it is announced. He will be accompanied by his wife on this visit which will make part of a tour of New England State headquarters for SS. Dan Purcell of Bennington, who served in the Army with Gen. Hershey when the latter was not an officer, hopes to see him.

Tanglewood Bass To Sing Sunday At First Church

GREAT BARRINGTON—Tanglewood soloist James Joyce, a bass-baritone, will sing at the 10 o'clock service Sunday morning at the First Congregational Church. He has chosen "It Is Enough" from Mendelssohn's "Elijah."

Mr. Joyce will sing the bass lead in "The Passion According to St. John" by Bach on Sunday, July 15, at Tanglewood. He has been a soloist in many productions of the New England Opera Theater. This fall he will sing opera in Germany.

[10]

Berkshire Summer Calendar

Music, From Classic to Jazz, Summer Theaters and the Dance

Sunday

July 8

Tanglewood

10:00—Chamber Music. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)

2:30—Bach-Mozart Series. Boston Symphony small orchestra. Conductor, Lukas Foss. Theater-Concert Hall.

Symphony No. 86 in D major	Haydn
Serious Song for Strings	Fine
Divertimento	Haieff
"The Unanswered Question"	Ives
Piano Concerto in D minor	Bach

Soloist: Lukas Foss

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet

Quartet in E-flat major, K.428	Mozart
"Rispetti e Strambotti"	Malipiero
Quartet in D minor ("Death and the Maiden")	Schubert

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Dave Brubeck Quartet

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00, final performance, "The Young and the Beautiful."

Monday

July 9

Tanglewood

8:30—Modern Chamber Music. Members of Boston Symphony Orchestra and guest artists. Under auspices of Fromm Music Foundation. Theater - Concert Hall. (Friends)

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—"The Solid Gold Cadillac," with Paula Trueman

Tuesday

July 10

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"The Philadelphia Story"

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"The Desperate Hours"

Sharon Playhouse

8:40—"Oh Men, Oh Women"

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45

Wednesday

July 11

Tanglewood

8:30—Chamber Music. Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet. Theater-Concert Hall.

String Quartet No. 2 in E-flat major Op. 33	Haydn
Clarinet Quintet	Mozart
String Quintet in G major	Brahms

Jacob's Pillow

9:00—Sonia Arova and Job Sanders. Merce Cunningham & Company. Carola Goya and Matteo.

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40.

July 15

Tanglewood

10:00—Chamber Music, Dept. 1. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)

2:30—Bach-Mozart Series. Boston Symphony small orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Theater-Concert Hall.

BACH

The Passion According to St. John

Chorus and Soloists, including

Adele Addison, Soprano — David Lloyd, Tenor

Florence Kopleff, Contralto — Mac Morgan, Bass

James Joyce, Bass

8:30—Composers' Forum, Dept. 3. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Assisting artist, Janna Arschanska Dawson

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Duke Ellington and his band

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00

July 16

Tanglewood

8:30—Tanglewood Choir, Dept. 2 Chorus. Theater - Concert Hall. (Friends)

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—"The Wayward Saint," with William Roerick, Eleanor Wilson.

July 17

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"St. Joan"

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"The Solid Gold Cadillac"

Sharon Playhouse

8:40—"Shadow and Substance"

Jacob's Pillow

9:00—Melissa Hayden and Francisco Moncion. Myra Kinch & Company, with Ted Shawn. Geoffrey Holder & Company of Trinidad, with Carmen de Lavallade

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45

July 18

Tanglewood

8:30—Chamber Music. The Brass Ensemble under Roger Voisin. Theater-Concert Hall.

Music by Gabrieli, Bonelli, Poulenc, Berezowski

Wesendonck Song Cycle	Wagner
Songs	Strauss

Margaret Harshaw, assisted by Ralph Berkowitz

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 9:00.

July 22

Tanglewood

10:00—Chamber Music, Dept. 1. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)

2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Pierre Monteux. Music Shed.

Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri"	Rossini
Concerto for Orchestra	Bartok
Symphony No. 7 in C major	Schubert

8:30—Composers' Forum, Dept. 3. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Wilson de Paris and New Orleans Jazz with Sidney de Paris and Omer Simeon

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00

July 23

Tanglewood

8:30—Modern Chamber Music. Members of Boston Symphony and guest artists. Auspices, Fromm Music Foundation. (Friends)

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—"Heartbreak House," with Carman Mathews, Larry Gates

July 24

Tanglewood

8:30—Dep. 4 Opera. Scenes from Mozart operas. Theater-Concert Hall. (Friends)

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"Mrs. McThing"

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"The Solid Gold Cadillac" (second week)

Sharon Playhouse

8:40—"Heartbreak House"

Jacob's Pillow

9:00—San Francisco Ballet. "Concerto Barocco"; world premiere of "The Dryad"; "Con Amore"

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45

July 25

Tanglewood

8:30—Chamber music. The Beaux Arts Trio. Theater-Concert Hall.

Trio in D minor Op. 49	Mendelssohn
Trio in A minor	Ravel
Trio in C minor	Brahms

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 9:00.

July 29

Tanglewood

10:00—Chamber Music, Dept. 1. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)

2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Richard Burgin. Music Shed.

"Romeo and Juliet," Suite No. 2 — Prokofieff

Violin Concerto — Hindemith

Soloist: Ruth Posselt

Symphony No. 1 in D major — Mahler

8:30—Composers' Forum, Dept. 3. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey and band, with Louis Belsen and Charlie Shavers

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00

July 30

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 4 Opera. Four complete acts from 19th century operas. (Friends—special tickets required)

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—"The Happy Time," with Paul Lipson

July 31

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 2 Chorus, Tanglewood Choir. Theater-Concert Hall. (Friends)

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—Premiere of new play

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"Tea and Sympathy"

Sharon Playhouse

8:40—"Anastasia"

Jacob's Pillow

9:00—San Francisco Ballet. "The Tarot"; "Jinx"; "A Masque of Beauty and the Shepherd"

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45

August 1

Tanglewood

8:30—Chamber Music. Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet. Theater-Concert Hall.

Symphonic Etudes — Schumann

Quintet for Piano and Woodwinds, K.452 — Mozart

"Carnaval" — Schumann

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 9:00

August 5

Tanglewood

10:00—Chamber Music, Dept. 1. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)

2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

Symphonic Ode — Copland

Violin Concerto — Tchaikovsky

Soloist: Zino Francescatti

Symphony No. 2 in C major — Schumann

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet.

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Sarah Vaughan and Trio

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00

August 6

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 4 Opera. "Griffelkin," by Lukas Foss. First stage performance. (Friends—special tickets required)

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—"The Good Fairy," with Deirdre Owens

August 7

Tanglewood

8:30—Department 4 Opera. "Griffelkin," by Lukas Foss. (Friends—special tickets required)

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"Point of No Return"

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"The Seven-Year Itch"

Sharon Playhouse

8:40—"The Importance of Being Earnest"

Jacob's Pillow

9:00—San Francisco Ballet. "Le Gourmand"; "Apollo"; "Con Amore"

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45

August 8

Tanglewood

8:30—Chamber Music. Zino Francescatti, violin; Arthur Balsam, piano. Theater-Concert Hall.

Violin Sonata No. 1 — Faure

Violin Sonata — Ravel

Violin Sonata — Franck

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 9:00

August 12

Tanglewood

2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

WAGNER

Overture and Bacchanals from "Tannhauser"

A Siegfried Idyl

"Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," Act 3 (opening and final scene) Chorus and Soloists: James Pease, Albert da Costa, Marguerite Willauer

10:00—Dept. 1 Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. (Friends)

New York Pro Musica Antiqua

3:30—Tudor and Elizabethan music

At South Mountain Temple of Chamber Music, Pittsfield.

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Modern Jazz Quartet and Chris Connors

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet.

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00

August 13

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—"A Roomful of Roses," with Francesca Bruning

August 14

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"The Flowering Peach"

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"Bus Stop"

Sharon Playhouse

8:40—"The Rainmaker"

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45

August 15

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40

Petrovec

NOTED AMERICAN COMPOSER Henry Cowell, standing, and Hugh Ross, head of the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center, review the score of Mr. Cowell's "Thanksgiving Psalm from the Dead Sea Scrolls," which will have its world premiere at the Berkshire Festival tonight at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall. Mr. Ross will conduct half of the program; Dr. Charles Munch the other half.

[12]

NOTE: For an event listed under "Continuing," follow the week's schedule back to the nearest complete program, which will be under a head printed in This Type.

HOW TO GET THERE: TANGLEWOOD, on Route 183 between Stockbridge (via Routes 102 and 183) and Lenox (via Route 183 from center of town); SOUTH MOUNTAIN on Route 7 just south of Pittsfield; MUSIC MOUNTAIN, off Route 7 in Falls Village, Conn.; BERKSHIRE PLAYHOUSE, off Route 7 on Route 102 near center of Stockbridge; MALDEN BRIDGE PLAYHOUSE, on Route 66 between Chatham and Pittsfield-Albany Road (Route 20); WILLIAMSTOWN SUMMER THEATER, on Main Street in Williamstown; BERKSHIRE MUSIC BARN, southeast of Tanglewood between Routes 7 and 183; SHARON PLAYHOUSE, just off Main Street in Sharon, Conn., on Route 4 toward Amenia. JACOB'S PILLOW, off Jacob's Ladder section of Route 20 in the village of West Becket.

Thursday

July 12

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 1 Orchestra. Music Shed. (Friends)

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Conoisseurs"

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

Friday

July 13

Tanglewood

8:30—Bach-Mozart Series. Boston Symphony small orchestra. Conductors, Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz. Theater Concert-Hall.

MOZART

Serenade in D major (March, Andantino, Finale)
Concerto in F major, for 3 Pianos, K. 242
Concerto in A major, for Piano, K. 488
Concerto in E-flat major, for 2 pianos, K. 365
Soloists: Luboshutz and Nemenoff, Boris Goldovsky

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

Saturday

July 14

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Folk Music Festival. Carlos Montoya and Trianita

Tanglewood

8:30—Bach-Mozart Series. Boston Symphony small orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Theater-Concert Hall.

BACH

Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F major Violin Concerto in E major
Soloist: William Kroll
Suite No. 2 in B minor, for Flute and Strings
Flute soloist: Doriot Anthony Dwyer
Suite No. 3 in D major

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

July 19

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 1 Orchestra. Music Shed (Friends)

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs"

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

July 20

South Mountain

10:00—Young Audiences Concert. Dulcimore Quartet

Tanglewood

8:30 — Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

Overture, "The Roman Carnival"	Berlioz
Prelude, "The Afternoon of a Faun"	Debussy
"Bacchus and Ariane"	Roussel
Symphony No. 2 in D major	Brahms

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40.

July 21

Tanglewood

10:00—Boston Symphony Orchestra, open rehearsal. Music Shed. Benefit orchestra pension fund.

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

WAGNER

"A Faust Overture"
"Forest Murmurs," from "Siegfried"
Prelude and "Love Death" from "Tristan and Isolde"
"Die Walkure," Act 1
Soloists: Margaret Harshaw, Soprano; Albert Da Costa, Tenor; James Pease, Bass.

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Folk Music Festival. Clarence Cooper and Cynthia Gooding

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

July 26

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 1 Orchestra. Music Shed. (Friends)

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs." Chico Hamilton Quintet

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

July 27

Tanglewood

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

Overture, "Leonore" No. 2	Beethoven
Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5	Petrassi
Symphony No. 4 in F minor	Tchaikovsky

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

July 28

Tanglewood

10:00—Boston Symphony Orchestra, open rehearsal. Music Shed. Benefit orchestra pension fund.

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky	Hanson
Piano Concerto in A minor	Schumann
Soloist: Rudolf Serkin
Symphony No. 3	Honegger
"La Mer"	Debussy

South Mountain

3:30—Claremont String Quartet

Quartet, Op. 71 No. 1	Haydn
Quartet, Op. 92 No. 8	Shostakovich
Quartet, Op. 95	Beethoven

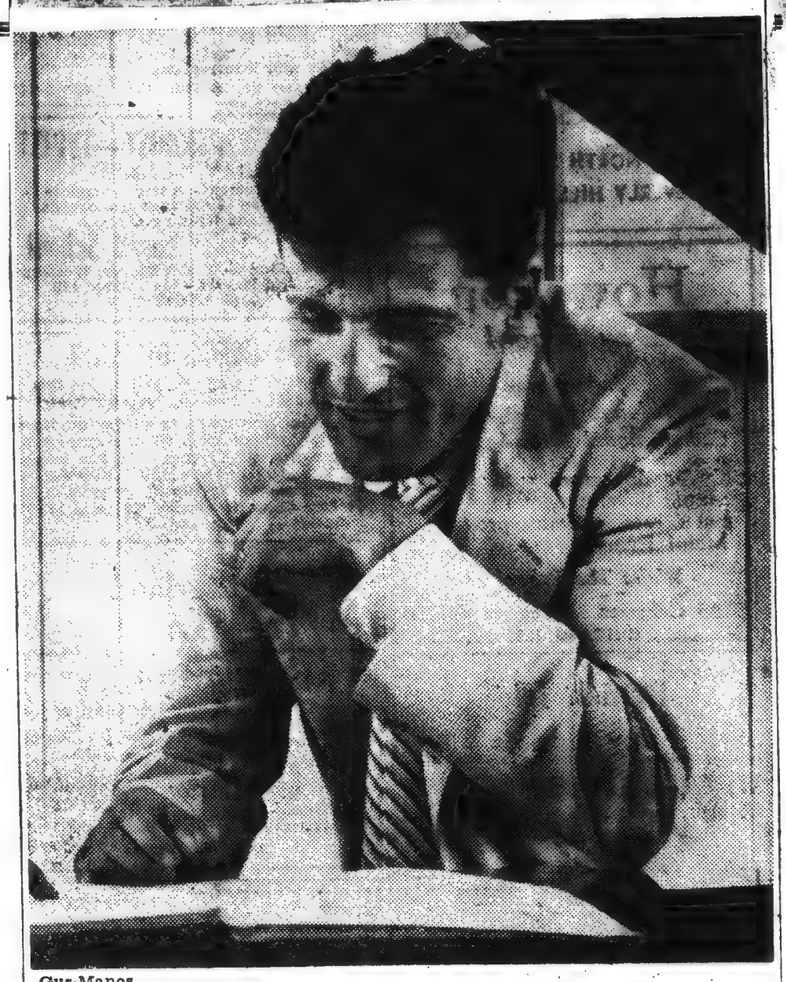
Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Folk Music Festival. Marais and Miranda

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00



Gus Manos

Lukas Foss, whose opera "Griffelkin," will be given its first stage presentation at Tanglewood on Aug. 6 and 7. He will also conduct the Berkshire Festival concert of Sunday, July 8.

August 2

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 1 Orchestra. Music Shed. (Friends)

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs"

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 3

Tanglewood

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Carvalho. Music Shed.

"La Kermesse"	Barraud
"The Three-Cornered Hat"	Falla
Piano Concerto	Ravel
Soloist: José de Oliveira
Ballet, "Petrouchka" (complete)	Stravinsky

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 4

Tanglewood

10:00—Boston Symphony Orchestra, open rehearsal. Music Shed. Benefit orchestra pension fund.
3:00—Dept. 3 Composers' Forum. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)
8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Leonard Bernstein. Music Shed. (Concert in memory of Serge Koussevitsky).

Variations for Orchestra	Moeva
Mass in C minor (K. 427) Kyrie and Gloria	Mozart
Chorus and Soloists: Phyllis Curtin, Soprano; Eunice Alberts, Contralto; Davis Lloyd, Tenor
Symphony No. 5	Prokofieff

South Mountain

3:30—Beaux Arts Trio

Trio in B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke")	Beethoven
Trio in D minor, Op. 120	Faure
Trio in B flat, Op. 99	Schubert

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

August 9

Tanglewood

Tanglewood on Parade. (Program to be announced)

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 10

Tanglewood

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

Symphony No. 102 in B-flat major	Haydn
Symphony No. 6	Piston
"Don Juan"	Strauss
"L'Apprenti Sorcier"	Dukas

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40.

August 11

Tanglewood

10:00—Boston Symphony Orchestra, open rehearsal. Music Shed. Benefit orchestra pension fund.
3:00—Dept. 1 Orchestra. Music Shed. (Friends)
8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Pierre Monteux. Music Shed.

Festival Overture	Freed
Symphony No. 3 in F major	Brahms
Suite for Orchestra, Op. 9	Enesco
Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier"	Strauss

South Mountain

3:30—John Corigliano, New York Philharmonic Quartet

Sonata for Violin and Piano	Strauss
Serenade for Violin, Viola and Cello	Beethoven
Piano Quartet in G minor, Op. 26	Brahms

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

August 16

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs"
Evening of Calypso, West Indian and Cuban music.

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 17

Jacob's Pillow

4:00 and 9:00—Irina Borowska, Alan Howard, Emy St. Just & Company. Tommy Marlowe. Rebecca Harris

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 18

South Mountain

3:30—Claremont String Quartet

Quartet, Op. 39, No. 1	Boccherini
Quartet Op. 70	Ernest Toch
Quartet, Op. 51, No. 1	Brahms

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

Music in Vienna — Summer C

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct many of the major concerts at the Berkshire Music Festival, being presented at Tanglewood to mid-August.

Benny Goodman, who is making his Tanglewood debut this summer, will be heard with the Boston Symphony String Quartet on July 11 in Mozart's Clarinet Quintet K. 581.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

JUL 7 1956

2051 FANS HEAR BENNY GOODMAN AT TANGLEWOOD

'King of Swing' Plays Mozart Concerto With Symphony Group

By WILLARD CLARK

Tanglewood, July 6—This is a week of "firsts" at the Berkshire Music Festival. On Wednesday we listened to the first of the chamber music series and tonight we heard the first of the chamber orchestra Bach-Mozart series This concert also marked the first appearance of Benny Goodman with the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing the Mozart "Concerto for Clarinet in A Major, K. 622."

Two More Firsts

Tomorrow night we shall hear two first performances, a "Military Mass for Men's Chorus and Orchestra" by Martinu, in which the Yale Glee Club will make its first appearance at Tanglewood, and "A Thanksgiving Psalm" from "The Dead Sea Scrolls" for men's chorus and orchestra by Henry Cowell, both works will be conducted by Hugh Ross.

Tonight it was drizzling and cold, and it must have been the magic name of Benny Goodman that brought out 2051 people, many of whom sat outside the hall. There was mink aplenty inside the hall and a few of what looked like old-time horse blankets.

Mr. Goodman and the orchestra, directed by Charles Munch, traversed the clarinet concerto in a slightly self-conscious style. It was his first appearance with the Boston Orchestra. He played with a big, slightly astringent tone, phrased in true musical fashion, but the communication was more scholarly than intimate. The orchestra collaboration was very fine.

Continued On Page 9

In the Mozart cake which made up this program, the top and bottom consisted of the "Symphony in G Minor, K. 550" and the "Symphony in D Major, 'Prague,' K. 504." The clarinet concerto was the filling.

Mr. Munch used 37 men in his chamber orchestra. I have never heard a more eloquent, beautifully proportioned performance of the G Minor Symphony. The opening movement, taken and held at a brisk pace, was vastly exciting, and to the andante Mr. Munch brought an exceptionally beautiful conception. The entire work sparkled and glowed and the audience reaction was marvelous to feel and hear.

Mozart's "Symphony in D Major, 'Prague' K. 504" is one of his finest. We find it the result of countless experiments, for it is the last Mozart composed before his final three, which remain the most famous.

Mr. Munch has a rare manner with Mozart. He communicates the grace and beauty of the music as well as its depth and passion. His musical line is suave and enchanting in color. The understanding between conductor and players is complete and tonight, in its first appearance of the season, the 37 virtuosi played in magnificent fashion.

Contemporary Composers

Mozart will share the program Friday with two contemporary composers. Bohuslav Martinu, who has been a faculty member at the Berkshire School, and Henry Cowell, the American composer. Martinu will be represented by his "Military Mass for Men's Chorus and Orchestra" and Mr. Cowell by his recently completed work "A Thanksgiving Psalm" from "The Dead Sea Scrolls" for men's chorus and orchestra. The Yale Glee Club will make its first appearance in these works and Hugh Ross will conduct.

Mr. Munch will conduct Mozart's "Symphony in D Major, K. 385" and the "Sinfonia Concertante, for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon." This is the first performance of the concertante at Tanglewood.

Sunday afternoon, Lukas Foss will appear both as conductor and pianist. He will conduct three works being played for the first time here. They are "Serious Song: Lament for string orchestra" by Irving Fine, a "Divertimento" by Alexei Haiff, and "The Unanswered Question" by Charles Ives. Mr. Foss will appear as soloist in the Bach "Concerto in D Minor for piano and orchestra." The concert will open with Haydn's "Symphony No. 86 in D Major."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485

JUL 7 1956

Berkshire Group Which Originated Festival Disbands

PITTSFIELD, July 6 (AP)—A Berkshire County group which fostered the symphonic festivals which now have attracted international attention to this region from the musical world voted today to dissolve the organization and to give $25,000 remaining assets to aid musical education.

Known as the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc., and founded in 1934, it worked under its president, Mrs. Gertrude Robinson Smith, to realize the idea of a Berkshire Music Center.

It turned over its physical assets in 1945 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The donation included the $80,000 Music Shed at Tanglewood. Mrs. Smith said the decision to dissolve was based on the passing responsibility from the organization.

Of the $25,000 in the organization's treasury, $25,000 goes to a revolving scholarship fund at the Berkshire Music Center—a school attached to Tanglewood. The remaining $20,000 is given to Pittsfield Community Music School, Inc.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

JUL 7 1956

Tanglewood Programs For Second Week

The second week of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood will include an evening of chamber music by Haydn, Mozart, and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet on Wednesday, and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 13 and 14) and Sunday afternoon (July 15). Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the Bach programs on Saturday and Sunday. The Mozart concert Friday will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

The jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman, who made his debut with the Boston Symphony at its Berkshire Festival concerts last Friday, is donating his services in Wednesday's concert to the Boston Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quintet, K. 581, with the following principals of the Boston Symphony: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

Boris Goldovsky, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will be making his debut as conductor and piano soloist on a Berkshire Festival program. He will conduct the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff, duo-pianists. Mr. Luboshutz will conduct the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto, in which Mr. Goldovsky will be piano soloist.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony, will be soloists Saturday evening.

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon will devote the concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center.

2051 FANS HEAR BENNY GOODMAN AT TANGLEWOOD

'King of Swing' Plays Mozart Concerto With Symphony Group

By WILLARD CLARK

Tanglewood, July 6—This is a week of "firsts" at the Berkshire Music Festival. On Wednesday we listened to the first of the chamber music series and tonight we heard the first of the chamber orchestra Bach-Mozart series This concert also marked the first appearance of Benny Goodman with the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing the Mozart "Concerto for Clarinet in A Major, K. 622."

Two More Firsts

Tomorrow night we shall hear two first performances, a "Military Mass for Men's Chorus and Orchestra" by Martinu, in which the Yale Glee Club will make its first appearance at Tanglewood, and "A Thanksgiving Psalm" from "The Dead Sea Scrolls" for men's chorus and orchestra by Henry Cowell, both works will be conducted by Hugh Ross.

Tonight it was drizzling and cold, and it must have been the magic name of Benny Goodman that brought out 2051 people, many of whom sat outside the hall. There was mink aplenty inside the hall and a few of what looked like old-time horse blankets.

Mr. Goodman and the orchestra, directed by Charles Munch, traversed the clarinet concerto in a slightly self-conscious style. It was his first appearance with the Boston Orchestra. He played with a big, slightly astringent tone, phrased in true musical fashion, but the communication was more scholarly than intimate. The orchestra collaboration was very fine.

Continued On Page 9

In the Mozart cake which made up this program, the top and bottom consisted of the "Symphony in G Minor, K. 550" and the "Symphony in D Major, 'Prague,' K. 504." The clarinet concerto was the filling.

Mr. Munch used 37 men in his chamber orchestra. I have never heard a more eloquent, beautifully proportioned performance of the G Minor Symphony. The opening movement, taken and held at a brisk pace, was vastly exciting, and to the andante Mr. Munch brought an exceptionally beautiful conception. The entire work sparkled and glowed and the audience reaction was marvelous to feel and hear.

Mozart's "Symphony in D Major, 'Prague' K. 504" is one of his finest. We find it the result of countless experiments, for it is the last Mozart composed before his final three, which remain the most famous.

Mr. Munch has a rare manner with Mozart. He communicates the grace and beauty of the music as well as its depth and passion. His musical line is suave and enchanting in color. The understanding between conductor and players is complete and tonight, in its first appearance of the season, the 37 virtuosi played in magnificent fashion.

Contemporary Composers

Mozart will share the program Friday with two contemporary composers. Bohuslav Martinu, who has been a faculty member at the Berkshire School, and Henry Cowell, the American composer. Martinu will be represented by his "Military Mass for Men's Chorus and Orchestra" and Mr. Cowell by his recently completed work "A Thanksgiving Psalm" from "The Dead Sea Scrolls" for men's chorus and orchestra. The Yale Glee Club will make its first appearance in these works and Hugh Ross will conduct.

Mr. Munch will conduct Mozart's "Symphony in D Major, K. 385" and the "Sinfonia Concertante, for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon." This is the first performance of the concertante at Tanglewood.

Sunday afternoon, Lukas Foss will appear both as conductor and pianist. He will conduct three works being played for the first time here. They are "Serious Song: Lament for string orchestra" by Irving Fine, a "Divertimento" by Alexei Haiff, and "The Unanswered Question" by Charles Ives. Mr. Foss will appear as soloist in the Bach "Concerto in D Minor for piano and orchestra." The concert will open with Haydn's "Symphony No. 86 in D Major."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record (m)
MERIDEN, Conn.
Independent Republican
Circ. 16,196

JUL 7 - 1956

Berkshire Music Group Dissolves Its Organization

PITTSFIELD, Mass., July 6 (AP) A Berkshire County group, which fostered the symphonic festivals which now have attracted international attention to this region from the musical world, today voted to dissolve their organization and to give $25,000 remaining assets to aid musical education.

Known as the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc., and founded in 1934, it worked under its president, Mrs. Gertrude Robinson Smith, to realize the idea of a Berkshire music center.

It turned over its physical assets in 1945 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The donation included the $80,000 music shed at Tanglewood. Mrs. Smith said the decision to dissolve was based on the passing of responsibility from the organization.

Of the $25,000 in the organization's treasury, $5,000 goes to revolving scholarship fund at the Berkshire Music Center — a school attached to Tanglewood.

[15]

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

JUL 7 1956

2051 FANS HEAR BENNY GOODMAN AT TANGLEWOOD

'King of Swing' Plays Mozart Concerto With Symphony Group

By WILLARD CLARK

Tanglewood, July 6—This is a week of "firsts" at the Berkshire Music Festival. On Wednesday we listened to the first of the chamber music series and tonight we heard the first of the chamber orchestra Bach-Mozart series This concert also marked the first appearance of Benny Goodman with the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing the Mozart "Concerto for Clarinet in A Major, K. 622."

Two More Firsts

Tomorrow night we shall hear two first performances, a "Military Mass for Men's Chorus and Orchestra" by Martinu, in which the Yale Glee Club will make its first appearance at Tanglewood, and "A Thanksgiving Psalm" from "The Dead Sea Scrolls" for men's chorus and orchestra by Henry Cowell, both works will be conducted by Hugh Ross.

Tonight it was drizzling and cold, and it must have been the magic name of Benny Goodman that brought out 2051 people, many of whom sat outside the hall. There was mink aplenty inside the hall and a few of what looked like old-time horse blankets.

Mr. Goodman and the orchestra, directed by Charles Munch, traversed the clarinet concerto in a slightly self-conscious style. It was his first appearance with the Boston Orchestra. He played with a big, slightly astringent tone, phrased in true musical fashion, but the communication was more scholarly than intimate. The orchestra collaboration was very fine.

Continued On Page 9

In the Mozart cake which made up this program, the top and bottom consisted of the "Symphony in G Minor, K. 550" and the "Symphony in D Major, 'Prague,' K. 504." The clarinet concerto was the filling.

Mr. Munch used 37 men in his chamber orchestra. I have never heard a more eloquent, beautifully proportioned performance of the G Minor Symphony. The opening movement, taken and held at a brisk pace, was vastly exciting, and to the andante Mr. Munch brought an exceptionally beautiful conception. The entire work sparkled and glowed and the audience reaction was marvelous to feel and hear.

Mozart's "Symphony in D Major, 'Prague' K. 504" is one of his finest. We find it the result of countless experiments, for it is the last Mozart composed before his final three, which remain the most famous.

Mr. Munch has a rare manner with Mozart. He communicates the grace and beauty of the music as well as its depth and passion. His musical line is suave and enchanting in color. The understanding between conductor and players is complete and tonight, in its first appearance of the season, the 37 virtuosi played in magnificent fashion.

Contemporary Composers

Mozart will share the program Friday with two contemporary composers. Bohuslav Martinu, who has been a faculty member at the Berkshire School, and Henry Cowell, the American composer. Martinu will be represented by his "Military Mass for Men's Chorus and Orchestra" and Mr. Cowell by his recently completed work "A Thanksgiving Psalm" from "The Dead Sea Scrolls" for men's chorus and orchestra. The Yale Glee Club will make its first appearance in these works and Hugh Ross will conduct.

Mr. Munch will conduct Mozart's "Symphony in D Major, K. 385" and the "Sinfonia Concertante, for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon." This is the first performance of the concertante at Tanglewood.

Sunday afternoon, Lukas Foss will appear both as conductor and pianist. He will conduct three works being played for the first time here. They are "Serious Song: Lament for string orchestra" by Irving Fine, a "Divertimento" by Alexei Haiff, and "The Unanswered Question" by Charles Ives. Mr. Foss will appear as soloist in the Bach "Concerto in D Minor for piano and orchestra." The concert will open with Haydn's "Symphony No. 86 in D Major."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485

JUL 7 1956

Berkshire Group Which Originated Festival Disbands

PITTSFIELD, July 6 (AP)—A Berkshire County group which fostered the symphonic festivals which now have attracted international attention to this region from the musical world voted today to dissolve the organization and to give $25,000 remaining assets to aid musical education.

Known as the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc., and founded in 1934, it worked under its president, Mrs. Gertrude Robinson Smith, to realize the idea of a Berkshire Music Center.

It turned over its physical assets in 1945 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The donation included the $80,000 Music Shed at Tanglewood. Mrs. Smith said the decision to dissolve was based on the passing responsibility from the organization.

Of the $25,000 in the organization's treasury, $25,000 goes to a revolving scholarship fund at the Berkshire Music Center—a school attached to Tanglewood. The remaining $20,000 is given to Pittsfield Community Music School, Inc.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

JUL 7 1956

Tanglewood Programs For Second Week

The second week of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood will include an evening of chamber music by Haydn, Mozart, and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet on Wednesday, and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 13 and 14) and Sunday afternoon (July 15). Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the Bach programs on Saturday and Sunday. The Mozart concert Friday will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

The jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman, who made his debut with the Boston Symphony at its Berkshire Festival concerts last Friday, is donating his services in Wednesday's concert to the Boston Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quintet, K. 581, with the following principals of the Boston Symphony: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

Boris Goldovsky, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will be making his debut as conductor and piano soloist on a Berkshire Festival program. He will conduct the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff, duo-pianists. Mr. Luboshutz will conduct the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto, in which Mr. Goldovsky will be piano soloist.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony, will be soloists Saturday evening.

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon will devote the concert to the Tanglewood première of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center.

[15]

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., SATURDAY, JULY 7, 1956

2051 FANS HEAR BENNY GOODMAN AT TANGLEWOOD

'King of Swing' Plays Mozart Concerto With Symphony Group

By WILLARD CLARK

Tanglewood, July 6—This is a week of "firsts" at the Berkshire Music Festival. On Wednesday we listened to the first of the chamber music series and tonight we heard the first of the chamber orchestra Bach-Mozart series This concert also marked the first appearance of Benny Goodman with the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing the Mozart "Concerto for Clarinet in A Major, K. 622."

Two More Firsts

Tomorrow night we shall hear two first performances, a "Military Mass for Men's Chorus and Orchestra" by Martinu, in which the Yale Glee Club will make its first appearance at Tanglewood, and "A Thanksgiving Psalm" from "The Dead Sea Scrolls" for men's chorus and orchestra by Henry Cowell, both works will be conducted by Hugh Ross.

Tonight it was drizzling and cold, and it must have been the magic name of Benny Goodman that brought out 2051 people, many of whom sat outside the hall. There was mink aplenty inside the hall and a few of what looked like old-time horse blankets.

Mr. Goodman and the orchestra, directed by Charles Munch, traversed the clarinet concerto in a slightly self-conscious style. It was his first appearance with the Boston Orchestra. He played with a big, slightly astringent tone, phrased in true musical fashion, but the communication was more scholarly than intimate. The orchestra collaboration was very fine.

Continued On Page 9

In the Mozart cake which made up this program, the top and bottom consisted of the "Symphony in G Minor, K. 550" and the "Symphony in D Major, 'Prague,' K. 504." The clarinet concerto was the filling.

Mr. Munch used 37 men in his chamber orchestra. I have never heard a more eloquent, beautifully proportioned performance of the G Minor Symphony. The opening movement, taken and held at a brisk pace, was vastly exciting, and to the andante Mr. Munch brought an exceptionally beautiful conception. The entire work sparkled and glowed and the audience reaction was marvelous to feel and hear.

Mozart's "Symphony in D Major, 'Prague' K. 504" is one of his finest. We find it the result of countless experiments, for it is the last Mozart composed before his final three, which remain the most famous.

Mr. Munch has a rare manner with Mozart. He communicates the grace and beauty of the music as well as its depth and passion. His musical line is suave and enchanting in color. The understanding between conductor and players is complete and tonight, in its first appearance of the season, the 37 virtuosi played in magnificent fashion.

Contemporary Composers

Mozart will share the program Friday with two contemporary composers. Bohuslav Martinu, who has been a faculty member at the Berkshire School, and Henry Cowell, the American composer. Martinu will be represented by his "Military Mass for Men's Chorus and Orchestra" and Mr. Cowell by his recently completed work "A Thanksgiving Psalm" from "The Dead Sea Scrolls" for men's chorus and orchestra. The Yale Glee Club will make its first appearance in these works and Hugh Ross will conduct.

Mr. Munch will conduct Mozart's "Symphony in D Major, K. 385" and the "Sinfonia Concertante, for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon." This is the first performance of the concertante at Tanglewood.

Sunday afternoon, Lukas Foss will appear both as conductor and pianist. He will conduct three works being played for the first time here. They are "Serious Song: Lament for string orchestra" by Irving Fine, a "Divertimento" by Alexei Haiff, and "The Unanswered Question" by Charles Ives. Mr. Foss will appear as soloist in the Bach "Concerto in D Minor for piano and orchestra." The concert will open with Haydn's "Symphony No. 86 in D Major."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record (m)
MERIDEN, Conn.
Independent Republican
Circ. 16,196

JUL 7 - 1956

Berkshire Music Group Dissolves Its Organization

PITTSFIELD, Mass., July 6 (AP) A Berkshire County group, which fostered the symphonic festivals which now have attracted international attention to this region from the musical world, today voted to dissolve their organization and to give $25,000 remaining assets to aid musical education.

Known as the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc., and founded in 1934, it worked under its president, Mrs. Gertrude Robinson Smith, to realize the idea of a Berkshire music center.

It turned over its physical assets in 1945 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The donation included the $80,000 music shed at Tanglewood. Mrs. Smith said the decision to dissolve was based on the passing of responsibility from the organization.

Of the $25,000 in the organization's treasury, $5,000 goes to revolving scholarship fund at the Berkshire Music Center — a school attached to Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 15,916
JUL 7 1956

Things to See and Do:

Music Moving Into the Great Outdoors Offers Programs to Suit Varied Tastes

On the 200-acre pine-clad Tanglewood estate in Lenox, Mass., the Berkshire Festival will begin the second week of its six-week annual program of music-making in the Berkshire Hills with a chamber music concert Wednesday evening. The Boston Symphony String Quartet will offer a program of Haydn, Mozart and Brahms, with Benny Goodman, making his second appearance at Tanglewood as solo clarinetist.

Scheduled for Friday evening is the Boston Symphony Chamber orchestra in an all-Mozart program, with Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz sharing the conductor's podium, and pianists Luboshutz and Nemenoff, and Boris Goldovsky as soloists.

Saturday evening, Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will conduct the chamber orchestra, of that organization in an all-Bach program, with soloists William Kroll, violin, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute.

On Sunday afternoon the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra will present the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion of St. John", with the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center, students and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. Charles Munch will conduct.

All of next week's concerts will be given in the 1,200-seat theatre-concert hall, evening programs at 8:30 o'clock and Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908
JUL 7 1956

Two Concerts of Modern Chamber Music Scheduled At Tanglewood

Two concerts of modern chamber music, a bonus for visitors to the Berkshire eFstival, will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on July 9 and 23 under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago. The performers will be members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and noted guest artists, to be announced. Each program will include two compositions commissioned by the Fromm Foundation.

The brace of concerts, generously donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music at Tanglewood maintained by the Boston Symphony, which commenced its 14th season July 2, will each displa ya work by a former student of the school's composition department. The Fromm Foundation concerts, to be given in addition to the Berkshire Festival's regular schedule of 24 concerts, July 4-August 12, and also extra to the 40-odd concerts and demonstrations by students of the Berkshire Music Center given during the same period, are open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose contributions help support the music school, and to the general public.

Music by Benjamin Britten, Igor Stravinsky and Aaron Copland will be performed on Monday evening, July 9, with Mr. Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, as pianist in his own trio, "Vitebsk." The commissioned works are "Serenade for String Quintet" by Ben Weber of New York City; and "Sabrina Fair," a suite of songs for tenor, strings and piano by Alvin Epstein of Hartford, Conn., a Crofts Scholarship student of Mr. Copland at Tnglewood in 1953, and a faculty member of The Hartford College of Music.

The program for the second concert on Monday evening, July 23, will include music by Samuel Barber, Manuel De Falla, Darius Milhaud and Goffredo Petrassi. Mr. Petrassi, noted modern Italian composer, is guest teacher of composition in the Berkshires this summer. The commissioned works are "Quintet for Bassoon and Strings" by Leland Smith of the University of Chicago's Music Department; and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments by Cuban composer, Julian Orbon of Havana, a 1946 Tanglewood composition student.

'King of Swing' At Tanglewood

Benny Goodman will make his Lenox, Mass., Tanglewood debut on Friday, July 6 (8:30 p.m., Theater-Concert Hall), at the opening of the "Bach-Mozart" Concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. The noted jazz clarinetist will display his serious side as soloist in Mozart's Concerto for Clarinet, K. 622.

B. G.—"KING OF SWING"

On Wednesday, July 11 (8:30 p.m., Theater-Concert Hall), Benny Goodman will give a chamber music concert with the Boston Symphony String Quartet in works of Haydn, Mozart and Brahms.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUL 7 1956

McCollum To Sing At Tanglewood

John McCollum, tenor, will replace David Lloyd in the role of the Evangelist in the Berkshire Festival concert performance of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," which will have its first performance at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon, July 15, in the Theatre-Concert hall. Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Hugh Ross, will participate; also, soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. All, including Mr. McCollum, are former students of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood.

David Lloyd has been prevented by illness from fulfilling this engagement, and Mr. McCollum will also assume his role in the Mozart Mass in C minor, K. 427, with Phyllis Curtin and Eunice Alberts as other soloists, which Leonard Bernstein will conduct as a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky on Aug. 4. Mr. Lloyd's teaching duties wtih the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center are being assumed by James Lucas.

Mac Morgan, concert bass-baritone, will have the male solo in Bohuslav Martinu's "Military Mass," which will have its first performance at a Berkshire Festivalc conre tonight. Hugh Ross will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, and the Yale Glee Club, which is also making its Tanglewod debut.

NEW MUSICAL WORK TONIGHT AT FESTIVAL

Tanglewood Event Will Feature Psalm From 'Dead Sea Scrolls'

The second chamber orchestra concert in the 1956 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8.30. Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra, will conduct the first half of the concert, and Hugh Ross, head of the chorus department of the Berkshire Music Center, is on the podium for the second. A high light of the program will be the world premiere of the first musical setting of a text from the Dead Sea Scrolls—Henry Cowell's A Thanksgiving Psalm from "The Dead Sea Scrolls." This and the "Military Mass" by Martinu, the other work which Mr. Ross will conduct, will enlist, in addition to the orchestral forces, the services of the Yale Glee Club, 50 voices trained by Fenno Heath. The Yale choristers are making their Tanglewood debut. On the first half of the program Dr. Munch will conduct two works by Mozart, whose bicentennial is being observed this year: the "Haffner" Symphony in D Major, Number 35, K. 385, and the Woodwind Sinfonia Concertante in E Flat Major, K. 297b, Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

The text for Mr. Cowell's composition has been translated into English by Millar Burrows, Winkley professor of Biblical Theology at Yale, from the Aramaic. The score, composed in New York City during the spring of this year, was written for and dedicated to Mr. Ross who has conducted the first performances of several of Cowell's compositions. This will be the first of his works performed at the Berkshire Festival, and Mr.

JAMES STAGLIANO

Cowell will be present to hear the performance.

Tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 Lukas Foss, a member of the composition faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct five works, three of which are contemporary and new to Tanglewood. The new pieces will be the "Serious Song, for Strings" by Mr. Foss' colleague on the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, Irving Fine; "Divertimento" by Alexei Haieff; and "The Unanswered Question" by the late and legendary American composer, Charles Ives. The program will begin with Haydn's Symphony No. 86 in D Major, and conclude with Bach's Piano Concerto in D Minor, Mr. Foss as soloist conducting from the keyboard.

Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, July 7, 1956

Money for Music

Two Tanglewood tales made headlines this week, both in a major key. In the Theater-Music Hall, the curtain went up on the 1956 season with two chamber music concerts. And in Stockbridge, Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, president of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., announced that the corporation's $25,000 in cash assets will be made available for local musical scholarships at the end of this year.

Beneficiaries of the scholarship endowments will be the Pittsfield Community Music School, which will get $20,000 of the sum, and the Berkshire Music Center revolving scholarship fund, which will get $5,000. The Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., which launched the Tanglewood idea in 1934 and turned over its physical assets (including the Shed) to the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1945, will be liquidated Dec. 31. The $25,000 represents profits earned by the corporation during the nine years it operated the Festival.

The 1956 Tanglewood opening, a concert by the Kroll String Quartet, drew an appreciative audience of more than a thousand persons, indicating that the popularity of the smaller chamber music concert is continuing its growth. Two nights later, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman as the main drawing card in Mozart's Concerto for Clarinet in A major, the Bach-Mozart chamber series opened to an audience of 2,051, despite poor weather.

[16]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 15,916
JUL 7 1956

Things to See and Do:

Music Moving Into the Great Outdoors Offers Programs to Suit Varied Tastes

On the 200-acre pine-clad Tanglewood estate in Lenox, Mass., the Berkshire Festival will begin the second week of its six-week annual program of music-making in the Berkshire Hills with a chamber music concert Wednesday evening. The Boston Symphony String Quartet will offer a program of Haydn, Mozart and Brahms, with Benny Goodman, making his second appearance at Tanglewood as solo clarinetist.

Scheduled for Friday evening is the Boston Symphony Chamber orchestra in an all-Mozart program, with Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz sharing the conductor's podium, and pianists Luboshutz and Nemenoff, and Boris Goldovsky as soloists.

Saturday evening, Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will conduct the chamber orchestra, of that organization in an all-Bach program, with soloists William Kroll, violin, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute.

On Sunday afternoon the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra will present the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion of St. John", with the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center, students and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. Charles Munch will conduct.

All of next week's concerts will be given in the 1,200-seat theatre-concert hall, evening programs at 8:30 o'clock and Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908
JUL 7 1956

Two Concerts of Modern Chamber Music Scheduled At Tanglewood

Two concerts of modern chamber music, a bonus for visitors to the Berkshire eFstival, will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on July 9 and 23 under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago. The performers will be members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and noted guest artists, to be announced. Each program will include two compositions commissioned by the Fromm Foundation.

The brace of concerts, generously donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music at Tanglewood maintained by the Boston Symphony, which commenced its 14th season July 2, will each displa ya work by a former student of the school's composition department. The Fromm Foundation concerts, to be given in addition to the Berkshire Festival's regular schedule of 24 concerts, July 4-August 12, and also extra to the 40-odd concerts and demonstrations by students of the Berkshire Music Center given during the same period, are open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose contributions help support the music school, and to the general public.

Music by Benjamin Britten, Igor Stravinsky and Aaron Copland will be performed on Monday evening, July 9, with Mr. Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, as pianist in his own trio, "Vitebsk." The commissioned works are "Serenade for String Quintet" by Ben Weber of New York City; and "Sabrina Fair," a suite of songs for tenor, strings and piano by Alvin Epstein of Hartford, Conn., a Crofts Scholarship student of Mr. Copland at Tnglewood in 1953, and a faculty member of The Hartford College of Music.

The program for the second concert on Monday evening, July 23, will include music by Samuel Barber, Manuel De Falla, Darius Milhaud and Goffredo Petrassi. Mr. Petrassi, noted modern Italian composer, is guest teacher of composition in the Berkshires this summer. The commissioned works are "Quintet for Bassoon and Strings" by Leland Smith of the University of Chicago's Music Department; and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments, by Cuban composer, Julian Orbon of Havana, a 1946 Tanglewood composition student.

'King of Swing' At Tanglewood

Benny Goodman will make his Lenox, Mass., Tanglewood debut on Friday, July 6 (8:30 p.m., Theater-Concert Hall), at the opening of the "Bach-Mozart" Concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. The noted jazz clarinetist will display his serious side as soloist in Mozart's Concerto for Clarinet, K. 622.

B. G.—"KING OF SWING"

On Wednesday, July 11 (8:30 p. m., Theater-Concert Hall), Benny Goodman will give a chamber music concert with the Boston Symphony String Quartet in works of Haydn, Mozart and Brahms.

New England Newscup Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUL 7 1956

McCollum To Sing At Tanglewood

John McCollum, tenor, will replace David Lloyd in the role of the Evangelist in the Berkshire Festival concert performance of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," which will have its first performance at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon, July 15, in the Theatre-Concert hall. Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Hugh Ross, will participate; also, soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. All, including Mr. McCollum, are former students of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood.

David Lloyd has been prevented by illness from fulfilling this engagement, and Mr. McCollum will also assume his role in the Mozart Mass in C minor, K. 427, with Phyllis Curtin and Eunice Alberts as other soloists, which Leonard Bernstein will conduct as a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky on Aug. 4. Mr. Lloyd's teaching duties wtih the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center are being assumed by James Lucas.

Mac Morgan, concert bass-baritone, will have the male solo in Bohuslav Martinu's "Military Mass," which will have its first performance at a Berkshire Festivalc conre tonight. Hugh Ross will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, and the Yale Glee Club, which is also making its Tanglewod debut.

NEW MUSICAL WORK TONIGHT AT FESTIVAL

Tanglewood Event Will Feature Psalm From 'Dead Sea Scrolls'

The second chamber orchestra concert in the 1956 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8.30. Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra, will conduct the first half of the concert, and Hugh Ross, head of the chorus department of the Berkshire Music Center, is on the podium for the second. A high light of the program will be the world premiere of the first musical setting of a text from the Dead Sea Scrolls—Henry Cowell's A Thanksgiving Psalm from "The Dead Sea Scrolls." This and the "Military Mass" by Martinu, the other work which Mr. Ross will conduct, will enlist, in addition to the orchestral forces, the services of the Yale Glee Club, 50 voices trained by Fenno Heath. The Yale choristers are making their Tanglewood debut. On the first half of the program Dr. Munch will conduct two works by Mozart, whose bicentennial is being observed this year: the "Haffner" Symphony in D Major, Number 35, K. 385, and the Woodwind Sinfonia Concertante in E Flat Major, K. 297b, Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

The text for Mr. Cowell's composition has been translated into English by Millar Burrows, Winkley professor of Biblical Theology at Yale, from the Aramaic. The score, composed in New York City during the spring of this year, was written for and dedicated to Mr. Ross who has conducted the first performances of several of Cowell's compositions. This will be the first of his works performed at the Berkshire Festival, and Mr.

JAMES STAGLIANO

Cowell will be present to hear the performance.

Tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 Lukas Foss, a member of the composition faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct five works, three of which are contemporary and new to Tanglewood. The new pieces will be the "Serious Song, for Strings" by Mr. Foss' colleague on the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, Irving Fine; "Divertimento" by Alexei Haieff; and "The Unanswered Question" by the late and legendary American composer, Charles Ives. The program will begin with Haydn's Symphony No. 86 in D Major, and conclude with Bach's Piano Concerto in D Minor, Mr. Foss as soloist conducting from the keyboard.

Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, July 7, 1956

Money for Music

Two Tanglewood tales made headlines this week, both in a major key. In the Theater-Music Hall, the curtain went up on the 1956 season with two chamber music concerts. And in Stockbridge, Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, president of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., announced that the corporation's $25,000 in cash assets will be made available for local musical scholarships at the end of this year.

Beneficiaries of the scholarship endowments will be the Pittsfield Community Music School, which will get $20,000 of the sum, and the Berkshire Music Center revolving scholarship fund, which will get $5,000. The Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., which launched the Tanglewood idea in 1934 and turned over its physical assets (including the Shed) to the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1945, will be liquidated Dec. 31. The $25,000 represents profits earned by the corporation during the nine years it operated the Festival.

The 1956 Tanglewood opening, a concert by the Kroll String Quartet, drew an appreciative audience of more than a thousand persons, indicating that the popularity of the smaller chamber music concerts is continuing its growth. Two nights later, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman as the main drawing card in Mozart's Concerto for Clarinet in A major, the Bach-Mozart chamber series opened to an audience of 2,051, despite poor weather.

[16]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
JUL 7 1956

Petrovec

CONDUCTOR AND SOLOIST at tomorrow afternoon's concert at the Berkshire Festival, Lukas Foss, rehearses the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the chamber music program which will feature the works of Haydn, Fife, Haieff, Ives. Mr. Foss will be the soloist in the Bach Piano Concerto in D minor. The performance will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall at 2:30.

2,100 Hear Benny Goodman; Yale Singers Are On Tonight

Hugh Ross and Dr. Munch Share Podium This Evening—Foss To Conduct and Be Soloist Tomorrow Afternoon

TANGLEWOOD — A crowd of 2,100 turned out last night, despite a drizzling rain, to hear Benny Goodman, the famed jazz clarinetist make his Tanglewood debut with Dr. Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all Mozart program. It marked the opening of the six weekend concerts by the BSO, the first two weeks of which are devoted to the Bach-Mozart Festival.

World Premiere

The second chamber orchestra concert program tonight in the Theater-Concert Hall will feature the world premiere of the first musical setting of a text from the Dead Sea Scrolls—Henry Cowell's "A Thanksgiving Psalm."

Dr. Munch, music director of the BSO, will conduct the first half of the concert and Hugh Ross, head of the chorus department of the Berkshire Music Center, will be on the podium for the second half.

Mr. Cowell's psalm and the "Military Mass," by Martinu, the other work which Mr. Ross will conduct, will enlist, in addition to the orchestral forces, the services of the Yale Glee Club of 50 voices trained by Fenno Heath. The Yale choristers are making their Tanglewood debut.

On the first half of the program Dr. Munch will conduct two works by Mozart, whose bicentennial is being observed this year, the "Haffner" Symphony in D Major and the Woodwind Sinfonia Concertante in E Flat Major, with Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

Dedicated to Ross

The text for Mr. Cowell's composition has been translated into English by Millar Burrows, Winkley professor of Biblical theology at Yale, from the Aramaic. The score, composed in New York City during the spring of this year, was written for and dedicated to Mr. Ross who has conducted the first performances of several of Cowell's compositions. This will be the first of his works performed at the Berkshire Festival, and Mr. Cowell will be present to hear the performance.

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 Lukas Foss, a member of the composition faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct five works, three of which are contemporary and new to Tanglewood. The new pieces will be the "Serious Song, for Strings" by Mr. Foss' colleague on the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, Irving Fine; "Divertimento" by Alexei Haieff; and "The Unanswered Question" by the late and legendary American composer, Charles Ives. The program will begin with Haydn's Symphony No. 85 in D Major, and conclude with Bach's Piano Concerto in D Minor, Mr. Foss as soloist conducting from the keyboard.

Mr. Foss, who at one time was a student at the Berkshire Music Center and returns to its faculty this year after a summer's leave of absence, has become one of the busiest men of music in the country. He now resides in Los Angeles, where he is associate professor at the University of California in charge of composition and music director of the U. C. L. A. Symphony Orchestra. He is also conductor of the Los Angeles Chamber Symphony Orchestra. Later in the season, on Aug. 6 and 7 the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will present the stage premiere of his opera, "Griffelkin," which was commissioned by the National Broadcasting Co. television network and telecast nationally last November. The composer will conduct these two performances, which will be staged by Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Music Center's opera department.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
JUL 7 1956

Fromm Concert

Modern Chamber Music At Tanglewood on Monday

TANGLEWOOD—Five principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, assisted by a number of well-known artists, will participate in a concert of modern chamber music in the Theater-Concert Hall here Monday evening at 8:30.

This is the first of two concerts to be given under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago, Ill., donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Center. The second will be [illegible] day, July 23.

The brace of concerts is [illegible] a non-reserved seat [illegible] Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose contributions help support the music school, and to the general public.

Music of Igor Stravinsky, Ben Weber, Benjamin Britten, Arnold Schoenberg, Anton Webern, Alvin Epstein and Aaron Copland will be performed on Monday's concert by the following members of the Boston Symphony: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello; Georges Moleux, bass. Guest artists are: Ruth Posselt, violin; Irving Fine, Saparoff Lipkin, Ralph Berkowitz, William Masselos, Aaron Copland, pianos; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Arthur Schoep, tenor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Democrat
Circ. 7,100
JUL 7 1956

Two Concerts of Modern Chamber Music Scheduled At Tanglewood

Two concerts of modern chamber music, a bonus for visitors to the Berkshire eFstival, will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on July 9 and 23 under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago. The performers will be members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and noted guest artists, to be announced. Each program will include two compositions commissioned by the Fromm Foundation.

The brace of concerts, generously donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music at Tanglewood maintained by the Boston Symphony, which commenced its 14th season July 2, will each display a work by a former student of the school's composition department. The Fromm Foundation concerts, to be given in addition to the Berkshire Festival's regular schedule of 24 concerts, July 4-August 12, and also extra to the 40-odd concerts and demonstrations by students of the Berkshire Music Center given during the same period, are open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose contributions help support the music school, and to the general public.

Music by Benjamin Britten, Igor Stravinsky and Aaron Copland will be performed on Monday evening, July 9, with Mr. Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, as pianist in his own trio, "Vitebsk." The commissioned works are "Serenade for String Quintet" by Ben Weber of New York City; and "Sabrina Fair," a suite of songs for tenor, strings and piano by Alvin Epstein of Hartford, Conn., a Crofts Scholarship student of Mr. Copland at Tnglewood in 1953, and a faculty member of The Hartford College of Music.

The program for the second concert [illegible] partment; and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments by Cuban composer, Julian Orbon of Havana, a 1946 Tanglewood composition student.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
JUL 7 1956

Music

First Tanglewood Concert Draws Overflow Audience

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE BOSTON Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch formally opened the 1956 season at Tanglewood last night when a small chamber-sized group played an all-Mozart program in the Theater-Concert Hall.

On the chilliest night in Tanglewood unofficial history a surprisingly large number braved the purlieu of the hill, failing to find seats inside, to hear the program and the soloist of the evening, Benny Goodman.

The orchestra was in top shape and played with crisp and incisive response to Munch's exhiliarating drive. They played two symphonies, each of which had been played three times previously in the same hall; the G minor (K550) having been performed by Koussevitzky and the D major (K504), the Prague, by Munch himself.

* * *

MUNCH USES the version of the G minor which the composer himself revised and which includes clarinets. Trumpets and tympani are not called for but they are both used in the "Prague." Munch kept the ensemble tightly controlled and aroused exuberant acclaim from the audience. It was bold Mozart, nothing dainty nor quaint about it, but there was style to the allegros and sensitivity to the slow movements, that of the G minor being more effective to our ears.

It is a happy anniversary indeed to observe the 200th year since the Salzburg boy's birth and to marvel at the ever-fresh pages of his greatest and last symphonies as well as of the smaller and lesser works. It becomes a bit redundant by now to attempt to point out details here and there is if they were precious gems because time proves them all only parts of a more marvelous treasure.

* * *

THE CONCERTO for clarinet with orchestra remains the foremost work of its kind in the whole literature. Goodman acquitted himself with great honor. There was excellent taste and thorough musicality in everything he did. The first two movements are more interesting than the final one and the slow middle movement was most deeply impressive. Furthermore there was variety to his playing and ample contrast. His intonation was not consistently satisfying and the tone was pleasing without being completely round but it was enjoyable music-making and his unpretentious demeanor won him friends before he blew a note and retained them throughout his many recalls.

The orchestra gave him heart-melting tonal support in the slow movement and Munch grasped the whole concerto with calm mastery. Goodman appeared in this city at the Armory with his band a dozen years ago and whereas his invitation here now was due certainly to the reputation he has earned in his specific field, this was a commendable event in every way.

she will [illegible] another [illegible]
her husb[illegible]

major singles Fry, who is United States now a pro.

What's Going On?

TONIGHT:

8:30—Tanglewood. Bach-Mozart Series. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Theater-Concert Hall.

8:40—Williamstown Summer Theater. Final Performance, "The Young and Beautiful."

8:40—Sharon Playhouse. Final performance, "Paradise Gate."

8:45—Berkshire Playhouse. Final performance, "Anastasia."

9:00—Jacob's Pillow Dogoudovsky-Strogarova Ballet, also Myra Kinch and Ruth St. Denis.

For complete schedule of outstanding cultural events in Berkshire for the next six weeks, see the Berkshire Summer Calendar in the second section of today's Eagle,

Berkshire Week

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Gazette (e)
TAUNTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 11,035
JUL 7 1956

Lenox Cheers Classic Benny

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—Guest soloist last night in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood was Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing."

Goodman was cheered lustily by the audience of 2,000, about half of them outside in the rain. His selection was concerto for clarinet in A-major.

It was Goodman's first appearance with the Boston Symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

The concerts by the Symphony's chamber group, made up of 37 musicians, preceded the full Berkshire Symphonic Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Recorder-Gazette (e)
GREENFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,640
JUL 7 1956

2000 AT TANGLEWOOD HEAR BENNY GOODMAN

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—Guest soloist last night in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood was Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing".

Goodman was cheered lustily by the audience of 2,000, about half of them outside in the rain. His selection was concerto for clarinet in A-major.

It was Goodman's first appearance with the Boston Symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

The concerts by the Symphony's chamber group, made up of 37 musicians, preceded the full Berkshire Symphonic Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Journal (m)
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 58,259
JUL 7 1956

Swing King Cheered As Soloist in A Mozart Concerto

Lenox, Mass. — (AP) — Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing," last night was the soloist in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

When he finished, the audience of 2,000—about half of them seated outside in the rain—cheered lustily. His selection was Concerto for Clarinet in A-Major.

It was his first appearance with the Boston Symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
ATHOL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 4,556
JUL 7 1956

Goodman, Soloist

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—Guest soloist last night in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood was Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing."

Goodman was cheered lustily by the audience of 2,000, about half of them outside in the rain. His selection was concerto for clarinet in A-major.

It was Goodman's first appearance with the Boston Symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

The concerts by the Symphony's chamber group, made up of 37 musicians, preceded the full Berkshire Symphonic Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081
JUL 7 1956

Berkshire Group Is Dissolving

Pittsfield, Mass. — (AP) — A Berkshire County group, which fostered the symphonic festivals which now have attracted international attention to this region from the musical world, have voted to dissolve their organization and to give $25,000 remaining assets to aid musical education.

Known as the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., and founded in 1934, it worked under its president, Mrs. Gertrude Robinson Smith, to realize the idea of a Berkshire Music Center.

It turned over its physical assets in 1945 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The donation included the $80,000 music shed at Tanglewood. Mrs. Smith said the decision to dissolve was based on the passing of responsibility from the organization.

Of the $25,000 in the organization's treasury, $5,000 goes to a revolving scholarship fund at the Berkshire Music Center — a school attached to Tanglewood. The remaining $20,000 is given to Pittsfield Community Music School Inc.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 7 1956

Berkshire Symphony Festival, Inc., Votes Dissolution Gifts

The board of trustees of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc., yesterday voted to give $5,000 to the Berkshire Music Center Revolving scholarship fund and approximately $20,000 to the Pittsfield Community Music School, Inc., from assets accumulated through the years from 1934 to 1945, upon its dissolution by Dec. 31.

In 1945 the Berkshire Festival organization turned over its physical assets, including the $80,000 Music Shed at Tanglewood, to the trustees of the Boston Symphony orchestra, who have since conducted the Tanglewood operation.

Announcement of the scholarships was made yesterday by Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, president of the Festival corporation, and the prime mover behind the original plan to have outdoor concerts in the Berkshires, following the trustees' meeting at her home.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Herald (m)
RUTLAND, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 20,790
JUL 7 1956

Original Music Group Disbands At Tanglewood

PITTSFIELD, Mass., July 6 (AP)—A Berkshire County group, which fostered the symphonic festivals which now have attracted international attention to this region from the musical world, today voted to dissolve their organization and to give $25,000 remaining assets to aid musical education.

Known as the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc., and founded in 1934, it worked under its president, Mrs. Gertrude Robinson Smith, to realize the idea of a Berkshire Music Center.

It turned over its physical assets in 1945 to the Boston Symphonic Orchestra. The donation included the $80,000 music shed at Tanglewood. Mrs. Smith said the decision to dissolve was based on the passing of responsibility from the organization.

Of the $25,000 in the organization's treasury, $5,000 goes to a revolving scholarship fund at the Berkshire Music Center—a school attached to Tanglewood. The remaining $20,000 is given to Pittsfield Community Music School, Inc.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866
JUL 7 1956

Berkshire Music Group Dissolves; Gives $25,000

PITTSFIELD, July 6 (AP)—A Berkshire county group, which fostered the symphonic festivals which now have attracted international attention to this region from the musical world, today voted to dissolve their organization and to give $25,000 remaining assets to aid musical education.

Known as the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc., and founded in 1934, it worked under its president, Mrs. Gertrude Robinson Smith, to realize the idea of a Berkshire music center.

It turned over its physical assets in 1945 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The donation included the $80,000 music shed at Tanglewood. Mrs. Smith said the decision to dissolve was based on the passing of responsibility from the organization.

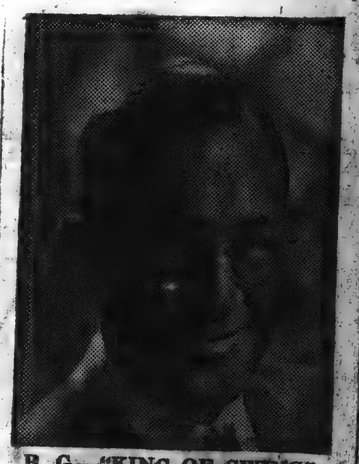
Of the $25,000 in the organization's treasury, $5,000 goes to a revolving scholarship fund at the Berkshire Music Center—a school attached to Tanglewood. The remaining $20,000 is given to Pittsfield Community Music School, Inc.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Democrat
Circ. 7,100
JUL 7 1956

magnificent colors of [illegible]

'King of Swing' At Tanglewood

Benny Goodman will make his Lenox, Mass., Tanglewood debut on Friday, July 6 (8:30 p.m., Theater-Concert Hall), at the opening of the "Bach-Mozart" Concerts by



B. G.—"KING OF SWING" members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. The noted jazz clarinetist will display his serious side as soloist in Mozart's Concerto for Clarinet, K. 622.

On Wednesday, July 11 (8:30 p. m., Theater-Concert Hall), Benny Goodman will give a chamber music concert with the Boston Symphony String Quartet in works of Haydn, Mozart and Brahms.

BOSTON HERALD, SATURDAY, JULY 7, 1956

'Dead Sea Scrolls' At Berkshire Fete

The second Chamber Orchestra concert in the 1956 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30 p.m. Charles Munch, Music Director of the orchestra, will conduct the first half of the concert, and Hugh Ross, head of the Chorus Department of the Berkshire Music Center, the second half. A highlight of the program will be the world premiere of the first musical setting of a text from the Dead Sea Scrolls — Henry Cowell's A Thanksgiving Psalm from "The Dead Sea Scrolls." This and the "Military Mass" by Martinu, the other work which Mr. Ross will conduct, will enlist, in addition to the orchestral forces, the services of the Yale Glee Club, 50 voices trained by Fenno Heath. The Yale choristers are making their Tanglewood debut. On the first half of the program Dr. Munch will conduct two works by Mozart, whose bi-centennial is being observed this year: the "Haffner" Symphony in D Major, Number 35, K. 385, and the Woodwind Sonfonia Concertante in E Flat Major, K. 297b, with Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928
JUL 7 1956

GOODMAN AT TANGLEWOOD

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—Guest soloist last night in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood was Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing."

Goodman was cheered lustily by the audience of 2,000, about half of them outside in the rain. His selection was concerto for clarinet in A-major.

It was Goodman's first appearance with the Boston Symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

The concerts by the Symphony's chamber group, made up of 37 musicians, preceded the full Berkshire Symphonic Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Item (e)
CLINTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,294
JUL 7 1956

END OF MUSIC FESTIVAI

PITTSFIELD (INS)—Mrs. Gertrude Robinson Smith announced dissolution of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc., and presentation of its $25,000 assets to aid musical education.

It turned over its psyhical assets, including an $80,000 music shed at Tanglewood to the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1945. Mrs. Smith said decision to dissolve was based on passing of responsibility from the organization.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 101,564
JUL 7 1956

TURNS OVER ASSETS TO MUSICAL FUND

PITTSFIELD, July 7 (INS) — Mrs. Gertrude Robinson Smith announced dissolution of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc. and presentation of its $25,000 assets to aid musical education.

It turned over its physical assets, including an $80,000 music shed at Tanglewood, to the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1945. Mrs. Smith said decision to dissolve was based on passing of responsibility from the organization.

[18]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Gazette (e)
TAUNTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 11,035

JUL 7 1956

Lenox Cheers Classic Benny

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—Guest soloist last night in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood was Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing."

Goodman was cheered lustily by the audience of 2,000, about half of them outside in the rain. His selection was concerto for clarinet in A-major.

It was Goodman's first appearance with the Boston Symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

The concerts by the Symphony's chamber group, made up of 37 musicians, preceded the full Berkshire Symphonic Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Recorder-Gazette (e)
GREENFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,640

JUL 7 1956

2000 AT TANGLEWOOD HEAR BENNY GOODMAN

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—Guest soloist last night in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood was Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing".

Goodman was cheered lustily by the audience of 2,000, about half of them outside in the rain. His selection was concerto for clarinet in A-major.

It was Goodman's first appearance with the Boston Symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

The concerts by the Symphony's chamber group, made up of 37 musicians, preceded the full Berkshire Symphonic Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Journal (m)
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 53,259

JUL 7 1956

Swing King Cheered As Soloist in A Mozart Concerto

Lenox, Mass. — (AP) — Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing," last night was the soloist in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

When he finished, the audience of 2,000—about half of them seated outside in the rain—cheered lustily. His selection was Concerto for Clarinet in A-Major.

It was his first appearance with the Boston Symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
ATHOL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 4,556

JUL 7 1956

Goodman, Soloist

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—Guest soloist last night in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood was Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing."

Goodman was cheered lustily by the audience of 2,000, about half of them outside in the rain. His selection was concerto for clarinet in A-major.

It was Goodman's first appearance with the Boston Symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

The concerts by the Symphony's chamber group, made up of 37 musicians, preceded the full Berkshire Symphonic Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

JUL 7 1956

Berkshire Group Is Dissolving

Pittsfield, Mass. — (AP) — A Berkshire County group, which fostered the symphonic festivals which now have attracted international attention to this region from the musical world, have voted to dissolve their organization and to give $25,000 remaining assets to aid musical education.

Known as the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., and founded in 1934, it worked under its president, Mrs. Gertrude Robinson Smith, to realize the idea of a Berkshire Music Center.

It turned over its physical assets in 1945 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The donation included the $80,000 music shed at Tanglewood. Mrs. Smith said the decision to dissolve was based on the passing of responsibility from the organization.

Of the $25,000 in the organization's treasury, $5,000 goes to a revolving scholarship fund at the Berkshire Music Center — a school attached to Tanglewood. The remaining $20,000 is given to Pittsfield Community Music School Inc.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

JUL 7 1956

Berkshire Symphony Festival, Inc., Votes Dissolution Gifts

The board of trustees of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc., yesterday voted to give $5,000 to the Berkshire Music Center Revolving scholarship fund and approximately $20,000 to the Pittsfield Community Music School, Inc., from assets accumulated through the years from 1934 to 1945, upon its dissolution by Dec. 31.

In 1945 the Berkshire Festival organization turned over its physical assets, including the $80,000 Music Shed at Tanglewood, to the trustees of the Boston Symphony orchestra, who have since conducted the Tanglewood operation.

Announcement of the scholarships was made yesterday by Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, president of the Festival corporation, and the prime mover behind the original plan to have outdoor concerts in the Berkshires, following the trustees' meeting at her home.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
RUTLAND, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 20,790

JUL 7 1956

Original Music GroupDisbands At Tanglewood

PITTSFIELD, Mass., July 6 (AP)—A Berkshire County group, which fostered the symphonic festivals which now have attracted international attention to this region from the musical world, today voted to dissolve their organization and to give $25,000 remaining assets to aid musical education.

Known as the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc., and founded in 1934, it worked under its president, Mrs. Gertrude Robinson Smith, to realize the idea of a Berkshire Music Center.

It turned over its physical assets in 1945 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The donation included the $80,000 music shed at Tanglewood. Mrs. Smith said the decision to dissolve was based on the passing of responsibility from the organization.

Of the $25,000 in the organization's treasury, $5,000 goes to a revolving scholarship fund at the Berkshire Music Center—a school attached to Tanglewood. The remaining $20,000 is given to Pittsfield Community Music School, Inc.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

JUL 7 1956

Berkshire Music Group Dissolves; Gives $25,000

PITTSFIELD, July 6 (AP)—A Berkshire county group, which fostered the symphonic festivals which now have attracted international attention to this region from the musical world, today voted to dissolve their organization and to give $25,000 remaining assets to aid musical education.

Known as the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc., and founded in 1934, it worked under its president, Mrs. Gertrude Robinson Smith, to realize the idea of a Berkshire music center.

It turned over its physical assets in 1945 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The donation included the $80,000 music shed at Tanglewood. Mrs. Smith said the decision to dissolve was based on the passing of responsibility from the organization.

Of the $25,000 in the organization's treasury, $5,000 goes to a revolving scholarship fund at the Berkshire Music Center—a school attached to Tanglewood. The remaining $20,000 is given to Pittsfield Community Music School, Inc.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Democrat
Circ. 7,100

JUL 7 1956

magnificent colors

'King of Swing' At Tanglewood

Benny Goodman will make his Lenox, Mass., Tanglewood debut on Friday, July 6 (8:30 p.m., Theater-Concert Hall), at the opening of the "Bach-Mozart" Concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. The noted jazz clarinetist will display his serious side as soloist in Mozart's Concerto for Clarinet, K. 622.

B. G.—"KING OF SWING"

On Wednesday, July 11 (8:30 p. m., Theater-Concert Hall), Benny Goodman will give a chamber music concert with the Boston Symphony String Quartet in works of Haydn, Mozart and Brahms.

BOSTON HERALD, SATURDAY, JULY 7, 1956

'Dead Sea Scrolls' At Berkshire Fete

The second Chamber Orchestra concert in the 1956 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30 p.m. Charles Munch, Music Director of the orchestra, will conduct the first half of the concert, and Hugh Ross, head of the Chorus Department of the Berkshire Music Center, the second half. A highlight of the program will be the world premiere of the first musical setting of a text from the Dead Sea Scrolls — Henry Cowell's A Thanksgiving Psalm from "The Dead Sea Scrolls." This and the "Military Mass" by Martinu, the other work which Mr. Ross will conduct, will enlist, in addition to the orchestral forces, the services of the Yale Glee Club, 50 voices trained by Fenno Heath. The Yale choristers are making their Tanglewood debut. On the first half of the program Dr. Munch will conduct two works by Mozart, whose bi-centennial is being observed this year: the "Haffner" Symphony in D Major, Number 35, K. 385, and the Woodwind Sonfonia Concertante in E Flat Major, K. 297b, with Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

JUL 7 1956

GOODMAN AT TANGLEWOOD

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—Guest soloist last night in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood was Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing."

Goodman was cheered lustily by the audience of 2,000, about half of them outside in the rain. His selection was concerto for clarinet in A-major.

It was Goodman's first appearance with the Boston Symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

The concerts by the Symphony's chamber group, made up of 37 musicians, preceded the full Berkshire Symphonic Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Item (e)
CLINTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,294

JUL 7 1956

END OF MUSIC FESTIVAI

PITTSFIELD (INS)—Mrs. Gertrude Robinson Smith announced dissolution of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc., and presentation of its $25,000 assets to aid musical education.

It turned over its psyhical assets, including an $80,000 music shed at Tanglewood to the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1945. Mrs. Smith said decision to dissolve was based on passing of responsibility from the organization.

[18]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 101,564

JUL 7 1956

TURNS OVER ASSETS TO MUSICAL FUND

PITTSFIELD, July 7 (INS) — Mrs. Gertrude Robinson Smith announced dissolution of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc. and presentation of its $25,000 assets to aid musical education.

It turned over its physical assets, including an $80,000 music shed at Tanglewood, to the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1945. Mrs. Smith said decision to dissolve was based on passing of responsibility from the organization.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081
JUL 7 1956

Tanglewood Opens Its 17th Season

CLUTTERED lawn outside the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, outside of Lenox, Mass., signals the opening this weekend of another season of music in the Berkshire hills. First two weekends will be devoted mainly to the works of Bach and Mozart with a sprinkling of the moderns.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 56,950
JUL 7 1956

Berkshire Music Group Dissolved

PITTSFIELD (AP) — A Berkshire County group, which fostered the symphonic festivals which now have attracted international attention to this region from the musical world, yesterday voted to dissolve their organization and to give $25,000 remaining assets to aid musical education.

Known as the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc., and founded in 1934, it worked under its president, Mrs. Gertrude Robinson Smith, to realize the idea of a Berkshire music center.

It turned over its physical assets in 1945 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The donation included the $80,000 music shed at Tanglewood. Mrs. Smith said the decision to dissolve was based on the passing of responsibility from the organization.

Of the $25,000 in the organization's treasury, $5,000 goes to a revolving scholarship fund at the Berkshire Music Center—a school attached to Tanglewood. The remaining $20,000 is given to Pittsfield Community Music School, Inc.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUL 7 1956

Benny Goodman Plays Mozart At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—Guest soloist last night in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood was Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing."

Goodman was cheered lustily by the audience of 2,000, about half of them outside in the rain. His selection was concerto for clarinet in A-major.

It was Goodman's first appearance with the Boston Symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

The concerts by the Symphony's chamber group, made up of 37 musicians, preceded the full Berkshire Symphonic Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Herald News (e)
FALL RIVER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,811
JUL 7 1956

Benny Goodman Wins Tanglewood Cheers

LENOX, Mass., (AP) — Guest soloist last night in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood was Benny Goodman, renowned as the "king of swing."

Goodman was cheered lustily by the audience of 2,000, about half of them outside in the rain. His selection was Concerto for Clarinet in A-Major.

It was Goodman's first appearance with the Boston Symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485
JUL 7 1956

Cowell Work Premiere at Tanglewood Tonight

The second chamber orchestra concert in the 1956 Berkshire Festival will be given at 8:30 tonight by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox. Charles Munch will conduct the first half of the concert, and Hugh Ross, head of the chorus department of the Berkshire Music Center, the second.

A highlight of the program will be the world premiere of the first musical setting of a [illegible] from the Dead Sea Scrolls, Henry Cowell's, "A Thanksgiving Psalm." This and the "Military Mass" by Martini, the other work which Mr. [illegible] the services of the Yale Glee Club, 50 [illegible] The Yale singers are making their Tanglewood [illegible]

Two works by Mozart, the Haffner Symphony [illegible] major (K. 385), and the Wood-wind Sinfonia Concertante [illegible] major (K. 297B), will complete the program.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081
JUL 7 1956

TEN

Tanglewood Opens Season Warmly on Cool, Cool Night

By EVANS CLINCHY
Times Staff Writer

Lenox, Mass. — The redoubtable Boston Symphony Orchestra opened its 17th Tanglewood season last night with a program devoted entirely to Mozart—and also to Benny Goodman's playing of the clarinet concerto.

The festival opened on a cool—a very cool—Berkshire evening, but low temperatures and dampness did not seem to spoil the orchestra's strings, or, for that matter, Mr. Goodman's clarinet.

Although this is the first time that Mr. Goodman has performed with the Boston Symphony and although there was only one rehearsal of the piece, Mr. Goodman performed with astonishing facility and a true grasp of the classic Mozart line.

* * *

THE CONCERTO OFFERS its soloist a wide range of musical opportunity, rambling from the intensely complex allegros to the melting adagio. Mr. Goodman handled everything with tremendous ease, but I thought he shone most brightly in the adagio, where he was least called upon to shine technically. Here, poetry was the order of the day, and Mr. Goodman filled the musical bill most admirably.

Charles Munch and the orchestra lent capable if not astounding support. Their turn to shine came in the rest of the program—two symphonies, the G Mfnor (No. 40) and D Major (Prague).

There was cause for worry when the orchestra opened the evening with a rough, headlong opening movement in the G Minor, but it didn't take everyone long to settle down. The Andante was more smooth, and the Menuetto was sensational, invigorating and stylistically perfect. The finale was just right, too — vigorous but not incoherent, graceful but not namby-pamby.

* * *

THE "PRAGUE" was not quite as successful, but it, too, was full of life, to say the very least. Mr. Munch and his men again started off roughly on the opening adagio and settled down to a spirited Allegro. The Andante and the finale were spritely but a trifle routine.

Mr. Munch, in fact, is a good but not a superlative Mozart man. He seems to have one of Toscanini's faults — a tendency to drive Mozart too hard. Apparently he hasn't yet fully solved the problem of giving Mozart the proper masculine vigor and yet at the same time keeping everything light and gracious. Speed is not a substitute for the interior flame of musical life that is in these symphonies, but perhaps asking for both vigor and grace is asking too much.

At any rate, the concert was a manifest pleasure, and that should be enough for all of us.

In Brief . . .

Whatever the pros and cons in the lengthy backstage speculation over distribution of the assets of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., there is cause for some satisfaction in the fact that the final decision has earmarked the entire $25,000 for musical education in Tanglewood's home territory . . . It's interesting to note, incidentally, that the reserves built up during the first years of the Festival represent profits — a word that has necessarily vanished from the Tanglewood vocabulary because the Shed concert profits now are absorbed by the music school deficits . . .

Recommended reading today is A. G. Rud's "South Berkshire Weekly" commentary on the issue of the public's right to know vs. the court's right to withhold information—an extremely complex question which has too often been beclouded by irresponsibility on both sides of the fence. . . . The Pittsfield Rotary Club's report that it raised and distributed $1,600 for worthy local causes during the past year is another reminder that there's a lot of civic meaning in the designation of "service club." . . .

[19]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081
JUL 7 1956

Tanglewood Opens Its 17th Season

CLUTTERED lawn outside the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, outside of Lenox, Mass., signals the opening this weekend of another season of music in the Berkshire hills. First two weekends will be devoted mainly to the works of Bach and Mozart with a sprinkling of the moderns.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 56,950
JUL 7 1956

Berkshire Music Group Dissolved

PITTSFIELD (AP) — A Berkshire County group, which fostered the symphonic festivals which now have attracted international attentipn to this region from the musical world, yesterday voted to dissolve their organization and to give $25,000 remaining assets to aid musical education.

Known as the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc., and founded in 1934, it worked under its president, Mrs. Gertrude Robinson Smith, to realize the idea of a Berkshire music center.

It turned over its physical assets in 1945 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The donation included the $80,000 music shed at Tanglewood. Mrs. Smith said the decision to dissolve was based on the passing of responsibility from the organization.

Of the $25,000 in the organization's treasury, $5,000 goes to a revolving scholarship fund at the Berkshire Music Center—a school attached to Tanglewood. The remaining $20,000 is given to Pittsfield Community Music School, Inc.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUL 7 1956

Benny Goodman Plays Mozart At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—Guest soloist last night in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood was Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing."

Goodman was cheered lustily by the audience of 2,000, about half of them outside in the rain. His selection was concerto for clarinet in A-major.

It was Goodman's first appearance with the Boston Symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Herald News (e)
FALL RIVER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,811
JUL 7 1956

Benny Goodman Wins Tanglewood Cheers

LENOX, Mass., (AP) — Guest soloist last night in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood was Benny Goodman, renowned as the "king of swing."

Goodman was cheered lustily by the audience of 2,000, about half of them outside in the rain. His selection was Concerto for Clarinet in A-Major.

It was Goodman's first appearance with the Boston Symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485
JUL 7 1956

Cowell Work Premiere at Tanglewood Tonight

The second chamber orchestra concert in the 1956 Berkshire Festival will be given at 8:30 tonight by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox. Charles Munch will conduct the first half of the concert, and Hugh Ross, head of the chorus department of the Berkshire Music Center, the second.

A highlight of the program will be the world premiere of the first musical setting of a text from the Dead Sea Scrolls — Henry Cowell's, "A Thanksgiving Psalm." This and the "Military Mass" by Martinu, the other work which Mr. Ross will conduct with [illegible] the services of the Yale Glee Club, 50 voices directed by Marshall Heath. The Yale [illegible] are making their Tanglewood [illegible].

Two works by Mozart, the "Haffner" Symphony in D Major (K. 385), and the Woodwind Sinfonia Concertante in E flat major (K. 297B), will complete the program.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
TEN

Tanglewood Opens Season Warmly on Cool, Cool Night

By EVANS CLINCHY
Times Staff Writer

Lenox, Mass. — The redoubtable Boston Symphony Orchestra opened its 17th Tanglewood season last night with a program devoted entirely to Mozart—and also to Benny Goodman's playing of the clarinet concerto.

The festival opened on a cool—a very cool—Berkshire evening, but low temperatures and dampness did not seem to spoil the orchestra's strings, or, for that matter, Mr. Goodman's clarinet.

Although this is the first time that Mr. Goodman has performed with the Boston Symphony and although there was only one rehearsal of the piece, Mr. Goodman performed with astonishing facility and a true grasp of the classic Mozart line.

* * *

THE CONCERTO OFFERS its soloist a wide range of musical opportunity, rambling from the intensely complex allegros to the melting adagio. Mr. Goodman handled everything with tremendous ease, but I thought he shone most brightly in the adagio, where he was least called upon to shine technically. Here, poetry was the order of the day, and Mr. Goodman filled the musical bill most admirably.

Charles Munch and the orchestra lent capable if not astounding support. Their turn to shine came in the rest of the program—two symphonies, the G Minor (No. 40) and D Major (Prague).

There was cause for worry when the orchestra opened the evening with a rough, headlong opening movement in the G Minor, but it didn't take everyone long to settle down. The Andante was more smooth, and the Menuetto was sensational, invigorating and stylistically perfect. The finale was just right, too — vigorous but not incoherent, graceful but not namby-pamby.

* * *

THE "PRAGUE" was not quite as successful, but it, too, was full of life, to say the very least. Mr. Munch and his men again started off roughly on the opening adagio and settled down to a spirited Allegro. The Andante and the finale were spritely but a trifle routine.

Mr. Munch, in fact, is a good but not a superlative Mozart man. He seems to have one of Toscanini's faults — a tendency to drive Mozart too hard. Apparently he hasn't yet fully solved the problem of giving Mozart the proper masculine vigor and yet at the same time keeping everything light and gracious. Speed is not a substitute for the interior flame of musical life that is in these symphonies, but perhaps asking for both vigor and grace is asking too much.

At any rate, the concert was a manifest pleasure, and that should be enough for all of us.

In Brief . . .

Whatever the pros and cons in the lengthy backstage speculation over distribution of the assets of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., there is cause for some satisfaction in the fact that the final decision has earmarked the entire $25,000 for musical education in Tanglewood's home territory . . . It's interesting to note, incidentally, that the reserves built up during the first years of the Festival represent profits — a word that has necessarily vanished from the Tanglewood vocabulary because the Shed concert profits now are absorbed by the music school deficits . . .

Recommended reading today is A. G. Rud's "South Berkshire Weekly" commentary on the issue of the public's right to know vs. the court's right to withhold information—an extremely complex question which has too often been beclouded by irresponsibility on both sides of the fence . . . The Pittsfield Rotary Club's report that it raised and distributed $1,600 for worthy local causes during the past year is another reminder that there's a lot of civic meaning in the designation of "service club" . . .

[19]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 7 1956

Chamber Orchestra Concert Tonight At Berkshire Festival

The second chamber orchestra concert in the 1956 Berkshire festival will be given at 8:30 tonight by members of the Boston Symphony orchestra in the Theatre-Concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Charles Munch will conduct the first half of the concert, and Hugh Ross, head of the chorus department of the Berkshire Music Center, the second.

A highlight of the program will be the world premiere of the first musical setting of a text from the Dead Sea Scrolls—Henry Cowell's, "A Thanksgiving Psalm." This and the "Military Mass" by Martinu, the other work which Mr. Ross will conduct, will enlist the services of the Yale Glee club, 50 voices trained by Fenno Heath. The Yale choristers are making their Tanglewood debut.

Two works by Mozart, the "Haffner" Symphony in D Major, (K. 385), and the Woodwind Sinfonia Concertante in E-flat major (K. 297B), will complete the program.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 7 1956

Goodman Thrills 2,000 At Festival

Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing," last night was the soloist in a Mozart concert played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony orchestra at Tanglewood.

When he finished, the audience of 2,000—about half of them seated outside in the rain—cheered lustily. His selection was Concerto for Clarinet in A-Major.

It was Goodman's first appearance with the Boston symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

The concerts by the Symphony's chamber group, made up of 37 musicians, precede the full. Berkshire Symphonic festival.

BOSTON HERALD, SATURDAY, JULY 7, 1956

Tanglewood Hails Benny Goodman

LENOX, July 6 (AP)—Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing," tonight was the soloist in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

When he finished, the audience of 2000 — about half of them seated outside in the rain — cheered lustily. His selection was Concerto for Clarinet in A-Major.

It was Goodman's first appearance with the Boston Symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

The concerts by the Symphony's chamber group, made up of 37 musicians, preceded the full Berkshire Symphonic Festial.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Enterprise & Times (e)
BROCKTON, Mass.
Non-Partisan
Circ. 40,928
JUL 7 1956

BENNY PLAYS CONCERTO

LENNOX. — (AP) — Guest soloist last night in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood was Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing." Goodman was cheered lustily by the audience of 2000 about half of them outside in the rain. His selection was concerto for clarinet in A-major. It was Goodman's first appearance with the Boston Symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866
JUL 7 1956

Tanglewood Hails Benny Goodman

LENOX, July 6 (AP)—Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing," tonight was the soloist in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

When he finished, the audience of 2000 — about half of them seated outside in the rain — cheered lustily. His selection was Concerto for Clarinet in A-Major.

It was Goodman's first appearance with the Boston Symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

The concerts by the Symphony's chamber group, made up of 37 musicians, preceded the full Berkshire Symphonic Festial.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372
JUL 8 1956

M'COLLUM TO SING EVANGELIST'S ROLE

Lenox, July 7—John McCollum, tenor, will replace David Lloyd in the role of the Evangelist in the Berkshire Festival concert performance of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," which will have its first performance at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon, the 15th, at 2.30 p. m. in the Theater - Concert Hall. Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Hugh Ross, will participate.

Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. All, including Mc. Collum, are former students of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood.

David Lloyd has been prevented by illness from fulfilling this engagement, and McCollum will also assume his role in the Mozart Mass in C minor, K. 427, with Phyllis Curtin and Eunice Alberts as other soloists.

4—The Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, July 7, 1956

TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • JULY 4 to AUG. 12
OPENING CONCERTS
Berkshire Festival
BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
THEATER-CONCERT HALL
SAT., July 7, at 8:30: MOZART—MARTINU—COWELL (MUNCH)
SUN., July 8, at 2:30: HADYN—FINE—HAIEFF—IVES—BACH (FOSS)
Soloist: LUKAS FOSS, piano
Tickets Wed., $2, $3; Fri., Sat., Sun., $4, $5. (Admission $9)
Tickets Wed., $2, $3; Fri., Sat., Sun., $4, $5.
Reserved seats for July 13 and 14 all taken; For July 15, $5 only
Baldwin Piano
RCA Victor Records
For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Phone Lenox 500

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Bach-Mozart Series. Boston Symphony small orchestra. Theater - Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox.

8:45—"The Young and the Beautiful." Williamstown Summer Theater.

8:45—"Anastasia." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"The Young and the Beautiful." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

9:00—"The Dokoudovsky - Stroganova Ballet. Myra Kinch, Ruth St. Denis, Jacob's Pillow, Becket.

Tomorrow

2:30—Bach-Mozart Series. Boston Symphony small orchestra. Theater - Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox.

7:00—"The Young and the Beautiful." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

8:40—Dave Brubeck Quartet. Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky Has Guests for Summer

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph de Pasquale of Brookline had an 11-pound son, Joseph Serge, [illegible] at St. Luke's Hospital. Mr. de Pasquale, first violist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and his wife, the former Princess Maria de Leuchtenberg de Beauharnais, and their daughters, Sandra and Lisa, are spending the summer with Mrs. de Pasquale's aunt, Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky at Saranak, Lenox.

Also with Mrs. Koussevitzky for the summer are her sister, Duchess Anna, and daughters, Princess Olga and Princess Natalie, of Brookline. Here this week are Mr. de Pasquale's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Horace de Pasquale of Philadelphia.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Standard-Times (e)
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 61,300
JUL 7 1956

Benny Goodman Plays Mozart at Tanglewood

LENOX, July 7 (AP) — Guest soloist last night in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood was Benny Goodman, renowned as the "king of swing."

Goodman was cheered lustily by the audience of 2,000, about half of them outside in the rain.

It was Goodman's first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He is scheduled [illegible] July 11.

The concerts by the Symphony's chamber group, made up of 37 musicians, precede the full Berkshire symphonic festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Republican
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 43,857
JUL 8 1956

Tanglewood Lists Chamber Music Events

Five principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, assisted by a number of noted guest artists, will participate in a concert of modern chamber music, to be played in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Monday evening at 8:30.

This is the first of two concerts—the second is Monday, July 23—under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, generously donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Center, the school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its annual Berkshire Festival. The brace of concerts is open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose contributions help support the music school, and to the general public.

Music of Igor Stravinsky, Ben Weber, Benjamin Britten, Arnold Schoenberg, Anton Webern, Alvin Epstein and Aaron Copland will be performed on Monday's concert by the following members of the Boston Symphony: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello; Georges Moleux, bass. Guest artists are: Ruth Posselt, violin; Irving Fine, Seymour Lipkin, Ralph Berkowitz, William Masselos, Aaron Copland, pianos; Florence Kopleff, contralto; and Arthur Schoep, tenor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372
JUL 8 1956

Sunday, July 8, 1956

THE WASHINGTON POST and TIMES HERALD

Musical Festival

By Paul Hume

FROM MAY 20TH to September 16th there will be music festivals in progress across this country from Coonamessett near Falmouth on Cape Cod, to the Fiesta de la Quadrilla, in San Diego, Calif.

Hume

Festivals of music in the summer today take in every conceivable kind of music—and we are not sure that they all properly come under the title of "Festival"—from the hottest jazz imaginable, to the coolest of Tamiment's chamber music.

The jazz element alone is one of the astonishing features of the rising summer music business. As last week's Variety put it, there was such a jam-up in the demands for the top jazz men that the boys can hardly get from one spot to the next in time to warm up their instruments. Lewisohn Stadium in New York; Ravinia, north of Chicago; Tanglewood in the Berkshires; and the Hollywood Bowl, not to mention the elegance of Newport, R. I., all of these once-considered highbrow spots where Bach and Debussy might rub shoulders, with a possible Gershwin night for real daring, are now catering to their hottest customers with jazz right out of the biggest jazzboys around.

And if the Tanglewood that once set out to play something a little different in the summer from its winter fare, has settled into the same tedious routine that has long ruled the Lewisohn Stadium and Philadelphia's Robin Hood Dell, there are still those who have an idea that some people would pay money and take time to go somewhere for something different.

ELLENVILLE, just off New York State's handsome new Thruway, and not too far above the big city, is sporting the names of Chavez and Villa-Lobos among its summer conductors, and its repertoire will include new works by these men, as well as new ballets and other forms of entertainment not seen elsewhere.

If you have the yen for music in the summer and also plan some travel you will have a hard time going anywhere that will not be within fair reach of some well planned music.

Washington cannot be listed among the cities that have regular, organized programs of good music in the summer. Our Carter Barron Amphitheater presents a widely diversified assortment of top entertainment, including the same jazz men that are filling the biggest bills around the country. We have, also, visits from some of the prominent ballet companies of the continent.

But for symphonic or operatic fare on any sustained basis, you must take what you can get from the Air Force Symphony's Friday night Watergate programs.

[20]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 7 1956

Chamber Orchestra Concert Tonight At Berkshire Festival

The second chamber orchestra concert in the 1956 Berkshire festival will be given at 8:30 tonight by members of the Boston Symphony orchestra in the Theatre-Concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Charles Munch will conduct the first half of the concert, and Hugh Ross, head of the chorus department of the Berkshire Music Center, the second.

A highlight of the program will be the world premiere of the first musical setting of a text from the Dead Sea Scrolls—Henry Cowell's, "A Thanksgiving Psalm." This and the "Military Mass" by Martinu, the other work which Mr. Ross will conduct, will enlist the services of the Yale Glee club, 50 voices trained by Fenno Heath. The Yale choristers are making their Tanglewood debut.

Two works by Mozart, the "Haffner" Symphony in D Major, (K. 385), and the Woodwind Sinfonia Concertante in E-flat major (K. 297B), will complete the program.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 7 1956

Goodman Thrills 2,000 At Festival

Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing," last night was the soloist in a Mozart concert played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony orchestra at Tanglewood.

When he finished, the audience of 2,000—about half of them seated outside in the rain—cheered lustily. His selection was Concerto for Clarinet in A-Major.

It was Goodman's first appearance with the Boston symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

The concerts by the Symphony's chamber group, made up of 37 musicians, precede the full Berkshire Symphonic festival.

BOSTON HERALD, SATURDAY, JULY 7, 1956

Tanglewood Hails Benny Goodman

LENOX, July 6 (AP)—Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing," tonight was the soloist in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

When he finished, the audience of 2000 — about half of them seated outside in the rain — cheered lustily. His selection was Concerto for Clarinet in A-Major.

It was Goodman's first appearance with the Boston Symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

The concerts by the Symphony's chamber group, made up of 37 musicians, preceded the full Berkshire Symphonic Festial.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Enterprise & Times (e)
BROCKTON, Mass.
Non-Partisan
Circ. 40,923
JUL 7 1956

BENNY PLAYS CONCERTO

LENNOX. — (AP) — Guest soloist last night in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood was Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing." Goodman was cheered lustily by the audience of 2000 about half of them outside in the rain. His selection was concerto for clarinet in A-major. It was Goodman's first appearance with the Boston Symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866
JUL 7 1956

Tanglewood Hails Benny Goodman

LENOX, July 6 (AP)—Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing," tonight was the soloist in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

When he finished, the audience of 2000 — about half of them seated outside in the rain — cheered lustily. His selection was Concerto for Clarinet in A-Major.

It was Goodman's first appearance with the Boston Symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

The concerts by the Symphony's chamber group, made up of 37 musicians, preceded the full Berkshire Symphonic Festial.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372
JUL 8 1956

M'COLLUM TO SING EVANGELIST'S ROLE

Lenox, July 7—John McCollum, tenor, will replace David Lloyd in the role of the Evangelist in the Berkshire Festival concert performance of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," which will have its first performance at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon, the 15th, at 2.30 p. m. in the Theater - Concert Hall. Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Hugh Ross, will participate.

Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. All, including McCollum, are former students of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood.

David Lloyd has been prevented by illness from fulfilling this engagement, and McCollum will also assume his role in the Mozart Mass in C minor, K. 427, with Phyllis Curtin and Eunice Alberts as other soloists.

TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • JULY 4 to AUG. 12
OPENING CONCERTS
Berkshire Festival
BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
THEATER-CONCERT HALL
SAT., July 7, at 8:30: MOZART—MARTINU—COWELL (MUNCH)
SUN., July 8, at 2:30: HADYN—FINE—HAIEFF—IVES—BACH (FOSS)
Soloist: LUKAS FOSS, piano
Tickets Wed., $2, $3; Fri., Sat., Sun., $4, $5. (Admission $2)
Tickets Wed., $2, $3; Fri., Sat., Sun., $4, $5.
Reserved seats for July 13 and 14 all taken; For July 15, $5 only
Baldwin Piano — RCA Victor Records
For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Phone Lenox 600

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Bach-Mozart Series. Boston Symphony small orchestra. Theater - Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox.

8:45—"The Young and the Beautiful." Williamstown Summer Theater.

8:45—"Anastasia." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"The Young and the Beautiful." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

9:00—"The Dokoudovsky - Stroganova Ballet. Myra Kinch. Ruth St. Denis. Jacob's Pillow, Becket.

Tomorrow

2:30—Bach-Mozart Series. Boston Symphony small orchestra. Theater - Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox.

7:00—"The Young and the Beautiful." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

8:40—Dave Brubeck Quartet. Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky Has Guests for Summer

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph de Pasquale of Brookline had an 11-pound son, Joseph Serge, Tuesday at St. Luke's Hospital. Mr. de Pasquale, first violist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and his wife, the former Princess Maria de Leuchtenberg de Beauharnais, and their daughters, Sandra and Lisa, are spending the summer with Mrs. de Pasquale's aunt, Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky at Saranak, Lenox.

Also with Mrs. Koussevitzky for the summer are her sister, Duchess Anna, and daughters, Princess Olga and Princess Natalie, of Brookline. Here this week are Mr. de Pasquale's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Horace de Pasquale of Philadelphia.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Standard-Times (e)
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 61,300
JUL 7 1956

Benny Goodman Plays Mozart at Tanglewood

LENOX, July 7 (AP)—Guest soloist last night in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood was Benny Goodman, renowned as the "king of swing."

Goodman was cheered lustily by the audience of 2,000, about half of them outside in the rain.

It was Goodman's first appearance with the Boston Symphony. He is scheduled [illegible] July 11.

The concerts by the Symphony's chamber group, made up of 37 musicians, precede the full Berkshire symphonic festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Republican
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 43,857
JUL 8 1956

Tanglewood Lists Chamber Music Events

Five principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, assisted by a number of noted guest artists, will participate in a concert of modern chamber music, to be played in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Monday evening at 8:30.

This is the first of two concerts—the second is Monday, July 23—under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, generously donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Center, the school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its annual Berkshire Festival. The brace of concerts is open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose contributions help support the music school, and to the general public.

Music of Igor Stravinsky, Ben Weber, Benjamin Britten, Arnold Schoenberg, Anton Webern, Alvin Epstein and Aaron Copland will be performed on Monday's concert by the following members of the Boston Symphony: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello; Georges Moleux, bass. Guest artists are: Ruth Posselt, violin; Irving Fine, Seymour Lipkin, Ralph Berkowitz, William Masselos, Aaron Copland, pianos; Florence Kopleff, contralto; and Arthur Schoep, tenor.

[20]

Sunday, July 8, 1956

THE WASHINGTON POST and TIMES HERALD

Musical Festival

By Paul Hume

FROM MAY 20TH to September 16th there will be music festivals in progress across this country from Coonamessett near Falmouth on Cape Cod, to the Fiesta de la Quadrilla, in San Diego, Calif.

Festivals of music in the summer today take in every conceivable kind of music—and we are not sure that they all properly come under the title of "Festival"—from the hottest jazz imaginable, to the coolest of Tamiment's chamber music.

Hume

The jazz element alone is one of the astonishing features of the rising summer music business. As last week's Variety put it, there was such a jam-up in the demands for the top jazz men that the boys can hardly get from one spot to the next in time to warm up their instruments. Lewisohn Stadium in New York; Ravinia, north of Chicago; Tanglewood in the Berkshires; and the Hollywood Bowl, not to mention the elegance of Newport, R. I., all of these once-considered highbrow spots where Bach and Debussy might rub shoulders, with a possible Gershwin night for real daring, are now catering to their hottest customers with jazz right out of the biggest jazzboys around.

And if the Tanglewood that once set out to play something a little different in the summer from its winter fare, has settled into the same tedious routine that has long ruled the Lewisohn Stadium and Philadelphia's Robin Hood Dell, there are still those who have an idea that some people would pay money and take time to go somewhere for something different.

ELLENVILLE, just off New York State's handsome new Thruway, and not too far above the big city, is sporting the names of Chavez and Villa-Lobos among its summer conductors, and its repertoire will include new works by these men, as well as new ballets and other forms of entertainment not seen elsewhere.

If you have the yen for music in the summer and also plan some travel you will have a hard time going anywhere that will not be within fair reach of some well planned music.

Washington cannot be listed among the cities that have regular, organized programs of good music in the summer. Our Carter Barron Amphitheater presents a widely diversified assortment of top entertainment, including the same jazz men that are filling the biggest bills around the country. We have, also, visits from some of the prominent ballet companies of the continent.

But for symphonic or operatic fare on any sustained basis, you must take what you can get from the Air Force Symphony's Friday night Watergate programs.

MUSIC WEAVES ENCHANTMENT AT THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL IN LENOX, MASS.

Gus Manc

A typical scene at Tanglewood, where capacity audiences gather to listen to the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, above, and other conductors

THE BOSTON SUNDAY HERALD, JULY 8, 1956

Berkshire Festival Concerts Start Second Week Wed.

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of chamber music by Haydn, Mozart and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet on Wednesday (July 11); and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon (July 15). Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert on Friday will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

The eminent jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman, who made his debut with the Boston Symphony and at its Berkshire Festival concerts last Friday is donating his services in Wednesday's concert to the Boston Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quintet, K. 681, with the following principals of the Boston Symphony who comprise the B. S. O. String Quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

Boris Goldovsky, the eminent opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera Theatre, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his debut as conductor and piano soloist on a Berkshire Festival program on Friday evening.

He will conduct the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo pianists Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is piano soloist. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have not appeared at a Festival concert since 1950.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all-Bach concert Saturday evening. Both teach chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center.

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon (July 15) will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross. Soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center (Miss Addison in 1947, 1948, 1950; Miss Kopleff in 1946 and 1947; Mr. Morgan in 1953; Mr. Joyce in 1950, 1951, 1952; Mr. Lloyd in 1947).

A special extra concert of modern chamber music, donated to the Berkshire Music Center by the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, will be held in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood on Monday (July 9) at 8:30 p. m., open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the orchestra's summer music school and to the general public.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for all Festival concerts, and reservations may be made by telephone to Lenox, Mass. 600. Programs and a calendar of the more than 30 events at the Berkshire Music Center, with information on how to join the Friends' organization, will be mailed on request.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, JULY 8, 1956

Concerts and Operas This Week

...mond Trauer-

Fine; Divertimento, Haieff; "The Unanswered Question," Ives; Piano Concerto in D minor, Bach.

Wednesday, 8:30. Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet. String Quartet in E flat major, Op. 33, No. 2, Haydn; Clarinet Quintet, K. 581, Mozart; String Quintet in G major, Brahms.

Friday, 8:30. Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz conducting; soloists, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, duo-pianists. March, Andantino and Finale (Presto) from Serenade in D major, K. 320; Concerto in F major, for three pianos, K. 242; Concerto in A major, for Piano, K. 488; Concerto in E flat major, for two pianos, K. 365.

Saturday, 8:30. Conductor, Charles Munch. Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F major; Violin Concerto in E major (soloist, William Kroll, violinist); Suite No. 2 in B minor for Flute and Strings (soloist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist); Suite No. 3 in D major, Bach.

Sunday, July 15, 3:30. Conductor, Charles Munch. First Tanglewood performance of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," with Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center students and soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

Empire State Music Festival

Ellenville, N. Y.

Today, 3:30. Carlos Chavez conducting the Symphony of the Air. Concerto Grosso, Op. 3, No. 11, Vivaldi; Symphony No. 40 in G minor, K. 550, Mozart; Nuages; Fetes, Debussy; Essay for Orchestra, Barber; Firebird, Stravinsky.

Wednesday, 8:45. Tibor Kozma conducting the Symphony of the Air. Overture to "Oberon," Weber; Symphony No. 4 in D minor, Op. 120, Schumann; Siegfried Idyl, Wagner; Saudados Do Brasil, Suite No. 2, Milhaud; Hungarian Peasant Songs, Bartok.

Thursday and Saturday, 8:45. Villa-Lobos conducting the Symphony of the Air; soloist, Bernardo Segall, pianist. Fantasy and Fugue, No. 6, Bach—Villa-Lobos; Overture, Alvorado na Floresta Tropical, Villa-Lobos; Emperor Jones (first performance), Jose Limon & Company; Concerto de Piano, No. 4, Villa-Lobos; Overture, "Die Meistersinger," Wagner.

Sunday, July 15, 3:30. Lukas Foss conducting the Symphony of the Air; Marvin Hayes, baritone-narrator. Roman Carnival, Berlioz; "Song of Anguish," Foss; "A Lincoln Portrait," Copland; Symphony in A, No. 7, Beethoven.

Opera

After Dinner Opera Company, White Barn Theatre, Westport, Conn., Theodore Chanler's "The Pot of Fat" and Cockshott's "Apollo and Persephone," today, 8:30.

Amato Opera Theater, 159 Bleecker St., Rossini's "The Barber of Seville," today, Tuesday, Friday and Saturday, 8:15.

Berkshire Festival

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, 2:30. Lukas Foss, conductor and piano soloist. Symphony No. 86 in D major, Haydn; Serious Song for Strings, [21]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Sun
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,774
JUL 8 1956

Goodman Guest Soloist at Lenox

LENOX, July 7 (AP)—Guest soloist last night in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood was Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing."

Goodman was cheered lustily by the audience of 2000, about half of them outside in the rain. His selection was Concerto for clarinet in a-major.

It was Goodman's fist appearance with the Boston symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

The concerts by the symphony's chamber group, made up of 37 musicians, preceded the full Berkshire symphonic festival.

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 99,506
JUL 8 1956

Berkshire Music Festival In Second Week

The Berkshire Music Festival goes into its second week with th usual four chamber music programs scheduled. The Boston Symphon String Quartet opens the week's programs with Benny Goodman a the guest artist on Wednesday evening. The jazz clarinetist, who mad his Tanglewood debut last week, will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quinte (K 581) with the quartet of string players. Quartets by Haydn an Brahms are also included in this concert's program listing. Inci dentally, Benny is donating his services for the benefit of the Bosto Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshir Music Center.

Boris Goldovsky, the eminent producer of the New England Opera Theater who heads the opera department at the Festival, is to be i the dual role of conductor and pianist in an all-Mozart concert o Friday evening. Goldovsky will be heard in the composer's F majo Concerto for 3 Pianos with Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff a the other two artists. The operatic impressario will also be the solois in Mozart's A major Piano Concerto with Luboshutz conducting. Goldov sky will be in the role of conductor for the March, Andantino and Finale from the D major Serenade and for the E flat major Concerto for Two Pianos with the celebrated piano-duo as the soloists.

Charles Munch, the Boston Orchestra's great director, will conduct all-Bach programs in the concerts on Saturday evening and next Sunday afternoon. William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and the first flutist of the Boston Orchestra, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, are to be the soloists in this program which lists the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2, in F major; the E. major Violin Concerto; the Suite No. 2, in B minor for Flute and Strings; and the Suite No. 3, in D major.

On Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Munch will conduct a performance of The Passion According to St. John, with prominent soloists and the Festival Chorus composed of Berkshire Center students. The soloists are to be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and basses Mac Morgan and James Joyce.

A special extra concert is to be given tomorrow evening at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall where all of the chamber music programs are given. Donated to the Berkshire Music Center by the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, the program will be made up of a number of chamber works by modern composers. This concert is open on a non-reserved basis to friends of the Berkshire Music Center and to the general public.

Anyone may become a Friend by making a donation to the Berkshire Music Center, entitling the donor to free admission to the many student concerts which are given during the Festival's season.

Luboshutz and Nemenoff, the celebrated two-piano team, returns to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer, after an absence of six years. They will take part in the all-Mozart concert on Friday night at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall. Boris Goldovsky will also be a soloist. The pianists last appeared at Tanglewood in 1950.

[22]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372
JUL 8 1956

On Berkshire Music Festival Programs This Week

BORIS GOLDOVSKY

LUBOSHUTZ AND NEMENOFF

DORIOT ANTHONY DWYER

Tanglewood Topics

By WALTER ALFORD

Lenox, July 7—Thirteen Monday night broadcasts of highlights from the summer's Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are being given by the National Broadcasting Co., to maintain a continuity of its winter broadcasts from Symphony Hall of Music Director Charles Munch's Saturday night concerts. Beginning Monday (July 9), through October 1, or until the winter series of broadcasts resume live with the start of the orchestra's 76th season in Boston upon its return from its August-September tour of 13 countries in Europe, NBC stations nationwide will present a 45-minute concert over the air, from 8.15-9.00 p. m.

* * *

The broadcasts are produced by Avner Rakov and George Voutsas. Ben Grauer is the commentator, and C. Harold Campbell is the engineer in charge of "taping" the portions of the Berkshire Festival concerts used. The schedule, worked out by BSO Manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., with the assistance of Martin Bookspan, began with Charles Munch conducting the finale of Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony and the Mozart Sinfonia Concertante, K. 297b, with oboe, clarinet, horn, bassoon which Festival patrons heard "live" in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall tonight.

* * *

Boris Goldovsky, head of Tanglewood's opera department, announces he plans as a regular Saturday afternoon feature, commencing July 14, an informal recital by his opera students of scenes from the standard repertory, to be given in workshop style in the Theater-Concert Hall, from 4.00-5.15 p. m. These, as are all performances of student opera at Tanglewood, are open to the public through membership in the Friends.

* * *

The first major production by the opera department this summer will be an evening devoted to scenes from 14 Mozart operas, in the Theater-Concert Hall on Tuesday, July 24. Many music lovers may not be aware some of these exist, particularly "Bastien and Bastienne," which the composer wrote as a child; "Lucio Silla," composed when he was 14; "Il Re Pastore" (The Shepherd King), or an unfinished work, "L'Oca del Cairo" (The Goose of Cairo), since the latter three have never been performed in this country. The Mozart panorama planned by Mr. Goldovsky, in observance of the composer's bicentennial this year, will include highlights from the five well-known operas, "Don Giovanni," "The Magic Flute," "The Marriage of Figaro," "Cosi Fan Tutte," "The Abduction From the Seraglio." It will also revive pleasant memories among local opera-[illegible] evening will [illegible] five Mozart [illegible] their first performances in the U. S. at Tanglewood. "Idomeneo," "Titus," "La Finta Giardiniera," "Zaide" and "The Impresario." Every active opera department singer, 29 in all this year, will participate. A uni-decorative setting will be designed by Robert O'Hearn, and costumes will be by Leo Van Witsen. Mr. Goldovsky will provide the piano accompaniment. Some of the opera excerpts will be in German, some in Italian, some in English translation.

* * *

The first of six Sunday morning chamber music concerts by students of Richard Burgin, William Kroll and Boston Symphony principals, will be given in the Chamber Music Hall at Tanglewood, at 10 a. m. tomorrow. In 1955 a similar six concerts attracted 3400 music lovers.

* * *

Goffredo Petrassi, the noted Italian composer who is guest teacher of composition this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, since 1939 has been a professor of composition at the St. Cecilia Conservatory in Rome, where he began his studies in music in 1925, at the age of 21. Since he speaks only Italian and French, he communicates to the six students of his composition class at the Berkshire Music Center through an interpreter-student, Kenneth Gaburo, 29, of Champaign, Ill. After winning the George Gershwin Memorial Award in 1954, and graduating a B. Mus. and a M. Mus. that same year from the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, Mr. Gaburo went to Italy on a Fulbright scholarship, and there met Mr. Petrassi with whom he studied at St. Cecilia.

* * *

Mr. Petrassi has just received a commission from the BBC in England to compose a work for the network's tenth anniversary celebration in 1957. Four of his works will be heard by music lovers at Tanglewood this summer; the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, will premiere in the Berkshires his Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, commissioned by the orchestra for its current, 75th anniversary season (July 27). The composer will conduct his 1948 composition, "Sonata Da Camera," at the concert of contemporary music under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation on July 22. Tanglewood's choral department will present his 1940-1 work, "Coro di Morti," a dramatic madrigal for male chorus, three pianos, brass, double basses and percussion, on the July 20 or 24 concert, and his one-act opera, "Morte Dell' Aria" (1949-50) is a likely prospect for box-holders at the [illegible] "Tanglewood Gala Parade," August 9.

Alexander Smallens conducts the next four Stadium Concerts in New York, the first of which, on the evening of July 9, is the annual all-Gershwin program, with Earl Wild, pianist, William Warfield, baritone, and Leontyne Price, soprano, as soloists.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 181,704
JUL 8 1956

Tanglewood Concerts to Be on Radio

CHARLES MUNCH conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of a series of concerts from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on WJAR tomorrow night at 8:15.

The opening concert will be devoted entirely to music of Mozart, including the finale of the "Haffner" Symphony in D Major and the Sinfonia Concertante, with oboe, horn, clarinet and bassoon. Ben Grauer will be commentator for the series.

Concert details for the week are listed below.

TODAY

WPRO—2:05-3:30 p.m.—World Music Festival. From the Los Angeles Music Festival. Franz Waxman conducts the Los Angeles Festival Orchestra. James Fassett is the commentator.
"Academic Festival" Overture.Brahms
Symphony in D—A Festival Piece in One Movement.....Vincent
Symphony No. 3 in E flat.....Mozart
Sinfonietta for String Orchestra and Timpani.....Waxman
The Pines of [illegible].....Respighi

TOMORROW

WJAR—8:15-9 p.m.—Berkshire Festival. Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.
Sinfonia Concertante.....Mozart
Finale from the "Haffner" Symphony.....Mozart
WEAN—8:30-9 p.m.—Orchestra and Chorus, directed by Howard Barlow. Mildred Miller is the mezzo-soprano soloist.
Orchestra
I Love a Parade.....Arlen
Bali Hai.....Rodgers-Hammerstein
Miss Miller
Who.....Kern
Chorus
Marche Militaire.....Schubert
Orchestra
I'm in Love with a Wonderful Guy.....Rodgers-Hammerstein
Miss Miller and Chorus
Voi che Sapete from "Marriage of Figaro".....Mozart
Miss Miller
Light Cavalry Overture...Von Suppe
Orchestra
Two Hearts in Three-Quarter Time.....Stolz
Miss Miller and Chorus
WJAR—9-9:30 p.m.—Orchestra, conducted by Donald Voorhees. Jose Iturbi is the pianist soloist.
The Night Was Made for Love..Kern
Orchestra
Selections from "El Amor Brujo".....Falla
Iturbi
Intermezzo from "The Four Rustics".....Wolf-Ferrari
Orchestra
Concerto No. 4 in G, Finale.Beethoven
Iturbi and Orchestra
WGBH-TV—9-10 p.m.—Concert by Alexander Borovsky, pianist. Jules Wolffers is the commentator.
Prelude and Fugue in B-Flat Major and in B-Flat Minor from Volume I of "The Well-Tempered Clavier".....Bach
Sonata in D-Minor.....Scarlatti
Thirty-Two Variations in C-Minor.....Beethoven
Prelude in C-Major.....Prokofieff
Five Visions Fugitifs.....Prokofieff
Scherzo in C-Sharp Minor.....Chopin

SATURDAY

WPRO—6:30-7:55 p.m.—Concert Hall.
Carousel Waltz.....Rodgers
Suite Francaise.....Milhaud
Wedding Suite.....Prokofieff
Symphony No. 6.....Beethoven

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Sun
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,774
JUL 8 1956

Goodman Guest Soloist at Lenox

LENOX, July 7 (AP)—Guest soloist last night in a Mozart concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood was Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing."

Goodman was cheered lustily by the audience of 2000, about half of them outside in the rain. His selection was Concerto for clarinet in a-major.

It was Goodman's fist appearance with the Boston symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

The concerts by the symphony's chamber group, made up of 37 musicians, preceded the full Berkshire symphonic festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372
JUL 8 1956

On Berkshire Music Festival Programs This Week

BORIS GOLDOVSKY

LUBOSHUTZ AND NEMENOFF

DORIOT ANTHONY DWYER

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 99,506
JUL 8 1956

Berkshire Music Festival In Second Week

The Berkshire Music Festival goes into its second week with th usual four chamber music programs scheduled. The Boston Symphon String Quartet opens the week's programs with Benny Goodman a the guest artist on Wednesday evening. The jazz clarinetist, who mad his Tanglewood debut last week, will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quinte (K 581) with the quartet of string players. Quartets by Haydn an Brahms are also included in this concert's program listing. Inci dentally, Benny is donating his services for the benefit of the Bosto Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshir Music Center.

Boris Goldovsky, the eminent producer of the New England Oper Theater who heads the opera department at the Festival, is to be i the dual role of conductor and pianist in an all-Mozart concert o Friday evening. Goldovsky will be heard in the composer's F majo Concerto for 3 Pianos with Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff a the other two pianos. The operatic impressario will also be the solois in Mozart's A major Piano Concerto with Luboshutz conducting. Goldov sky will be in the role of conductor for the March, Andantino and Finale from the D major Serenade and for the E flat major Concerto for Two Pianos with the celebrated piano-duo as the soloists.

Charles Munch, the Boston Orchestra's great director, will conduct all-Bach programs in the concerts on Saturday evening and next Sunday afternoon. William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and the first flutist of the Boston Orchestra, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, are to be the soloists in this program which lists the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2, in F major; the E. major Violin Concerto; the Suite No. 2, in B minor for Flute and Strings; and the Suite No. 3, in D major.

On Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Munch will conduct a performance of The Passion According to St. John, with prominent soloists and the Festival Chorus composed of Berkshire Center students. The soloists are to be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and basses Mac Morgan and James Joyce.

A special extra concert is to be given tomorrow evening at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall where all of the chamber music programs are given. Donated to the Berkshire Music Center by the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, the program will be made up of a number of chamber works by modern composers. This concert is open on a non-reserved basis to friends of the Berkshire Music Center and to the general public.

Anyone may become a Friend by making a donation to the Berkshire Music Center, entitling the donor to free admission to the many student concerts which are given during the Festival's season.

Luboshutz and Nemenoff, the celebrated two-piano team, returns to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer, after an absence of six years. They will take part in the all-Mozart concert on Friday night at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall. Boris Goldovsky will also be a soloist. The pianists last appeared at Tanglewood in 1950.

[22]

Tanglewood Topics

By WALTER ALFORD

Lenox, July 7—Thirteen Monday night broadcasts of highlights from the summer's Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are being given by the National Broadcasting Co., to maintain a continuity of its winter broadcasts from Symphony Hall of Music Director Charles Munch's Saturday night concerts. Beginning Monday (July 9), through October 1, or until the winter series of broadcasts resume live with the start of the orchestra's 76th season in Boston upon its return from its August-September tour of 13 countries in Europe, NBC stations nationwide will present a 45-minute concert over the air, from 8.15-9.00 p. m.

* * *

The broadcasts are produced by Avner Rakov and George Voutsas. Ben Grauer is the commentator, and C. Harold Campbell is the engineer in charge of "taping" the portions of the Berkshire Festival concerts used. The schedule, worked out by BSO Manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., with the assistance of Martin Bookspan, began with Charles Munch conducting the finale of Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony and the Mozart Sinfonia Concertante, K. 297b, with oboe, clarinet, horn, bassoon which Festival patrons heard "live" in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall tonight.

* * *

Boris Goldovsky, head of Tanglewood's opera department, announces he plans as a regular Saturday afternoon feature, commencing July 14, an informal recital by his opera students of scenes from the standard repertory, to be given in workshop style in the Theater-Concert Hall, from 4.00-5.15 p. m. These, as are all performances of student opera at Tanglewood, are open to the public through membership in the Friends.

* * *

The first major production by the opera department this summer will be an evening devoted to scenes from 14 Mozart operas, in the Theater-Concert Hall on Tuesday, July 24. Many music lovers may not be aware some of these exist, particularly "Bastien and Bastienne," which the composer wrote as a child; "Lucio Silla," composed when he was 14; "Il Re Pastore" (The Shepherd King); or an unfinished work, "L'Oca del Cairo" (The Goose of Cairo), since the latter three have never been performed in this country. The Mozart panorama planned by Mr. Goldovsky, in observance of the composer's bicentennial this year, will include highlights from the five well-known operas, "Don Giovanni," "The Magic Flute," "The Marriage of Figaro," "Cosi Fan Tutte," "The Abduction From the Seraglio." It will also revive pleasant memories among local operagoers, for this evening will include excerpts from five Mozart works given their first performances in the U. S. at Tanglewood, "Idomeneo," "Titus," "La Finta Giardiniera," "Zaide" and "The Impresario." Every active opera department singer, 29 in all this year, will participate. A uni-decorative setting will be designed by Robert O'Hearn, and costumes will be by Leo Van Witsen. Mr. Goldovsky will provide the piano accompaniment. Some of the opera excerpts will be in German, some in Italian, some in English translation.

* * *

The first of six Sunday morning chamber music concerts by students of Richard Burgin, William Kroll and Boston Symphony principals, will be given in the Chamber Music Hall at Tanglewood, at 10 a. m. tomorrow. In 1955 a similar six concerts attracted 3400 music lovers.

* * *

Goffredo Petrassi, the noted Italian composer who is guest teacher of composition this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, since 1939 has been a professor of composition at the St. Cecilia Conservatory in Rome, where he began his studies in music in 1925, at the age of 21. Since he speaks only Italian and French, he communicates to the six students of his composition class at the Berkshire Music Center through an interpreter-student, Kenneth Gaburo, 29, of Champaign, Ill. After winning the George Gershwin Memorial Award in 1954, and graduating a B. Mus. and a M. Mus. that same year from the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, Mr. Gaburo went to Italy on a Fulbright scholarship, and there met Mr. Petrassi with whom he studied at St. Cecilia.

* * *

Mr. Petrassi has just received a commission from the BBC in England to compose a work for the network's tenth anniversary celebration in 1957. Four of his works will be heard by music lovers at Tanglewood this summer; the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, will premiere in the Berkshires his Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, commissioned by the orchestra for its current, 75th anniversary season (July 27). The composer will conduct his 1948 composition, "Sonata Da Camera," at the concert of contemporary music under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation on July 23. Tanglewood's choral department will present his 1940-1 work, "Coro di Morti," a dramatic madrigal for male chorus, three pianos, brass, double basses and percussion, on its July 16 or 24 concert; and his one-act opera, "Morte Dell' Aria" (1949-50) is a likely project for box-holders at the [illegible] "Tanglewood on Parade," August 9.

Alexander Smallens conducts the next four Stadium Concerts in New York, the first of which, on the evening of July 9, is the annual all-Gershwin program, with Earl Wild, pianist, William Warfield, baritone, and Leontyne Price, soprano, as soloists.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 181,704
JUL 8 1956

Tanglewood Concerts to Be on Radio

CHARLES MUNCH conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of a series of concerts from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on WJAR tomorrow night at 8:15.

The opening concert will be devoted entirely to music of Mozart, including the finale of the "Haffner" Symphony in D Major and the Sinfonia Concertante, with oboe, horn, clarinet and bassoon. Ben Grauer will be commentator for the series.

Concert details for the week are listed below.

TODAY

WPRO—2:05-3:30 p.m.—World Music Festival. From the Los Angeles Music Festival. Franz Waxman conducts the Los Angeles Festival Orchestra. James Fassett is the commentator.
"Academic Festival" Overture.Brahms
Symphony in D—A Festival Piece in One Movement .....Vincent
Symphony No. 1 in E flat ....Mozart
Sinfonietta for String Orchestra and Timpani .....Waxman
The Pines of [illegible] ..... Respighi

TOMORROW

WJAR—8:15-9 p.m.—Berkshire Festival. Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.
Sinfonia Concertante .....Mozart
Finale from the "Haffner" Symphony .....Mozart
WEAN—8:30-9 p.m.—Orchestra and Chorus, directed by Howard Barlow. Mildred Miller is the mezzo-soprano soloist.
Orchestra
I Love a Parade .....Arlen
Bali Hai .....Rodgers-Hammerstein
Miss Miller
Who .....Kern
Chorus
Marche Militaire .....Schubert
Orchestra
I'm in Love with a Wonderful Guy .....Rodgers-Hammerstein
Miss Miller and Chorus
Voi che Sapete from "Marriage of Figaro" .....Mozart
Miss Miller
Light Cavalry Overture ...Von Suppe
Orchestra
Two Hearts in Three-Quarter Time .....Stolz
Miss Miller and Chorus
WJAR—9-9:30 p.m.—Orchestra, conducted by Donald Voorhees. Jose Iturbi is the pianist soloist.
The Night Was Made for Love..Kern
Orchestra
Selections from "El Amor Brujo" ..... Falla
Iturbi
Intermezzo from "The Four Rustics" ..... Wolf-Ferrari
Orchestra
Concerto No. 4 in G. Finale.Beethoven
Iturbi and Orchestra
WGBH-TV—9-10 p.m.—Concert by Alexander Borovsky, pianist. Jules Wolffers is the commentator.
Prelude and Fugue in B-Flat Major and in B-Flat Minor from Volume I of "The Well-Tempered Clavier" ..... Bach
Sonata in D-Minor ..... Scarlatti
Thirty-Two Variations in C-Minor ..... Beethoven
Prelude in C-Major ..... Prokofieff
Five Visions Fugitifs .....Prokofieff
Scherzo in C-Sharp Minor.....Chopin

SATURDAY

WPRO—6:30-7:55 p.m.—Concert Hall.
Carousel Waltz .....Rodgers
Suite Francaise .....Milhaud
Wedding Suite ..... Prokofieff
Symphony No. 6 ..... Beethoven

SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., JULY 8, 1956

Berkshire Museum Holds First Summer Exhibition

Paintings by Ralph Berkowitz, Stage Settings and Costumes by Kokoschka Shown at Pittsfield; Other Art Shows Current in Valley

By WAYNE C. SMITH

The Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield inaugurated its summer program of special exhibitions this past week with the openings of a one-man show of paintings by Ralph Berkowitz and the display of stage settings and costume designs by Oskar Kokoschka for Mozart's "The Magic Flute" the first part of the week.

At Lenox, the Lenox Library continues its summer program of biweekly exhibitions with the showing of a group of paintings by Stanley Bate of Craryville, N. Y., and the first of the weekly exhibitions prepared for presentation at Tanglewood's reception hall by the Berkshire Museum was composed of a portion of the Kokoschka designs.

In the Connecticut Valley, the gallery established by radio station WHAI in Greenfield opened its weekly program of summer exhibitions with the display of a group of prints by the late Arthur Negus Fuller. And the third of the weekly art shows presented by the Valley Players in the lobby of the Casino at Mountain Park included oils and water colors by Dorothy Cogswell of South Hadley and Harry E. Wooley of Longmeadow.

At Pittsfield

It was interesting to note in the program of exhibitions at Pittsfield museum how often an artist of one medium will go to another medium for complete satisfaction of his creative needs. Ralph Berkowitz, who is dean of the music school at Tanglewood, is a distinguished pianist yet evidently music does not furnish him with a complete creative outlet because it is seen in this one-man show that he turns to painting to express deeply felt emotions and not as a dabbler.

There are 35 canvases in the show and all being creative are in a contemporary vein. Some of them, perhaps the majority, are yet immature but they do show the seriousness with which the artist works and how personal his painting is to him. In some, like "Women in the Garden" and "Marionette" there can be seen similarities to the work of Matisse in the plastic drawing and arrangements of the figures and the decorative backgrounds. Yet, the artist is also seen to have used, whether intentional or not, Matisse's work only as a point of departure for his own explorations.

Then, too, the surrealistic fantasy of Chagall is revealed in "Acrobats Rehearsing," "Actors Rehearsing" and "Tower Music I" and again the artist has built upon traditions creatively.

It was nice seeing again a display of Kokoschka's work at the Berkshire Museum because he taught there for an entire summer seven or eight years ago and while there he endeared himself to many in this section. When it was decided to present "The Magic Flute" at the 1955-56 Salzburg Festival as part of the commemoration of the 200th anniversary of Mozart's birth, it was decided that Kokoschka, also Austrian and one of the greatest living artists today, should be commissioned to do an entirely new setting for the opera.

MISS C. C. CARDILLO TO BECOME BRIDE

North Adams Singer Will Wed in Canarsie

New York, July 7—The young opera singer and rising soprano, Christina C. Cardillo, North Adams, Mass., native, will be married Sunday afternoon, at 4.30, to Atty. Alfred C. Moran, in Holy Family Church, Canarsie, N. Y. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Cardillo of North Adams.

Today Miss Cardillo completed her summer course at the Metropolitan. Following an unannounced wedding trip, the couple will attend the internationally famous Music Festival at Tanglewood where the bride-elect has been soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and has also sang leading roles in opera presentations in the Theater-Concert Hall under Boris Goldovsky.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Martin Moran, and the late Mr. Moran of 221 East 42d St., Brooklyn. He is a graduate of St. John's College and Law School in his native Brooklyn.

Sunday's simple ceremony will be performed in the presence of relatives and friends by Rev. Raphael Florido of Holy Family parish.

In August, Miss Cardillo will resume her work for the coming season under the management of William Judd of Columbia Artists, son of the retired manager of Boston Symphony Orchestra. There is a possibility that the bride-elect will accept an opera role in Chicago and a soloist role with the San Francisco Symphony during August.

A graduate of leading conservatories in the east and in Italy, Miss Cardillo has also studied voice under such recognized masters as Hugh Ross and Boris Goldovsky of Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood. A winner of the Metropolitan Auditions of the Air three years ago, she has been awarded several scholarships to the Met's Katherine Lang School and spent one summer at the Metropolitan's affiliate, the Central City Opera Center, Denver Col., where she enjoyed leading roles. For two years she studied voice in Milan, Italy.

Before the age of 25 she had soloed with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, had concert appearances in leading centers of Italy, and filled leading roles in operas at both Tanglewood and Central City.

On several occasions Miss Cardillo was soloist for the national dinner of the Republican Club in New York City. Last month she was soloist with the Canadian National Symphony, in a nationwide broadcast from Toronto. She has also appeared at the Municipal Auditorium in Springfield, Mass.

* * *

Mrs. Frederick Gray of Rankin Ave., Miss Janet Filer of Somers Rd., and Mrs. Gray's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Leach, and daughter, Joan, of Knollwood Dr., all of East Longmeadow, have returned from a vacation stay at Wellfleet on the Cape.

Young Opera Singer To Marry Lawyer

MISS CHRISTINA C. CARDILLO

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Indep. Republican
Circ. 253,604

JUL 8 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Herald
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Non-partisan
Circ. 98,333

JUL 8 1956

Taking The Air There

By LEO MILLER

The music of the Summer festivals spreads through the fields and on the radio as well . . . Monday night at 8:15 NBC begins the Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, under the baton of Charles Munch; the first program is all-Mozart.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 104,780

JUL 8 1956

Music

Tanglewood to Present Modern Chamber Music

By RAYMOND MORIN, Telegram Music Critic

The rampant fuss over neglect of contemporary composers should be soothed somewhat by two concerts of modern chamber music at Tanglewood tomorrow night and July 23.

These will be in the Theater-Concert Hall, under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago. Performers will be members of the Boston Symphony and guests artists.

Music by Benjamin Britten, Igor Stravinsky and Aaron Copland will be performed tomorrow night, with Mr. Copeland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, as pianist in his trio, "Vitebsk."

Two commissioned works are "Serenade for String Quartet" by Ben Weber of New York City; and "Sabrina Fair", a suite of songs for tenor, strings and piano by Alvin Epstein of Hartford, Conn.

The Monday evening, July 23 program will have music by Samuel Barber, Manuel de Falla, Darius Milhaud and Goffredo Petrassi; the latter is guest teacher of composition in the Berkshires this summer.

Commissioned works for this program are "Quintet for Bassoon and Strings" by Leland Smith of Chicago, and "Humnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments by Cuban composer, Julian Orbon of Havana.

This is not exactly concealing the identities of living composers (except for de Falla) whom Mr. Copeland recently referred to as "forgotten."

Jazz In Germany

In reply to last week's comments about the respectability of jazz, we're told that it's not only accepted but relished in West Berlin.

Students have set up their own night club, "Eierschale" (Eggshell), devoted to "pure New Orleans style". The place is decorated a la New Orleans and student bands that play there have such names as "Manny & Tobby's Blues Combo," "Spree City Stompers," "Blue Cellar Jazz Band," "New Orleans Jazz Band," and "Louisiana Hot Seven."

If you're interested, the "Eggshell" is open every day, and the prices are reasonable.

Young Artists Awards

We have received a number of inquiries about the results of Young Artists Awards auditions held June 18, at M. Steinert & Sons Co., in Worcester.

Six young women were selected by the board of judges on the basis of their musical qualifications. Following the conditions of the trust under which the scholarships are awarded, each case is studied to establish financial need. Both reports are submitted to the anonymous trustees for their approval.

It is probable that the final results will be announced within three weeks.

Music vs. Delinquency

In Joliet, Ill., police and citizens credit music instruction under Bruce Houseknecht, high school band director, with being a main factor in the low rate of juvenile delinquency.

Participation in instrumental music is one of the most popular activities of Joliet teenagers. The community averages only about 28 cases of juvenile delinquency a year.

One of our local conductors has a saying that covers the ground: "Teach your child to blow a horn and he'll never blow a safe."

Jacob's Pillow

Opponents of extreme modernism won't take much to the program of the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival at Lee this week. That ultra specialist in scringing sound, John Cage, will be at the piano to accompany Meree Cunningham & Co. in "new modern dance works."

They may be pacified by Sonia Arova and Job Sanders doing classic pas de deux, and Carola Goya with Matteo in dances of Spain.

Evening programs are Wednesday through Saturday, with matinees on the last three days.

Berkshire Festival Concerts Start Second Week Wed.

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of chamber music by Haydn, Mozart and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet on Wednesday (July 11); and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon (July 15). Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert on Friday will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

The eminent jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman, who made his debut with the Boston Symphony and at its Berkshire Festival concerts last Friday is donating his services in Wednesday's concert to the Boston Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quintet, K. 581, with the following principals of the Boston Symphony who comprise the B. S. O. String Quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

Boris Goldovsky, the eminent opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera Theatre, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his debut as conductor and piano soloist on a Berkshire Festival program on Friday evening.

He will conduct the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo pianists Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is piano soloist. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have not appeared at a Festival concert since 1950.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all-Bach concert Saturday evening. Both teach chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center.

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon (July 15) will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross. Soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center (Miss Addison in 1947, 1948, 1950; Miss Kopleff in 1946 and 1947; Mr. Morgan in 1953; Mr. Joyce in 1950, 1951, 1952; Mr. Lloyd in 1947).

A special extra concert of modern chamber music, donated to the Berkshire Music Center by the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, will be held in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood on Monday (July 9) at 8:30 p. m., open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the orchestra's summer music school and to the general public.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for all Festival concerts, and reservations may be made by telephone to Lenox, Mass. 600. Programs and a calendar of the more than 30 events at the Berkshire Music Center, with information on how to join the Friends' organization, will be mailed on request.

[23]

SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., JULY 8, 1956

Berkshire Museum Holds First Summer Exhibition

Paintings by Ralph Berkowitz, Stage Settings and Costumes by Kokoschka Shown at Pittsfield; Other Art Shows Current in Valley

By WAYNE C. SMITH

The Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield inaugurated its summer program of special exhibitions this past week with the openings of a one-man show of paintings by Ralph Berkowitz and the display of stage settings and costume designs by Oskar Kokoschka for Mozart's "The Magic Flute" the first part of the week.

At Lenox, the Lenox Library continues its summer program of biweekly exhibitions with the showing of a group of paintings by Stanley Bate of Craryville, N. Y., and the first of the weekly exhibitions prepared for presentation at Tanglewood's reception hall by the Berkshire Museum was composed of a portion of the Kokoschka designs.

In the Connecticut Valley, the gallery established by radio station WHAI in Greenfield opened its weekly program of summer exhibitions with the display of a group of prints by the late Arthur Negus Fuller. And the third of the weekly art shows presented by the Valley Players in the lobby of the Casino at Mountain Park included oils and water colors by Dorothy Cogswell of South Hadley and Harry E. Wooley of Longmeadow.

At Pittsfield

It was interesting to note in the program of exhibitions at Pittsfield museum how often an artist of one medium will go to another medium for complete satisfaction of his creative needs. Ralph Berkowitz, who is dean of the music school at Tanglewood, is a distinguished pianist yet evidently music does not furnish him with a complete creative outlet because it is seen in this one-man show that he turns to painting to express deeply felt emotions and not as a dabbler.

There are 35 canvases in the show and all being creative are in a contemporary vein. Some of them, perhaps the majority, are yet immature but they do show the seriousness with which the artist works and how personal his painting is to him. In some, like "Women in the Garden" and "Marionette" there can be seen similarities to the work of Matisse in the plastic drawing and arrangements of the figures and the decorative backgrounds. Yet, the artist is also seen to have used, whether intentional or not, Matisse's work only as a point of departure for his own explorations.

Then, too, the surrealistic fantasy of Chagall is revealed in "Acrobats Rehearsing," "Actors Rehearsing" and "Tower Music I" and again the artist has built upon traditions creatively.

It was nice seeing again a display of Kokoschka's work at the Berkshire Museum because he taught there for an entire summer seven or eight years ago and while there he endeared himself to many in this section. When it was decided to present "The Magic Flute" at the 1955-56 Salzburg Festival as part of the commemoration of the 200th anniversary of Mozart's birth, it was decided that Kokoschka, also Austrian and one of the greatest living artists today, should be commissioned to do an entirely new setting for the opera.

MISS C. C. CARDILLO TO BECOME BRIDE

North Adams Singer Will Wed in Canarsie

New York, July 7—The young opera singer and rising soprano, Christina C. Cardillo, North Adams, Mass., native, will be married Sunday afternoon, at 4.30, to Atty. Alfred C. Moran, in Holy Family Church, Canarsie, N. Y. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Cardillo of North Adams.

Today Miss Cardillo completed her summer course at the Metropolitan. Following an unannounced wedding trip, the couple will attend the internationally famous Music Festival at Tanglewood where the bride-elect has been soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and has also sang leading roles in opera presentations in the Theater-Concert Hall under Boris Goldovsky.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Martin Moran, and the late Mr. Moran of 221 East 42d St., Brooklyn. He is a graduate of St. John's College and Law School in his native Brooklyn.

Sunday's simple ceremony will be performed in the presence of relatives and friends by Rev. Raphael Florido of Holy Family parish.

In August, Miss Cardillo will resume her work for the coming season under the management of William Judd of Columbia Artists, son of the retired manager of Boston Symphony Orchestra. There is a possibility that the bride-elect will accept an opera role in Chicago and a soloist role with the San Francisco Symphony during August.

A graduate of leading conservatories in the east and in Italy, Miss Cardillo has also studied voice under such recognized masters as Hugh Ross and Boris Goldovsky of Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood. A winner of the Metropolitan Auditions of the Air three years ago, she has been awarded several scholarships to the Met's Katherine Lang School and spent one summer at the Metropolitan's affiliate, the Central City Opera Center, Denver Col., where she enjoyed leading roles. For two years she studied voice in Milan, Italy.

Before the age of 25 she had soloed with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, had concert appearances in leading centers of Italy, and filled leading roles in operas at both Tanglewood and Central City.

On several occasions Miss Cardillo was soloist for the national dinner of the Republican Club in New York City. Last month she was soloist with the Canadian National Symphony, in a nationwide broadcast from Toronto. She has also appeared at the Municipal Auditorium in Springfield, Mass.

* * *

Mrs. Frederick Gray of Rankin Ave., Miss Janet Filer of Somers Rd., and Mrs. Gray's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Leach, and daughter, Joan, of Knollwood Dr., all of East Longmeadow, have returned from a vacation stay at Wellfleet on the Cape.

Young Opera Singer To Marry Lawyer

MISS CHRISTINA C. CARDILLO

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Indep. Republican
Circ. 253,604

JUL 8 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 104,780

JUL 8 1956

Music

Tanglewood to Present Modern Chamber Music

By RAYMOND MORIN, Telegram Music Critic

The rampant fuss over neglect of contemporary composers should be soothed somewhat by two concerts of modern chamber music at Tanglewood tomorrow night and July 23.

These will be in the Theater-Concert Hall, under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago. Performers will be members of the Boston Symphony and guests artists.

Music by Benjamin Britten, Igor Stravinsky and Aaron Copland will be performed tomorrow night, with Mr. Copeland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, as pianist in his trio, "Vitebsk."

Two commissioned works are "Serenade for String Quartet" by Ben Weber of New York City, and "Sabrina Fair", a suite of songs for tenor, strings and piano by Alvin Epstein of Hartford, Conn.

The Monday evening, July 23 program will have music by Samuel Barber, Manuel de Falla, Darius Milhaud and Goffredo Petrassi; the latter is guest teacher of composition in the Berkshires this summer.

Commissioned works for this program are "Quintet for Bassoon and Strings" by Leland Smith of Chicago, and "Hum-nus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments by Cuban composer, Julian Orbon of Havana.

This is not exactly concealing the identities of living composers (except for de Falla) whom Mr. Copeland recently referred to as "forgotten."

Jazz In Germany

In reply to last week's comments about the respectability of jazz, we're told that it's not only accepted but relished in West Berlin.

Students have set up their own night club, "Eierschale" (Eggshell), devoted to "pure New Orleans style". The place is decorated a la New Orleans and student bands that play there have such names as "Manny & Tobby's Blues Combo," "Spree City Stompers," "Blue Cellar Jazz Band," "New Orleans Jazz Band," and "Louisiana Hot Seven."

If you're interested, the "Eggshell" is open every day, and the prices are reasonable.

Young Artists Awards

We have received a number of inquiries about the results of Young Artists Awards auditions held June 18, at M. Steinert & Sons Co., in Worcester.

Six young women were selected by the board of judges on the basis of their musical qualifications. Following the conditions of the trust under which the scholarships are awarded, each case is studied to establish financial need. Both reports are submitted to the anonymous trustees for their approval.

It is probable that the final results will be announced within three weeks.

Music vs. Delinquency

In Joliet, Ill., police and citizens credit music instruction under Bruce Houseknecht, high school band director, with being a main factor in the low rate of juvenile delinquency.

Participation in instrumental music is one of the most popular activities of Joliet teenagers. The community averages only about 28 cases of juvenile delinquency a year.

One of our local conductors has a saying that covers the ground: "Teach your child to blow a horn and he'll never blow a safe."

Jacob's Pillow

Opponents of extreme modernism won't take much to the program of the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival at Lee this week. That ultra specialist in scringing sound, John Cage, will be at the piano to accompany Merce Cunningham & Co. in "new modern dance works."

They may be pacified by Sonia Arova and Job Sanders doing classic pas de deux, and Carola Goya with Matteo in dances of Spain.

Evening programs are Wednesday through Saturday, with matinees on the last three days.

Berkshire Festival Concerts Start Second Week Wed.

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of chamber music by Haydn, Mozart and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet on Wednesday (July 11); and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon (July 15). Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert on Friday will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

The eminent jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman, who made his debut with the Boston Symphony and at its Berkshire Festival concerts last Friday is donating his services in Wednesday's concert to the Boston Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quintet, K. 581, with the following principals of the Boston Symphony who comprise the B. S. O. String Quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

Boris Goldovsky, the eminent opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera Theatre, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his debut as conductor and piano soloist on a Berkshire Festival program on Friday evening.

He will conduct the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo pianists Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is piano soloist. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have not appeared at a Festival concert since 1950.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all-Bach concert Saturday evening. Both teach chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center.

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon (July 15) will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross. Soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center (Miss Addison in 1947, 1948, 1950; Miss Kopleff in 1946 and 1947; Mr. Morgan in 1953; Mr. Joyce in 1950, 1951, 1952; Mr. Lloyd in 1947).

A special extra concert of modern chamber music, donated to the Berkshire Music Center by the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, will be held in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood on Monday (July 9) at 8:30 p. m., open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the orchestra's summer music school and to the general public.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for all Festival concerts, and reservations may be made by telephone to Lenox, Mass. 600. Programs and a calendar of the more than 30 events at the Berkshire Music Center, with information on how to join the Friends' organization, will be mailed on request.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Herald
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Non-partisan
Circ. 98,333

JUL 8 1956

Taking The Air There

By LEO MILLER

The music of the Summer festivals spreads through the fields and on the radio as well . . . Monday night at 8:15 NBC begins the Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, under the baton of Charles Munch; the first program is all-Mozart.

[23]

Goldovsky and Luboshutz Conduct Mozart Program

Genia Nemenoff Also Listed for Tanglewood Concert Friday Night; Second Music Festival Week Opens Wednesday

Lenox, July 7—The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood comprises an evening of chamber music by Haydn, Mozart and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet on Wednesday (July 11); and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 13 and 14) and Sunday afternoon (July 15). Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

Donates Services

The eminent jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman, who made his debut with the Boston Symphony and at its Berkshire Festival concerts last Friday, is donating his services in Wednesday's concert to the Boston Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's clarinet quintet, K. 581, with the following principals of the Boston Symphony who comprise the B. S. O. String Quartet; Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

Boris Goldovsky, the eminent opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera Theater, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his debut as conductor and piano soloist on a Berkshire Festival program on Friday evening (July 13). He will conduct the Bostor Symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo pianists Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is piano soloist. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have not appeared at a Festival concert since 1950.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all-Bach concert Saturday evening (July 14). Both teach chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center.

Festival Chorus

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon (July 15) will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross. Soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center (Miss Addison in 1947, 1948, 1950; Miss Kopleff in 1946 and 1947; Mr. Morgan in 1953; Mr. Joyce in 1950, 1951, 1952; Mr. Lloyd in 1947).

A special extra concert of modern chamber music, donated to the Berkshire Music Center by the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, will be held in the Theater-Concert Hall on Monday (July 9) at 8.30 p. m., open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the orchestra's summer music school and to the general public. The program is:

Stravinsky (b 1882): Duo Concertante (1932). Ruth Posselt, violin: Irving Fine, piano.

Ben Weber (b. 1916): Serenade for Strings, Op. 46 (1956). Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello; Georges Moleux, bass

Benjamin Britten (b 1913): Canticle II, "Abraham and Isaac," Op. 51 (1953). Florence Kopleff, contralto; Arthur Schoep, tenor; Seymour Lipkin, piano.

Arnold Schoenberg (1874-1951): Klavierstucke, Op. 33 a & b (1929, 1932).

Anton Webern (1883-1945): Variations, Op. 27 (1926). William Masselos, piano.

Alvin Epstein (b. 1930): 'Sabrina Fair," a suite of songs (1956). Arthur Schoep, tenor; Richard Burgin, violin; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello; Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

Aaron Copland (b. 1900): Vitebsk. Study on a Jewish Theme (1929). Richard Burgin, violin; Samuel Mayes, cello; Aaron Copland, piano.

All four of next week's Berkshire Festival concerts are given in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8.30 p. m., Sunday afternoon at 2.30 p. m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious lawns, is sold on the day of performance, and in the event of rain the programs will be given in the capacious Music Shed.

The complete programs are:

Wednesday, July 11, 8.30 p. m., Theatre-Concert Hall, Chamber Music:

Haydn: String Quartet in E flat major, Op. 33, No. 2

Mozart: Clarinet Quintet, K. 581

Brahms: String Quintet in G major; Benny Goodman and The Boston Symphony String Quartet (Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello).

Friday, July 13, 8.30 p. m., Theatre-Concert Hall, The Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra:

Mozart: March, Andantino and Finale (Presto) from Serenade in D major, K. 320

Mozart: Concerto in F major, for 3 Pianos, K. 242. Soloists: Luboshutz and Nemenoff and Boris Goldovsky

Mozart: Concerto in A major, for Piano, K. 488. Soloist: Boris Goldovsky

Mozart: Concerto in E flat major, for 2 Pianos, K. 365. Soloists: Luboshutz and Nemenoff. Boris Goldovsky, and Pierre Luboshutz, conductors.

Saturday, July 14, 8.30 p. m., Theatre-Concert Hall, The Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra:

Bach: Brandenburg Concerto No. 2, in F major. Soloists: Roger Voisin, trumpet; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Richard Burgin violin.

Bach: Viola Concerto in E major Soloist: William Kroll

Bach: Suite No. 2, in B minor, for Flute and Strings. Soloist: Doriot Anthony Dwyer

Bach: Suite No. 3, in D major Charles Munch, conductor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372
JUL 8 1956

Second Thoughts On Music

First Fromm Foundation Concert Tomorrow Night

Works by Former Students to Be Performed at Tanglewood; Festival Opens With Program By Kroll String Quartet; Foss Conducts Today

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Lenox, July 7—It is good to have the Berkshire Music Festival under way again. It is very much like an Old Home Week during the opening concert. Everyone seems to know everyone else and there is a friendly, informal atmosphere.

Programs began Wednesday night with the first of the Chamber Music concerts. The honor of opening the festival went to the Kroll String Quartet, one of the best such ensembles now playing. The program of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven quartets was rapturously received by an audience numbering 1100. We found the quartet at its best in Prokofieff's first quartet and in the Beethoven No. 3, Opus 59, the last of the Rasamouski quartets. The Mozart quartet in C major, K. 465 was handled with a heavy hand and lacked the delicacy and spontaneity it needed.

It was interesting to learn that Mr. Kroll and artists who will appear subsequently in the chamber music series, give their services without pay, so that all proceeds may go to the revolving scholarship fund. It is because of this fund that so many young people may attend the Berkshire Music School, run by the Boston Symphony Orchestra without undue expense.

Fromm Foundation Concerts

There is much interest in the two concerts which are being given through the generosity of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago. These will be given Mondays, July 9 and July 23, respectively. The brace of concerts will each display a work by a former student of the Berkshire Music Center.

Works to be heard Monday night include the Stravinsky "Duo Concertante" played by Ruth Posselt, violin, and Irving Fine, pianist; Ben Weber's "Serenade for Strings," a composition commissioned by the Fromm Foundation this year; Britten's "Canticle 11 "Abraham and Issac," written in 1953; Schoenberg's "Klavierstucke"; Anton Webern's "Variations," played by pianist Masselos; Alvin Epstein's "Sabrina Fair," commissioned by the Fromm Foundation this year and Aaron Copland's "Vitebsk" a trio to be played by Richard Burgin, violin; Samuel Mayes, cello and Mr. Copland at the piano.

Lukas Foss to Conduct

This afternoon at 2.30, Lukas Foss, a member of the composition faculty of the Music Center, will conduct five works, three of which are new to Tanglewood and are contemporary. The new pieces will be the "Serious Song for Strings" by Irving Fine; "Divertimento" by Alexei Haieff; and "The Unanswered Question" by the late and legendary American composer, Charles Ives. The program will open with Haydn's Symphony No. 86 in D major and conclude with Bach's "Piano Concerto in D Minor." In this work, Mr. Foss will be both soloist and conductor.

We shall report on the past week-end concerts next Sunday. It now looks as though we shall attend at least 40 concerts during the six-week festival period. The opera novelty this season is to be the stage premiere of "Griffelkin" by Lukas Foss. This work was commissioned by the National Broadcasting Co. television network and telecast nationally last November. The composer will conduct the two performances, which will be staged by Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Center's opera department. The opera will be given Aug. 6 and 7.

SYRACUSE HERALD-AMERICAN

, Sunday, July 8, 1956

This afternoon in the Theater-Concert Hall in "Tanglewood," Lukas Foss, a member of the composition faculty in Berkshire Music Center, will conduct five works, three of which are contemporary and new to this noted beauty and cultural center near Lenox, Mass. The new pieces will be the "Serious Song, for Strings" by Mr. Foss' colleague on the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, Irving Fine; "Divertimento by Alexei Haieff; and "The Unanswered Question" by the late and legendary American composer, Charles Ives.

The program will begin with Haydn's Smphony No. 86 in D Major, and conclude with Bach's Piano Concerto in D Minor, Mr. Foss as soloist conducting from the keyboard. Lukas Foss, at one time was a student in the Berkshire Music Center and who returns to its faculty this year after a summer's leave of absence, has become one of the busiest men of music in the country. He lives in Los Angeles, where he is Associate Professor at the University of California in charge of composition, and music director of the U.C.L.A. Symphony Orchestra. He also is conductor of the Los Angeles Chamber Symphony Orchestra.

Later in the season (on Aug. 6, 7) the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will present the stage premier of his opera, "Griffelkin," which was commissioned by the National Broadcasting Company television network and telecast nationally last November. The composer will conduct those two performances, which will be staged by Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Music Center's opera department.

CONTEMPORARY WORKS PRAISED AT TANGLEWOOD

Martini, Cowell Share Honors After Thrilling Mozart Music

Tanglewood, July 7—One of those suave, star-lit nights combined with the music of Mozart and contemporary composers, Bohuslav Martinu and Henry Cowell combined to draw an audience of 3000 to the Berkshire Festival tonight. It was pleasant to see the lawn dotted with people and to know that they were hearing the concert almost as clearly as those inside.

Devoted to Mozart

The first portion of the program, directed by Charles Munch, was devoted to the Mozart "Symphony in D Major," Haffner and the Sinfonia Concertante, for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon. The soloists in this work were Ralph Gombert, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn and Sherman Walt, basson.

That some commissioned works can bear the stamp of inspiration seems true when one listens to the D Major symphony written in some 15 days. It remains one of the rarest works of the composed, a veritable gem. As he did Friday night, Mr. Munch provided a beautiful interpretation. one which had both profundity and an all embracing charm. It was deeply felt and alive with color and movement.

(Continued On Page 7A)

CONTEMPORARY

(Continued From Page 1A)

The "Sinfonia Concertante" is of symphonic proportions. It seems that during a visit in Paris, Mozart met four virtuosi who asked him to write a work for obe, horn, clarinet and bassoon. This he did in very short time and it remains a work that is unique in music and as inviting to listeners today as it was to the first audience that heard it. Mr. Munch had four great players to enhance the work tonight. Messers Gomberg, Cioffi, Stagliano and Walt provided perfect integration with the orchestra and in the final variations displayed magnificent virtuosity. Thus, Mr. Munch was wonderfully served by his chamber orchestra and these solists. So was Mozart.

The contemporary works heard tonight were far more rewarding than we had been led to expect. Martinu's "Military Mass, for Men's Chorus and Small Orchestra, which included a piano and organ, is a work of tremendous power, and vitality. The work was sung by the Yale Glee Club, with solons by Mac Morgan. It was conducted by Hugh Ross.

Outdoors Perferred

The composer has written that "The mass was intended to be performed out of doors, under the sky and the clouds that unite us with the soldiers at the front as well as with our compatriots at home." Written during the occupation of France, when the French Army disbanded, the project lost its purpose and the composer completed the work for concert use, adding piano and organ. It was performed in the Cathedral in Princeton in 1948.

The text opens with the Lord's Prayer and closes with the first words of the prayer accompanied by a distant trumpet call and muffled drums. Mr. Morgan sang the solos very well, using his resonant voice and impeccable enunciation to enhance the text. In fact enunciation was wonderfully applied by both soloist and chorus. This appears to be a work which should have considerable appeal among the male chorus fraternity.

Henry Cowell's "A Thanksgiving Psalm" from "The Dead Sea Scrolls" is written for male chorus and orchestra. It is a tightly knit work, a bit dissonant in the orchestral portions but entirely singable and the Yale boys handled the chorus work with consumate skill.

The heavy orchestration at times overshadowed the chorus and one did not get the rods, but when that was possible one heard some beautiful psalms translated from the Aramic by Miller Burrows, professor of biblical theology at Yale. When the Martinu work was impressive at first hearing, the Cowell work needs more than one hearing. Mr. Ross had his forces under control and provided the sort of direction one has come to expect from him.

TANGLEWOOD
LENOX, MASS. • NOW through AUGUST 12

Berkshire Festival

BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
THEATRE-CONCERT HALL
TODAY at 2:30
NEXT WED. July 11, at 8:30—BOSTON SYMPHONY STRING QUARTET
Benny Goodman assisting
FRI. July 13, at 8:30—MOZART PIANO CONCERTOS
Soloists: Boris Goldovsky, Luboshutz and Nemenoff
SAT. July 14, at 8:30—BACH PROGRAM (Munch)
Soloist: William Kroll, Violin
SUN. July 15, at 2:30—BACH—ST. JOHN PASSION (Munch)
Tickets Wed. $2, $3; Fri., Sat., Sun., $4, $5. (Admission $2)
— Reserved seats for July 13 & 14 all taken; for July 15, $5 only —
Last 4 Weekends: SHED CONCERTS (July 20—Aug. 12)
Tickets $2.50, 3.00, 3.50, 4.00, 5.50. (Box Seats $6.50)
For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX

Berkshire Festival

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., a chamber orchestra conducted by Lukas Foss, who will also be piano soloist. All concerts are held in the Theatre-Concert Hall unless otherwise noted.
Symphony No. 86 in D.....Haydn
Serious Song, for strings.....Fine
Divertimento .....Haieff
The Unanswered Question .....Ives
Piano Concerto in D minor.....Bach

MONDAY, 8:30 P. M., special program of modern chamber music donated to the Berkshire Music Center by the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, Ill. Participants: Ruth Posselt, Richard Burgin, Alfred Krips, violinists; Irving Fine, Seymour Lipkin, William Masselos, Ralph Berkowitz, Aaron Copland, pianists; Samuel Mayes, 'cellist; Joseph de Pasquale, violist; George Moleux, bassist; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Arthur Schoep, tenor.
Duo Concertante .....Stravinsky
Serenade for strings, Op. 46.....Weber
Canticle II, Abraham and Isaac, Op. 51 .....Britten
Klavierstuecke, Op. 33.....Schoenberg
Variations, Op. 27.....Weber
Sabrina Fair .....Epstein
Vitebsk .....Copland

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M., program of chamber music with the Boston Symphony String Quartet and Benny Goodman, clarinetist.
String Quartet in E flat, Op. 33, No. 2 .....Haydn
Clarinet Quintet (K. 581) .....Mozart
String Quintet in G.....Brahms

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M., Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra conducted by Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz, who will also be piano soloists in addition to Genia Nemenoff.
March, Andantino and Finale, from Serenade in D (K. 320); Concerto in F for three pianos (K. 242); Piano Concerto in A (K. 488); Concerto for two pianos in E flat (K. 365).....Mozart

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; William Kroll, violinist; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist.
Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F; Violin Concerto in E; Suite No. 2 in B minor, for flute and strings; Suite No. 3 in D.....Bach

NEXT SUNDAY, July 15, 2:30 P. M., Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra assisted by Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center. Conductor, Charles Munch; Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan, James Joyce, basses. Bach's Passion According to St. John.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

JUL 9 1956

BSO Radio Concerts

Thirteen Monday evening broadcasts of high lights from the summer's Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are being given by the National Broadcasting Company to maintain a continuity with the winter broadcasts of the group.

NBC stations are presenting the concerts Monday nights from 8:15 to 9. Ben Grauer is the commentator.

Conductor Charles Munch will lead nine of the broadcasts, and the rest will have Pierre Monteux, Richard Burgin and Eleazar de Carvalho as guest directors.

Tanglewood Music Fans Give Ovation to Goodman

By D. E. RITZ

The Tanglewood debut of clarinetist Benny Goodman highlighted the opening program in the Bach-Mozart series at the Theatre-Concert hall at Lenox, Mass., Friday evening.

* * *

GOODMAN APPEARED as soloist in the "Concerto for Clarinet in A major, K. 62" with the Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra conducted by Dr. Charles Munch.

The all-Mozart program opened with the "Symphony in G minor, K. 550" and closed with the "Prague Symphony in D major, K. 504."

It was a cool evening and almost clear. The instruments sounded fine. The program was the first directed by Dr. Munch since his return from a Paris vacation. Every member of the ensemble was at top pitch and the program was a glorious opening for the 19th season of the Berkshire Festival.

* * *

GOODMAN RECEIVED a hearty reception when he came on and at the end of the concerto received an outstanding ovation.

Dr. Munch and the orchestra also received ovations following the performances of the symphonies from the large audience which filled every chair in the auditorium and overflowed onto the grounds.

Goodman proved himself a master of the instrument in the classical idiom and his clear tone and fast articulation made the rapid passages most attractive. The orchestral background formed a fine foil to the instrument, and under Dr. Munch's direction the whole performance proved a remarkable tribute to its composer.

* * *

WE HAS KNOWN many musicians who have left the classic field for jazz but we will admit that Friday evening was the first time that we had heard one of the finest of the jazz men demonstrate that he is also a classicist. The program notes inform us that Goodman studied with Reginald Kell; also that he commissioned "such works as 'Contrasts' by Bartok and the concertos for his instrument by Copland and by Hindemith, and played in each of them." Our first hearing of Goodman in person was a revelation.

The clarinetist also is scheduled to appear in a special program Wednesday evening with the Boston Symphony String Quartet including Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violinist; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; and Samuel Mayes, cello. Eugen Lehner, viola, will assist in one of the numbers.

* * *

ON SATURDAY evening, the symphonic program included two Mozart numbers directed by Dr. Munch and two modern numbers conducted by Hugh Ross. Lukas Foss conducted yesterday afternoon's program.

The Tanglewood season is in full swing and again we add our tribute to an enterprise which enables many to share in Boston's fine musical fare. The season at Tanglewood will continue through Aug. 12.

Music

Lukas Foss at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST weekend of Tanglewood this year will go down in the record books as a very happy combination of deference to the classics, in particular to Mozart on the 200th anniversary of his birth and to an audacious inclusion of many new and late compositions by young and late American composers.

Lukas Foss, who has been one of the proudest exhibits of Tanglewood and the Berkshire Music Center for most of its existence, returned to the podium yesterday afternoon, after a year's leave, to conduct and to perform a piano concerto.

Foss began his program with the Haydn D major symphony, No. 86. It was a gay and carefree—and careless—performance. It rolled along with great elan missing plenty of the opportunities with which the symphony abounds. His personal magnetism compensated for much, and the orchestra was equal to any of his youthful demands. The florid largo, which Haydn himself called a capriccio, has extravagant possibilities which were ignored.

* * *

HIS D MINOR Bach piano concerto was equally thrilling. It was exciting music-making, but it would have been just as good—possibly better—if he had not attempted to include conducting at the same time. There were no conductors in Bach's day for this concerto and yesterday, with the outstanding concertmaster in America behind him, Richard Burgin, he might have played more piano and less orchestra, had he relinquished one function. In figures in which the orchestra properly underlined the legato nature of the phrases, Foss accented the individual notes of his corresponding idiom for fear of misunderstanding.

There were two impressive and provocative American works, both new to Tanglewood: Irving Fine's "Serious Song; Lament for String Orchestra" and the late Charles Ives' "The Unanswered Question." Between these was played a "Divertimento" of Alexander Haietff which was amusing and engaging but very superficial. It's main advantage was to serve as light relief between the two more weighty works.

* * *

FINE'S "Lament" was commissioned by the Louisville Symphony Orchestra and was finished last August in East Natick. It is a short, intense essay and reveals a great deal of the progress the young composer has made in the few years he has been coming to the faculty at Tanglewood. He immediately shows his knowledge of timbre and his imagination when he writes the first eight bars for unison violins. The Boston violin section played them with unbelievably beautiful tone and made of his austere line an extremely impressive phrase.

The urgency of his musical inspiration he expresses by a great addiction to metrical complexity. Indeed, the departure from any regular figuration and the onrushing wealth of material tell best what he is apparently eager to say. With so somber a subject, he is most at home in the lower-registered instruments. Mr. Fine was in the audience to acknowledge the plaudits of the audience.

Lukas Foss

* * *

IVES' PIECE is short, too, and while it is not at all similar musically, the basic thought is from the same direction. Ives places a small string orchestra offstage which plays solemn and beautiful hymn-like music. Then, on stage, but from a completely unrelated source, comes a trumpet asking, we assume, "The Perennial Question of Existence." The onstage strings sustain long notes while they alternate with or join their colleagues not in view who are giving "The Invisible Answer." The wind instruments are the foil to the serenity otherwise prevailing. Ives does not pretend to do by music what words have not done.

* * *

SATURDAY night the program was divided between more homage to the memory of Mozart conducted by Charles Munch and two new, late works, by Bahuslav Martinu and Henry Cowell, both conducted by Hugh Ross.

The angular dimensions of the "Haffner" symphony were defined with violent verve and hasty brilliance which the cool evening abetted. The orchestra was never in more virtuoso fettle and the sharp contrasts and impetuous sweeps which Munch called for were delivered with brisk and trenchant nonchalance.

The Sinfonia concertante proved the caliber of the orchestra by offering the solo players of the oboe (Ralph Gomberg), clarinet (Gino Cioffi), horn (James Stagliano) and bassoon (Sherman Walt) the opportunity to be heard in more salient fashion than the ordinary symphony permits. Particularly in the variations did they rise to heights of both individual instrumental achievements and artistic expressiveness.

* * *

Mr. Ross and the orchestra were assisted in the last half of the program by the Yale Glee Club, of which Fenno Heath is director, and whom Ross called to the front, at the end of the arduous task, to share the appreciation of the very large audience.

Martinu's "Military Mass" uses an unusual combination of instruments — nine wind players, a piano, organ, and four percussionists. The travail of his exiled and driven fellow-countrymen Czechs in France in 1940 inspired him to what amounts to both a plea and a protest. He makes use of Biblical excerpts and lines by the Czech poet, Jiri Mucha, of which the material is about equally divided between the chorus and a single baritone solo which Mac Morgan sang with sonorous eloquence and an articulation to which Mr. Martinu could not have given too much consideration, at least in the interpretation to English.

* * *

The "Mass" certainly evoked mixed emotions as the composer went from the depths of devotional affirmations of faith to explosive outbursts in the brass and drums, after which the choral entrances were 'anti-climactic, either by reason of ineffective choral writing or inefficient preparation. Martinu used conventional diatonic processes for the solemn moments and here the chorus showed even and well-balanced sonority. There was difficult and hybrid flagellation in other episodes which invaded and offended the mood set in alternating sections.

Mr. Cowell came to the front of the auditorium after the performance of his "Thanksgiving Psalm From 'The Dead Sea Scrolls,'" to acknowledge the applause of the audience. Cowell calls for a complete instrumentation in the numbers the small chamber group supplies. It was at once apparent that the composer chose to give the chorus singable lines in conformity with vocal usage; he had no such regard for the instruments. Indeed, his awareness of the potentialities of both was the most conspicuous feature of his writing.

* * *

THE TENORS started out with a fugal idiom in which they were strengthened by the violins while the vocal basses sustained a pedal drone, to which Cowell gave more substance by doubling in the celli. There did not seem to be equal elements of musical material and text and some passages were not lucid, at least at first hearing, and the unexpected abrupt ending left the audience, as well as Mr. Ross, in mid-air.

Humor

Never Underestimate . . .

Ralph Berkowitz, the versatile dean of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, combines the art of a raconteur with that of music and painting. So much so that at the opening session of the school he was importuned to repeat one of his favorites which concerns the rabbit who bid the pigeon to dinners.

It appears that the bunny had been working in the hot hutch all afternoon to put on a feast that would impress the pigeon.

Come 7 o'clock with the table all set, the pigeon didn't show. Fifteen minutes passed and still no guest. Half an hour went by and the bird was still missing. Finally, at 8, the pigeon arrived.

"Do excuse me," she cooed. "It was such a nice day that I decided to walk."

Tenor McCollum Will Sing Roles Of Ailing Lloyd

Tenor John McCollum will take over the singing assignments at the Berkshire Festival of David Lloyd who will not be able to attend Tanglewood this year because of illness.

Mr. McCollum sang in four concerts at Tanglewood in 1953 and was leading tenor in several of the school's major opera productions. While a student in 1954, he sang in Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet." Last summer he sang in Bach's B Minor Mass.

In Two Concerts

This summer Mr. Collum will be heard in place of Mr. Lloyd in Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" on July 15; and in Mozart's Mass in C Minor during the Koussevitsky Memorial Concert Aug. 4.

James Lucas will assume Mr. Lloyd's teaching duties as assistant coach on the Berkshire Music Center staff.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908
JUL 9 1956

Very Little Vacation For Boston Symphony

Orchestra Concludes Tanglewood Season Aug. 12; Sets Out for Extensive Tour of Europe, Including Soviet Russia, Aug. 14

Tanglewood, Lenox, July 9—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play 27 concerts in 13 countries during its 5½ week tour of Europe in August and September, Manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., announces.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, its music director for the past 7 years, the 106 players of the Boston Symphony will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival here on Aug. 12.

The first of two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on Friday evening, Aug. 24, followed by a matinee in Dublin the next day. Five concerts will be given at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, Aug. 26-30, then the symphony will visit Scandinavia for 4 days.

To Visit Russia

A highlight of the tour is the invitation, recently issued by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow and immediately accepted by the Board of Trustees of the orchestra, for the Boston Symphony to be the first American orchestra to perform in the U.S.S.R. During the 6 days, Sept. 5-10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, a pair of concerts will be given each in Leningrad and Moscow. The U.S.S.R. will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour, including transportation by air and train, and will also pay a stipend for the 4 concerts. It is expected the Russian government will fly the members of the orchestra, its staff and equipment from Helsinki to Leningrad, and from Moscow to its next date in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia.

Concerts subsequently will be performed in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres—the orchestra has been invited to play in the famous Cathedral—Leeds and London.

Extensive Tour

The itinerary follows: Cork, Ireland, Aug. 24; Dublin, Ireland, Aug. 25 (matinee); Edinburgh, Scotland, Aug. 26 through 30; Copenhagen, Denmark, Aug. 31; Oslo, Norway, Sept. 1; Stockholm, Sweden, Sept. 3; Helsinki, Finland, Sept. 4; Leningrad, U.S.S.R., Sept. 5 and 6; Moscow, U.S.S.R., Sept. 8 and 9; Prague, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 11; Vienna, Austria, Sept. 12; Stuttgart, Germany, Sept. 13; Munich, Germany, Sept. 14; Zurich, Switzerland, Sept. 16; Berne, Switzerland, Sept. 17; Paris, France, Sept. 19 and 20; Chartres, France, Sept. 21; Leeds, England, Sept. 23; London, England, Sept. 24 and 25.

Pierre Monteux, once regular music director of the Boston Symphony (1919-1924), has been invited by his friend and colleague, Dr. Munch, to conduct some 10 of the orchestra's 27 concerts abroad.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's tour of Europe is to be made in co-operation with the International Exchange Program of The American National Theatre and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the State Department to assist American performing artists to tour abroad, to help cover the cost of trans-Atlantic transportation by air, and to help defray deficits to the orchestra from concerts abroad.

Quick Change

The 6-week, 24 concert schedule of the Berkshire Festival which opened last week terminates on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12. On Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 14, a K.L.M. Royal Dutch Airlines chartered Super-Constellation will transport 79 persons from Logan Airport, Boston, to Shannon Airport, Ire. Some 40 persons will sail simultaneously, along with the orchestra's 16,000 pounds of instruments and scores and baggage, aboard the Nieuw Amsterdam, of the Holland-American Line, from Boston to Cobh, Ire. A 59-passenger K.L.M. Constellation will bring the rearguard of the orchestra to Ireland on Aug. 22. Included in total party will be a staff of 10, some dozen of members of the orchestra, and newspaper critics.

At the conclusion of the second London concert in Festival Hall on Sept. 25, two chartered planes again will fly the Boston Symphony's tour personnel across the Atlantic, and a special air freighter will return their equipment simultaneously for the opening of the orchestra's 76th season in Boston's Symphony Hall on Friday, Oct. 5.

7,300 Attend Tanglewood Opening Event

Lenox, Mass., July 9—The 19th annual pilgrimage of music lovers to their Mecca of symphonic music at Tanglewood here in the Berkshires today brought more than 2,200 for the concluding program of the first week of the season in the theater-concert hall. Almost 7,300 persons heard the concerts during the first week of the pre-shed programs which continue for another week before the entire Boston Symphony orchestra moves into the music shed with its opening concert July 20 with Charles Munch conducting.

Today's concert, with Lukas Foss conducting, also featured him as soloist in the Bach "Piano Concerto in D Minor." The young Mr. Foss delighted the audience which filled the theater-concert hall and overflowed on to the spacious lawns to the rear. The weather, turned nice after a heavy downpour at the conclusion of Saturday night's program which featured the Yale Glee Club, made for picnicking on the grounds and relaxed listening.

Three of the sections in today's program were heard here for the first time. Irving Fine's serious song, "Lament for String Orchestra," was short but evoked considerable comment. The composer was in the audience. "Divertimento" by Alexei Haieff was the second of the numbers heard here for the first time. The lullaby and finale were especially well received. "The Unanswered Question" by Charles Ives, who was born in Danbury, was a provocative number though its composer made it very brief.

The concert, which began at 2:30 p. m. with the playing of Haydn's "Symphony No. 86 in D major," brought one of the favorites to the enthusiastic Sunday audience. Mr. Foss as soloist concluded the program with the playing of Bach's "Piane Concerto in D Minor," showing that he has come a long way since we heard him in his earlier years with the orchestra.

Programs This Week

The programs this week will bring back Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String quartet on Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock playing the Mozart "Clarinet Quintet in A Major." Friday evening's program will include a program of Mozart music with Luboshutz and Nemenoff in a concerto for two pianos and these two artists together with Boris Goldovsky in the "Concerto in F Major for Three Pianos and Orchestra."

Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct an all-Bach program Saturday evening with William Kroll and Doriot Anthony Dwyer as soloists.

Sunday's program with Munch conducting Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" will feature the Festival Chorus under the direction of Hugh Ross, conductor. This program at 2:30 o'clock promises to be an event in musical history at Tanglewood which has written so many important pages into the volume of important musical performances in this country.

Concerts in the shed which draw from 7,000 to 15,000 persons for a performance will begin on July 20. They will continue for four weeks through Aug. 12 after which the orchestra will set forth for a European tour which will take it to many countries, including Russia. The itinerary will be announced in a few days.

S. M.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUL 9 1956

Chamber Music On Next Week's Tanglewood Slate

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, comprises an evening of chamber music by Haydn Mozart and Brahms, of the Boston Symphony String Quartet on Wednesday (July 11); and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 13 and 14) and Sunday afternoon (July 15). Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quintet, K-581, with the following principals of the Boston Symphony who comprise the B.S.O. String Quartet; Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola Samuel Mayes, cello.

Boris Goldovsky, the opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera Theatre who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his debut as conductor and piano soloist on a Berkshire Festival program. He will conduct the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos in one of which he will participate with duo pianists Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is piano soloist.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all-Bach concert (July 14).

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of Students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross. Soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David. Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

A special extra concert of modern chamber music, donated to the Berkshire Music Center by the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, will be held in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood on Monday, open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the orchestra's summer music school and to the general public.

MONDAY, JULY 9, 1956
CATSKILL DAILY MAIL

Summer Playhouses Offer Varied Fare

Area summer playhouses offer a varied fare this week, with music and dance thrown in for good measure.

"Tea and Sympathy," a moving study of adolescence, which was seen at Woodstock last week, will open tonight at the Spa Summer Theatre, Saratoga. Mary Fickett and other members of the Broadway cast will be featured.

"The Solid Gold Cadillac" is the week's attraction at the Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge, Mass., where Paula Trueman, who played the Josephine Hull role on Broadway, will take over in the same assignment, supported by Reynolds Evans, William Sharon, Bruce Hall, Gaye Jordan, Patricia Lamson, Jerry Vermilye and Elizabeth Walden.

"The Mouse Trap" will be Woodstock's gripping thriller for this week, Tuesday through Sunday. Originally presented as a broadcast entitled "Three Blind Mice," four years ago, this play by the famed master of detective fiction, Agatha Christie, features Bill Berger in the role of Detective Sergeant Trotter, with a good supporting cast.

"The Desperate Hours" opens Tuesday night at the Malden Bridge Playhouse, Paul Bressoud, the managing director and producer playing the role which Humphrey Bogart portrayed in the movie version. The play runs through Sunday night.

The first anniversary year at the Arena Theatre at New York State Teachers College, Albany, opens Wednesday evening with "They Knew What They Wanted."

Berkshire Music Festival goes into its second week on Wednesday night with a concert featuring Benny Goodman, clarinetist, and the Boston Symphony String Quartet. On Friday night, the world famous piano duo Luboschutz and Nemenoff and Boris Goldovsky will be soloists. Saturday afternoon, William Kroll, Woodstock violinist, of the Kroll String Quartet, will be featured artist. Bach's "Passion According to St. John is Sunday.

At Jacob's Pillow, near Lee, Mass., Ted Shawn's Dance Festival will feature Ballet Theatre stars in matinees at 4 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday, evenings at 8 Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 9 1956

First Week-End Concerts At Tanglewood Draw 5,200

The first two week-end concerts of the Berkshire Music festival attracted some 5,200 people to the theater concert hall at Tanglewood in Lenox.

Saturday Night

The Saturday night program included two works by Mozart, the Symphony in D major, K. 385, and the Sinfonia Concertante, and two pieces by contemporary composers, "The Military Mass" by Martinu and "A Thanksgiving Psalm" by Cowell. Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, conducted the first part of the concert. The second half, featuring the Yale Glee club, was under the direction of Hugh Ross.

Yesterday afternoon the program again blended old and new works. Heard were Haydn's Symphony No. 86 in D major, Fine's "Serious Song" for strings, Haieff's "Divertimento," "The Unanswered Question" by Ives, and the Piano Concerto in D minor by Bach. Lukas Foss, a former student at the Berkshire Music center, conducted the program and was also soloist in the Bach selection.

Wednesday Concert

The next festival concert will be Wednesday evening at the theater-concert hall, when the Boston Symphony String Quartet will give the second in a series of six weekly chamber music programs. Works to be heard are Bartok's String Quartet No. 6, Mozart's Clarinet Quintet and Brahms String Quintet in G major. Benny Goodman will appear as soloist in the Mozart Clarinet piece.

The second and final week-end of the Bach-Mozart concerts will be held in the theater-concert hall Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

First Week of Festival Events Draws 10,143 to Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD—The four public concerts and two student events held here during the first week of the 1956 Berkshire Festival drew crowds totaling 10,143.

Behind Last Year

Attendance was slightly behind last year's first week for the four public events, despite the large crowd that turned out Friday evening in the rain to hear Benny Goodman perform as soloist with the Boston Symphohy Chamber Orchestra.

Total attendance for the four public concerts was 8,318. Yesterday afternoon 2,167 heard Lukas Foss as soloist and conductor and Saturday evening 3,000 persons were on hand to hear the BSO and Yale Glee Club, with Dr. Charles Munch and Hugh Ross sharing the podium.

Fromm Concert Tonight

Tonight at 8:30 a special extra concert of modern chamber music, donated to the Berkshire Music Center by the Fromm Music Foundation, will be held in the Theater-Concert Hall. The concert is open on a nonreserved seat basis to the Friends of the Music Center and to the general public.

Wednesday evening's chamber music program will feature Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet. Three concerts by a chamber orchestra of the BSO will be given Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon. The all-Mozart program on Friday will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz. Dr. Munch will conduct the all-Bach programs Saturday night and Sunday afternoon.

The jazz clarinetist, Benny Goodman, who made his debut with the BSO last Friday, is donating his services Wednesday night to the Music Center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quintet K.581 with the following principals of the orchestra: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph dePasquale, viola, and Samuel Mayes, cello.

Goldovsky in Debut

Mr. Goldovsky, the well-known opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera Theater, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his debut as a conductor and piano soloist on a Festival program Friday night. He will conduct the chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo pianists Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is a piano soloist. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have not appeared at a Festival concert since 1950.

[26]

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908
JUL 9 1956

Very Little Vacation For Boston Symphony

Orchestra Concludes Tanglewood Season Aug. 12; Sets Out for Extensive Tour of Europe, Including Soviet Russia, Aug. 14

Tanglewood, Lenox, July 9 - The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play 27 concerts in 13 countries during its 5½ week tour of Europe in August and September, Manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., announces.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, its music director for the past 7 years, the 106 players of the Boston Symphony will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival here on Aug. 12.

The first of two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on Friday evening, Aug. 24, followed by a matinee in Dublin the next day. Five concerts will be given at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, Aug. 26-30, then the symphony will visit Scandinavia for 4 days.

To Visit Russia

A highlight of the tour is the invitation, recently issued by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow and immediately accepted by the Board of Trustees of the orchestra, for the Boston Symphony to be the first American orchestra to perform in the U.S.S.R. During the 6 days, Sept. 5-10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, a pair of concerts will be given each in Leningrad and Moscow. The U.S.S.R. will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour, including transportation by air and train, and will also pay a stipend for the 4 concerts. It is expected the Russian government will fly the members of the orchestra, its staff and equipment from Helsinki to Leningrad, and from Moscow to its next date in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia.

Concerts subsequently will be performed in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres—the orchestra has been invited to play in the famous Cathedral—Leeds and London.

Extensive Tour

The itinerary follows: Cork, Ireland Aug. 24; Dublin, Ireland, Aug. 25 (matinee); Edinburgh, Scotland, Aug. 26 through 30; Copenhagen, Denmark, Aug. 31; Oslo, Norway, Sept. 1; Stockholm, Sweden, Sept. 3; Helsinki, Finland, Sept. 4; Leningrad, U.S.S.R., Sept. 5 and 6; Moscow, U.S.S.R., Sept. 8 and 9; Prague, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 11; Vienna, Austria, Sept. 12; Stuttgart, Germany, Sept. 13; Munich, Germany, Sept. 14; Zurich, Switzerland, Sept. 16; Berne, Switzerland, Sept. 17; Paris, France, Sept. 19 and 20; Chartres, France, Sept. 21; Leeds, England, Sept. 23; London, England, Sept. 24 and 25.

Pierre Monteux, once regular music director of the Boston Symphony (1919-1924), has been invited by his friend and colleague, Dr. Munch, to conduct some 10 of the orchestra's 27 concerts abroad.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's tour of Europe is to be made in co-operation with the International Exchange Program of The American National Theatre and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the State Department to assist American performing artists to tour abroad, to help cover the cost of trans-Atlantic transportation by air, and to help defray deficits to the orchestra from concerts abroad.

Quick Change

The 6-week, 24 concert schedule of the Berkshire Festival which opened last week terminates on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12. On Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 14, a K.L.M. Royal Dutch Airlines chartered Super-Constellation will transport 79 persons from Logan Airport, Boston, to Shannon Airport, Ire. Some 40 persons will sail simultaneously, along with the orchestra's 16,000 pounds of instruments and scores and baggage, aboard the Nieuw Amsterdam, of the Holland-America Line, from Boston to Cobh, Ire. A 59-passenger K.L.M. Constellation will bring the rearguard of the orchestra to Ireland on Aug. 22. Included in total party will be a staff of 10, some wives of members of the orchestra, and newspaper critics.

At the conclusion of the second London concert in Festival Hall on Sept. 25, two chartered planes again will fly the Boston Symphony's tour personnel across the Atlantic, and a special air freighter will return their equipment simultaneously for the opening of the orchestra's 76th season in Boston's Symphony Hall on Friday, Oct. 5.

Mon - July 9 - 1956 Waltham News-Tribune

7,300 Attend Tanglewood Opening Event

Lenox, Mass., July 9—The 19th annual pilgrimage of music lovers to their Mecca of symphonic music at Tanglewood here in the Berkshires today brought more than 2,200 for the concluding program of the first week of the season in the theater-concert hall. Almost 7,300 persons heard the concerts during the first week of the pre-shed programs which continue for another week before the entire Boston Symphony orchestra moves into the music shed with its opening concert July 20 with Charles Munch conducting.

Today's concert, with Lukas Foss conducting, also featured him as soloist in the Bach "Piano Concerto in D Minor." The young Mr. Foss delighted the audience which filled the theater-concert hall and overflowed on to the spacious lawns to the rear. The weather, turned nice after a heavy downpour at the conclusion of Saturday night's program which featured the Yale Glee Club, made for picnicking on the grounds and relaxed listening.

Three of the sections in today's program were heard here for the first time. Irving Fine's serious song, "Lament for String Orchestra," was short but evoked considerable comment. The composer was in the audience. "Divertimento" by Alexei Haieff was the second of the numbers heard here for the first time. The lullaby and finale were especially well received. "The Unanswered Question" by Charles Ives, who was born in Danbury, was a provocative number though its composer made it very brief.

The concert, which began at 2:30 p. m. with the playing of Haydn's "Symphony No. 86 in D major," brought one of the favorites to the enthusiastic Sunday audience. Mr. Foss as soloist concluded the program with the playing of Bach's "Piano Concerto in D Minor," showing that he has come a long way since we heard him in his earlier years with the orchestra.

Programs This Week

The programs this week will bring back Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String quartet on Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock playing the Mozart "Clarinet Quintet in A Major." Friday evening's program will include a program of Mozart music with Luboshutz and Nemenoff in a concerto for two pianos and these two artists together with Boris Goldovsky in the "Concerto in F Major for Three Pianos and Orchestra."

Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct an all-Bach program Saturday evening with William Kroll and Doriot Anthony Dwyer as soloists.

Sunday's program with Munch conducting Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" will feature the Festival Chorus under the direction of Hugh Ross, conductor. This program at 2:30 o'clock promises to be an event in musical history at Tanglewood which has written so many important pages into the volume of important musical performances in this country.

Concerts in the shed which draw from 7,000 to 15,000 persons for a performance will begin on July 20. They will continue for four weeks through Aug. 12 after which the orchestra will set forth for a European tour which will take it to many countries, including Russia. The itinerary will be announced in a few days.

S. M.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUL 9 1956

Chamber Music On Next Week's Tanglewood Slate

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, comprises an evening of chamber music by Haydn Mozart and Brahms, of the Boston Symphony String Quartet on Wednesday (July 11); and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 13 and 14) and Sunday afternoon (July 15). Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quintet, K-581, with the following principals of the Boston Symphony who comprise the B.S.O. String Quartet; Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola Samuel Mayes, cello.

Boris Goldovsky, the opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera Theatre who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his debut as conductor and piano soloist on a Berkshire Festival program. He will conduct the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo pianists Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is piano soloist.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all-Bach concert (July 14).

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of Students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross. Soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

A special extra concert of modern chamber music,, donated to the Berkshire Music Center by the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, will be held in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood on Monday, open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the orchestra's summer music school and to the general public.

MONDAY, JULY 9, 1956
CATSKILL DAILY MAIL

Summer Playhouses Offer Varied Fare

Area summer playhouses offer a varied fare this week, with music and dance thrown in for good measure.

"Tea and Sympathy," a moving study of adolescence, which was seen at Woodstock last week, will open tonight at the Spa Summer Theatre, Saratoga. Mary Fickett and other members of the Broadway cast will be featured.

"The Solid Gold Cadillac" is the week's attraction at the Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge, Mass., where Paula Trueman, who played the Josephine Hull role on Broadway, will take over in the same assignment, supported by Reynolds Evans, William Sharon, Bruce Hall, Gaye Jordan, Patricia Lamson, Jerry Vermilye and Elizabeth Walden.

"The Mouse Trap" will be Woodstock's gripping thriller for this week, Tuesday through Sunday. Originally presented as a broadcast entitled "Three Blind Mice," four years ago, this play by the famed master of detective fiction, Agatha Christie, features Bil Berger in the role of Detective Sergeant Trotter, with a good supporting cast.

"The Desperate Hours" opens Tuesday night at the Malden Bridge Playhouse, Paul Bressoud, the managing director and producer playing the role which Humphrey Bogart portrayed in the movie version. The play runs through Sunday night.

The fifth anniversary year at the Arena Theatre at New York State Teachers College, Albany, opens Wednesday evening with "They Knew What They Wanted."

Berkshire Music Festival goes into its second week on Wednesday night with a concert featuring Benny Goodman, clarinetist and the Boston Symphony String Quartet. On Friday night, the world famous piano duo Luboschutz and Nemenoff and Boris Goldovsky will be soloists. Saturday afternoon, William Kroll, Woodstock violinist, of the Kroll String Quartet, will be featured artist. Bach's Passion According to St. John is Sunday.

At Jacob's Pillow, near Lee, Mass., Ted Shawn's Dance Festival will feature Ballet Theatre stars matinees at 4 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday, evenings at 9 Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 9 1956

First Week-End Concerts At Tanglewood Draw 5,200

The first two week-end concerts of the Berkshire Music festival attracted some 5,200 people to the theater concert hall at Tanglewood in Lenox.

Saturday Night

The Saturday night program included two works by Mozart, the Symphony in D major, K. 385, and the Sinfonia Concertante, and two pieces by contemporary composers, "The Military Mass" by Martinu and "A Thanksgiving Psalm" by Cowell. Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, conducted the first part of the concert. The second half, featuring the Yale Glee club, was under the direction of Hugh Ross.

Yesterday afternoon the program again blended old and new works. Heard were Haydn's Symphony No. 86 in D major, Fine's "Serious Song" for strings, Haieff's "Divertimento," "The Unanswered Question" by Ives, and the Piano Concerto in D minor by Bach. Lukas Foss, a former student at the Berkshire Music center, conducted the program and was also soloist in the Bach selection.

Wednesday Concert

The next festival concert will be Wednesday evening at the theater-concert hall, when the Boston Symphony String Quartet will give the second in a series of six weekly chamber music programs. Works to be heard are Bartok's String Quartet No. 6, Mozart's Clarinet Quintet and Brahm's String Quintet in G major. Benny Goodman will appear as soloist in the Mozart Clarinet piece.

The second and final week-end of the Bach-Mozart concerts will be held in the theater-concert hall Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

The Berkshire Eagle, Monday, July 9, 1956—19

First Week of Festival Events Draws 10,143 to Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD—The four public concerts and two student events held here during the first week of the 1956 Berkshire Festival drew crowds totaling 10,143.

Behind Last Year

Attendance was slightly behind last year's first week for the four public events, despite the large crowd that turned out Friday evening in the rain to hear Benny Goodman perform as soloist with the Boston Symphohy Chamber Orchestra.

Total attendance for the four public concerts was 8,318. Yesterday afternoon 2,167 heard Lukas Foss as soloist and conductor and Saturday evening 3,000 persons were on hand to hear the BSO and Yale Glee Club, with Dr. Charles Munch and Hugh Ross sharing the podium.

Fromm Concert Tonight

Tonight at 8:30 a special extra concert of modern chamber music, donated to the Berkshire Music Center by the Fromm Music Foundation, will be held in the Theater-Concert Hall. The concert is open on a nonreserved seat basis to the Friends of the Music Center and to the general public.

Wednesday evening's chamber music program will feature Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet. Three concerts by a chamber orchestra of the BSO will be given Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon. The all-Mozart program on Friday will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz. Dr. Munch will conduct the all-Bach programs Saturday night and Sunday afternoon.

The jazz clarinetist, Benny Goodman, who made his debut with the BSO last Friday, is donating his services Wednesday night to the Music Center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quintet K.581 with the following principals of the orchestra: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph dePasquale, viola, and Samuel Mayes, cello.

Goldovsky in Debut

Mr. Goldovsky, the well-known opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera Theater, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his debut as a conductor and piano soloist on a Festival program Friday night. He will conduct the chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo pianists Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is a piano soloist. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have not appeared at a Festival concert since 1950.

---

[26]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUL 9 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 9 1956

Tanglewood Season Open

6-56

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in its 19th summer of music in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the 17th in which the orchestra has participated under the direction of Charles Munch. The 1956 season of 24 concerts extends for six weeks, opening on July 4 and continuing thru Aug. 19

Mozart, Martinu, and Cowell Heard at Berkshire Festiva

By Jules Wolffers

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

If a forecast can be based on the opening concerts of the Berkshire Festival, the summer programs of the Boston Symphony Orchestra promise to be as rich in variety and interest as was its recently concluded 75th anniversary season in Boston.

The opening orchestral concert Friday evening at the Theater-Concert Hall brought Charles Munch to the podium for a Mozart program. Like previous Mozart readings from the conductor, the Symphony in G minor, K. 550, and the "Prague" Symphony in D major were interpreted with a zest, imagination, and enthusiasm that brought out all the sparkle of the felicitous music.

Mr. Munch quite correctly interprets Mozart with considerable flexibility of tempo, letting the mood and the melodic lines dictate subtle accelerandos and slight ritardandos. Such a style creates and maintains the listener's interest.

But even a good thing can be overdone. At times one felt the music to be almost too urgent, even restless. Perhaps the introduction of a few more plateaus of even pulsation might add more stability to the work and make the conductor's unrivaled rubato even more effective.

Between the two symphonies came the Concerto for Clarinet in A major, the last concerto Mozart wrote. Benny Goodman was the soloist, and if conscientiousness and competence were the only qualities needed for Mozart, this would certainly have been a signal occasion.

As it was, the performance was clear and straightforward, with an exceedingly steady beat. But this was not quite the kind of rendition one might expect from a distinguished soloist.

Mr. Munch started the Saturday evening program with more Mozart—the "Haffner" Symphony and the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn, and Bassoon, K. 279b. Both are delightful, and both were done in charming style, with Mr. Munch's deft hands weaving the excellent playing of the quartet of soloists into the orchestral ensemble.

After the intermission Hugh Ross took over to conduct Martinu's Military Mass for men's chorus, baritone, and orchestra, and the first performance of the very recent "A Thanksgiving Psalm from the Dead Sea Scrolls" for men's chorus and orchestra by Henr Cowell.

Martinu originally intende his "La Messe aux Champ d'Honneur" to be an out-o door work in honor of the vo unteer Czech troops raised i France during 1940.

Given such a challengin theme, the incompatibility the brassy, percussive orches tral music—set off against th Lord's Prayer, selections fro the Psalms and verse by th Czech poet, Jiri—becomes ur derstandable. If one can reconciled to the incongruity such opposed treatment, th music establishes itself as ex ceedingly powerful and com pelling.

* * *

The orchestral sections a exciting and thrilling, a ver table call to arms, and th vocal sections are reverential touching. Mr. Ross set forth th strange but powerful work wi conviction and energy. The Ya Glee Club sang well, and Ma Morgan was splendid in th solos.

Mr. Cowell's piece showed th composer divested of his ex perimentation and folksines Instead we were given a ser ous and lofty work which pro vided an appropriate framewor for an English translation the post-Biblical thanksgivin psalms found in the much dis cussed scrolls.

There are a few parts in M Cowell's treatment which la somewhat, and the mood is no uniformly kept. Perhaps th composer may wish to do som revision in order to maintai the high level shown in mos of this timely and interestin work.

The final program of th weekend brought Lukas Foss a conductor and pianist for large Sunday afternoon audi ence. One clearly sensed th conductor's intentions in th opening work, the Haydn Sym phony No. 86 in D major—bu the rapport between leader an players was not sufficiently strong to give the sturdy work enough character, firmness, an contrast.

Irving Fine's Serious Song Lament for String Orchestra i a beautiful work which clearly shows the composer's romanti style tempered by good taste judgment, and a fine feeling fo extended singing lines.

Alexei Haieff's Divertimento made up of five little pieces (three of them originally writ ten for piano), is difficult t take quite seriously, so sligh are the thoughts and the means

Berkshire Eagle, Wednesday, July 11, 1956

BENNY GOODMAN, the jazz clarinetist, and the Boston Symphony String Quartet rehearse this morning at Tanglewood for their concert tonight at 8:30 in the Theater Concert Hall. Mr. Goodman, at right, will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quintet with these principals of the BSO: Left to right, Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola, and Samuel Mayes, cello.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

JUL 9 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

JUL 9 1956

Tanglewood Season Open

6-56

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in its 19th summer of music in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the 17th in which the orchestra has participated under the direction of Charles Munch. The 1956 season of 24 concerts extends for six weeks, opening on July 4 and continuing thru Aug. 12

Mozart, Martinu, and Cowell Heard at Berkshire Festiva

By Jules Wolffers

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

If a forecast can be based on the opening concerts of the Berkshire Festival, the summer programs of the Boston Symphony Orchestra promise to be as rich in variety and interest as was its recently concluded 75th anniversary season in Boston.

The opening orchestral concert Friday evening at the Theater-Concert Hall brought Charles Munch to the podium for a Mozart program. Like previous Mozart readings from the conductor, the Symphony in G minor, K. 550, and the "Prague" Symphony in D major were interpreted with a zest, imagination, and enthusiasm that brought out all the sparkle of the felicitous music.

Mr. Munch quite correctly interprets Mozart with considerable flexibility of tempo, letting the mood and the melodic lines dictate subtle accelerandos and slight ritardandos. Such a style creates and maintains the listener's interest.

But even a good thing can be overdone. At times one felt the music to be almost too urgent, even restless. Perhaps the introduction of a few more plateaus of even pulsation might add more stability to the work and make the conductor's unrivaled rubato even more effective.

Between the two symphonies came the Concerto for Clarinet in A major, the last concerto Mozart wrote. Benny Goodman was the soloist, and if conscientiousness and competence were the only qualities needed for Mozart, this would certainly have been a signal occasion.

As it was, the performance was clear and straightforward, with an exceedingly steady beat. But this was not quite the kind of rendition one might expect from a distinguished soloist.

* * *

Mr. Munch started the Saturday evening program with more Mozart—the "Haffner" Symphony and the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn, and Bassoon, K. 279b. Both are delightful, and both were done in charming style, with Mr. Munch's deft hands weaving the excellent playing of the quartet of soloists into the orchestral ensemble.

After the intermission Hugh Ross took over to conduct Martinů's Military Mass for men's chorus, baritone, and orchestra, and the first performance of the very recent "A Thanksgiving Psalm from the Dead Sea Scrolls" for men's chorus and orchestra by Henr Cowell.

Martinů originally intende his "La Messe aux Champ d'Honneur" to be an out-o door work in honor of the vo unteer Czech troops raised i France during 1940.

Given such a challengin theme, the incompatibility the brassy, percussive orches tral music—set off against th Lord's Prayer, selections fro the Psalms and verse by th Czech poet, Jiri—becomes ur derstandable. If one can b reconciled to the incongruity such opposed treatment, th music establishes itself as ex ceedingly powerful and com pelling.

* * *

The orchestral sections a exciting and thrilling, a ver table call to arms, and th vocal sections are reverential touching. Mr. Ross set forth th strange but powerful work wi conviction and energy. The Ya Glee Club sang well, and M Morgan was splendid in th solos.

Mr. Cowell's piece showed th composer divested of his ex perimentation and folksines Instead we were given a ser ous and lofty work which pr vided an appropriate framewor for an English translation the post-Biblical thanksgivin psalms found in the much dis cussed scrolls.

There are a few parts in M Cowell's treatment which la somewhat, and the mood is no uniformly kept. Perhaps th composer may wish to do som revision in order to maintai the high level shown in mos of this timely and interestin work.

The final program of th weekend brought Lukas Foss a conductor and pianist for large Sunday afternoon audi ence. One clearly sensed th conductor's intentions in th opening work, the Haydn Sym phony No. 86 in D major—bu the rapport between leader an players was not sufficientl strong to give the sturdy wor enough character, firmness, an contrast.

Irving Fine's Serious Song Lament for String Orchestra i a beautiful work which clearl shows the composer's romanti style tempered by good taste judgment, and a fine feeling fo extended singing lines.

Alexei Haieff's Divertimento made up of five little piece (three of them originally writ ten for piano), is difficult t take quite seriously, so sligh are the thoughts and the means

BENNY GOODMAN, the jazz clarinetist, and the Boston Symphony String Quartet rehearse this morning at Tanglewood for their concert tonight at 8:30 in the Theater Concert Hall. Mr. Goodman, at right, will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quintet with these principals of the BSO: Left to right, Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola, and Samuel Mayes, cello.

TIGHT BINDING

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, MONDAY, JULY 9, 1956

4th in Festival's First Week

Foss Conducts Berkshire Concert

By Robert Bagar

LENOX, Mass., July 8.—The fourth program in the Berkshire Festival's first week of the summer season took place this afternoon in the theater-concert hall. The conductor was Lukas Foss, a young man of many musical talents, who had scheduled five works—Haydn's Symphony No. 86, in D Major, Irving Fine's "Serious Song: Lament for String Orchestra" Alexei Haieff's Divertimento; Charles Ives' "The Unanswered Question," and Bach's piano concerto in D Minor, in which Mr. Foss played the solo part, besides conducting.

It was an interesting afternoon of music, generally well performed, which seemed to please the 2,167 listeners no end.

Three of the works were especially treasured by this reporter. They were the Fine, the Haieff and the Ives. Though the first violins occasionally screeched unwarrantedly in some passages in alt during the rendering of the "Serious Song," it took little away from the excellent, most expressive performance given it. The composer managed to sustain the melodic line of his work through orchestral complexities without number, besides constantly intensifying deep emotional feeling.

The Haiff, a consciously witty set of five brief tableaux, is beautifully orchestrated, lively and remarkably effective in the lightness of its nature, the charm that exudes all through it. As for the Ives, which serves a noble purpose also as score for a balanchine ballet, it is positively arresting, in the modernity of its idiom and in the rare freshness of its musical thought.

The Haydn symphony got a clean, though uninspired reading. Mr. Foss had some extra energy to give it, apparently, which it could have done without. The concerto, proving no stumbling block to the soloist-conductor, was delivered in full Bachian regalia even in its tempos, bright, sunny and most entertaining.

Last night in the same auditorium Charles Munch conducted the orchestra through a marvelously delicate, warm and musically adroit account of the Mozart Sinfonia Concertante in E Flat, for clarinet, horn, bassoon, with orchestra, K. 297 B. The soloists, all excellent fettle, were Ralph Gomberg, Oboe; Cino Ciofli, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn, and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

Also programmed were Bohuslav Martinu's "Military Mass," for men's chorus and orchestra, and the first performance of Henry Cowell's "A Thanksgiving Psalm from 'The Dead Sea Scrolls'."

Regrettably, neither of these compositions had much to offer expressively. Apart from some passages of moving sentiment in the Martinu, the music lagged woefully in the middle. The composer used as text lines from the Psalms, as well as the Czech poet Jiri Mucha. Nor did the Cowell present anything that was fascinating to the mental ear or to the senses. Hugh Ross conducted both works, and one couldn't say his rendering were letter-perfect. The Yale Glee Club could rarely be heard nor—when it could—did the articulation of the text (from the Thanksgiving Psalms translated into English—from the Aramaic—by Millar Burrows) amount to much. The opening piece was the Mozart "Haffner" Symphony, also conducted by Mr. Munch.

14-Mon., July 9, 1956 ★ New York Journal-American

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL:

Foss Features Modern Music

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 9.—Lukas Foss featured three fine examples of modern music in the Berkshire Festival program he conducted with the Boston Symphony Chamber group in the theatre-concert hall yesterday afternoon.

Set within a framework of Haydn and Bach, they made the concert as provocative as the older masters made it satisfying.

A beautifully sustained piece of melodic writing gave character to Irving Fine's "Serious Song: Lament for String Orchestra." Commissioned by the Louisville Orchestra, it should rank as one of the project's more successful shorter pieces.

The performance marked the first time one of Fine's works had been played by the Boston Symphony. He has been a faculty member of the Berkshire Music Center since 1947.

Alexei Haiff's "Divertimento" proved as excellent an expression of its title as one might ask in the contemporary idiom.

It has wit, flavor, and style. The orchestration is spicy, its syncopation welcome, its general good spirits delightful, all of which the performance highlighted persuasively.

Takes Dual Role

Charles Ives' "The Unanswered Question" may be almost a half century old, but it remains one of the most original of contemporary works. It found the audience questioning but nevertheless drawn to its mystic concept. One is most grateful to Foss for giving interest in it.

That Foss did much for these scores was obvious. He is a meticulous conductor, keenly concerned with clean-cut performance. This he achieved throughout the afternoon from Haydn's Symphony No. 86 through the Bach concerto in D Minor in which he doubled as piano soloist.

At the moment he appears a better pianist than conductor, technically most adept in both fields. As his playing in the Bach was sculptured with fingers of steel, so his Haydn was finely chiseled in performance.

2,167 at Concert

Perhaps a little less vigor and bounce would result in more-rounded interpretations. with his throbbing rhythmic pulse he did attain a special kind of exhilaration in the fast movements of the Bach which gave the audience a thrill. Haydn did not yield so agreeably to this approach.

The concert drew 2,167 people. This was considerably less than the 3,990 who attended the Saturday night program conducted by Charles Munch and Hugh Ross. The weather was fine for both events.

Mozart's "Haffner" symphony and "Sinfonia Concertante" K. 297 fell to Munch; Martinu's "Military Mass" and the first performance of Cowell's "A Thanksgiving Psalm from The Dead Sea Scrolls" comprised Ross's assignment.

The men's choruses were sung by the Yale Glee Club.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908
JUL 10 1956

YWCA TO SPONSOR TANGLEWOOD TRIP

Sunday afternoon, the 22d, at 2 the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Pierre Monteux will perform Rossini's "Overture to L'Italiana in Algeri," Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra" and Schubert's "Symphony No. 7 in C Major."

The YWCA is sponsoring a trip to this performance. A bus will leave the YWCA at 11 that Sunday and will arrive at Tanglewood in time for lunch and a tour of the grounds before the afternoon program. Anyone who is interested in going to Tanglewood with the YWCA may make reservations by calling the "YW."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 10 1956

Goodman Will Return To Tanglewood Stage On Wednesday Night

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, comprises an evening of chamber music by Haydn, Mozart and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman, jazz clarinetist, and the Boston symphony string quartet on Wednesday and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on Saturday and Sunday. The all-Mozart concert Friday will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

Donating Services

Goodman, who made his debut with the Boston symphony and at its Berkshire festival concerts last Friday, is donating his services in Wednesday's concert to the Boston symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet quintet, K. 581, with the following principals of the Boston symphony who comprise the B.S.O. string quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

Boris Goldovsky, the opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera theater who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his d but as conductor and piano soloist on the festival program Friday evening. He will conduct the Boston symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo pianists Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is piano soloist. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have not appeared at a festival concert since 1950.

Saturday Soloists

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston symphony orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all-Bach concert Saturday evening. Both teach chamber music at the Berkshire Music center.

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the festival chorus of students of the Berkshire Music center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross. Soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. All are former students of the Berkshire Music center.

Tanglewood for uintet with these el Mayes, cello.

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., MONDAY, JULY 9, 19

FOSS CONDUCTS, PLAYS SUPERBLY AT TANGLEWOOD

Youthful Musician, Chamber Orchestra Given Acclaim

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 8 — Fair weather and an attractive, diversified program drew 2167 people to Tanglewood this afternoon and what they heard was worth coming far to hear. The afternoon was a personal triumph for youthful Lukas Foss who appeared both as conductor and pianist. It was also a triumph for the 37 members of the chamber orchestra and for such contemporary composers as Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and the legendary American composer Charles Ives. Haydn and Bach also had their innings.

Former Student

Lukas Foss, born in 1922, was a student at the music center in 1940. He is a member of the composition faculty this summer.

Foss Conducts

Continued From Page 1

During past seasons he has appeared frequently as pianist and conductor and this year will appear as composer when his opera "Griffelkin" receives its first stage performance here.

The program opened with a well adjusted reading of Haydn's "Symphony No. 86 in D Major." Mr. Foss is rhythmically sensitive and not averse to squeezing the last drop of sentiment out of slow movements.

It was in contemporary music that he seemed to be most at ease, as far as conducting was concerned. Irving Fine's "Lament for string orchestra" is a well written piece of music, but it did not seem particularly communicative.

The composer was on hand to receive the congratulations of the audience.

Quite different was the vital and communicative "Divertimento" of Alexei Haieff. Its five movements are each individual in character; each is imaginative and a foil to the one before it. In fact, here is music that would fit in nicely in a pop concert or a program of more serious proportions.

Charles Ives wrote "The Unanswered Question" in 1906. It was not published until 1953. The music of this almost legendary composer who died in 1954 has been woefully neglected but when one composition does see the light of day, its audience impact is tremendous. So it was this afternoon. "The Unanswered Question" is scored for a small chamber orchestra, which is a wood wind quartet, a trumpet. Mr. Voisin was at his magnificent best in the trumpet part and was signaled out for special congratulations. This is a sort of work which it seems, to this listener, should be heard many times.

Final Work Magnificent

The final work brought Bach, Foss and the orchestra together in a magnificent performance of Bach's "Piano Concerto in D Minor." To our mind, Foss is a pianist of superior attainments. His playing of Mozart is as fine as any we remember. Conducting from the piano, he received perfect collaboration from the orchestra. He provided a sturdy, forthright reading, rich in color and delightfully subtle in the adagio movement. There were moments of sentimental emphasis, but it was in good taste, as is everything this young man does.

The first of the week-end concerts have drawn 7218 people to Tanglewood. The first chamber music concert drew 1100. The student chamber music concert this morning attracted 425 people which brings the first week's total audience to the impressive number of 10,133.

Tomorrow night the first of the Fromm Foundation concerts of modern chamber music will be given. There will be two of these during the season. The chamber music concert on Wednesday night will be given by the Boston Symphony string quartet, consisting of Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola and Samuel Mayes, cello. Benny Goodman will join the quartet in Mozart's "Clarinet quintet in A Major."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Press (e)
BRISTOL, Conn.
Independent Republican
Circ. 12,670
JUL 9 1956

Mozart's Works Friday, Bach Sat. At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass.—Learn how the magic of music can bring relaxation you never dreamed of by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood this weekend, July 13-14-15.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the Berkshire Music Festival has been described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time", and every visit to the scenic and enchanting Tanglewood estate in Lenox is a memorable one.

On Friday, July 13, at 3:30 p.m., the Festival Chamber Orchestra will play a selection of Mozart's works, while the following evening a night of Bach is scheduled. On Sunday at 2:30, the Chamber Orchestra will perform Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" with chorus and soloists.

Tanglewood in Lenox, is located in the heart of the beautiful Berkshires, one of Massachusetts' most scenic playgrounds. Plan to spend the entire weekend touring this natural wonderland and enjoy the many facilities for swimming, boating, hiking and picnicking.

Lenox is located on Route 7, just south of Pittsfield. Main east-west routes 2-9, and 20 all connect with Route 7.

[28]

TIGHT BINDING

RINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., MONDAY, JULY 9, 19

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

JUL 1 0 1956

Goodman Will Return To Tanglewood Stage On Wednesday Night

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, comprises an evening of chamber music by Haydn, Mozart and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman, jazz clarinetist, and the Boston symphony string quartet on Wednesday and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on Saturday and Sunday. The all-Mozart concert Friday will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

Donating Services

Goodman, who made his debut with the Boston symphony and at its Berkshire festival concerts last Friday, is donating his services in Wednesday's concert to the Boston symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet quintet, K. 581, with the following principals of the Boston symphony who comprise the B.S.O. string quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

Boris Goldovsky, the opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera theater who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his d but as conductor and piano soloist on the festival program Friday evening. He will conduct the Boston symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo pianists Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is piano soloist. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have not appeared at a festival concert since 1950.

Saturday Soloists

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston symphony orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all-Bach concert Saturday evening. Both teach chamber music at the Berkshire Music center.

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the festival chorus of students of the Berkshire Music center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross. Soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. All are former students of the Berkshire Music center.

Tanglewood for uintet with these el Mayes, cello.

FOSS CONDUCTS, PLAYS SUPERBLY AT TANGLEWOOD

Youthful Muscian, Chamber Orchestra Given Acclaim

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 8 — Fair weather and an attractive, diversified program drew 2167 people to Tanglewood this afternoon and what they heard was worth coming far to hear. The afternoon was a personal triumph for youthful Lukas Foss who appeared both as conductor and pianist. It was also a triumph for the 37 members of the chamber orchestra and for such contemporary composers as Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and the legendary American composer Charles Ives. Haydn and Bach also had their innings.

Former Student

Lukas Foss, born in 1922, was a student at the music center in 1940. He is a member of the composition faculty this summer.

Foss Conducts

Continued From Page 1

During past seasons he has appeared frequently as pianist and conductor and this year will appear as composer when his opera "Griffelkin" receives its first stage performance here.

The program opened with a well adjusted reading of Haydn's "Symphony No. 86 in D Major." Mr. Foss is rhythmically sensitive and not averse to squeezing the last drop of sentiment out of slow movements.

It was in contemporary music that he seemed to be most at ease, as far as conducting was concerned. Irving Fine's "Lament for string orchestra" is a well written piece of music, but it did not seem particularly communicative.

The composer was on hand to receive the congratulations of the audience.

Quite different was the vital and communicative "Divertimento" of Alexei Haieff. Its five movements are each individual in character; each is imaginative and a foil to the one before it. In fact, here is music that would fit in nicely in a pop concert or a program of more serious proportions.

Charles Ives wrote "The Unanswered Question" in 1906. It was not published until 1953. The music of this almost legendary composer who died in 1954 has been woefully neglected but when one composition does see the light of day, its audience impact is tremendous. So it was this afternoon. "The Unanswered Question" is scored for a small chamber orchestra, which is a wood wind quartet, a trumpet. Mr. Voisin was at his magnificent best in the trumpet part and was signaled out for special congratulations. This is a sort of work which it seems, to this listener, should be heard many times.

Final Work Magnificent

The final work brought Bach, Foss and the orchestra together in a magnificent performance of Bach's "Piano Concerto in D Minor." To our mind, Foss is a pianist of superior attainments. His playing of Mozart is as fine as any we remember. Conducting from the piano, he received perfect collaboration from the orchestra. He provided a sturdy, forthright reading, rich in color and delightfully subtle in the adagio movement. There were moments of sentimental emphasis, but it was in good taste, as is everything this young man does.

The first of the week-end concerts have drawn 7218 people to Tanglewood. The first chamber music concert drew 1100. The student chamber music concert this morning attracted 425 people which brings the first week's total audience to the impressive number of 10,133.

Tomorrow night the first of the Fromm Foundation concerts of modern chamber music will be given. There will be two of these during the season. The chamber music concert on Wednesday night will be given by the Boston Symphony string quartet, consisting of Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola and Samuel Mayes, cello. Benny Goodman will join the quartet in Mozart's "Clarinet quintet in A Major."

4th in Festival's First Week

Foss Conducts Berkshire Concert

By Robert Bagar

LENOX, Mass., July 8.—The fourth program in the Berkshire Festival's first week of the summer season took plack this afternoon in the theater-concert hall. The conductor was Lukas Foss, a young man of many musical talents, who had scheduled five works—Haydn's Symphony No. 86, in D Major, Irving Fine's "Serious Song: Lament for String Orchestra" Alexei Haieff's Divertimento; Charles Ives' "The Unanswered Question," and Bach's piano concerto in D Minor, in which Mr. Foss played the solo part, besides conducting.

It was an interesting afternoon of music, generally well performed, which seemed to please the 2,167 listeners no end.

Three of the works were especially treasured by this reporter. They were the Fine, the Haieff and the Ives. Though the first violins occasionally screeched unwarrantedly in some passages in alt during the rendering of the "Serious Song," it took little away from the excellent, most expressive performance given it. The composer managed to sustain the melodic line of his work through orchestral complexities without number, besides constantly intensifying deep emotional feeling.

The Haiff, a consciously witty set of five brief tableaux, is beautifully orchestrated, lively and remarkably effective in the lightness of its nature, the charm that exudes all through it. As for the Ives, which serves a noble purpose also as score for a balanchine ballet, it is positively arresting, in the modernity of its idiom and in the rare freshness of its musical thought.

The Haydn symphony got a clean, though uninspired reading. Mr. Foss had some extra energy to give it, apparently, which it could have done without. The concerto, proving no stumbling block to the soloist-conductor, was delivered in full Bachian regalia even in its tempos, bright, sunny and most entertaining.

Last night in the same auditorium Charles Munch conducted the orchestra through a marvelously delicate, warm and musically adroit account of the Mozart Sinfonia Concertante in E Flat, for clarinet, horn, bassoon, with orchestra, K. 297 B. The soloists, all excellent fettle, were Ralph Gomberg, Oboe; Cino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn, and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

Also programmed were Bohuslav Martinu's "Military Mass," for men's chorus and orchestra, and the first performance of Henry Cowell's "A Thanksgiving Psalm from 'The Dead Sea Scrolls'."

Regrettably, neither of these compositions had much to offer expressively. Apart from some passages of moving sentiment in the Martinu, the music lagged woefully in the middle. The composer used as text lines from the Psalms, as well as the Czech poet Jiri Mucha. Nor did the Cowell present anything that was fascinating to the mental ear or to the senses. Hugh Ross conducted both works, and one couldn't say his rendering were letter-perfect. The Yale Glee Club could rarely be heard nor —when it could—did the articulation of the text (from the Thanksgiving Psalms translated into English—from the Aramaic —by Millar Burrows) amount to much. The opening piece was the Mozart "Haffner" Symphony, also conducted by Mr. Munch.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Press (e)
BRISTOL, Conn.
Independent Republican
Circ. 12,670

JUL 9 1956

Mozart's Works Friday, Bach Sat. At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass.—Learn how the magic of music can bring relaxation you never dreamed of by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood this weekend, July 13-14-15.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the Berkshire Music Festival has been described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time", and every visit to the scenic and enchanting Tanglewood estate in Lenox is a memorable one.

On Friday, July 13, at 3:30 p.m., the Festival Chamber Orchestra will play a selection of Mozart's works while the following evening a night of Bach is scheduled. On Sunday at 2:30, the Chamber Orchestra will perform Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" with chorus and soloists.

Tanglewood in Lenox, is located in the heart of the beautiful Berkshires, one of Massachusetts' most scenic playgrounds. Plan to spend the entire weekend touring this natural wonderland and enjoy the many facilities for swimming, boating, hiking and picnicking.

Lenox is located on Route 7, just south of Pittsfield. Main east-west routes 2-9, and 20 all connect with Route 7.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL:

Foss Features Modern Music

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 9.—Lukas Foss featured three fine examples of modern music in the Berkshire Festival program he conducted with the Boston Symphony Chamber group in the theatre-concert hall yesterday afternoon.

Set within a framework of Haydn and Bach, they made the concert as provocative as the older masters made it satisfying.

A beautifully sustained piece of melodic writing gave character to Irving Fine's "Serious Song: Lament for String Orchestra." Commissioned by the Louisville Orchestra, it should rank as one of the project's more successful shorter pieces.

The performance marked the first time one of Fine's works had been played by the Boston Symphony. He has been a faculty member of the Berkshire Music Center since 1947.

Alexei Haiff's "Divertimento" proved as excellent an expression of its title as one might ask in the contemporary idiom.

It has wit, flavor, and style. The orchestration is spicy, its syncopation welcome, its general good spirits delightful, all of which the performance highlighted persuasively.

Takes Dual Role

Charles Ives' "The Unanswered Question" may be almost a half century old, but it remains one of the most original of contemporary works. It found the audience questioning but nevertheless drawn to its mystic concept. One is most grateful to Foss for reviving interest in it.

That Foss did much for these scores was obvious. He is a meticulous conductor, keenly concerned with clean-cut performance. This he achieved throughout the afternoon from Haydn's Symphony No. 86 through the Bach concerto in D Minor in which he doubled as piano soloist.

At the moment he appears a better pianist than conductor, technically most adept in both fields. As his playing in the Bach was sculptured with fingers of steel, so his Haydn was finely chiseled in performance.

2,167 at Concert

Perhaps a little less vigor and bounce would result in more-rounded interpretations with his throbbing rhythmic pulse he did attain a special kind of exhilaration in the fast movements of the Bach which gave the audience a thrill. Haydn did not yield so agreeably to this approach.

The concert drew 2,167 people. This was considerably less than the 3,000 who attended the Saturday night program conducted by Charles Munch and Hugh Ross. The weather was fine for both events.

Mozart's "Haffner" symphony and "Sinfonia Concertante" K. 297 fell to Munch; Martinu's "Military Mass" and the first performance of Cowell's "A Thanksgiving Psalm from The Dead Sea Scrolls" comprised Ross's assignment.

The men's choruses were sung by the Yale Glee Club.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908

JUL 1 0 1956

YWCA TO SPONSOR TANGLEWOOD TRIP

Sunday afternoon, the 22d, at 2 the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Pierre Monteux will perform Rossini's "Overture to L'Italiana in Algeri," Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra" and Schubert's "Symphony No. 7 in C Major."

The YWCA is sponsoring a trip to this performance. A bus will leave the YWCA at 11 that Sunday and will arrive at Tanglewood in time for lunch and a tour of the grounds before the afternoon program. Anyone who is interested in going to Tanglewood with the YWCA may make reservations by calling the "YW."

TIGHT BINDING

RINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., MONDAY, JULY 9, 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

JUL 1 0 1956

Goodman Will Return To Tanglewood Stage On Wednesday Night

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, comprises an evening of chamber music by Haydn, Mozart and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman, jazz clarinetist, and the Boston symphony string quartet on Wednesday and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on Saturday and Sunday. The all-Mozart concert Friday will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

Donating Services

Goodman, who made his debut with the Boston symphony and at its Berkshire festival concerts last Friday, is donating his services in Wednesday's concert to the Boston symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet quintet, K. 581, with the following principals of the Boston symphony who comprise the B.S.O. string quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

Boris Goldovsky, the opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera theater who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his d but as conductor and piano soloist on the festival program Friday evening. He will conduct the Boston symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo pianists Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is piano soloist. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have not appeared at a festival concert since 1950.

Saturday Soloists

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston symphony orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all-Bach concert Saturday evening. Both teach chamber music at the Berkshire Music center.

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the festival chorus of students of the Berkshire Music center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross. Soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. All are former students of the Berkshire Music center.

nglewood for et with these Mayes, cello.

FOSS CONDUCTS, PLAYS SUPERBLY AT TANGLEWOOD

Youthful Muscian, Chamber Orchestra Given Acclaim

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 8 — Fair weather and an attractive, diversified program drew 2167 people to Tanglewood this afternoon and what they heard was worth coming far to hear. The afternoon was a personal triumph for youthful Lukas Foss who appeared both as conductor and pianist. It was also a triumph for the 37 members of the chamber orchestra and for such contemporary composers as Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and the legendary American composer Charles Ives. Haydn and Bach also had their innings.

Former Student

Lukas Foss, born in 1922, was a student at the music center in 1940. He is a member of the composition faculty this summer.

Foss Conducts

Continued From Page 1

During past seasons he has appeared frequently as pianist and conductor and this year will appear as composer when his opera "Griffelkin" receives its first stage performance here.

The program opened with a well adjusted reading of Haydn's "Symphony No. 86 in D Major." Mr. Foss is rhythmically sensitive and not averse to squeezing the last drop of sentiment out of slow movements.

It was in contemporary music that he seemed to be most at ease, as far as conducting was concerned. Irving Fine's "Lament for string orchestra" is a well written piece of music, but it did not seem particularly communicative.

The composer was on hand to receive the congratulations of the audience.

Quite different was the vital and communicative "Divertimento" of Alexei Haieff. Its five movements are each individual in character; each is imaginative and a foil to the one before it. In fact, here is music that would fit in nicely in a pop concert or a program of more serious proportions.

Charles Ives wrote "The Unanswered Question" in 1906. It was not published until 1953. The music of this almost legendary composer who died in 1954 has been woefully neglected but when one composition does see the light of day, its audience impact is tremendous. So it was this afternoon. "The Unanswered Question" is scored for a small chamber orchestra, which is a wood wind quartet, a trumpet. Mr. Voisin was at his magnificent best in the trumpet part and was signaled out for special congratulations. This is a sort of work which it seems, to this listener, should be heard many times.

Final Work Magnificent

The final work brought Bach, Foss and the orchestra together in a magnificent performance of Bach's "Piano Concerto in D Minor." To our mind, Foss is a pianist of superior attainments. His playing of Mozart is as fine as any we remember. Conducting from the piano, he received perfect collaboration from the orchestra. He provided a sturdy, forthright reading, rich in color and delightfully subtle in the adagio movement. There were moments of sentimental emphasis, but it was in good taste, as is everything this young man does.

The first of the week-end concerts have drawn 7218 people to Tanglewood. The first chamber music concert drew 1100. The student chamber music concert this morning attracted 425 people which brings the first week's total audience to the impressive number of 10,133.

Tomorrow night the first of the Fromm Foundation concerts of modern chamber music will be given. There will be two of these during the season. The chamber music concert on Wednesday night will be given by the Boston Symphony string quartet, consisting of Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola and Samuel Mayes, cello. Benny Goodman will join the quartet in Mozart's "Clarinet quintet in A Major."

'Woodshed'

n I was a boy. I don't did any good, but I've jail."
his Independence,
n. Mrs. Truman rope. the fore put most of quency musical scheduled five Haydn's Symphony No.

, in D Major, Irving Fine's "Serious Song: Lament for String Orchestra" Alexei Haieff's Divertimento; Charles Ives' "The Unanswered Question," and Bach's piano concerto in D Minor, in which Mr. Foss played the solo part, besides conducting.

It was an interesting afternoon of music, generally well performed, which seemed to please the 2,167 listeners no end.

Three of the works were especially treasured by this reporter. They were the Fine, the Haieff and the Ives. Though the first violins occasionally screeched unwarrantedly in some passages in alt during the rendering of the "Serious Song," it took little away from the excellent, most expressive performance given it. The composer managed to sustain the melodic line of his work through orchestral complexities without number, besides constantly intensifying deep emotional feeling.

The Haiff, a consciously witty set of five brief tableaux, is beautifully orchestrated, lively and remarkably effective in the lightness of its nature, the charm that exudes all through it. As for the Ives, which serves a noble purpose also as score for a balanchine ballet, it is positively arresting, in the modernity of its idiom and in the rare freshness of its musical thought.

The Haydn symphony got a clean, though uninspired reading. Mr. Foss had some extra energy to give it, apparently, which it could have done without. The concerto, proving no stumbling block to the soloist-

st Week

ts Berkshire Concert

ajor, was delivered in full regalia even in its bright, sunny and most ing.

ght in the same auditharles Munch conducte orchestra through a marvelously delicate, warm and musically adroit account of the Mozart Sinfonia Concertante in E Flat, for clarinet, horn, bassoon, with orchestra, K. 297 B. The soloists, all excellent fettle, were Ralph Gomberg, Oboe; Cino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn, and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

Also programmed were Bohuslav Martinu's "Military Mass," for men's chorus and orchestra, and the first performance of Henry Cowell's "A Thanksgiving Psalm from 'The Dead Sea Scrolls'."

Regrettably, neither of these compositions had much to offer expressively. Apart from some passages of moving sentiment in the Martinu, the music lagged woefully in the middle. The composer used as text lines from the Psalms, as well as the Czech poet Jiri Mucha. Nor did the Cowell present anything that was fascinating to the mental ear or to the senses. Hugh Ross conducted both works, and one couldn't say his rendering were letter-perfect. The Yale Glee Club could rarely be heard nor —when it could—did the articulation of the text (from the Thanksgiving Psalms translated into English—from the Aramaic —by Millar Burrows) amount to much. The opening piece was the Mozart "Haffner" Symphony, also conducted by Mr. Munch.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Press (e)
BRISTOL, Conn.
Independent Republican
Circ. 12,670

JUL 9 1956

Mozart's Works Friday, Bach Sat. At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass.—Learn how the magic of music can bring relaxation you never dreamed of by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood this weekend, July 13-14-15.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the Berkshire Music Festival has been described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time", and every visit to the scenic and enchanting Tanglewood estate in Lenox is a memorable one.

On Friday, July 13, at 3:30 p.m., the Festival Chamber Orchestra will play a selection of Mozart's works while the following evening a night of Bach is scheduled. On Sunday at 2:30, the Chamber Orchestra will perform Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" with chorus and soloists.

Tanglewood in Lenox, is located in the heart of the beautiful Berkshires, one of Massachusetts' most scenic playgrounds. Plan to spend the entire weekend touring this natural wonderland and enjoy the many facilities for swimming, boating, hiking and picnicking.

Lenox is located on Route 7, just south of Pittsfield. Main east-west routes 2-9, and 20 all connect with Route 7.

[28]

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL:

Foss Features Modern Music

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 9.—Lukas Foss featured three fine examples of modern music in the Berkshire Festival program he conducted with the Boston Symphony Chamber group in the theatre-concert hall yesterday afternoon.

Set within a framework of Haydn and Bach, they made the concert as provocative as the older masters made it satisfying.

A beautifully sustained piece of melodic writing gave character to Irving Fine's "Serious Song: Lament for String Orchestra." Commissioned by the Louisville Orchestra, it should rank as one of the project's more successful shorter pieces.

The performance marked the first time one of Fine's works had been played by the Boston Symphony. He has been a faculty member of the Berkshire Music Center since 1947.

Alexei Haiff's "Divertimento" proved as excellent an expression of its title as one might ask in the contemporary idiom.

It has wit, flavor, and style. The orchestration is spicy, its syncopation welcome, its general good spirits delightful, all of which the performance highlighted persuasively.

Takes Dual Role

Charles Ives' "The Unanswered Question" may be almost a half century old, but it remains one of the most original of contemporary works. It found the audience questioning but nevertheless drawn to its mystic concept. One is most grateful to Foss for reviving interest in it.

That Foss did much for these scores was obvious. He is a meticulous conductor, keenly concerned with clean-cut performance. This he achieved throughout the afternoon from Haydn's Symphony No. 86 through the Bach concerto in D Minor in which he doubled as piano soloist.

At the moment he appears a better pianist than conductor, technically most adept in both fields. As his playing in the Bach was sculptured with fingers of steel, so his Haydn was finely chiseled in performance.

2,167 at Concert

Perhaps a little less vigor and bounce would result in more-rounded interpretations, with his throbbing rhythmic pulse he did attain a special kind of exhilaration in the fast movements of the Bach which gave the audience a thrill. Haydn did not yield so agreeably to this approach.

The concert drew 2,167 people. This was considerably less than the 3,000 who attended the Saturday night program conducted by Charles Munch and Hugh Ross. The weather was fine for both events.

Mozart's "Haffner" symphony and "Sinfonia Concertante" K. 297 fell to Munch; Martinu's "Military Mass" and the first performance of Cowell's "A Thanksgiving Psalm from The Dead Sea Scrolls" comprised Ross's assignment.

The men's choruses were sung by the Yale Glee Club.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908

JUL 1 0 1956

YWCA TO SPONSOR TANGLEWOOD TRIP

Sunday afternoon, the 22d, at 2 the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Pierre Monteux will perform Rossini's "Overture to L'Italiana in Algeri," Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra" and Schubert's "Symphony No. 7 in C Major."

The YWCA is sponsoring a trip to this performance. A bus will leave the YWCA at 11 that Sunday and will arrive at Tanglewood in time for lunch and a tour of the grounds before the afternoon program. Anyone who is interested in going to Tanglewood with the YWCA may make reservations by calling the "YW."

THE NEW YORK TIMES, MONDAY, JULY 9, 1956.

FOSS IN DUAL ROLE AT LENOX CONCERT

Leads Boston Symphony and Is Piano Soloist in Bach Work at Tanglewood

By EDWARD DOWNES
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 8—The first week-end of the Berkshire Festival reached its climax this sunny afternoon with a Boston Symphony Orchestra concert under the direction of Lukas Foss.

This was the third week-end concert given in the Tanglewood Theatre-Concert Hall with the Boston Symphony reduced to chamber orchestra size for the performance of Bach, Mozart, Haydn and smaller modern works.

The most brilliant performance of the afternoon brought Mr. Foss to the fore in the double role of conductor and piano soloist in the D minor Concerto of J. S. Bach. He played the solo part with feather-fingered delicacy in the lighter passages, but with an underlying rhythmic drive that swept him and the orchestra ahead to climaxes of real power and excitement.

His climaxes were all the more effective because Mr. Foss held his rhythms and dynamics firmly in rein until the dammed-up excitement burst out in the exultant orchestral ritornellos. The songful middle movement, where Mr. Foss sought greater rhythmic freedom, did not come off as well as the brisk opening and finals, but the performance as a whole deserved the cheers it got from the audience.

The work was billed as Bach's Piano Concerto in D minor. Would it be pedantic to point out that there is no such thing? This is a harpsichord concerto. It went magnificently on the piano, but can be just as exciting on the original instrument.

The Unanswered Question'

Perhaps the most provocative work in the program was "The Unanswered Question," written nearly fifty years ago by the American, Charles Ives. "The perennial question of existence," as Ives called it in the printed score, is asked again and again by a solo trumpet. Off-stage an impersonal, muted music of the spheres, as it were, is played by soft string instruments. A more agitated ensemble on-stage seems to try to mediate between the two. But the question remains unanswered, even by Ives' commentators.

The elusive mood of the music was sensitively maintained throughout.

Irving Fine, composer of the faculties of the Berkshire Music Center and Brandeis University, contributed one work to the program. This was his "Serious Song: Lament for String Orchestra."

It sounded, to one listener at least, unabashedly romantic in feling and to some extent even in technique. It is written with great skill for the string body, yet one does not feel it is full of clever tricks. Mr. Fine seems to joy in the sensuous sounds he draws from the strings as much as he does in his sustained melodic line. It was stirring music.

The program opened with Haydn's delicious Symphony No. 86 in D major and also a Divertimento by Alexi Haieff, which was truly gay and diverting.

A World Premiere

Last night's concert by the Boston Symphony included the world premiere of Henry Cowell's "A Thanksgiving Psalm" from "The Dead Sea Scrolls" and Bohuslav Martinu's "Military" Mass. The Yale Glee Club participated in both works under the direction of Hugh Ross.

The Glee Club, which had just finished a long tour, was not in its top form and was somewhat outbalanced by the orchestra, particularly in Mr. Cowell's "Thanksgiving Psalm." The work, which had sounded vital and effective at noon-day rehearsal, somehow did not hang together in the evening performance, and one would like to hear it again to estimate its quality.

Charles Munch, the Boston Symphony's regular conductor, opened the program with Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony, and Sinfonia Concertante in E flat. The latter, in addition to its intrinsic beauty, gave the audience a chance to appreciate the superb tone of the Boston Symphony oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon soloists.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 30,746
JUL 10 1956

MUSIC OF WEEK AT TANGLEWOOD

Benny Goodman, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, Soloists

Lenox, July 9—This second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood comprises an evening of chamber music by Haydn, Mozart and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet on July 14, and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings, July 13 and 14, and Sunday afternoon, July 15. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

All four of these concerts will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall, evenings at 8.30 p. m., Sunday afternoon at 2.30 p. m. In the event of rain the programs will be given in the big Music Shed.

The programs:

Wednesday, July 11—
Haydn: String Quartet in E flat major, Op. 33, No. 2.
Mozart: Clarinet Quintet, K. 581
Brahms: String Quintet in G major
Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet (Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello).

Friday, July 13—
Mozart: March, Andantino and Finale (Presto) from Serenade in D major, K. 320
Mozart: Concerto in F major, for 3 Pianos, K. 242
Soloists: Luboshutz and Nemenoff and Boris Goldovsky
Mozart: Concerto in A major, for Piano, K. 488
Soloist: Boris Goldovsky
Mozart: Concerto in E flat major, for 2 Pianos, K. 365
Soloists: Luboshutz and Nemenoff
Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz, Conductors

Saturday, July 14—
Bach: Brandenburg Concerto No. 2, in F major
Soloists: Roger Voisin, trumpet; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Richard Burgin, violin.
Bach: Violin Concerto in E major
Soloist: William Kroll
Bach: Suite No. 2, in B minor, for Flute and Strings
Soloist: Doriot Anthony Dwyer
Bach: Suite No. 3, in D major
Charles Munch, Conductor

Sunday, July 15—
Bach: The Passion According to St. John
Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Hugh Ross
Soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; James Joyce, bass.
Charles Munch, Conductor

Next Week

The third week of the Festival concerts will commence with Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw in a recital of songs by Wagner and Richard Strauss, with Ralph Berkowitz at the piano; and the Brass Ensemble of the Boston Symphony, under the direction of Roger Voisin, in music by Gabrielli, Bonelli, Poulenc, Berezowsky, Wednesday, July 18, in the Theater-Concert Hall. The entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate the season's concerts in the 6000-seat Music Shed on Friday, July 20, when Charles Munch will give a program of orchestral works by Berlioz, Debussy, Roussel and Brahms. Dr. Munch will devote the Saturday, July 21, concert to Wagner, with Miss Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa (making his Tanglewood debut) and basso James Pease singing a concert version of Act 1 of "Die Walkyre." Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor of the Sunday afternoon, July 22, concert, in a program of Rossini, Bartok and Schubert.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928
JUL 10 1956

age monthly earnings.

Shed Concerts Open At Lenox Week Of 15th

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Lenox, Mass., move into high gear next week when the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra of 106 pieces assembles at Tanglewood under the baton of Charles Munch, music director. When they complete their two weeks of Esplanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston under the leadership of Arthur Fiedler, 70 players of the Boston Symphony move to the Berkshire Hills of Western Massachusetts to join the 36 principals who have been teaching chamber music to students of the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, and performing as a chamber orchestra in the fortnight of "Bach-Mozart" concerts that traditionally opens the festival.

The entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate on Friday evening (July 20) the annual series of 12 weekend concerts in the huge 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, which is open on three sides so the music may spill out on the spacious lawns where additional thousands of music-lovers assemble under the stars and tall pines, or picnic in Sunday sunshine. In 1955 the Shed concerts attracted an audience of 108,336, or an average attendance of 9,028 persons.

A feature of the Shed series will be first Tanglewood performances of four symphonic works commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during this its 75th Anniversary season from Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi, who is guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, from Aaron Coplan, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston. The American compositions will be played in Europe this fall when the Boston Symphony undertakes a five-and-a-half week tour of 13 countries, including a week in the U. S. S. R. Charles Munch will also devote two of the Shed concerts to concert versions of Wagner operas. During the Shed season his podium will be shared by Pierre Monteux, who was conductor of the orchestra from 1919-1924 and who has been invited by Dr. Munch to share the conducting during the forthcoming tour; by Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra since 1920; by Leonard Bernstein, who has headed the Berkshire Music Center's department of orchestra and conducting since 1946; and by Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro, who is filling Mr. Bernstein's post on the music school's faculty during the latter's sabbatical this summer.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,857
JUL 10 1956

Festival Programs Changed by Munch

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has made changes in two of the programs the orchestra will play in the music shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, during the current Berkshire festival.

Instead of two all-Wagner programs on Saturday evening, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, Dr. Munch has made substitutions in the first half of each concert.

On July 21, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" will open the program, followed by Bohuslav Martinu's' "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6), which the conductor commissioned for the Boston Symphony's 75 th anniversary season, and which was named by the New York Music Critics' circle the best new orchestral work presented in New York in the year 1955. Both the Barber and Martinu works will be receiving first performances at Tanglewood. They will replace the previously announced "A Faust Overture," Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," and Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

On Aug. 12, Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica," will be substituted for the previously listed Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauser and A Siegfried Idyll.

On both programs, Dr. Munch will retain the concert versions of Wagner operas originally scheduled: Act I of "Die Walkure" on July 21, with Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease as soloists, and Act III of "Die Meistersinger" (Opening and final scene), with Messrs. Da Costa and Pease and Marguerite Willauer in solo roles.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908
JUL 10 1956

FESTIVAL PROGRAM HAS TWO CHANGES

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has made changes in two of the programs the orchestra will play in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, during the current Berkshire Festival.

Instead of two all-Wagner programs on Saturday evening, the 21st, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, Dr. Munch has made substitutions in the first half of each concert.

On the 21st, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" will open the program, followed by Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6), which the conductor commissioned for the Boston Symphony's 75th Anniversary season, and which was named by the New York Music Critics' Circle the best new orchestral work presented in New York in the year 1955. Both the Barber and Martinu works will be receiving first performances at Tanglewood. They will replace the previously announced "A Faust Overture," Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," and Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

On Aug. 12, Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica," will be substituted for the previously listed Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhauser" and "A Siegfried Idyll."

On both programs, Dr. Munch will retain the concert versions of Wagner operas originally scheduled: Act I of "Die Walkure" on the 21st, with Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease as soloists; and Act III of "Die Meistersinger" (opening and final scene), with Da Costa and Pease and Marguerite Willauer in solo roles.

BOSTON HERALD, TUESDAY, JULY 10, 1956

McCollum Soloist In Berkshire Bach

John McCollum, tenor, will replace David Lloyd in the role of the Evangelist in the Berkshire Festival concert performance of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John", which will have its first performance at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon, at 2:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players.

[29]

—The Berkshire Eagle, Tuesday, July 10,

Miss Cardillo Is Bride of Alfred Moran

Opera Singer Weds Brooklyn Attorney In Canarsie, N.Y.

NORTH ADAMS—Announcement was made today of the marriage of Miss Christina Carmella Cardillo, who won the Metropolitan Auditions of the Air in 1954 and has established a promising career as an operatic, concert and recording artist.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Cardillo of 149 Pleasant St. became the bride of Alfred Charles Moran, son of Mrs. Martin Moran of Brooklyn, N.Y., and the late Mr. Moran, at 4:30 p.m. Sunday in Holy Family Church, Canarsie, N.Y. The Rev. Raphael Florido officiated. A reception for members of the families followed at the home of the bridegroom's mother.

Father Escorts

Escorted by her father, the bride had her sister, Mrs. Leo J. Mullen, as matron of honor. Edmund Murray of Brooklyn was best man.

The bride wore a white afternoon dress with blue sash, and a white headpiece with brief veil. She carried a Rosary and a small bouquet of white flowers.

After a trip the couple temporarily will live at 115 Brooklyn Ave., Brooklyn.

The bride, a graduate of Drury High School and New England Conservatory of Music, recently was signed by Columbia Artists. On Saturday, she completed a summer course at the Katherine Longey School, affiliated with the Metropolitan Opera Co. in New York, and, in August, will resume her concert work under the management of William Judd of Columbia Artists. Mr. Judd is the son of George H. Judd, former manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The bride may accept an opera role in Chicago and a soloist role with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra next month.

Sang at Tanglewood

Mrs. Moran studied two years in Milan, Italy, and on several scholarships at the Katherine Longey School. She spent one summer at the Metropolitan Opera Company's affiliate, the Central City Opera Center in Denver, Colo., and has been soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has had concert appearances in leading centers in Italy and filled leading roles in operas at Tanglewood and Central City. Last month she was soloist with the Canadian National Symphony Orchestra in a nation-wide broadcast from Toronto.

Mr. Moran, an attorney, is associated with the Bivan & Welch Law Firm, Brooklyn. He graduated from St. John's College and its law school.

FOSS IN DUAL ROLE AT LENOX CONCERT

Leads Boston Symphony and Is Piano Soloist in Bach Work at Tanglewood

By EDWARD DOWNES
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 8—The first week-end of the Berkshire Festival reached its climax this sunny afternoon with a Boston Symphony Orchestra concert under the direction of Lukas Foss.

This was the third week-end concert given in the Tanglewood Theatre-Concert Hall with the Boston Symphony reduced to chamber orchestra size for the performance of Bach, Mozart, Haydn and smaller modern works.

The most brilliant performance of the afternoon brought Mr. Foss to the fore in the double role of conductor and piano soloist in the D minor Cencerto of J. S. Bach. He played the solo part with feather-fingered delicacy in the lighter passages, but with an underlying rhythmic drive that swept him and the orchestra ahead to climaxes of real power and excitement.

His climaxes were all the more effective because Mr. Foss held his rhythms and dynamics firmly in rein until the dammed-up excitement burst out in the exultant orchestral ritornellos. The songful middle movement, where Mr. Foss sought greater rhythmic freedom, did not come off as well as the brisk opening and finals, but the performance as a whole deserved the cheers it got from the audience.

The work was billed as Bach's Piano Concerto in D minor. Would it be pedantic to point out that there is no such thing? This is a harpsichord concerto. It went magnificently on the piano, but can be just as exciting on the original instrument.

'The Unanswered Question'

Perhaps the most provocative work in the program was "The Unanswered Question," written nearly fifty years ago by the American, Charles Ives. "The perennial question of existence," as Ives called it in the printed score, is asked again and again by a solo trumpet. Off-stage an impersonal, muted music of the spheres, as it were, is played by soft string instruments. A more agitated ensemble on-stage seems to try to mediate between the two. But the question remains unanswered, even by Ives' commentators.

The elusive mood of the music was sensitively maintained throughout.

Irving Fine, composer of the faculties of the Berkshire Music Center and Brandeis University, contributed one work to the program. This was his "Serious Song: Lament for String Orchestra."

It sounded, to one listener at least, unabashedly romantic in feling and to some extent even in technique. It is written with great skill for the string body, yet one does not feel it is full of clever tricks. Mr. Fine seems to joy in the sensuous sounds he draws from the strings as much as he does in his sustained melodic line. It was stirring music.

The program opened with Haydn's delicious Symphony No. 86 in D major and also a Divertimento by Alexi Haieff, which was truly gay and diverting.

A World Première

Last night's concert by the Boston Symphony included the world première of Henry Cowell's "A Thanksgiving Psalm from 'The Dead Sea Scrolls'" and Bohuslav Martinu's "Military" Mass. The Yale Glee Club participated in both works under the direction of Hugh Ross.

The Gle Club, which had just finished a long tour, was not in its top form and was somewhat outbalanced by the orchestra, particularly in Mr. Cowell's "Thanksgiving Psalm." The work, which had sounded vital and effective at noon-day rehearsal, somehow did not hang together in the evening performance, and one would want to hear it again to estimate its quality.

Charles Munch, the Boston Symphony's regular conductor, opened the program with Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony and Sinfonia Concertante in E flat. The latter, in addition to its intrinsic beauty, gave the audience a chance to appreciate the superb tone of the Boston Symphony oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon soloists.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746
JUL 10 1956

MUSIC OF WEEK AT TANGLEWOOD

Benny Goodman, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, Soloists

Lenox, July 9—This second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood comprises an evening of chamber music by Haydn, Mozart and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet on July 11, and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings, July 13 and 14, and Sunday afternoon, July 15. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

All four of these concerts will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall, evenings at 8.30 p. m., Sunday afternoon at 2.30 p. m. In the event of rain the programs will be given in the big Music Shed.

The programs:

Wednesday, July 11—
Haydn: String Quartet in E flat major, Op. 33, No. 2
Mozart: Clarinet Quintet, K. 581
Brahms: String Quintet in G major
Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet (Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello).

Friday, July 13—
Mozart: March, Andantino and Finale (Presto) from Serenade in D major, K. 320
Mozart: Concerto in F major, for 3 Pianos, K. 242
Soloists: Luboshutz and Nemenoff and Boris Goldovsky
Mozart: Concerto in A major, for Piano, K. 488
Soloist: Boris Goldovsky
Mozart: Concerto in E flat major, for 2 Pianos, K. 365
Soloists: Luboshutz and Nemenoff
Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz, Conductors

Saturday, July 14—
Bach: Brandenburg Concerto No. 2, in F major
Soloists: Roger Voisin, trumpet; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Richard Burgin, violin.
Bach: Violin Concerto in E major
Soloist: William Kroll
Bach: Suite No. 2, in B minor, for Flute and Strings
Soloist: Doriot Anthony Dwyer
Bach: Suite No. 3, in D major
Charles Munch, Conductor

Sunday, July 15—
Bach: The Passion According to St. John
Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Hugh Ross
Soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; James Joyce, bass.
Charles Munch, Conductor

Next Week

The third week of the Festival concerts will commence with Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw in a recital of songs by Wagner and Richard Strauss, with Ralph Berkowitz at the piano; and the Brass Ensemble of the Boston Symphony, under the direction of Roger Voisin, in music by Gabrielli, Bonelli, Poulenc, Berezowsky, Wednesday, July 18, in the Theater-Concert Hall. The entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate the season's concerts in the 6000-seat Music Shed on Friday, July 20, when Charles Munch will give a program of orchestral works by Berlioz, Debussy, Roussel and Brahms. Dr. Munch will devote the Saturday, July 21, concert to Wagner, with Miss Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa (making his Tanglewood debut) and basso James Pease singing a concert version of Act 1 of "Die Walkure." Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor of the Sunday afternoon, July 22, concert, in a program of Rossini, Bartok and Schubert.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928
JUL 10 1956

age monthly earnings.

Shed Concerts Open At Lenox Week Of 15th

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Lenox, Mass., move into high gear next week when the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra of 106 pieces assembles at Tanglewood under the baton of Charles Munch, music director. When they complete their two weeks of Esplanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston under the leadership of Arthur Fiedler, 70 players of the Boston Symphony move to the Berkshire Hills of Western Massachusetts to join the 36 principals who have been teaching chamber music to students of the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, and performing as a chamber orchestra in the fortnight of "Bach-Mozart" concerts that traditionally opens the festival.

The entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate on Friday evening (July 20) the annual series of 12 weekend concerts in the huge 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, which is open on three sides so the music may spill out on the spacious lawns where additional thousands of music-lovers assemble under the stars and tall pines, or picnic in Sunday sunshine. In 1955 the Shed concerts attracted an audience of 108,336, or an average attendance of 9,028 persons.

A feature of the Shed series will be first Tanglewood performances of four symphonic works commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during this, its 75th Anniversary season from Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi, who is guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, from Aaron Coplan, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston. The American compositions will be played in Europe this fall when the Boston Symphony undertakes a five-and-a-half week tour of 13 countries, including a week in the U. S. S. R. Charles Munch will also devote two of the Shed concerts to concert versions of Wagner operas. During the Shed season his podium will be shared by Pierre Monteux, who was conductor of the orchestra from 1919-1924 and who has been invited by Dr. Munch to share the conducting during the forthcoming tour; by Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra since 1920; by Leonard Bernstein, who has headed the Berkshire Music Center's department of orchestra and conducting since 1946; and by Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro, who is filling Mr. Bernstein's post on the music school's faculty during the latter's sabbatical this summer.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 10 1956

Festival Programs Changed by Munch

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has made changes in two of the programs the orchestra will play in the music shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, during the current Berkshire festival.

Instead of two all-Wagner programs on Saturday evening, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, Dr. Munch has made substitutions in the first half of each concert.

On July 21, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" will open the program, followed by Bohuslav Martinu's' "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6), which the conductor commissioned for the Boston Symphony's 75 th anniversary season, and which was named by the New York Music Critics' circle the best new orchestral work presented in New York in the year 1955. Both the Barber and Martinu works will be receiving first performances at Tanglewood. They will replace the previously announced "A Faust Overture," Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," and Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

On Aug. 12, Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica," will be substituted for the previously listed Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauser and A Siegfried Idyll.

On both programs, Dr. Munch will retain the concert versions of Wagner operas originally scheduled: Act I of "Die Walkure" on July 21, with Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease as soloists; and Act III of "Die Meistersinger" (Opening and final scene), with Messrs. Da Costa and Pease and Marguerite Willauer in solo roles.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908
JUL 10 1956

FESTIVAL PROGRAM HAS TWO CHANGES

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has made changes in two of the programs the orchestra will play in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, during the current Berkshire Festival.

Instead of two all-Wagner programs on Saturday evening, the 21st, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, Dr. Munch has made substitutions in the first half of each concert.

On the 21st, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" will open the program, followed by Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6), which the conductor commissioned for the Boston Symphony's 75th Anniversary season, and which was named by the New York Music Critics' Circle the best new orchestral work presented in New York in the year 1955. Both the Barber and Martinu works will be receiving first performances at Tanglewood. They will replace the previously announced "A Faust Overture," Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," and Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

On Aug. 12, Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica," will be substituted for the previously listed Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhauser" and "A Siegfried Idyll."

On both programs, Dr. Munch will retain the concert versions of Wagner operas originally scheduled: Act I of "Die Walkure" on the 21st, with Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease as soloists; and Act III of "Die Meistersinger" (opening and final scene), with Da Costa and Pease and Marguerite Willauer in solo roles.

BOSTON HERALD, TUESDAY, JULY 10, 1956

McCollum Soloist In Berkshire Bach

John McCollum, tenor, will replace David Lloyd in the role of the Evangelist in the Berkshire Festival concert performance of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John", which will have its first performance at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon, at 2:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players.

[29]

Miss Cardillo Is Bride of Alfred Moran

Opera Singer Weds Brooklyn Attorney In Canarsie, N.Y.

NORTH ADAMS—Announcement was made today of the marriage of Miss Christina Carmella Cardillo, who won the Metropolitan Auditions of the Air in 1954 and has established a promising career as an operatic, concert and recording artist.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Cardillo of 149 Pleasant St. became the bride of Alfred Charles Moran, son of Mrs. Martin Moran of Brooklyn, N.Y., and the late Mr. Moran, at 4:30 p.m. Sunday in Holy Family Church, Canarsie, N.Y. The Rev. Raphael Florido officiated. A reception for members of the families followed at the home of the bridegroom's mother.

Father Escorts

Escorted by her father, the bride had her sister, Mrs. Leo J. Mullen, as matron of honor. Edmund Murray of Brooklyn was best man.

The bride wore a white afternoon dress with blue sash, and a white headpiece with brief veil. She carried a Rosary and a small bouquet of white flowers.

After a trip the couple temporarily will live at 115 Brooklyn Ave., Brooklyn.

The bride, a graduate of Drury High School and New England Conservatory of Music, recently was signed by Columbia Artists. On Saturday, she completed a summer course at the Katherine Longey School, affiliated with the Metropolitan Opera Co. in New York, and, in August, will resume her concert work under the management of William Judd of Columbia Artists. Mr. Judd is the son of George H. Judd, former manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The bride may accept an opera role in Chicago and a soloist role with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra next month.

Sang at Tanglewood

Mrs. Moran studied two years in Milan, Italy, and on several scholarships at the Katherine Longey School. She spent one summer at the Metropolitan Opera Company's affiliate, the Central City Opera Center in Denver, Colo., and has been soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has had concert appearances in leading centers in Italy and filled leading roles in operas at Tanglewood and Central City. Last month she was soloist with the Canadian National Symphony Orchestra in a nation-wide broadcast from Toronto.

Mr. Moran, an attorney, is associated with the Bivan & Welch Law Firm, Brooklyn. He graduated from St. John's College and its law school.

July 10, 1956

The Lively Arts

By Milton R. Bass

THE VERSATILITY of Benny Goodman as a musician is such that nobody thought it strange he was playing Mozart at Tanglewood Friday night rather than "Stealin' Apples" at Newport. It is now taken for granted that the great clarinetist can sit in with any group, no matter how they cut their hair.

When Mr. Goodman walked onto the stage of the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood with Charles Munch last Thursday morning, the members of the orchestra applauded enthusiastically. They were showing their appreciation for the talents of both men. Goodman's 13-y e a r-old daughter, Rachel, slipped down into the audience and she, I and a couple of Tanglewood people composed the audience for the rehearsal of the Concerto for Clarinet in A Major, K. 622.

* * *

THE REHEARSAL went well. There were a few bars in the adagio and the rondo which had to be ironed out, with Munch singing corrections to his violins and Goodman asking the conductor for a few interpretations. But in general the music sang along and once during a Goodman solo Munch turned around with a smile on his face that could only be described as beatific.

At the end of each movement the orchestra applauded Mr. Goodman's work, but he accepted it silently without taking his eyes off the music. It wasn't until the end of the whole work when the applause for him was beyond the point of non-recognition that he looked up at Mr. Munch with a faint smile on his face and murmured, "Next week, East Lynne."

* * *

I WAS PRESENT to interview Mr. Goodman, but before I could get him aside the members of the BSO string quartet grabbed him for a quick rehearsal of the Clarinet Quintet in A Major, K. 581, which the group will present tomorrow night. It was necessary for the quartet to exchange names with Mr. Goodman, but musically they needed no introduction. They sat right down and went through it, stopping now and again to sing interpretations for each other, but having no real trouble with the familiar work. Finally, they were satisfied with the progress of the first rehearsal and quit after making arrangements for another go at it.

Now supposedly Mr. Goodman was mine. I was a little apprehensive about the interview because I had been told by various and sundry people that he never made it easy to establish personal contact. No one knows how many times he has been interviewed and asked the same questions over and over again, and on top of this it is impossible to expect sympathy from a man who can control a brass section the way he can.

* * *

WE ARRANGED to meet at Elm Court which once belonged to the family of Mrs. Goodman, the former Alice Hammond. When I arrived there, Mr. Goodman had gone off to buy a raincoat, the Berkshire weather having caught him by surprise. So I interviewed his daughter as she flew by me on the stairs. "How do you like your mother's old house?" I yelled. "It's big," she answered and disappeared.

Mr. Goodman finally arrived in a raincoat a half size too big, apologized for having been sidetracked and invited me up to his room for our talk. The questions started. Yes, he liked to play Mozart as much as he liked to play jazz. No, he was not in semi-retirement. Right after tomorrow night's concert he leaves for Washington to appear there with his band. They are doing 26 weeks this year and that is definitely not retirement.

* * *

THERE WERE long pauses after each question as Mr. Goodman was adjusting his clarinet and only had eyes for the instrument. Some of the questions had to be repeated three or four times as he would ask "What was that you wanted to know?" He wasn't being deliberately rude or purposely unhelpful. He was just off somewhere in his musical world and the words of the questions formed a discordant background. He was impervious to leading questions, slight needles or chitchat.

So I picked up my marbles and went home. I thanked him for his trouble and he thanked me for my trouble. At least we had rapport on that. And I didn't mind his being way out there somewhere during our conversation. Because he has talked to me plenty over the years through that wonderful clarinet, and the warmth, feeling, drive and imagination of his playing put him in a class by himself. The important thing about Mr. Goodman, whether he be playing Mozart or "Moonglow," is: He swings. That's all I ask of him and Ted Williams.

Walter Pidgeon Returning to Stage

NEW YORK — Walter Pidgeon, the movie star who hasn't appeared on Broadway since 1935, will play the role this season of Anthony J. Drexel Biddle in "The Happiest Millionaire," the Kyle Crichton play, which Howard Erskine and Joseph Hayes will present. The producers announce at the same time that they have arranged a $250,000 pre-production deal on the play with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

TANGLEWOOD
Lenox, Mass. • NOW thru AUGUST 12

Berkshire Festival

BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

THEATER-CONCERT HALL

WED., July 11, at 8:30—BOSTON SYMPHONY STRING QUARTET
Benny Goodman assisting

FRI., July 13, at 8:30—MOZART PIANO CONCERTOS
Soloists: Boris Goldovsky, Luboshutz and Nemenoff

SAT., July 14, at 8:30—BACH PROGRAM (Munch)
Soloist: William Kroll, Violin

SUN., July 15, at 2:30—BACH—ST. JOHN PASSION (Munch)
Tickets Wed. $2, $3; Fri., Sat., Sun., $4, $5.

— Reserved seats for July 13 & 14 all taken; for July 15, $5 only —

ADMISSION $2

LAST 4 Weekends: Shed Concerts (July 20-Aug. 12)
Tickets: $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50 (Box Seats $6.50)

Baldwin Piano — RCA Victor Records

For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Phone Lenox 600

THE ECHO — NEW LEBANON, NEW YORK

Berkshire Festival At Tanglewood Goes Into Second Week Of Concerts

Benny Goodman To Be Featured Again

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of chamber music by Hayden, Mozart and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet on Wednesday (July 11); and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 13 and 14) and Sunday afternoon (July 15). Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

The eminent jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman, who made his debut with the Boston Symphony and at its Berkshire Festival concerts last Friday (July 6), is donating his services in Wednesday's concert to the Boston Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's Clarinet Quintet, K. 581, with the following principals of the Boston Symphony who comprise the B. S. O. String Quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

Boris Goldovsky, the eminent opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera Theare, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his debut as conductor and piano soloist on a Berkshire Festival program on Friday evening (July 13). He will conduct the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo pianists Perre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto, in which Mr. Goldovsky is piano soloist. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have not appeared at a Festival concert since 1950.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all Bach concert Saturday evening (July 14.) Both teach chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center.

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon (July 15) will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross.

Munch conducting, on Saturday, July 14 (8:30 p. m., Theatre-Concert Hall).

At Berkshire Festival

Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will repeat her hit performance in last year's Berkshire Festival this summer at Tanglewood, performing Bach's Suite No. 2, in B minor, for Flute and Strings with the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, Charles

THE NEW YORK TIMES, TUESDAY, JULY 10, 1956

WORK OF MODERNS PLAYED AT LENOX

Songs by Epstein and 'String Serenade' by Weber Among Selections at Festival

By EDWARD DOWNES
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 9—Contemporary music at the Berkshire Festival received a strong shot in the arm tonight from the first of two Monday evening chamber music concerts sponsored by the Fromm Music Foundation.

The premières of two works commissioned by the foundation, Ben Weber's "Serenade for Strings," Op. 46, and Alvin Epstein's suite of songs "Sabrina Fair," were the center of interest. But they were flanked by a skillfully varied array of works by established masters of the twentieth century.

The program was no hodgepodge of styles, yet it would be safe to say that any one at all interested in modern music must have heard something tonight to stir his imagination. And this clearly was the purpose of the evening, despite the high interest in many individual works.

There was a sort of family interest in Mr. Epstein's suite of songs, for the composer, who has barely passed his twenty-fifth year, is a former composition student from the Berkshire Music Center. His four songs have nothing to do with the recent Broadway dramatic production, but take their title from Milton's poem of the same name.

Strong Appeal in Songs

The two lyric songs of the set, the title song and "Grace for a Child," were sensitive mood pictures with strong immediate appeal. The solo part, taken by Arthur Schoep, tenor, ranges from the spoken word, through a semi-sung sort of Sprechstimme, to full-blown melody.

Three movements of Ben Weber's "Serenade" passed before the music began to make sense to this listener. But there followed an eloquent slow movement beginning fugue-like in the dark range of the solo doubles bass and swelling until the entire quintet was engaged in a turbulent, expressive choir. A march-like finale was the effective close.

The program opened with Stravinsky's "Duo Concertant" played by Ruth Posselt, violinist, and Irving Fine, pianist. Benjamin Britten's Canticle II, "Abraham and Isaac," was sung by Florence Kopleff, alto, and Mr. Schoep. Arnold Schoenberg was represented by his "Klavierstuecke," Op. 33, and Anton von Webern by his Variations, Op. 27, both played by William Masselos.

Aaron Copland's powerful "Vitebsk, Study on a Jewish Theme" with Richard Burgin, violinist; Samuel Mayes, 'cellist, and the composer at the piano brought the evening to an exciting close.

The second chamber music concert sponsored by the Fromm Foundation will be presented on July 23.

Quotes

If present [musical programming] policies continue, then we're all headed for some kind of dead end . . . You can't make a living art of great masterpieces of the past. You can create a kind of museum, but not a living art.—Aaron Copland, speaking before a national meeting in Providence of U.S. symphony associations.

It used to be that a person would take acting lessons to become a star. Now, a person takes acting lessons after he's a star. —Sacha Guitry, French movie director.

[30]

MUSIC OF TODAY PROGRAM HEARD AT TANGLEWOOD

Fromm Foundation Event Features Contemporary Composers

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 9 — One of the tenets of the Berkshire Music Center is that its young people shall hear the music which is being made today. To that end a special program, given through the generosity of the Fromm Music Foundation, was produced tonight in the theater-concert hall.

Applaud for Effort

The audience numbered several hundred people. Applause was enthusiastic, but it seemed to us that much of it was due more for the what composers put into their works than the works themselves. Then, there are always those people who applaud because they think they should.

The concert opened with a spirited, technically flawless performance of the "Duo Concertante" by Stravinsky, played by violinist Ruth Posselt and pianist Irving Fine. The two performers were in absolute agreement and the work was given an ideal reading.

Ben Weber's "Serenade for Strings" was commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation. It was handsomely played by Messers Burgin, Krips, De Pasquale, Mayes and Moleux. It seldom fell sweetly upon the ear, but its dissonances were continual and probably logical.

Benjamin Britten's "Canticle 11, Abraham and Isaac" was finely sung by Miss Florence Kopleff, contralto, and Arthur Schoep, tenor. Seymour Lipkin was the accomplished accompanist. Mr. Britten writes easily for the voice and he had tonight two fine singers to relate the story of Abraham and Isaac. It is a thoroughly singable work with a very effective accompaniment.

William Masselos was on hand to play a "Klavierstucke" by Schoenberg and "Variations" by Anton Webern. Fine pianist that he is, Mr. Masselos approached the Schoenberg music in scholarly fashion. That he had little to say was not his fault. Webern's "Variations" had the virtue of brevity and considerable thematic variety. It also benefited from the playing of Mr. Masselos.

Played With Skill

Alvin Epstein, whose suite of songs "Sabrina Fair" was performed tonight, is a member of the faculty and former pupil of the Hartt College of Music, Hartford. His suite consists of four songs taken from Milton, Shakespeare, Herrick and Suckling. The accompaniment calls for violin, viola and piano and Messers Burgin, De Pasquale and Berkowitz played the tortuous measure with consummate skill.

The songs were sung by Arthur Schoep, a tenor and a fine musician. Mr. Epstein calls upon his soloist to provide both parlando and song, both of which were admirably accomplished. While these songs were not particularly melodious, they had a considerable impact upon the ear and seem worth hearing again.

The program closed with Aaron Copland's "Vitebsk, Study on a Jewish theme." Mr. Copland is surely one of the most significant of the American composers and there was much to admire in the skilful craftsmanship of this trio played by the composer, Mr. Burgin and Mr. Mayes. It contains some of the finest colorings and rhythms we have heard.

There will be another similar concert July 23. It is open without charge to the public.

MUSIC OF WEEK AT TANGLEWOOD

Benny Goodman, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, Soloists

Lenox, July 9—This second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood comprises an evening of chamber music by Haydn, Mozart and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet on July 11; and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings, July 13 and 14, and Sunday afternoon, July 15. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

All four of these concerts will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall, evenings at 8.30 p. m., Sunday afternoon at 2.30 p. m. In the event of rain the programs will be given in the big Music Shed.

The programs:

Wednesday, July 11—
- Haydn: String Quartet in E flat major, Op. 33, No. 2
- Mozart: Clarinet Quintet, K. 581
- Brahms: String Quintet in G major
  Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet (Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello).

Friday, July 13—
- Mozart: March, Andantino and Finale (Presto) from Serenade in D major, K. 320
- Mozart: Concerto in F major, for 3 Pianos, K. 242
  Soloists: Luboshutz and Nemenoff and Boris Goldovsky
- Mozart: Concerto in A major, for Piano, K. 488
  Soloist: Boris Goldovsky
- Mozart: Concerto in E flat major, for 2 Pianos, K. 365
  Soloists: Luboshutz and Nemenoff
  Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz, Conductors

Saturday, July 14—
- Bach: Brandenburg Concerto No. 2, in F major
  Soloists: Roger Voisin, trumpet; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Richard Burgin, violin.
- Bach: Violin Concerto in E major
  Soloist: William Kroll
- Bach: Suite No. 2, in B minor, for Flute and Strings
  Soloist: Doriot Anthony Dwyer
- Bach: Suite No. 3, in D major
  Charles Munch, Conductor

Sunday, July 15—
- Bach: The Passion According to St. John
  Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Hugh Ross
  Soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; James Joyce, bass.
  Charles Munch, Conductor

Next Week

The third week of the Festival concerts will commence with Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw in a recital of songs by Wagner and Richard Strauss, with Ralph Berkowitz at the piano; and the Brass Ensemble of the Boston Symphony, under the direction of Roger Voisin, in music by Gabrieli, Bonelli, Poulenc, Berezowsky, Wednesday, July 18, in the Theater-Concert Hall. The entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate the season's concerts in the 6000-seat Music Shed on Friday, July 20, when Charles Munch will give a program of orchestral works by Berlioz, Debussy, Roussel and Brahms. Dr. Munch will devote the Saturday, July 21, concert to Wagner, with Miss Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa (making his Tanglewood debut) and basso James Pease singing a concert version of Act 1 of "Die Walkure." Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor of the Sunday afternoon, July 22, concert, in a program of Rossini, Bartok and Schubert.

The infiltration of jazz into supposedly longhair summer music festivals is, by now, thoroughly commonplace although publicists continue to try to make something of Benny Goodman blowing the clarinet with symphonies. That's as standard in 1956 as a "revival" of Mozart.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 11 1956

Summer Music Events for This Week

The second week of the Berkshire Festival will begin this evening at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with a chamber music concert in the Theater-Concert Hall by the Boston Symphony String Quartet, assisted by Benny Goodman, clarinetist, and Eugen Lehner, violist. The program is comprised of Haydn's Quartet in E-flat major, Opus 33, No. 2; Mozart's Clarinet Quintet in A major, K. 581, with Mr. Goodman assisting; and Brahms' Quintet in G major for Strings, Op. 111, with Mr. Lehner assisting.

The Boston Symphony String Quartet, which will be making its first Tanglewood appearance as an ensemble, consists of the first-chair string players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra—Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins, concertmaster and assistant concertmaster, respectively; Joseph de Pasquale, solo viola; and Samuel Mayes, solo cello. The ensemble recently made its recording debut on RCA-Victor Records with a performance of Haydn's "Seven Last Words of Christ."

Solfege Class Opens

A six-week summer course in solfege opened Monday night, July 9, under the direction of Elna Sherman. The course, especially designed for recorderists, has been set up in response to interest in solfege shown by members of the Boston branch of the American Recorder Society.

Classes will be held Monday and Thursday evenings from 7 to 8:30 at 169 Bay State Road. Further information may be obtained by calling JAmaica 2-9271.

Montoya at Music Barn

Carlos Montoya, Flamenco guitarist, will be the second attraction in the weekly folk music series at the Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox, Mass., on Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Accompanying him will be the Spanish dancer, Trianita, in private life Mrs. Montoya.

Chiasson, Harpsichordist

Claude Jean Chiasson, harpsichordist, will present the first of four informal evening concerts at the Southern Vermont Art Center, Manchester, Vt., on Thursday evening at 8:30.

This concert, which will be of harpsichord music solely, will be followed by three others titled "Violin and Harpsichord" (Thursday, July 26), "Voice and Harpsichord" (Thursday, Aug. 9), and "Harpsichord in Chamber Music" (Thursday, Aug. 23). The violinist will be David Sackson. The singer will be Paul Gavert, tenor.

Max Roach Quintet

The Max Roach Quintet will inaugurate the weekly "Concerts for Connoisseurs" at the Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox, Mass., Thursday evening at 8:40. A feature of the Music Barn Jazz Festival last season, the group is known for a style which stresses organized orchestration, one of today's jazz trends.

Among those appearing with Mr. Roach will be Sonny Rollins, tenor saxophone; Richie Powell, pianist; and George Morrow, bass.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 11 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300
JUL 11 1956

Berkshire Festival Program Changes

Charles Munch has made changes in the hitherto all-Wagner Berkshire Festival programs scheduled by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood July 21 and Aug. 12. On July 21 the amended program will consist of Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings, the Symphonic Fantasies by Martinu, and the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkuere." On Aug. 12, the revised list will bring Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger."

Symphony's European Itinerary

Orchestra Plans 37 Concerts To Be Given in 13 Countries

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play 27 concerts in 13 countries during its five-and-a-half week tour of Europe in August and September, according to Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager. Under the baton of Charles Munch, the 106 players of the Boston Symphony will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival on Aug. 12.

The first of two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on Friday evening, Aug. 24, followed by a matinee in Dublin the next day. Five concerts will be given at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, Aug. 26-30. Then the symphony will visit Scandinavia for four days.

A high light of the tour is the invitation, recently issued by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow, for the Boston Symphony to be the first American orchestra to perform in the Soviet Union. During six days, Sept. 5-10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, and a pair of concerts will be given each in Leningrad and Moscow.

The U.S.S.R. will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour, including transportation by air and train, and will also pay a stipend for the four concerts. It is expected the Russian government will fly the members of the orchestra, its staff, and equipment from Helsinki to Leningrad, and from Moscow to its next date in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia.

Concerts subsequently will be performed in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres, Leeds, and London.

The itinerary follows:

Cork, Ireland, Aug. 24; Dublin, Ireland, Aug. 25 (matinee); Edinburgh, Scotland, Aug. 26 through 30; Copenhagen, Denmark, Aug. 31; Oslo, Norway, Sept. 1; Stockholm, Sweden, Sept. 3; Helsinki, Finland, Sept. 4; Leningrad, U.S.S.R., Sept. 5 and 6, Moscow, U.S.S.R., Sept. 8 and 9; Prague, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 11; Vienna, Austria, Sept. 12; Stuttgart, Germany, Sept. 13; Munich, Germany, Sept. 14; Zurich, Switzerland, Sept. 16; Berne, Switzerland, Sept. 17; Paris, France, Sept. 19 and 20; Chartres, France, Sept. 21; Leeds, England, Sept. 23; London, England, Sept. 24 and 25.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300
JUL 11 1956

Symphony Tour, Including Russia, Starts Aug. 14

LENOX, July 11 (UP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra today announced its itinerary for a Fall European tour which will mark the first appearance of an American Symphony Orchestra in Russia.

The orchestra will leave the United States Aug. 14 with 27 concerts in 13 countries scheduled, Manager Thomas D. Perry Jr. announced. On that day 79 members will fly from Logan International Airport and 40 more will sail with the orchestra's 16,000 pounds of instruments and baggage.

They will head for Shannon, Ire. The appearance behind the iron curtain follows an invitation by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow.

[31]

MUSIC OF TODAY PROGRAM HEARD AT TANGLEWOOD

Fromm Foundation Event Features Contemporary Composers

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 9 — One of the tenets of the Berkshire Music Center is that its young people shall hear the music which is being made today. To that end a special program, given through the generosity of the Fromm Music Foundation, was produced tonight in the theater-concert hall.

Applaud for Effort

The audience numbered several hundred people. Applause was enthusiastic, but it seemed to us that much of it was due more for the what composers put into their works than the works themselves. Then, there are always those people who applaud because they think they should.

The concert opened with a spirited, technically flawless performance of the "Duo Concertante" by Stravinsky, played by violinist Ruth Posselt and pianist Irving Fine. The two performers were in absolute agreement and the work was given an ideal reading.

Ben Weber's "Serenade for Strings" was commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation. It was handsomely played by Messers Burgin, Krips, De Pasquale, Mayes and Moleux. It seldom fell sweetly upon the ear, but its dissonances were continual and probably logical.

Benjamin Britten's "Canticle 11, Abraham and Isaac" was finely sung by Miss Florence Kopleff, contralto, and Arthur Schoep, tenor. Seymour Lipkin was the accomplished accompanist. Mr. Britten writes easily for the voice and he had tonight two fine singers to relate the story of Abraham and Isaac. It is a thoroughly singable work with a very effective accompaniment.

William Masselos was on hand to play a "Klavierstucke" by Schoenberg and "Variations" by Anton Webern. Fine pianist that he is, Mr. Masselos approached the Schoenberg music in scholarly fashion. That he had little to say was not his fault. Webern's "Variations" had the virtue of brevity and considerable thematic variety. It also benefited from the playing of Mr. Masselos.

Played With Skill

Alvin Epstein, whose suite of songs "Sabrina Fair" was performed tonight, is a member of the faculty and former pupil of the Hartt College of Music, Hartford. His suite consists of four songs taken from Milton, Shakespeare, Herrick and Suckling. The accompaniment calls for violin, viola and piano and Messers Burgin, De Pasquale and Berkowitz played the tortuous measure with consummate skill.

The songs were sung by Arthur Schoep, a tenor and a fine musician. Mr. Epstein calls upon his soloist to provide both parlando and song, both of which were admirably accomplished. While these songs were not particularly melodious, they had a considerable impact upon the ear and seem worth hearing again.

The program closed with Aaron Copland's "Vitebsk, Study on a Jewish theme." Mr. Copland is surely one of the most significant of the American composers and there was much to admire in the skilful craftsmanship of this trio played by the composer, Mr. Burgin and Mr. Mayes. It contains some of the finest colorings and rhythms we have heard.

There will be another similar concert July 23. It is open without charge to the public.

MUSIC OF WEEK AT TANGLEWOOD

Benny Goodman, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, Soloists

Lenox, July 9—This second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood comprises an evening of chamber music by Haydn, Mozart and Brahms, performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet on July 11; and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings, July 13 and 14, and Sunday afternoon, July 15. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

All four of these concerts will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall, evenings at 8.30 p. m., Sunday afternoon at 2.30 p. m. In the event of rain the programs will be given in the big Music Shed.

The programs:

Wednesday, July 11—
- Haydn: String Quartet in E flat major, Op. 33, No. 2
- Mozart: Clarinet Quintet, K. 581
- Brahms: String Quintet in G major
  Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet (Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello).

Friday, July 13—
- Mozart: March, Andantino and Finale (Presto) from Serenade in D major, K. 320
- Mozart: Concerto in F major, for 3 Pianos, K. 242
  Soloists: Luboshutz and Nemenoff and Boris Goldovsky
- Mozart: Concerto in A major, for Piano, K. 488
  Soloist: Boris Goldovsky
- Mozart: Concerto in E flat major, for 2 Pianos, K. 365
  Soloists: Luboshutz and Nemenoff
  Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz, Conductors

Saturday, July 14—
- Bach: Brandenburg Concerto No. 2, in F major
  Soloists: Roger Voisin, trumpet; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Richard Burgin, violin.
- Bach: Violin Concerto in E major
  Soloist: William Kroll
- Bach: Suite No. 2, in B minor, for Flute and Strings
  Soloist: Doriot Anthony Dwyer
- Bach: Suite No. 3, in D major
  Charles Munch, Conductor

Sunday, July 15—
- Bach: The Passion According to St. John
  Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Hugh Ross
  Soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; James Joyce, bass.
  Charles Munch, Conductor

Next Week

The third week of the Festival concerts will commence with Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw in a recital of songs by Wagner and Richard Strauss, with Ralph Berkowitz at the piano; and the Brass Ensemble of the Boston Symphony, under the direction of Roger Voisin, in music by Gabrielli, Bonelli, Poulenc, Berezowsky, Wednesday, July 18, in the Theater-Concert Hall. The entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate the season's concerts in the 6000-seat Music Shed on Friday, July 20, when Charles Munch will give a program of orchestral works by Berlioz, Debussy, Roussel and Brahms. Dr. Munch will devote the Saturday, July 21, concert to Wagner, with Miss Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa (making his Tanglewood debut) and basso James Pease singing a concert version of Act 1 of "Die Walkure." Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor of the Sunday afternoon, July 22, concert, in a program of Rossini, Bartok and Schubert.

The infiltration of jazz into supposedly longhair summer music festivals is, by now, thoroughly commonplace although publicists continue to try to make something of Benny Goodman blowing the clarinet with symphonies. That's as standard in 1956 as a "revival" of Mozart.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

JUL 11

Summer Music Events for This Week

The second week of the Berkshire Festival will begin this evening at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with a chamber music concert in the Theater-Concert Hall by the Boston Symphony String Quartet, assisted by Benny Goodman, clarinetist, and Eugen Lehner, violist. The program is comprised of Haydn's Quartet in E-flat major, Opus 33, No. 2; Mozart's Clarinet Quintet in A major, K. 581, with Mr. Goodman assisting; and Brahms' Quintet in G major for Strings, Op. 111, with Mr. Lehner assisting.

The Boston Symphony String Quartet, which will be making its first Tanglewood appearance as an ensemble, consists of the first-chair string players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra—Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins, concertmaster and assistant concertmaster, respectively; Joseph de Pasquale, solo viola; and Samuel Mayes, solo cello. The ensemble recently made its recording debut on RCA-Victor Records with a performance of Haydn's "Seven Last Words of Christ."

Solfege Class Opens

A six-week summer course in solfege opened Monday night, July 9, under the direction of Elna Sherman. The course, especially designed for recorderists, has been set up in response to interest in solfege shown by members of the Boston branch of the American Recorder Society.

Classes will be held Monday and Thursday evenings from 7 to 8:30 at 169 Bay State Road. Further information may be obtained by calling JAmaica 2-9271.

Montoya at Music Barn

Carlos Montoya, Flamenco guitarist, will be the second attraction in the weekly folk music series at the Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox, Mass., on Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Accompanying him will be the Spanish dancer, Trianita, in private life Mrs. Montoya.

Chiasson, Harpsichordist

Claude Jean Chiasson, harpsichordist, will present the first of four informal evening concerts at the Southern Vermont Art Center, Manchester, Vt., on Thursday evening at 8:30.

This concert, which will be of harpsichord music solely, will be followed by three others titled "Violin and Harpsichord" (Thursday, July 26), "Voice and Harpsichord" (Thursday, Aug. 9), and "Harpsichord in Chamber Music" (Thursday, Aug. 23). The violinist will be David Sackson. The singer will be Paul Gavert, tenor.

Max Roach Quintet

The Max Roach Quintet will inaugurate the weekly "Concerts for Connoisseurs" at the Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox, Mass., Thursday evening at 8:40. A feature of the Music Barn Jazz Festival last season, the group is known for a style which stresses organized orchestration, one of today's jazz trends.

Among those appearing with Mr. Roach will be Sonny Rollins, tenor saxophone; Richie Powell, pianist; and George Morrow, bass.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

JUL 11 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

JUL 11 1956

Berkshire Festival Program Changes

Charles Munch has made changes in the hitherto all-Wagner Berkshire Festival programs scheduled by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood July 21 and Aug. 12. On July 21 the amended program will consist of Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings, the Symphonic Fantasies by Martinu, and the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkuere." On Aug. 12, the revised list will bring Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger."

Symphony's European Itinerary

Orchestra Plans 37 Concerts To Be Given in 13 Countries

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play 27 concerts in 13 countries during its five-and-a-half week tour of Europe in August and September, according to Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager. Under the baton of Charles Munch, the 106 players of the Boston Symphony will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival on Aug. 12.

The first of two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on Friday evening, Aug. 24, followed by a matinee in Dublin the next day. Five concerts will be given at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, Aug. 26-30. Then the symphony will visit Scandinavia for four days.

A high light of the tour is the invitation, recently issued by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow, for the Boston Symphony to be the first American orchestra to perform in the Soviet Union. During six days, Sept. 5-10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, and a pair of concerts will be given each in Leningrad and Moscow.

The U.S.S.R. will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour, including transportation by air and train, and will also pay a stipend for the four concerts. It is expected the Russian government will fly the members of the orchestra, its staff, and equipment from Helsinki to Leningrad, and from Moscow to its next date in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia.

Concerts subsequently will be performed in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres, Leeds, and London.

The itinerary follows:

Cork, Ireland, Aug. 24; Dublin, Ireland, Aug. 25 (matinee); Edinburgh, Scotland, Aug. 26 through 30; Copenhagen, Denmark, Aug. 31; Oslo, Norway, Sept. 1; Stockholm, Sweden, Sept. 3; Helsinki, Finland, Sept. 4; Leningrad, U.S.S.R., Sept. 5 and 6, Moscow, U.S.S.R., Sept. 8 and 9; Prague, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 11; Vienna, Austria, Sept. 12; Stuttgart, Germany, Sept. 13; Munich, Germany, Sept. 14; Zurich, Switzerland, Sept. 16; Berne, Switzerland, Sept. 17; Paris, France, Sept. 19 and 20; Chartres, France, Sept. 21; Leeds, England, Sept. 23; London, England, Sept. 24 and 25.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

JUL 11 1956

Symphony Tour, Including Russia, Starts Aug. 14

LENOX, July 11 (UP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra today announced its itinerary for a Fall European tour which will mark the first appearance of an American Symphony Orchestra in Russia.

The orchestra will leave the United States Aug. 14, with 27 concerts in 13 countries scheduled, Manager Thomas D. Perry Jr. announced. On that day 79 members will fly from Logan International Airport and 40 more will sail with the orchestra's 16,000 pounds of instruments and baggage.

They will head for Shannon, Ire. The appearance behind the iron curtain follows an invitation by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow.

[31]

LUBOSHUTZ AND NEMENOFF, the celebrated two piano-team, shown from the Berkshire Festival programs since 1950, will return to Tanglewood Friday for an all-Mozart concert, with Boris Goldovsky, also as a soloist. They will appear with the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony players in the Theater Concert Hall at 8:30 p.m.

Music

Fromm Foundation Concert Presented at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FROMM Music Foundation made a valuable contribution to the cause of music and to the students and the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center with the presentation of the first of two free concerts of modern chamber music in the Theater at Tanglewood last night.

Aaron Copland, director of the Center, made a short, gracious introductory speech in which he spoke of the purpose of the concert, the aims of the Foundation and the wise philanthropy of Paul Fromm, the founder and president of the institution who modestly kept his seat when Mr. Copland spoke of his presence in the hall.

* * *

THE PROGRAM, organized by Mr. Copland, offered examples of chamber music of the last 30 years and included first performances of two Fromm Foundation commissions. The executants were first chair men of the Boston Symphony orchestra, faculty members of the Berkshire Music Center and guest artists.

This was a serious evening for students of all ages. There was much that was difficult to assimilate, both for the audience and for the artists, but it provided in music the equivalent of a well-displayed exhibition of abstract painting, or a reading, let us say, of Ezra Pound or e. e. cummings.

* * *

THERE WAS some latitude in inclusion of piano solos but they were among the most interesting of the exhibits. William Masselos gave the otherwise amorphous Variations of Webern and Arnold Schoenberg's Klavierstuecke expert inflections to mold it into discernible shape. Violinist Ruth Posselt and pianist Irving Fine attempted to give Stravinsky's Duo Concertante a more graphic portrayal than it consistently seemed to warrant. Alto Florence Kopleff, tenor Arthur Schoep and pianist Seymour Lipkin gave a valiant performance of Britten's Canticle II, "Abraham and Isaac;" Copland collaborated with violinist Richard Burgin and 'cellist Samuel Mayes in his own "Vitebsk," a study on a Jewish theme.

* * *

THE COMMISSIONS were allotted to two young Americans: Alvin Epstein, a student of Copland at Tanglewood only three years ago, and to Ben Weber, a New York composer who has won many other honors and awards. Weber's Serenade for strings, his opus 46, was played by Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins, Joseph de Pasquale, viola, Mayes and George Moleux, bass. It is in five short movements. By treating the double bass as a solo instrument and not as a mere foundation, he has lowered the tonal center of gravity until we had the impression that the ensemble was not in its most favorable register. Its intricacies required the services of Ingolf Dahl as conductor. Is it a fair question to ask if what is beyond the capabilities of such competent performers as last night's artists can be digested by and musically acceptable to any but a scholarly audience?

* * *

THE EPSTEIN suite was sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, assisted by Burgin, de Pasquale, Mayes and Ralph Berkowitz, piano. It is called "Sabrina Fair," a suite of songs, of which the first is Milton's poem, and the others his contemporaries, John Suckling, Robert Herrick, and Shakespeare. "Sabrina" is pedalmelt while the instruments are made to produce the effect of "translucent waves"; Suckling's "Constant Lover" is alternately sung and spoken. Moods were clearly established and the writing was advantageous for the component individuals.

The second of the two Fromm concerts will be given July 23.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485

JUL 11 1956

Queen," 1, 4:35, 8.

Berkshire Festival Program Changes

Charles Munch has made changes in the hitherto all-Wagner Berkshire Festival programs scheduled by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood July 21 and Aug. 12. On July 21 the amended program will consist of Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings, the Symphonic Fantasies by Martinu, and the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkuere." On Aug. 12, the revised list will bring Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger."

Festival Program Changes Made At Two Concerts

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has made changes in two of the programs the orchestra will play in the Music Shed at Tanglewood during the current Berkshire Festival.

Instead of two all-Wagner programs on Saturday evening, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, Dr. Munch has made substitutions in the first half of each concert.

On July 21, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" will open the program, followed by Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6), which the conductor commissioned for the Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary season, and which was named by the New York Music Critics' Circle the best new orchestral work presented in New York in the year 1955. Both the Barber and Martinu works will be receiving first performances at Tanglewood. They will replace the previously announced "A Faust Overture," Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," and Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

On Aug. 12, Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica," will be substituted for the previously listed Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauser and A Siegfried Idyll.

On both programs Dr. Munch will retain the concert versions of Wagner operas originally scheduled: Act I of "Die Walkure" on July 21, with Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease as soloists; and Act III of "Die Meistersinger" (opening and final scene), with Messrs. Da Costa and Pease and Marguerite Willauer in solo roles.

Tanglewood Tales

The second of the six Thursday evening symphony concerts in the Tanglewood Music Shed by scholarship students of the Berkshire Music Center, will take place at 8:30 p.m. on Thursday.

The program is:

Overture from Oberon — Weber
Conductor: Kenneth Schermerhorn of Schenectady, N.Y.

Symphonie Espagnole, for violin and orchestra, Movements No. 4 and No. 5 — Lalo
Conductor: Jean-Louis Leroux, of Montevideo, Uruguay; soloist: Nancy Cirillo, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Death and Transfiguration — R. Strauss
Conductor: Eleazar de Carvalho

Symphony No. 1 — Copland
Conducted by the composer

The orchestra of 100 students is trained by Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Berkshire Music Center's department of orchestra and orchestra conducting. Aaron Copland is making one of his rare appearances on the podium at Tanglewood. The noted American composer is assistant director of the Boston Symphony's summer music school and head of its composition department.

Soloist on the program is Nancy Cirillo, 20, who studied at the Mannes College of Music in New York from 1953 to 1955, also at Fontbonne Hall and at Transylvania Music Camp. She is a first time student at the Berkshire Music Center.

* * *

Benny Goodman is listed to perform the world premiere of a concerto for two clarinets and orchestra—the other clarinet is not named—by R. Gallois-Montbrun, in the ninth international music festival at Besancon, France, Sept. 6-16.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE,

WEDNESDAY, JULY 11, 1956

Dates Listed By Boston Symphony

Will Tour Europe For 5½ Weeks

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., July 10.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will give twenty-seven concerts in thirteen countries during the five-and-a-half-week tour of Europe, according to the itinerary announced by its manager, Thomas D. Perry Jr., today at Tanglewood.

The orchestra's 106 musicians and their conductor, Charles Munch, will fly to Ireland immediately after the close of the current Berkshire Festival here Aug. 12. After playing in Cork Friday night, Aug. 24, and in Dublin the following afternoon, they will go to Scotland for five concerts of the festival at Edinburgh Aug. 26 to 30. Concerts will follow in Copenhagen Aug. 31, Oslo Sept. 1, Stockholm Sept. 3 and Helsinki Sept. 4.

Will Play in Russia

In the Soviet Union, the orchestra will play in Leningrad Sept. 5 and 6 and Moscow Sept. 8 and 9. The touring schedule continues with concerts in Prague, Sept. 11; Vienna, Sept. 12; Stuttgart, Sept. 13; Munich, Sept. 14; Zurich, Sept. 15; Berne, Sept. 17; Paris, Sept. 19 and 20; Chartres, Sept. 21; Leeds, Sept. 23 and London, Sept. 24 and 25. Pierre Monteux, who was the orchestra's regular conductor from 1919 to 1924, will conduct ten of the concerts.

Seventy-nine members of the orchestra and itis staff will fly from Boston to Shannon, Ireland on Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 14, on a chartered K. L. M. Super - Constellation. Forty others will sail the same day from Boston for Cobh with the instruments, scores and baggage on the Nieuw Amsterdam, and the rest of the party will fly to Ireland on Aug. 22. The return trip will be made in two chartered passenger planes and an air freighter.

The International Exchange Program of the American National Theater and Academy, representing the State Department, is helping the orchestra to meet transportation costs and deficits from the touring concerts. The Russian government is assuming the expenses of the portion of the tour in Soviet territory, and is also expected to meet the cost of the trips from Helsinki to Leningrad and Moscow to Prague.

Second Week of Festival

The second week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood opens tomorrow night with a concert by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet. Boris Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will be soloists with the Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra in a Mozart piano concerto program Friday night. On Saturday night Mr. Munch will conduct this orchestra in a Bach program and Sunday afternoon will be devoted to Bach's St. John Passion, also under Mr. Munch's direction.

Mr. Munch has changed two of the programs to be played by the complete Boston Symphony Orchestra at "Tanglewood on Saturday night, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, which were to have been devoted to Wagner. Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" will be played in the first half of the July 21 program, and the Aug. 12 concert will begin with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony. As originally scheduled, these concerts will close respectively with Act I of "Die Walkuere" and part of Act III of "Die Meistersinger."

THE NEW YORK TIMES, WE

BOSTON SYMPHONY TO FLY TO EUROPE

Orchestra Will Begin 6-Week Tour of 13 Countries at End of Berkshire Festival

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will fly to Europe for a six-week tour at the conclusion of the Berkshire Music Festival on Aug. 12. The orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, is scheduled to play twenty-seven concerts in thirteen countries.

The tour will begin with two concerts in Ireland, the first in Cork on Aug. 24, with a matinee in Dublin next day. The orchestra will play five concerts at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, Scotland, Aug. 26 to 30, as part of the Edinburgh Festival.

After a four-day visit to the Scandinavian countries, the orchestra will spend six days in the Soviet Union, Sept. 5 through 10. It will be the first American orchestra to perform in the U. S. S. R.

The Boston Symphony will play two concerts each in Leningrad and Moscow. The U. S. S. R. will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour, and also will pay the orchestra a fee for the concerts.

Thereafter the orchestra is to perform in Prague, Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Bern, Paris, Chartres, Leeds and London.

It will return to Boston at the end of September to begin rehearsals for its fall season.

Pierre Monteux, who was musical director of the Boston Symphony from 1919 to 1924, will accompany the orchestra on tour and will conduct ten of its twenty-seven concerts abroad.

The tour is being made in cooperation with the International Exchange Program of the American National Theatre and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the State Department to assist American artists to tour abroad.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

JUL 11 1956

Boston Symphony Leaves for Tour Of Europe Aug. 12

Lenox, July 10 — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play 27 concerts in 13 countries during its five-and-a-half week tour of Europe in August and September, manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., announced today.

Under the baton of Charles Munch the 106 players will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival Aug. 12.

A highlight of the tour is the invitation for the symphony to be the first American orchestra to perform in Russia. From Sept. 5 to 10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, a pair of concerts will be given each in Leningrad and Moscow.

Concerts also will be performed in Cork, Dublin, Edinburgh, Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres, Leeds and London.

Pierre Monteux has been invited by Dr. Munch to conduct 10 of the concerts.

On Sept. 25, two chartered planes again will fly the Boston Symphony's tour personnel across the Atlantic for the opening of the orchestra's 76th season in Boston's Symphony Hall on Oct. 5.

[32]

LUBOSHUTZ AND NEMENOFF, the celebrated two piano-team, absent from the Berkshire Festival programs since 1950, will return to Tanglewood Friday for an all-Mozart concert, with Boris Goldovsky, also as a soloist. They will appear with the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony players in the Theater Concert Hall at 8:30 p.m.

Music

Fromm Foundation Concert Presented at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FROMM Music Foundation made a valuable contribution to the cause of music and to the students and the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center with the presentation of the first of two free concerts of modern chamber music in the Theater at Tanglewood last night.

Aaron Copland, director of the Center, made a short, gracious introductory speech in which he spoke of the purpose of the concert, the aims of the Foundation and the wise philanthropy of Paul Fromm, the founder and president of the institution who modestly kept his seat when Mr. Copland spoke of his presence in the hall.

* * *

THE PROGRAM, organized by Mr. Copland, offered examples of chamber music of the last 30 years and included first performances of two Fromm Foundation commissions. The executants were first chair men of the Boston Symphony orchestra, faculty members of the Berkshire Music Center and guest artists.

This was a serious evening for students of all ages. There was much that was difficult to assimilate, both for the audience and for the artists, but it provided in music the equivalent of a well-displayed exhibition of abstract painting, or a reading, let us say, of Ezra Pound or e. e. cummings.

* * *

THERE WAS some latitude in inclusion of piano solos but they were among the most interesting of the exhibits. William Masselos gave the otherwise amorphous Variations of Webern and Arnold Schoenberg's Klavierstuecke expert inflections to mold it into discernible shape. Violinist Ruth Posselt and pianist Irving Fine attempted to give Stravinsky's Duo Concertante a more graphic portrayal than it consistently seemed to warrant. Alto Florence Kopleff, tenor Arthur Schoep and pianist Seymour Lipkin gave a valiant performance of Britten's Canticle II, "Abraham and Isaac;" Copland collaborated with violinist Richard Burgin and 'cellist Samuel Mayes in his own "Vitebsk," a study on a Jewish theme.

* * *

THE COMMISSIONS were allotted to two young Americans: Alvin Epstein, a student of Copland at Tanglewood only three years ago, and to Ben Weber, a New York composer who has won many other honors and awards. Weber's Serenade for strings, his opus 46, was played by Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins, Joseph de Pasquale, viola, Mayes and Georges Moleux, bass. It is in five short movements. By treating the double bass as a solo instrument and not as a mere foundation, he has lowered the tonal center of gravity until we had the impression that the ensemble was not in its most favorable register. Its intricacies required the services of Ingolf Dahl as conductor. Is it a fair question to ask if what is beyond the capabilities of such competent performers as last night's artists can be digested by and musically acceptable to any but a scholarly audience?

* * *

THE EPSTEIN suite was sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, assisted by Burgin, de Pasquale, Mayes and Ralph Berkowitz, piano. It is called "Sabrina Fair," a suite of songs, of which the first is Milton's poem, and the others his contemporaries, John Suckling, Robert Herrick, and Shakespeare. "Sabrina" is declaimed while the instruments are made to produce the effect of "translucent waves"; Suckling's "Constant Lover" is alternately sung and spoken. Moods were clearly established and the writing was advantageous for the component individuals.

The second of the two Fromm concerts will be given July 23.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485

JUL 11 1956

Queen," 1, 4:35, 8.

Berkshire Festival Program Changes

Charles Munch has made changes in the hitherto all-Wagner Berkshire Festival programs scheduled by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood July 21 and Aug. 12. On July 21 the amended program will consist of Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings, the Symphonic Fantasies by Martinu, and the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkuere." On Aug. 12, the revised list will bring Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger."

Festival Program Changes Made At Two Concerts

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has made changes in two of the programs the orchestra will play in the Music Shed at Tanglewood during the current Berkshire Festival.

Instead of two all-Wagner programs on Saturday evening, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, Dr. Munch has made substitutions in the first half of each concert.

On July 21, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" will open the program, followed by Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6), which the conductor commissioned for the Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary season, and which was named by the New York Music Critics' Circle the best new orchestral work presented in New York in the year 1955. Both the Barber and Martinu works will be receiving first performances at Tanglewood. They will replace the previously announced "A Faust Overture," Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," and Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

On Aug. 12, Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica," will be substituted for the previously listed Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauser and A Siegfried Idyll.

On both programs, Dr. Munch will retain the concert versions of Wagner operas originally scheduled: Act I of "Die Walkure" on July 21, with Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease as soloists; and Act III of "Die Meistersinger" (opening and final scene), with Messrs. Da Costa and Pease and Marguerite Willauer in solo roles.

Tanglewood Tales

The second of the six Thursday evening symphony concerts in the Tanglewood Music Shed by scholarship students of the Berkshire Music Center, will take place at 8:30 p.m. on Thursday.

The program is:

Overture from Oberon — Weber
Conductor: Kenneth Schermerhorn of Schenectady, N.Y.

Symphonie Espagnole, for violin and orchestra, Movements No. 4 and No. 5 — Lalo
Conductor: Jean-Louis Leroux, of Montevideo, Uruguay; soloist: Nancy Cirillo, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Death and Transfiguration — R. Strauss
Conductor: Eleazar de Carvalho

Symphony No. 1 — Copland
Conducted by the composer

The orchestra of 100 students is trained by Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the Berkshire Music Center's department of orchestra and orchestra conducting. Aaron Copland is making one of his rare appearances on the podium at Tanglewood. The noted American composer is assistant director of the Boston Symphony's summer music school and head of its composition department.

Soloist on the program is Nancy Cirillo, 20, who studied at the Mannes College of Music in New York from 1953 to 1955, also at Fontbonne Hall and at Transylvania Music Camp. She is a first time student at the Berkshire Music Center.

* * *

Benny Goodman is listed to perform the world premiere of a concerto for two clarinets and orchestra—the other clarinet is not named—by R. Gallois-Montbrun, in the ninth international music festival at Besancon, France, Sept. 6-16.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE,

WEDNESDAY, JULY 11, 1956

DatesListed By Boston Symphony

Will Tour Europe For 5½ Weeks

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., July 10.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will give twenty-seven concerts in thirteen countries during the five-and-a-half-week tour of Europe, according to the itinerary announced by its manager, Thomas D. Perry jr., today at Tanglewood.

The orchestra's 106 musicians and their conductor, Charles Munch, will fly to Ireland immediately after the close of the current Berkshire Festival here Aug. 12. After playing in Cork Friday night, Aug. 24, and in Dublin the following afternoon, they will go to Scotland for five concerts of the festival at Edinburgh Aug. 26 to 30. Concerts will follow in Copenhagen Aug. 31, Oalo Sept. 1, Stockholm Sept. 3 and Helsinki Sept. 4.

Will Play in Russia

In the Soviet Union, the orchestra will play in Leningrad Sept. 5 and 6 and Moscow Sept. 8 and 9. The touring schedule continues with concerts in Prague, Sept. 11; Vienna, Sept. 12; Stuttgart, Sept. 13; Munich, Sept. 14; Zurich, Sept. 16; Berne, Sept. 17; Paris, Sept. 19 and 20; Chartres, Sept. 21; Leeds, Sept. 23 and London, Sept. 24 and 25. Pierre Monteux, who was the orchestra's regular conductor from 1919 to 1924, will conduct ten of the concerts.

Seventy-nine members of the orchestra and itis staff will fly from Boston to Shannon, Ireland on Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 14, on a chartered K. L. M. Super - Constellation. Forty others will sail the same day from Boston for Cobh with the instruments, scores and baggage on the Nieuw Amsterdam, and the rest of the party will fly to Ireland on Aug. 22. The return trip will be made in two chartered passenger planes and an air freighter.

The International Exchange Program of the American National Theater and Academy, representing the State Department, is helping the orchestra to meet transportation costs and deficits from the touring concerts. The Russian government is assuming the expenses of the portion of the tour in Soviet territory, and is also expected to meet the cost of the trips from Helsinki to Leningrad and Moscow to Prague.

Second Week of Festival

The second week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood opens tomorrow night with a concert by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet. Boris Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will be soloists with the Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra in a Mozart piano concerto program Friday night. On Saturday night Mr. Munch will conduct this orchestra in a Bach program and Sunday afternoon will be devoted to Bach's St. John Passion, also under Mr. Munch's direction.

Mr. Munch has changed two of the programs to be played by the complete Boston Symphony Orchestra at "Tanglewood on Saturday night, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, which were to have been devoted to Wagner. Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" will be played in the first half of the July 21 program, and the Aug. 12 concert will begin with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony. As originally scheduled, these concerts will close respectively with Act I of "Die Walkuere" and part of Act III of "Die Meistersinger."

THE NEW YORK TIMES, WE

BOSTON SYMPHONY TO FLY TO EUROPE

Orchestra Will Begin 6-Week Tour of 13 Countries at End of Berkshire Festival

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will fly to Europe for a six-week tour at the conclusion of the Berkshire Music Festival on Aug. 12. The orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, is scheduled to play twenty-seven concerts in thirteen countries.

The tour will begin with two concerts in Ireland, the first in Cork on Aug. 24, with a matinee in Dublin next day. The orchestra will play five concerts at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, Scotland, Aug. 26 to 30, as part of the Edinburgh Festival.

After a four-day visit to the Scandinavian countries, the orchestra will spend six days in the Soviet Union, Sept. 5 through 10. It will be the first American orchestra to perform in the U. S. S. R.

The Boston Symphony will play two concerts each in Leningrad and Moscow. The U. S. S. R. will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour, and also will pay the orchestra a fee for the concerts.

Thereafter the orchestra is to perform in Prague, Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Bern, Paris, Chartres, Leeds and London.

It will return to Boston at the end of September to begin rehearsals for its fall season.

Pierre Monteux, who was musical director of the Boston Symphony from 1919 to 1924, will accompany the orchestra on tour and will conduct ten of its twenty-seven concerts abroad.

The tour is being made in cooperation with the International Exchange Program of the American National Theatre and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the State Department to assist American artists to tour abroad.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

JUL 11 1956

Boston Symphony Leaves for Tour Of Europe Aug. 12

Lenox, July 10 — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play 27 concerts in 13 countries during its five-and-a-half week tour of Europe in August and September, manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., announced today.

Under the baton of Charles Munch the 106 players will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival Aug. 12.

A highlight of the tour is the invitation for the symphony to be the first American orchestra to perform in Russia. From Sept. 5 to 10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, a pair of concerts will be given each in Leningrad and Moscow.

Concerts also will be performed in Cork, Dublin, Edinburgh, Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres, Leeds and London.

Pierre Monteux has been invited by Dr. Munch to conduct 10 of the concerts.

On Sept. 25, two chartered planes again will fly the Boston Symphony's tour personnel across the Atlantic for the opening of the orchestra's 76th season in Boston's Symphony Hall on Oct. 5.

The Berkshire Eagle, Wednesday, July 11, 1956

BSO Manager Gives Itinerary For European Concert Tour

Orchestra To Play 27 Concerts in 13 Countries—Opening in Ireland—Group Leaving Boston on Aug. 14

TANGLEWOOD — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play 27 concerts on 13 countries during its five-and-a-half week tour of Europe in August and September, manager Thomas D. Perry Jr., announced today.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, its music director for the past seven years, the 106 players of the Boston Symphony will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival here on Aug. 12.

At Edinburgh Festival

The first of two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on Friday evening, Aug. 24, followed by a matinee in Dublin the next day. Five concerts will be given at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, Aug. 26-30. Then the symphony will visit Scandinavia for four days.

A high light of the tour is the invitation, recently issued by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow and immediately accepted by the board of trustees of the orchestra, for the Boston Symphony to be the first American orchestra to perform in the U.S.S.R. During the six days, Sept. 5-10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, a pair of concerts will be given in both Leningrad and Moscow. The U.S.S.R. will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour, including transportation by air and train, and will also pay a stipend for the four concerts. It is expected the Russian government will fly the members of the orchestra, its staff and equipment from Helsinki to Leningrad, and from Moscow to its next date in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia.

Concerts subsequently will be performed in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres—in the famous Cathedral—Leeds and London.

The Schedule

The itinerary follows:

Cork, Ireland, Aug. 24; Dublin, Ireland Aug. 25 (matinee); Edinburgh, Scotland Aug. 26 through 30; Copenhagen, Denmark, Aug. 31; Oslo, Norway, Sept. 1 Stockholm, Sweden, Sept. 3; Helsinki, Finland, Sept. 4; Leningrad, U.S.S.R., Sept 5 and 6; Moscow, U.S.S.R., Sept. 8 and 9; Prague, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 11; Vienna, Austria, Sept. 12; Stuttgart, Germany, Sept. 13; Munich, Germany, Sept. 14; Zurich, Switzerland, Sept. 16; Berne, Switzerland, Sept. 17; Paris, France, Sept. 19 and 20; Chartres, France, Sept. 21; Leeds, England, Sept. 23; London, England, Sept. 24 and 25.

Monteux To Conduct

Pierre Monteux, once the regular music director of the Boston Symphony (1919-1924), has been invited by his friend and colleague, Dr. Munch, to conduct some 10 of the orchestra's 27 concerts abroad.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's tour of Europe is to be made in cooperation with the International Exchange Program of the American National Theater and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the State Department to assist American performing artists to tour abroad, to help cover the cost of transatlantic transportation by air and to help defray deficits from concerts abroad.

Leave From Boston

The six-week, 24-concert schedule of the Berkshire Festival which opened last week terminates on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12. On Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 14, a K.L.M. Royal Dutch Airlines chartered Super-Constellation will transport 79 persons from Logan Airport, Boston, to Shannon Airport, Ireland. Some 40 persons will sail simultaneously, along with the orchestra's 16,000 pounds of instruments and scores and baggage, aboard the Nieuw Amsterdam of the Holland-American Line from Boston to Cobh, Ireland. A 59-passenger K.L.M. Constellation will bring the rearguard of the orchestra to Ireland on Aug. 22. Included in the party will be a staff of 10, some wives of members of the orchestra and newspaper critics.

At the conclusion of the second London concert in Festival Hall on Sept. 25, two chartered planes again will fly the Boston Symphony's personnel across the Atlantic, while a special air freighter will bring their equipment in time for the opening of the orchestra's 76th season in Boston's Symphony Hall on Friday, Oct. 5.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 184,973
JUL 11 1956

Petrovec

SIGNING THE CONTRACT for transportation of the 106-man Boston Symphony Orchestra by KLM Royal Dutch Airlines from Boston to Europe is Thomas D. Perry Jr., BSO manager, seated at right, with Dolf C. Bulterman, district manager of the Royal Dutch Airlines, Boston. Looking on is Gail W. Rector, the orchestra's assistant manager. The map shows the 13 countries in Europe in which the BSO will play 27 concerts, traveling as far east as Moscow.

NEW YORK TIMES, THURSDAY, JULY 12, 1956.

2 PROGRAMS REVISED

Tanglewood Concerts July 21 and Aug. 12 List Works

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announced revisions yesterday in its Berkshire Festival programs for the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Mass. The concerts will be conducted by Charles Munch on Saturday evening, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12.

The revised July 21 program will offer Barber's Adagio for Strings; Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques," commissioned for the Boston Symphony's seventy-fifth anniversary last season, and Act I of "Die Walkuere," with Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease as soloists.

The Aug. 12 program lists the Beethoven "Eroica" Symphony and Act III of "Die Meistersinger," with Margaret Willauer and Messrs. Pease and Da Costa as soloists.

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., WEDNESDAY, JULY 11, 1956

Boston Symphony Leaves for Tour Of Europe Aug. 12

Lenox, July 10 — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play 27 concerts in 13 countries during its five-and-a-half week tour of Europe in August and September, manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., announced today.

Under the baton of Charles Munch the 106 players will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival Aug. 12.

A highlight of the tour is the invitation for the symphony to be the first American orchestra to perform in Russia. From Sept. 5 to 10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, a pair of concerts will be given each in Leningrad and Moscow.

Concerts also will be performed in Cork, Dublin, Edinburgh, Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres, Leeds and London.

Pierre Monteux has been invited by Dr. Munch to conduct 10 of the concerts.

On Sept. 25, two chartered planes again will fly the Boston Symphony's tour personnel across the Atlantic for the opening of the orchestra's 76th season in Boston's Symphony Hall on Oct. 5.

Mapping Boston Symphony Tour

(United Press Telephoto)

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will highlight a six-weeks tour of Europe with two concerts to be given in the Soviet Union this fall. The organization, which performs at Tanglewood in Lenox during the summer, has been invited to play in Leningrad and Moscow, marking the first time an American orchestra has played in the USSR. In this picture at Lenox, Manager Thomas Perry, right, and Assistant Manager Gail Rector sign an agreement with KLM Airlines official Dolph Bulterman, left, for flying the 106-man orchestra and staff to and from Europe. The map in the background indicates the tour route.

Symphony Plans Four Concerts on Russia Tour

During its five-and-a-half-week tour of Europe in August and September, the Boston Symphony Orchestra will play 27 concerts in 13 countries including Russia.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, its music director for the past seven years, the 106 players of the Boston Symphony will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival here on Aug. 12.

The first of two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on Friday evening, Aug. 24, followed by a matinee in Dublin the next day. Five concerts will be given at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, Aug. 26-30, then the symphony will visit Scandinavia for four days.

A highlight of the tour is the invitation, recently issued by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow and immediately accepted by the Board of Trustees of the orchestra, for the Boston Symphony to be the first American orchestra to perform in the U. S. S. R. During the six days, Sept. 5-10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, a pair of concerts will be given each in Leningrad and Moscow.

The U. S. S. R. will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour, including transportation by air and train, and will also pay a stipend for the four concerts. It is expected the Russian government will fly the members of the orchestra, its staff and equipment from Helsinki to Leningrad, and from Moscow to its next date in Prague, capital of Czechoslovkia.

Concerts subsequently will be performed in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres—the orchestra has been invited to play in the famous Cathedral—Leeds and London.

[39]

TIMES-UNION * Albany, Wed., July 11, 1956 16

AROUND THE TOWN:

3,000 Hear Goodman Play Mozart Concerto

By EDGAR VANOLINDA

Another chapter in "The Benny Goodman Story" was written Friday night, when Steve Allen's double became a "square" and tooted his licorice stick for the edification of 3,000 jazz and classical fans at Tanglewood alongside conductor Charles Munch and in front of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. And what did he play? Not, "Let's Dance" but a concert for clarinet by Mozart, no less.

Now, every comic wants to play "Hamlet" sometime in his career. By the same token, every jazz player wants to delve into the classics. As a matter of fact, all of the better band leaders have a complete record collection of the "classics," or "permanent music" as we like to think of it, which they spin when they tire of jam sessions.

WE LEARNED SOMETHING

And we learned something last Friday night about playing a clarinet. It isn't necessary to point the bell of the instrument to the stars. That's a technical gadget which the modernists, ala Ted Lewis have introduced to the dance world. Goodman just walks out on the stage like the successful businessman that he is, moistens his mouthpiece and aims his clarinet at the folks in the front rows. The arc of the bell of his instrument doesn't encompass more than a three-inch circle. He doesn't get red in the face; the veins in his neck do not swell to the bursting point. He just takes a comfortable stance and pours forth about as pure a tone as you will ever hear from this ancient instrument.

Now Wolfgang Amadeus, who was born 200 years ago, apparently didn't know the possibilities of a clarinet. At any rate, what few sole works he wrote for the instrument, stressed quality rather than quantity. Today's jazz clarinetists try to see how high—and that goes for trumpeters too—they can play and the tone which emerges is nothing more than an anguished squeal. In fact, this Mozart fellow, in the concerto to which Goodman played, ran frequently to the low side of the scale and we heard some tones come out that sounded like the deeper-throated bassoon. Even the staid "Proper Bostonians" in the audience forgot their New England heritage and gave out with the applause, which sounded more like Basin Street than Beacon Hill.

SOME MORE 'SQUARE'

So if you don't go for rock'n roll or Dixieland music, the postlude to "The Benny Goodman Story" will be written tonight when the virtuoso clarinetist joins up with the Boston Symphony String Quartet in the Theatre-Concert hall with some more Mozart, a bit of Brahms, and a sampling of Bartok, the latter who writes like the arranger of the off-beat music of the Dave Brubeck Quartet.

Or, if you do not dig this "suare" music, you can head your car to the nearby Jazz and Folk Festival, now in full swing at the Berkshire Music Barn a couple of miles from Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., and stamp your feet to the exciting rhythms of Duke Ellington and his modernists who will shatter the peace and quiet of the Berkshire Hills, next Sunday, at 8:40 o'clock.

"You pays your money and you takes your choice."

GOODMAN TO PERFORM TONIGHT

Benny Goodman, ace jazz clarinetist, will write the final chapter to the "Benny Goodman Story" at Tanglewood tonight when he plays solo with the Boston Symphony String Quartet. Here, he rehearses with conductor Charles Munch for a recent Mozart concerto with the orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485
JUL 11 1956

Boston Symphony European Tour Itinerary Includes 13 Countries

The final itinerary for the Boston Symphony Orchestra's European tour in August and September was announced yesterday by Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the orchestra. A total of 27 concerts will be played in 13 countries during five and one-half weeks.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony; Pierre Monteux, who will share conducting by invitation of Mr. Munch; the 106 members of the orchestra, a staff of 10, some orchestra wives, and newspaper critics will fly to Europe immediately after the close of the Berkshire festival in Tanglewood, Aug. 12.

The first of two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork, the evening of Aug. 24, followed by a matinee in Dublin the next day. Five concerts will be given at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, Aug. 26-30. Then the Symphony will visit Scandinavia for four days.

4 Concerts in Russia

A highlight of the tour is the invitation, recently issued by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow and immediately accepted by the board of trustees of the orchestra, for the Boston Symphony to be the first American orchestra to perform in the U. S. S. R. from Sept. 5 to 10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, and a pair of concerts will be given each in Leningrad and Moscow.

The U. S. S. R. will assume the expenses of this portion of the air and train, and will also pay tour, including transportation by a stipend for the four concerts. It is expected the Russian government will try the chamber of the orchestra, the staff and [illegible] from Helsinki to Leningrad and from Moscow to its next date in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia.

The complete itinerary: Ireland: Cork, Aug. 24, Dublin, Aug. 25; Scotland: Edinburgh, Aug. 26—30; Denmark: Aug. 31; Norway: Oslo, Sept. 1; Sweden: Stockholm, Sept. 3; Finland: Helsinki, Sept. 4; U. S. S. R.: Leningrad, Sept. 5 and 6, Moscow, Sept. 8 and 9; Czechoslovakia, Sept. 11; Austria: Vienna, Sept. 12; Germany: Stuttgart, Sept. 13; Munich, Sept. 14; Switzerland: Zurich, Sept. 16, Berne, Sept. 17; France: Paris, Sept. 19 and 20, Chartres—where the Orchestra has been invited to play in the famous cathedral, Sept. 21; England: Leeds, Sept. 23, London, Sept. 24 and 25.

The tour will be reported for the Globe by its Drama and Music Editor, Cyrus Durgin.

Berkshire Eagle, Wednesday, July 11, 1956

TANGLEWOOD • NOW thru AUGUST 12
Lenox, Mass.
Berkshire Festival
BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
THEATER-CONCERT HALL
WED., July 11, at 8:30—BOSTON SYMPHONY STRING QUARTET
Benny Goodman assisting
FRI., July 13, at 8:30—MOZART PIANO CONCERTOS
Soloists: Boris Goldovsky, Luboshutz and Nemenoff
SAT., July 14, at 8:30—BACH PROGRAM (Munch)
Soloist: William Kroll, Violin
SUN., July 15, at 2:30—BACH—ST. JOHN PASSION (Munch)
Tickets Wed. $2, $3; Fri., Sat., Sun., $4, $5.
— Reserved seats for July 13 & 14 all taken; for July 15, $5 only —
ADMISSION $2
LAST 4 Weekends: Shed Concerts (July 19-Aug. 12)
Tickets: $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50 (Box Seats $6.50)
Baldwin Piano
RCA Victor Records
For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Phone Lenox 600

Irwing Fines Rent White House

RICHMOND — Professor and Mrs. Irving Fine and children Claudia, Emily and Joshua, have rented the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul R. White for six weeks. Prof. Fine, who is on the faculty at the Berkshire Music Center, is professor of composition at Brandeis University. The Whites have rented a cottage at Dennis for the same period. Mrs. White and the children will stay the summer. Mr. White is at present spending his vacation with them. He will return July 22.

—Mrs. Bertha Gathers is visiting Mr. and Mrs. William Leonard in Rochester, N.Y., for a few weeks.

—Dr. and Mrs. Isador Lubin of Albany, N.Y. spent the weekend at their summer home Westwood.

BENNY GOODMAN stories. At Friday night appearance of Mr. G at Tanglewood a spy of ours overheard woman gasp, "He does look like Steve Allen." Mr. Allen portrayed Mr. G in movie of Goodman's life. Mr. Goodman a pupil of Gustave Langenus, and the Clarinet Quintet by Mozart that he plays tonight was performed here 25 years ago by Mr. Langenus at South Mountain Temple of Music.

—o—

Tanglewood Tales

For the first time since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has been under the musical direction of Charles Munch, the orchestra cut a record at Tanglewood this week. A crew of engineers from the RCA-Victor laboratories in New York supervised the recording, made Monday morning in the Theater-Concert Hall, and all musical practice in the area was put off for the morning.

Benny Goodman recorded with Dr. Munch and the chamber orchestra of the symphony the Mozart Concerto for Clarinet, K. 622, which he performed at Tanglewood last week, and with the Boston Symphony String Quartet the Mozart Clarinet Quintet, in A major, K. 581, which he will perform at Tanglewood tomorrow evening. The celebrated jazz clarinetist has recorded the concerto previously with other orchestras, but never the quintet.

* * *

The Brass Ensemble of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will give a concert at Tanglewood for the first time, on Wednesday evening, July 18, a program they share with Metropolitan Opera star Margaret Harshaw and pianist Ralph Berkowitz, is composed of Roger Voisin — director of the group — and Armando Ghitalla, trumpets; Harold Meek and Paul Keaney, French horns; Josef Orosz and Kauko Kahila, trombones; K. Vinal Smith, tuba, with William Gobson, trombone, assisting.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-420(
American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 40,485
JUL 9 1956

Chamber Music Listed For Tanglewood

Five principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, assisted by a number of noted guest artists, will participate in a concert of modern chamber music, to be played in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this evening at 8:30.

This is the first of two concerts —the second is Monday, July 23— under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, generously donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Center, the school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its annual Berkshire Festival.

Music of Igor Stravinsky, Ben Weber, Benjamin Britten, Arnold Schoenberg, Anton Webern, Alvin Epstein and Aaron Copland will be performed on Monday's concert by the following members of the Boston Symphony: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello; Georges Moleux, bass. Guest artists are: Ruth Posselt, violin; Irving Fine, Seymour Lipkin, Ralph Berkowitz, William Masselos, Aaron Copland, pianos; Florence Kopleff, contralto; and Arthur Schoep, tenor.

TIMES-UNION • Albany, Wed., July 11, 1956 16

AROUND THE TOWN:

3,000 Hear Goodman Play Mozart Concerto

By EDGAR VANOLINDA

Another chapter in "The Benny Goodman Story" was written Friday night, when Steve Allen's double became a "square" and tooted his licorice stick for the edification of 5,000 jazz and classical fans at Tanglewood alongside conductor Charles Munch and in front of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. And what did he play? Not, "Let's Dance" but a concert for clarinet by Mozart, no less.

Now, every comic wants to play "Hamlet" sometime in his career. By the same token, every jazz player wants to delve into the classics. As a matter of fact, all of the better band leaders have a complete record collection of the "classics," or "permanent music" as we like to think of it, which they spin when they tire of jam sessions.

WE LEARNED SOMETHING

And we learned something last Friday night about playing a clarinet. It isn't necessary to point the bell of the instrument to the stars. That's a technical gadget which the modernists, ala Ted Lewis, have introduced to the dance world. Goodman just walks out on the stage like the successful businessman that he is, moistens his mouthpiece and aims his clarinet at the folks in the front rows. The arc of the bell of his instrument doesn't encompass more than a three-inch circle. He doesn't get red in the face; the veins in his neck do not swell to the bursting point. He just takes a comfortable stance and pours forth about as pure a tone as you will ever hear from this ancient instrument.

Now Wolfgang Amadeus, who was born 200 years ago, apparently didn't know the possibilities of a clarinet. At any rate, what few sole works he wrote for the instrument, stressed quality rather than quantity. Today's jazz clarinetists try to see how high—and that goes for trumpeters too—they can play and the tone which emerges is nothing more than an anguished squeal. In fact, this Mozart fellow, in the concerto to which Goodman played, ran frequently to the low side of the scale and we heard some tones come out that sounded like the deeper-throated bassoon. Even the staid "Proper Bostonians" in the audience forgot their New England heritage and gave out with the applause, which sounded more like Basin Street than Beacon Hill.

SOME MORE 'SQUARE'

So if you don't go for rock'n roll or Dixieland music, the postlude to "The Benny Goodman Story" will be written tonight when the virtuoso clarinetist joins up with the Boston Symphony String Quartet in the Theatre-Concert hall with some more Mozart, a bit of Brahms, and a sampling of Bartok, the latter who writes like the arranger of the off-beat music of the Dave Brubeck Quartet.

Or, if you do not dig this "suare" music, you can head your car to the nearby Jazz and Folk Festival, now in full swing at the Berkshire Music Barn a couple of miles from Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., and stamp your feet to the exciting rhythms of Duke Ellington and his modernists who will shatter the peace and quiet of the Berkshire Hills, next Sunday, at 8:40 o'clock.

"You pays your money and you takes your choice."

GOODMAN TO PERFORM TONIGHT

Benny Goodman, ace jazz clarinetist, will write the final chapter to the "Benny Goodman Story" at Tanglewood tonight when he plays solo with the Boston Symphony String Quartet. Here, he rehearses with conductor Charles Munch for a recent Mozart concerto with the orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485
JUL 11 1956

Boston Symphony European Tour Itinerary Includes 13 Countries

The final itinerary for the Boston Symphony Orchestra's European tour in August and September was announced yesterday by Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the orchestra. A total of 27 concerts will be played in 13 countries during five and one-half weeks.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony; Pierre Monteux, who will share conducting by invitation of Mr. Munch; the 106 members of the orchestra, a staff of 10, some orchestra wives, and newspaper critics will fly to Europe immediately after the close of the Berkshire eFstival in Tanglewood, Aug. 12.

The first of two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork, the evening of Aug. 24, followed by a matinee in Dublin the next day. Five concerts will be given at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, Aug. 26-30. Then the Symphony will visit Scandinavia for four days.

4 Concerts in Russia

A highlight of the tour is the invitation, recently issued by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow and immediately accepted by the board of trustees of the orchestra, for the Boston Symphony to be the first American orchestra to perform in the U. S. S. R. from Sept. 5 to 10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, and a pair of concerts will be given each in Leningrad and Moscow.

The U. S. S. R. will assume the expenses of this portion of the air and train, and will also pay tour, including transportation by a stipend for the four concerts. It is expected the Russian government will fly the members of the orchestra, its staff and equipment from Helsinki to Leningrad and from Moscow to its next date in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia.

The complete itinerary: Ireland: Cork, Aug. 24, Dublin, Aug. 25; Scotland: Edinburgh, Aug. 26—30; Denmark: Aug. 31; Norway: Oslo, Sept. 1; Sweden: Stockholm, Sept. 3; Finland: Helsinki, Sept. 4; U. S. S. R.: Leningrad, Sept. 5 and 6, Moscow, Sept. 8 and 9; Czechoslovakia, Sept. 11; Austria: Vienna, Sept. 12; Germany: Stuttgart, Sept. 13, Munich, Sept. 14; Switzerland: Zurich, Sept. 16, Berne, Sept. 17; France: Paris, Sept. 19 and 20, Chartres—where the Orchestra has been invited to play in the famous cathedral, Sept. 21; England: Leeds, Sept. 23, London, Sept. 24 and 25.

The tour will be reported for the Globe by its Drama and Music Editor, Cyrus Durgin.

Berkshire Eagle, Wednesday, July 11, 1956

TANGLEWOOD
Lenox, Mass. • NOW thru AUGUST 12

Berkshire Festival
BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

THEATER-CONCERT HALL

WED., July 11, at 8:30—BOSTON SYMPHONY STRING QUARTET
Benny Goodman assisting

FRI., July 13, at 8:30—MOZART PIANO CONCERTOS
Soloists: Boris Goldovsky, Luboshutz and Nemenoff

SAT., July 14, at 8:30—BACH PROGRAM (Munch)
Soloist: William Kroll, Violin

SUN., July 15, at 2:30—BACH—ST. JOHN PASSION (Munch)
Tickets Wed. $2, $3; Fri., Sat., Sun., $4, $5.

— Reserved seats for July 13 & 14 all taken; for July 15, $5 only —

ADMISSION $2

LAST 4 Weekends: Shed Concerts (July 29-Aug. 12)
Tickets: $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50 (Box Seats $6.50)

Baldwin Piano
RCA Victor Records
For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Phone Lenox 600

Irwing Fines Rent White House

RICHMOND — Professor and Mrs. Irving Fine and children Claudia, Emily and Joanna, have rented the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul R. White for six weeks. Prof. Fine, who is on the faculty at the Berkshire Music Center, is professor of composition at Brandeis University. The Whites have rented a cottage at Dennis for the same period. Mrs. White and the children will stay the summer. Mr. White is at present spending his vacation with them. He will return July 22.

—Mrs. Bertha Mathers is visiting Mr. and Mrs. William Leonard in Rochester, N.Y., for a few weeks.

—Dr. and Mrs. Isador Lubin of Albany, N.Y. spent the weekend at their summer home Westwood.

—o—

BENNY GOODMAN stories. At Friday night appearance of Mr. G at Tanglewood a spy of ours overheard woman gasp, "He does look like Steve Allen." Mr. Allen portrayed Mr. G in movie of Goodman's life. Mr. Goodman a pupil of Gustave Langenus, and the Clarinet Quintet by Mozart that he plays tonight was performed here 25 years ago by Mr. Langenus at South Mountain Temple of Music.

—o—

Tanglewood Tales

For the first time since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has been under the musical direction of Charles Munch, the orchestra cut a record at Tanglewood this week. A crew of engineers from the RCA-Victor laboratories in New York supervised the recording, made Monday morning in the Theater-Concert Hall, and all musical practice in the area was put off for the morning.

Benny Goodman recorded with Dr. Munch and the chamber orchestra of the symphony the Mozart Concerto for Clarinet, K. 622, which he performed at Tanglewood last week, and with the Boston Symphony String Quartet the Mozart Clarinet Quintet, in A major, K. 581, which he will perform at Tanglewood tomorrow evening. The celebrated jazz clarinetist has recorded the concerto previously with other orchestras, but never the quintet.

* * *

The Brass Ensemble of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will give a concert at Tanglewood for the first time, on Wednesday evening, July 18, a program they share with Metropolitan Opera star Margaret Harshaw and pianist Ralph Berkowitz, is composed of Roger Voisin — director of the group — and Armando Ghitalla, trumpets; Harold Meek and Paul Keaney, French horns; Josef Orosz and Kauko Kahila, trombones; K. Vinal Smith, tuba, with William Gobson, trombone, assisting.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-420(
American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 40,485
JUL 9 1956

Chamber Music Listed For Tanglewood

Five principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, assisted by a number of noted guest artists, will participate in a concert of modern chamber music, to be played in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this evening at 8:30.

This is the first of two concerts —the second is Monday, July 23— under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, generously donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Center, the school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its annual Berkshire Festival.

Music of Igor Stravinsky, Ben Weber, Benjamin Britten, Arnold Schoenberg, Anton Webern, Alvin Epstein and Aaron Copland will be performed on Monday's concert by the following members of the Boston Symphony: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello; Georges Moleux, bass. Guest artists are: Ruth Posselt, violin; Irving Fine, Seymour Lipkin, Ralph Berkowitz, William Masselos, Aaron Copland, pianos; Florence Kopleff, contralto; and Arthur Schoep, tenor.

[34]

MUSICAL EVENT AT TANGLEWOOD BEAUTY-FILLED

Benny Goodman in Final Appearance On Chamber Program

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 11—The second chamber music recital in the theater-concert hall tonight drew an audience of 2147, nearly twice the number which attended the first concert. We are told that remaining concerts this week are completely sold out.

Rain Drives Crowd

Preceding the concert, several hundred people who meant to sit on the lawn had to rush to cover for the rains came down during as spectacular a thunderstorm as one could wish. By the end of the concert the stars were shining and a tiny moon was in evidence.

Benny Goodman made his second and final appearance here, joining the members of the Boston Symphony string quartet in a splendid performance of Mozart's "Clarmet Quintet in A Major," K. 581. The Boston quartet consists of Richard Burgin and Alfred Grips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola and Samuel Mayes, cello. When four such expert players get together, one may expect fine performances, but one does not always expect or hear so fine an integration of forces as was evidenced tonight.

The group plays with remarkable unity and interpretive solidarity.

The program opened with a delightful reading of Haydn's "String Quartet in E-Flat Major, Op. 33, No. 2." The work has all the Haydn charm. There was delicacy, earthiness and a surprise or two as the music wended its way. The final presto was as sparkling a gem as music ever produced.

Mr. Goodman and his colleagues gave good accounts of themselves in the Mozart quintet, one of the loveliest works in the literature. We had wondered, after hearing the clarinet concerto, whether Mr. Goodman could blend with a string quartet, for his tone is individual. We found out that he could. Thus the performance was well-integrated and finely proportioned. The variations in the final movement were played with dazzling virtuosity.

Difficult Quintet

The final work was the Brahms "String Quintet in G Major, Op. III." For this work, Eugene Lehner, violinist, joined the quartet. There are stumbling blocks in the way of interpretation of this quintet, but tonight we had men who were musicians as well as masters of their instruments. It would be difficult to imagine a more sincere, carefully thought out interpretation. There was a nice play of romanticism against the reality which can usually be found within the music of Brahms. Above all, there was the beautiful blending of instruments and the constant play of colors. It was a performance to be remembered.

As noted, the next three concerts this week are said to be sold out. Friday night Boris Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will collaborate in an all-Mozart program in which they have been touring the country. The "Concerto in F Major for three pianos and orchestra [illegible] and the "Concerto in E Flat Major for two pianos and orchestra, K. 365" will be featured with Goldovsky will be featured in the "Piano Concerto in [illegible], K. 488." The concert will open with three movements from the "Serenade in K Major."

Saturday night Charles Munch will direct an all-Bach program featuring William Kroll in the "Concertone for Violin and Orchestra in E Major, No. 3" and Doriot Dwyer in the "Suite No. 2 in B Minor for flute and orchestra." The program will open with the second Brandenburg Concerto and conclude with the Suite No. 3 in D Major, for Orchestra.

Sunday afternoon the "Passion according to St. John" will be sung by the festival choir and following soloists, John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan, baritone; Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto and James Joyce, bass.

McCollum Will Replace Lloyd At Tanglewood

Lenox, July 11—John McCollum, tenor, will replace David Lloyd in the role of the Evangelist in the Berkshire Festival concert performance of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," which will have its first performance at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon, at 2:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Hugh Ross, will participate; also, soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. All, including Mr. McCullum, are former students of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood.

David Lloyd has been prevented by illness from fulfilling this engagement, and Mr. McCollum will also assume his role in the Mozart Mass in C minor, K. 427, with Phyllis Curtin and Eunice Alberts as other soloists which Leonard Berstein will conduct as a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky on Aug. 4. Mr. Lloyd's teaching duties with the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center are being assumed by James Lucas.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • HAncock 6-9297
Variety
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Weekly Amusements
JUL 11 1956

[illegible] one-man recital.

Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Jive Routine for Goodman

Benny Goodman, who had been one-nighting with his new swing band for the past six months, has now gone temporarily longhair. He appeared as soloist with the Boston Symphony in the Mozart clarinet Concerto at the Tanglewood Festival in Mass. and repeats the performance today (Wed.) under Charles Munch's baton.

Following the classical stint, Goodman resumes with the jive at the Carter Barron Amphitheatre in Washington, D. C., in a series of four jazz concerts, July 14-17. He will premiere a new jazz concerto by Morton Gould, "Derivations for Clarinet and Band," a piece written especially for the Goodman crew.

c. New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
FRAMINGHAM, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 11,200
JUL 9 1956

Magic of Music At Tanglewood

LENOX, July 9—Learn how the magic of music can bring relaxation you never dreamed of by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood this weekend, July 13-14-15.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the Berkshire Music Festival has been described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time", and every visit to the scenic and enchanting Tanglewood estate in Lenox is a memorable one.

On Friday, July 13, at 8:30 p. m. the Festival Chamber orchestra will play a selection of Mozart's works, while the following evening a night of Bach is scheduled. On Sunday at 2:30, the Chamber Orchestra will perform Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" with chorus and soloists.

Tanglewood in Lenox, is located in the heart of the Berkshires, one of Massachusetts' most scenic playgrounds. Plan to spend the entire weekend touring this natural wonderful and enjoy the many facilities for swimming, boating, hiking and picnicking.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081
JUL 9 1956

Tanglewood Opens Bach-Mozart Series With Lukas Foss

By GEORGE W. STOWE
Special to the Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass. — Contemporary music, never lavishly served at Tanglewood since the Koussevitzky regime, was the primary concern in the first Sunday concert in the "Bach-Mozart" series conducted by Lukas Foss yesterday afternoon.

* * *

MR. FOSS paid his respects to the established classicists in the Haydn Symphony No. 86 and in Bach's D Minor Piano Concerto but it was obvious that he was dedicated, heart and soul, to the cause of new and unfamiliar music—in this case, compositions by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff, and Connecticut's native son, the late Charles Ives.

Seldom have we felt the unequivocal satisfaction from a new work that Mr. Fine's "Serious Song: Lament for String Orchestra" engendered yesterday. There is something of Samuel Barber in its lyricism and something of Ernest Bloch in its impassioned utterance. Yet this pulsating threnody has an individual strength and an intense glow, qualities fully realized in a moving performance by the Boston Orchestra.

The "Divertimento" of Haieff is light-weight in comparison, its five short movements constituting a pleasant divertissement on a Summer's afternoon. Its modern idiom hardly guarantees musical significance but perhaps its juxtaposition between the Ives and Fine works was merely good programmaking.

In Charles Ives' "The Unanswered Question" the composer's predilection for unusual orchestral effects and instrumental combinations was reiterated. A muted off-stage string orchestra vies with an onstage trumpet, woodwinds, and string choir in resolving the philosophical implications of "the perennial question of existence" (to quote Mr. Ives' program).

* * *

THE HAYDN of Mr. Foss was in general, admirably proportioned. The opening movement had energy and thrust without being boisterous, the Adagio had a caressing grace, and the Minuetto was full of rustic, peasant charm. Only in the finale were the tempi too rushed for complete articulation and the most refined phraseology.

What the Bach piano concerti demand is full integration of the instrumental elements, for they are not showpieces for the virtuoso performer. The pianist must subordinate himself to the ensemble, even play along in the orchestral tuttis. Unfortunately, Mr. Foss is not the ideal choice for the pianist-conductor of such a group.

Although he has the requisite technical equipment for the role, he did not play the self-effacing instrumentalist with the success that has been so well-examplified for us by Edwin Fischer and his Chamber Orchestra. Bach remains a specialized art with a dearth of skilled practitioners.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124
JUL 10 1956

Tanglewood Plays Suite By Epstein

TANGLEWOOD LENOX, Mass., July 9 (Special) — A young Hartford composer's name was linked with those of such celebrities as Stravinsky, Schoenberg, Britten and our American Aaron Copland on a program of contemporary music tonight.

He is Alvin Epstein, an instructor at Hartt College of Music whose "Sabrina Fair," a suite of songs for tenor and chamber ensemble, was performed by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and soloist Arthur Schoep at the Berkshire Music Center here.

Received Numerous Awards

The concert was one of two donated to the centre by the Music Foundation of Chicago, and Mr. Epstein's work was again one of two especially commissioned for this first event. Mr. Epstein has been the recipient of numerous national awards and is a former Fulbright fellow.

The verses set by Mr. Epstein include the opening of Milton's "Sabrina Fair." from "Comus," Suckling's "The Constant Lover," "Grace For a Child," by Herrick, and Shakespeare's "Sigh No More, Ladies." There is nothing much about the music, however, that would readily recall the age or temper of these poets to the average listener. Scored for violin, viola 'cello and piano, as well as voice, the settings more immediately suggest Menotti, the vocal line is part Parlando, part sung.

Perhaps it is merely old fashioned to believe there should be a "period" kind of setting for poetry of an earlier day. I would not stand upon the point. I did no' find however that for any time. Mr. Epstein's music caught up the essential quality of the lines he was interpreting. True, for Sabrina's watery state he found a kind of rippling passage work, but this is more elementary than important. All in al. I thought Mr. Epstein more engrossed in musical problems than in being a just and eloquent translator of his poets. They were men of particular directness. Mr. Epstein is a man of involment. This is not his failing so much as that of his time.

However, he received a good hand, and he did have the undoubtedly able assistance of Richard Burgin, Joseph De Pasquel and Samuel Mayes upon the strings. Ralph Berkowitz, piano, and Mrs. Schoep upon the larynz.

This evening's program also included Strabinsky's duo concertante performed by Ruth Posselt, violin and Irving Fine, piano; Benjamin Britten's "Abraham And Isaac," with Florence Konleff, soprano, Mr. Schoep, and Symour Livkin, piano; The Klavierstuecke Op 33 A and B of Schoenberg and variations, Opus 27, by Anton Webern, played by William Masselos; and Aron Copland's "Bitebsk," which I was unable to hear.

The other commissioned work was Ben Weber's serenade for strings, which might have been called from a mosquito who once knew Schoenberg.

—T. H. P.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Enterprise (e)
MARLBORO, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 5,165
JUL 11 1956

[illegible] and Louis Jourdan.

FESTIVAL WILL BEGIN FRIDAY AT TANGLEWOOD

Lenox—Learn how the magic of music can bring relaxation you never dreamed of by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood this weekend, July 13, 14, 15.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the Berkshire Music Festival has been described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time", and every visit to the scenic and enchanting Tanglewood estate in Lenox is a memorable one.

On Friday, July 13, at 8:30 p. m., the Festival Chamber Orchestra will play a selection of Mozart's works, while the following evening a night of Bach is scheduled. On Sunday at 2:30 the Chamber Orchestra will perform Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" with chorus and soloists.

Tanglewood in Lenox, is located in the heart of the beautiful Berkshires, one of Massachusetts' most scenic playgrounds. Plan to spend the entire weekend touring this natural wonderland and enjoy the many facilities for swimming, boating, hiking and picnicking.

Lenox is located on Route 7, just south of Pittsfield. Main east-west routes 2 - 9, and 20 all connect with Route 7.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,259
JUL 11 1956

Quincy Man Will Accompany Orchestra To Soviet Union

Jerome J. Lipson of 14 Norton Road, Quincy, violist with the Boston Symphony, will be a member of the first American orchestra to give a concert tour in the Soviet Union since 1917.

To Leave Aug. 14

Mr. Lipson will leave Boston on the Nieuw Amsterdam Aug. 14 with a group of symphony players embarking on a month-long tour that will take them to 15 major European cities, as well as Leningrad, Moscow and Prague.

His wife, the former Barbara Starr of Quincy, will accompany her husband for at least part of the orchestra's tour. She is one of three or four wives who have applied for visas to the Soviet Union, where the 105-man orchestra will be the guests of the Russian government. No action as yet has been taken on her request for a visa.

Mr. Lipson, formerly first violist for the Indianapolis Sympony Orchestra, trained at Curtis Institute in Philadelphia, an internationally famous music school. With the Boston Symphony for 10 years, he studied under the late Serge Koussevitzky at Tanglewood and has played with the Zimbler Symphonetta.

The orchestra, whose European tour has been scheduled for almost a year, arrived last month to play in [illegible] Russian cities as well as [illegible]. In early September the troupe will be flown in Soviet planes from Helsinki

MUSICAL EVENT AT TANGLEWOOD BEAUTY-FILLED

Benny Goodman in Final Appearance On Chamber Program

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 11—The second chamber music recital in the theater-concert hall tonight drew an audience of 2147, nearly twice the number which attended the first concert. We are told that remaining concerts this week are completely sold out.

Rain Drives Crowd

Preceding the concert, several hundred people who meant to sit on the lawn had to rush to cover for the rains came down during as spectacular a thunderstorm as one could wish. By the end of the concert the stars were shining and a tiny moon was in evidence.

Benny Goodman made his second and final appearance here, joining the members of the Boston Symphony string quartet in a splendid performance of Mozart's "Clarinet Quintet in A Major," K. 581. The Boston quartet consists of Richard Burgin and Alfred Grips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola and Samuel Mayes, cello. When four such expert players get together, one may expect fine performances, but one does not always expect or hear so fine an integration of forces as was evidenced tonight.

The group plays with remarkable unity and interpretive solidarity.

The program opened with a delightful reading of Haydn's "String Quartet in E-Flat Major, Op. 33, No. 2." The work has all the Haydn charm. There was delicacy, earthiness and a surprise or two as the music wended its way. The final presto was as sparkling a gem as music ever produced.

Mr. Goodman and his colleagues gave good accounts of themselves in the Mozart quintet, one of the loveliest works in the literature. We had wondered, after hearing the clarinet concerto, whether Mr. Goodman could blend with a string quartet, for his tone is individual. We found out that he could. Thus the performance was well-integrated and finely proportioned. The variations in the final movement were played with dazzling virtuosity.

Difficult Quintet

The final work was the Brahms "String Quintet in G Major, Op. III." For this work, Eugene Lehner, violinist, joined the quartet. There are stumbling blocks in the way of interpretation of this quintet, but tonight we had men who were musicians as well as masters of their instruments. It would be difficult to imagine a more sincere, carefully thought out interpretation. There was a nice play of romanticism against the reality which can usually be found within the music of Brahms. Above all, there was the beautiful blending of instruments and the constant play of colors. It was a performance to be remembered.

As noted, the next three concerts this week are said to be sold out. Friday night Boris Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will collaborate in an all-Mozart program in which they have been touring the country. The "Concerto in F Major for three pianos and orchestra, K. 242" and the "Concerto in E Flat Major for two pianos and orchestra, K. 365" will be featured by Mr. Goldovsky will be featured in the "Piano Concerto in [illegible] K. 488." The concert will open with three movements from the "Serenade in K Major."

Saturday night Charles Munch will direct an all-Bach program featuring William Kroll in the "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra, in E Major, No. 2" and Doriot Dwyer in the "Suite No. 2 in B Minor for flute and orchestra. The program will open with the second Brandenburg Concerto and conclude with "Suite No. 3 in D Major, for Orchestra."

Sunday afternoon the "Passion according to St. John" will be sung by the festival choir and following soloists, John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan, baritone; Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto and James Joyce, bass.

McCollum Will Replace Lloyd At Tanglewood

Lenox, July 11—John McCollum, tenor, will replace David Lloyd in the role of the Evangelist in the Berkshire Festival concert performance of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," which will have its first performance at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon, at 2.30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Hugh Ross, will participate; also, soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. All, including Mr. McCullum, are former students of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood.

David Lloyd has been prevented by illness from fulfilling this engagement, and Mr. McCollum will also assume his role in the Mozart Mass in C minor, K. 427, with Phyllis Curtin and Eunice Alberts as other soloists which Leonard Berstein will conduct as a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky on Aug. 4. Mr. Lloyd's teaching duties with the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center are being assumed by James Lucas.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081
JUL 9 1956

Tanglewood Opens Bach-Mozart Series With Lukas Foss

By GEORGE W. STOWE
Special to the Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass. — Contemporary music, never lavishly served at Tanglewood since the Koussevitsky regime, was the primary concern in the first Sunday concert in the "Bach-Mozart" series conducted by Lukas Foss yesterday afternoon.

* * *

MR. FOSS paid his respects to the established classicists in the Haydn Symphony No. 86 and in Bach's D Minor Piano Concerto but it was obvious that he was dedicated, heart and soul, to the cause of new and unfamiliar music—in this case, compositions by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff, and Connecticut's native son, the late Charles Ives.

Seldom have we felt the unequivocal satisfaction from a new work that Mr. Fine's "Serious Song: Lament for String Orchestra" engendered yesterday. There is something of Samuel Barber in its lyricism and something of Ernest Bloch in its impassioned utterance. Yet this pulsating threnody has an individual strength and an intense glow, qualities fully realized in a moving performance by the Boston Orchestra.

The "Divertimento" of Haieff is light-weight in comparison, its five short movements constituting a pleasant divertissement on a Summer's afternoon. Its modern idiom hardly guarantees musical significance but perhaps its juxtaposition between the Ives and Fine works was merely good programmaking.

In Charles Ives' "The Unanswered Question" the composer's predilection for unusual orchestral effects and instrumental combinations was reiterated. A muted off-stage string orchestra vies with an onstage trumpet, woodwinds, and string choir in resolving the philosophical implications of "the perennial question of existence" (to quote Mr. Ives' program).

* * *

THE HAYDN of Mr. Foss was in general, admirably proportioned. The opening movement had energy and thrust without being boisterous, the Adagio had a caressing grace, and the Minuetto was full of rustic, peasant charm. Only in the finale were the tempi too rushed for complete articulation and the most refined phraseology.

What the Bach piano concerti demand is full integration of the instrumental elements, for they are not showpieces for the virtuoso performer. The pianist must subordinate himself to the ensemble, even play along in the orchestral tuttis. Unfortunately, Mr. Foss is not the ideal choice for the pianist-conductor of such a group.

Although he has the requisite technical equipment for the role, he did not play the self-effacing instrumentalist with the success that has been so well-examplified for us by Edwin Fischer and his Chamber Orchestra. Bach remains a specialized art with a dearth of skilled practitioners.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • HAncock 6-9297
Variety
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Weekly Amusements
JUL 11 1956

[illegible] one-man recital.

Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Jive Routine for Goodman

Benny Goodman, who had been one-nighting with his new swing band for the past six months, has now gone temporarily longhair. He appeared as soloist with the Boston Symphony in the Mozart clarinet Concerto at the Tanglewood Festival in Mass. and repeats the performance today (Wed.) under Charles Munch's baton.

Following the classical stint, Goodman resumes with the jive at the Carter Barron Amphitheatre in Washington, D. C., in a series of four jazz concerts, July 14-17. He will premiere a new jazz concerto by Morton Gould, "Derivations for Clarinet and Band," a piece written especially for the Goodman crew.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
FRAMINGHAM, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 11,200
JUL 9 1956

Magic of Music At Tanglewood

LENOX, July 9—Learn how the magic of music can bring relaxation you never dreamed of by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood this weekend, July 13-14-15.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the Berkshire Music Festival has been described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time", and every visit to the scenic and enchanting Tanglewood estate in Lenox is a memorable one.

On Friday, July 13, at 8:30 p. m. the Festival Chamber orchestra will play a selection of Mozart's works, while the following evening a night of Bach is scheduled. On Sunday at 2:30, the Chamber Orchestra will perform Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" with chorus and soloists.

Tanglewood in Lenox, is located in the heart of the Berkshires, one of Massachusetts' most scenic playgrounds. Plan to spend the entire weekend touring this natural wonderful and enjoy the many facilities for swimming, boating, hiking and picnicking.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124
JUL 10 1956

Tanglewood Plays Suite By Epstein

TANGLEWOOD LENOX, Mass., July 9 (Special)—A young Hartford composer's name was linked with those of such celebrities as Stravinsky, Schoenberg, Britten and our American Aaron Copland on a program of contemporary music tonight.

He is Alvin Epstein, an instructor at Hartt College of Music whose "Sabrina Fair," a suite of songs for tenor and chamber ensemble, was performed by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and soloist Arthur Schoep at the Berkshire Music Center here.

Received Numerous Awards

The concert was one of two donated to the centre by the Music Foundation of Chicago, and Mr. Epstein's work was again one of two especially commissioned for this first event. Mr. Epstein has been the recipient of numerous national awards and is a former Fulbright fellow.

The verses set by Mr. Epstein include the opening of Milton's "Sabrina Fair," from "Comus," Suckling's "The Constant Lover," "Grace For a Child," by Herrick, and Shakespeare's "Sigh No More, Ladies." There is nothing much about the music, however, that would readily recall the age or temper of these poets to the average listener. Scored for violin, viola 'cello and piano, as well as voice, the settings more immediately suggest Menotti, the vocal line is part Parlando, part sung.

Perhaps it is merely old fashioned to believe there should be a "period" kind of setting for poetry of an earlier day. I would not stand upon the point. I did no' find however that for any time. Mr. Epstein's music caught up the essential quality of the lines he was interpreting. True, for Sabrina's watery state he found a kind of rippling passage work, but this is more elementary than important. All in al. I thought Mr. Epstein more engrossed in musical problems than in being a just and eloquent translator of his poets. They were men of particular directness. Mr. Epstein is a man of involment. This is not his failing so much as that of his time.

However, he received a good hand, and he did have the undoubtedly able assistance of Richard Burgin, Joseph De Pasquel and Samuel Mayes upon the strings. Ralph Berkowitz, piano, and Mrs. Schoep upon the larynz.

This evening's program also included Strabinsky's duo concertante performed by Ruth Posselt, violin and Irving Fine, piano; Beniamin Britten's "Abraham And Isaac," with Florence Kopleff, soprano, Mr. Schoep, and Symour Lipkin, piano: The Klavierstuecke Op 33 A and B of Schoenberg and variations, Opus, 27, by Anton Webern, played by William Masselos: and Aron Copland's "Bitebsk," which I was unable to hear.

The other commissioned work was Ben Weber's serenade for strings, which might have been called from a mosquito that once knew Schoenberg.

—T. H. P.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Enterprise (e)
MARLBORO, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 5,165
JUL 11 1956

[illegible] and Louis Jourdan.

FESTIVAL WILL BEGIN FRIDAY AT TANGLEWOOD

Lenox—Learn how the magic of music can bring relaxation you never dreamed of by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood this weekend, July 13, 14, 15.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the Berkshire Music Festival has been described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time", and every visit to the scenic and enchanting Tanglewood estate in Lenox is a memorable one.

On Friday, July 13, at 8:30 p. m., the Festival Chamber Orchestra will play a selection of Mozart's works, while the following evening a night of Bach is scheduled. On Sunday at 2:30 the Chamber Orchestra will perform Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" with chorus and soloists.

Tanglewood in Lenox, is located in the heart of the beautiful Berkshires, one of Massachusetts' most scenic playgrounds. Plan to spend the entire weekend touring this natural wonderland and enjoy the many facilities for swimming, boating, hiking and picknicking.

Lenox is located on Route 7, just south of Pittsfield. Main east-west routes 2 - 9, and 20 all connect with Route 7.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,259
JUL 11 1956

Quincy Man Will Accompany Orchestra To Soviet Union

Jerome J. Lipson of 14 Norton Road, Quincy, violist with the Boston Symphony, will be a member of the first American orchestra to give a concert tour in the Soviet Union since 1917.

To Leave Aug. 14

Mr. Lipson will leave Boston on the Nieuw Amsterdam Aug. 14 with a group of symphony players embarking on a month-long tour that will take them to 15 major European cities, as well as Leningrad, Moscow and Prague.

His wife, the former Barbara Starr of Quincy, will accompany her husband for at least part of the orchestra's tour. She is one of three or four wives who have applied for visas to the Soviet Union, where the 105-man orchestra will be the guests of the Russian government. No action as yet has been taken on her request for a visa.

Mr. Lipson, formerly first violist for the Indianapolis Sympony Orchestra, trained at Curtis Institute in Philadelphia, an internationally famous music school. With the Boston Symphony for 10 years, he studied under the late Serge Koussevitzky at Tanglewood and has played with the Zimbler Symphonetta.

The orchestra, whose European tour has been scheduled for almost a year, agreed last month to play in two Russian cities as well as Prague. In early September the troupe will be flown in Soviet planes from Helsinki

[35]

RALD-JOURNAL, Wednesday, July 11, 1956

String Quartet From The Boston In 'Tanglewood'

BORIS GOLDOVSKY

the previous evening. Following their down town concert, the duo pianists, in private life Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Luboshutz, with Miss Elsie Illingsworth, NAC vice president, were guests at supper in the Liederkranz Club.

Goldovsky will come to Syracuse University later this month to give a lecture during the week of lectures—recitals arranged by the School of Music and the Division of Summer Sessions. Late in the fall, he will bring the Cimarosa opera "The Secret Marriage" to Syracuse, the production known as the Goldovsky Opera Theater, directed and conducted by Goldovsky. This is substituted for "Lucia di Lammermoor," due to the passing of Mr. C. L. Wagner. The Goldovsky Opera will be sung in English. Famous Artists have brought Goldovsky productions on two previous occasions; this late 1956 engagement is in Civic Morning Musicals Series. Famous Artists will bring the Boston Symphony in October, Dr. Charles Munch conducting. Dr. Munch, director of the Orchestra, is music director of Berkshire Center, summer home of the Boston Symphony. In "Tanglewood" on Aug. 6-7, Boris Goldovsky will stage Lukas Foss' opera "Griffelkim."

The second week of the 1956 Berkshire Festival begins tonight in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass. with a chamber music concert in the Theater Concert Hall. The Boston Symphony String Quartet will play Haydn, Mozart and Brahms, assisted by Clarinetist Benny Goodman and Violist Eugen Lehner. The Quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins, concertmaster and assistant, respectively, Joseph de Pasquale, solo viola and Samuel Mayes, solo cello. This Ensemble's recent recording debut was on RCA-Victor Records with a performance of Haydn's "Seven Last Words of Christ".

Four more Wednesday night concerts of chamber music are set for this summer's Berkshire Festival. Artists include Roger Voisin conducting the Brass Ensemble of The Boston and Metropolitan Opera Soprano Margaret Harshaw, with Ralph Berkowitz at the piano on July 18; the Beaux Arts Trio July 25; Rudolf Serkin, piano, and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Aug. 1 and Zino Francescotti violin, Artur Balsam, piano, Aug. 6.

A program of piano concertos by Mozart will mark the final Bach-Mozart concerts on Friday night, July 13. Soloists will be the eminent Duo-Pianists Luboshutz and Nemenoff and their nephew, Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Center opera department, opera productor, pianist and commentator. Mozart concertos for one, two and three pianos will be heard. The program will begin with three movements from Mozart's "Posthorn" Serenade. Luboshutz and Nemenoff are known to Syracuse audiences having played in Central High School on several occasions. Their last appearance, for Civic Morning Musicals, Inc., was a gala event with a reception in the home of Mrs. G. Norman Knaus.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908
JUL 11 1956

Benny Goodman To Play Tonight At Tanglewood

Noted Clarinetist Will Be Heard With Symphony String Quartet

The second week of the 1956 Berkshire Festival will begin this evening at Tanglewood, Lenox, with a chamber music concert in the intimate theater-concert hall by the Boston Symphony String Quartet assisted by clarinetist, Benny Goodman, and violist, Eugen Lehner. The program is comprised of Haydn's Quartet in E Flat Major, Opus 33, No. 2; Mozart's Clarinet Quintet in A Major, K. 581, with Mr. Goodman assisting; and Brahms' Quintet in G Major for Strings, Opus 111, with Mr. Lehner assisting.

The Boston Symphony String Quartet, which will be making its first Tanglewood appearance as an ensemble, is made up of the first-chair string players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins, concertmaster and assistant concertmaster, respectively; Joseph de Pasquale, solo viola; and Samuel Mayes, solo cello. The ensemble's recent recording debut on RCA-Victor Records with a performance of Haydn's "Seven Last Words of Christ" has elicited wide critical acclaim throughout the nation.

After tonight four more Wednesday evening concerts of chamber music are scheduled for this summer's Berkshire Festival. Artists who will appear are Roger Voisin conducting the brass ensemble of the orchestra, and Metropolitan Opera soprano, Margaret Harshaw, accompanied by Ralph Berkowitz, piano, on the 18th; the Beaux Arts Trio on the 25th; Rudolf Serkin, piano, and members of the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Aug. 1; and Zino Francescatti, violin, and Arthur Balsam, piano, on Aug. 8.

On Friday evening a program of piano concertos by Mozart will be given inaugurating the final week end of "Bach-Mozart" concerts. The soloists will be the duo pianists, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, and their nephew, opera producer and commentator, Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. Mozart concertos for one, two and three pianos will be heard, and the concert will begin with three movements from the composer's "Posthorn" Serenade.

Remaining seats for tonight's concert, as well as for all concerts of the Berkshire Festival, are now on sale at the Tanglewood box-office, and telephone reservations are accepted—Lenox 600. Tickets of general admission, entitling holders to listen from the Tanglewood lawns, will be sold a few hours before the performance. In case of rain the program will be held in the Music Shed, which will also seat the lawn audience.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 11 1956

Berkshire Festival Opens Second Week At Concert Tonight

The second week of the 1956 Berkshire festival will begin this evening at Tanglewood, Lenox, with a chamber music concert in the intimate theater-concert hall by the Boston Symphony string quartet assisted by Clarinetist Benny Goodman, and Violinist Eugen Lehner. The program is comprised of Haydn's quartet in E flat major, Opus 33, No. 2; Mozart's Clarinet in A major, K. 581, with Mr. Goodman assisting; and Brahms' quintet in G major for strings, Opus 111, with Mr. Lehner assisting.

The Boston Symphony string quartet, which will be making its first Tanglewood appearance as an ensemble, is made up of the first-chair string players of the Boston Symphony orchestra: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins, concertmaster and assistant concertmaster, respectively; Joseph de Pasquale, solo viola; and Samuel Mayes, solo cello. The ensemble recently made its recording debut on RCA-Victor records with a performance of Haydn's "Seven Last Words of Christ."

After tonight four more Wednesday evening concerts of chamber music are scheduled for this summer's Berkshire festival. Artists who will appear are Roger Voisin conducting the brass ensemble of the orchestra, and Metropolitan Opera soprano, Margaret Harshaw, accompanied by Ralph Berkowitz, piano, on July 18; the Beaux Arts trio on July 25; Rudolf Serkin, piano, and members of the Boston Symphony woodwind quartet on Aug. 1; and Zino Francescatti, violin, and Arthur Balsam, piano, on Aug. 8.

On Friday evening a program of piano concertos by Mozart will be given, inaugurating the final week-end of "Bach-Mozart" concerts. The soloists will be the duo pianists, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, and their nephew, opera producer and commentator, Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. Mozart concertos for one, two and three pianos will be heard, and the concert will begin with three movements from the composer's "Posthorn" serenade.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Cape Cod
Standard Times (e)
HYANNIS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 16,424
JUL 11 1956

Trio Will Play To Help Fund

Concert in Wellfleet Benefits Scholarships

WELLFLEET, July 11 — The Wellfleet Scholarship Fund will benefit from proceeds of a concert by the Beaux Arts Trio at the Congregational Church here at 8:30 p.m. July 20, a trio comprising outstanding musicians.

Playing chamber music and solos will be Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello, and Manshem Pressler, piano. Their background ranges the globe: France, Germany, Israel, North and South America, and their international efforts compress a world of music into one concert.

Mr. Greenhouse is a mature musician, who studied with the great master of cello, Pablo Casals, for two years. Since then he has won a reputation as one of the major interpreters on his instrument, with appearances in most of the major cities of both Europe and America. He plays the famous "Visconti" Stradivarius cello, dated 1684. Casals considered him not only a remarkable cellist, but also a dignified artist.

Mr. Guilet, violinist, is equally famed in Europe and America as soloist and as a chamber musician, having worked with Jacques Thibaud and Georges Enesco. He was concert master of the NBC Symphony when this orchestra was created by Toscanini, and still holds this position. He plays the "Earl of Darnley" Stradivarius, dated 1712.

Mr. Pressler, the brilliant young Israeli pianist, was born in Germany, but fled with his family when Hitler came to power. He has been soloist with the leading symphony orchestra of this country, having appeared 17 times with the Philadelphia Orchestra. He is well known to European audiences in Scandinavia, Israel, Turkey, Greece and France.

Famed conductor Toscanini hailed a concert of the trio as "an inspiring experience;" at the Berkshire Festival, Dr. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, appraised their concert as follows: "The marvelous musicality of these three artists has been unknown in trio playing for many years. They are worthy successors to the last great trio, Thibaud, Casals and Cortot," and Zino Francescatti, the famed violinist, wrote that they were "a great ensemble with great artists."

Tickets for the concert can be obtained now at Wellfleet's Town Hall and at the door of the church the night of the performance.

ADELE ADDISON returns to Tanglewood at Lenox, Mass., as one of the soloists Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in Bach's "The Passion According to St. John." Charles Munch will conduct the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony.

NEW YORK POST, THURSDAY, JULY 12, 1956

McCollum Replaces Lloyd For Tanglewood Concert

Gazette, Schenectady, NY

John McCollum, tenor, will replace David Lloyd in the role of the Evangelist at the Berkshire Festival concert performance of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

DR. CHARLES MUNCH will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students.

Other soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

Mr. Loyd has been prevented by illness from fulfilling this engagement. Mr. McCollum will also assume Mr. Lloyd's role in the Mozart "Mass in C minor on Aug. 4.

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts will open tomorrow with a chamber music program of music by Haydn, Mozart and Brahms performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet. The program will be held in the Theater Concert Hall at 8:30 o'clock.

* * *

BORIS GOLDOVSKY, head of the Tanglewood Opera department, will appear as conductor and piano soloist on the Friday evening program assisted by Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff.

JOHN McCOLLUM
Takes Tenor Role

William Kroll, violinist; and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist, are soloist in the all-Bach program Saturday evening.

Dr. Munch will conduct the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon programs. The Sunday program will be given over entirely to the Tanglewood premiere of the Bach "Passion According to St. John."

* * *

TICKETS ARE available at the Tanglewood box office for all Festival concerts. Programs and a calendar of the more than 60 events at the Berkshire Music Center, with information of how to join the Friends' organization, will be mailed on request.

NEW YORK POST, THURSDAY, JULY 12, 1956

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Munch to Lead Bach at Tanglewood

With the Berkshire Festival now in its second week, concerts at Tanglewood over the week-end will be devoted exclusively to Mozart and Bach and will be held in the smaller Theater-Concert Hall which seats approximately 1,200. The four weeks of events in the 6,000-seat Music Shed begins July 20.

Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony, the ensemble which plays the events, will conduct two all-Bach concerts Saturday night and Sunday at 2:30. Saturday's program will include the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major; the Violin Concerto in E Major with William Kroll as soloist, and the Suite No. 2 in B Minor for flute and strings with the Bostonian's lady flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist. Sunday's event will be the "Passion According to St. John" with these soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, bassos. Hugh Ross has trained the chorus of Berkshire Music Center students.

Mozart Concertos Tomorrow

Tomorrow's concert finds three Mozart Concertos scheduled, each for a different combination. The well-known duo pianists, Genia Nemenoff and Pierre Luboshutz, will perform the Concerto in E Flat Major for two pianos, K. 365.

[36]

RALD-JOURNAL, Wednesday, July 11, 1956

String Quartet From The Boston In 'Tanglewood'

BORIS GOLDOVSKY

the previous evening. Following their down town concert, the duo pianists, in private life Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Luboshutz, with Miss Elsie Illingsworth, NAC vice president, were guests at supper in the Liederkranz Club.

Goldovsky will come to Syracuse University later this month to give a lecture during the week of lectures—recitals arranged by the School of Music and the Division of Summer Sessions. Late in the fall, he will bring the Cimarosa opera "The Secret Marriage" to Syracuse, the production known as the Goldovsky Opera Theater, directed and conducted by Goldovsky. This is substituted for "Lucia di Lammermoor," due to the passing of Mr. C. L. Wagner. The Goldovsky Opera will be sung in English. Famous Artists have brought Goldovsky productions on two previous occasions; this late 1956 engagement is in Civic Morning Musicals Series. Famous Artists will bring the Boston Symphony in October, Dr. Charles Munch conducting. Dr. Munch, director of the Orchestra, is music director of Berkshire Center, summer home of the Boston Symphony. In "Tanglewood" on Aug. 6-7, Boris Goldovsky will stage Lukas Foss' opera "Griffeltkim."

The second week of the 1956 Berkshire Festival begins tonight in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass. with a chamber music concert in the Theater Concert Hall. The Boston Symphony String Quartet will play Haydn, Mozart and Brahms, assisted by Clarinetist Benny Goodman and Violist Eugen Lehner. The Quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins, concertmaster and assistant, respectively, Joseph de Pasquale, solo viola and Samuel Mayes, solo cello. This Ensemble's recent recording debut was on RCA-Victor Records with a performance of Haydn's "Seven Last Words of Christ".

Four more Wednesday night concerts of chamber music are set for this summer's Berkshire Festival. Artists include Roger Voisin conducting the Brass Ensemble of The Boston and Metropolitan Opera Soprano Margaret Harshaw, with Ralph Berkowitz at the piano on July 18; the Beaux Arts Trio July 25; Rudolf Serkin, piano, and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Aug. 1 and Zino Francescotti violin, Artur Balsam, piano, Aug. 6.

A program of piano concertos by Mozart will mark the final Bach-Mozart concerts on Friday night, July 13. Soloists will be the eminent Duo-Pianists Luboshutz and Nemenoff and their nephew, Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Center opera department, opera productor, pianist and commentator. Mozart concertos for one, two and three pianos will be heard. The program will begin with three movements from Mozart's "Posthorn" Serenade. Luboshutz and Nemenoff are known to Syracuse audiences having played in Central High School on several occasions. Their last appearance, for Civic Morning Musicals, Inc., was a gala event with a reception in the home of Mrs. G. Norman Knaus

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908
JUL 11 1956

Benny Goodman To Play Tonight At Tanglewood

Noted Clarinetist Will Be Heard With Symphony String Quartet

The second week of the 1956 Berkshire Festival will begin this evening at Tanglewood, Lenox, with a chamber music concert in the intimate theater-concert hall by the Boston Symphony String Quartet assisted by clarinetist, Benny Goodman, and violist, Eugen Lehner. The program is comprised of Haydn's Quartet in E Flat Major, Opus 33, No. 2; Mozart's Clarinet Quintet in A Major, K. 581, with Mr. Goodman assisting; and Brahms' Quintet in G Major for Strings, Opus 111, with Mr. Lehner assisting.

The Boston Symphony String Quartet, which will be making its first Tanglewood appearance as an ensemble, is made up of the first-chair string players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins, concertmaster and assistant concertmaster, respectively; Joseph de Pasquale, solo viola; and Samuel Mayes, solo cello. The ensemble's recent recording debut on RCA-Victor Records with a performance of Haydn's "Seven Last Words of Christ" has elicited wide critical acclaim throughout the nation.

After tonight four more Wednesday evening concerts of chamber music are scheduled for this summer's Berkshire Festival. Artists who will appear are Roger Voisin conducting the brass ensemble of the orchestra, and Metropolitan Opera soprano, Margaret Harshaw, accompanied by Ralph Berkowitz, piano, on the 18th; the Beaux Arts Trio on the 25th; Rudolf Serkin, piano, and members of the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Aug. 1; and Zino Francescatti, violin, and Arthur Balsam, piano, on Aug. 8.

On Friday evening a program of piano concertos by Mozart will be given inaugurating the final week end of "Bach-Mozart" concerts. The soloists will be the duo pianists, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, and their nephew, opera producer and commentator, Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. Mozart concertos for one, two and three pianos will be heard, and the concert will begin with three movements from the composer's "Posthorn" Serenade.

Remaining seats for tonight's concert, as well as for all concerts of the Berkshire Festival, are now on sale at the Tanglewood box-office, and telephone reservations are accepted—Lenox 600. Tickets of general admission, entitling holders to listen from the Tanglewood lawns, will be sold a few hours before the performance. In case of rain the program will be held in the Music Shed, which will also seat the lawn audience.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 11 1956

Berkshire Festival Opens Second Week At Concert Tonight

The second week of the 1956 Berkshire festival will begin this evening at Tanglewood, Lenox, with a chamber music concert in the intimate theater-concert hall by the Boston Symphony string quartet assisted by Clarinetist Benny Goodman, and Violinist Eugen Lehner. The program is comprised of Haydn's quartet in E flat major, Opus 33, No. 2; Mozart's Clarinet in A major, K. 581, with Mr. Goodman assisting; and Brahms' quintet in G major for strings, Opus 111, with Mr. Lehner assisting.

The Boston Symphony string quartet, which will be making its first Tanglewood appearance as an ensemble, is made up of the first-chair string players of the Boston Symphony orchestra: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins, concertmaster and assistant concertmaster, respectively; Joseph de Pasquale, solo viola; and Samuel Mayes, solo cello. The ensemble recently made its recording debut on RCA-Victor records with a performance of Haydn's "Seven Last Words of Christ."

After tonight four more Wednesday evening concerts of chamber music are scheduled for this summer's Berkshire festival. Artists who will appear are Roger Voisin conducting the brass ensemble of the orchestra, and Metropolitan Opera soprano, Margaret Harshaw, accompanied by Ralph Berkowitz, piano, on July 18; the Beaux Arts trio on July 25; Rudolf Serkin, piano, and members of the Boston Symphony woodwind quartet on Aug. 1; and Zino Francescatti, violin, and Arthur Balsam, piano, on Aug. 8.

On Friday evening a program of piano concertos by Mozart will be given, inaugurating the final week-end of "Bach-Mozart" concerts. The soloists will be the duo pianists, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, and their nephew, opera producer and commentator, Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music center. Mozart concertos for one, two and three pianos will be heard, and the concert will begin with three movements from the composer's "Posthorn" serenade.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Cape Cod
Standard Times (e)
HYANNIS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 16,424
JUL 11 1956

Trio Will Play To Help Fund

Concert in Wellfleet Benefits Scholarships

WELLFLEET, July 11 — The Wellfleet Scholarship Fund will benefit from proceeds of a concert by the Beaux Arts Trio at the Congregational Church here at 8:30 p.m. July 20, a trio comprising outstanding musicians.

Playing chamber music and solos will be Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello, and Manshem Pressler, piano. Their background ranges the globe: France, Germany, Israel, North and South America, and their international efforts compress a world of music into one concert.

Mr. Greenhouse is a mature musician, who studied with the great master of cello, Pablo Casals, for two years. Since then he has won a reputation as one of the major interpreters on his instrument, with appearances in most of the major cities of both Europe and America. He plays the famous "Visconti" Stradivarius cello, dated 1684. Casals considered him not only a remarkable cellist, but also a dignified artist.

Mr. Guilet, violinist, is equally famed in Europe and America as soloist and as a chamber musician, having worked with Jacques Thibaud and Georges Enesco. He was concert master of the NBC Symphony when this orchestra was created by Toscanini, and still holds this position. He plays the "Earl of Darnley" Stradivarius, dated 1712.

Mr. Pressler, the brilliant young Israeli pianist, was born in Germany, but fled with his family when Hitler came to power. He has been soloist with the leading symphony orchestra of this country, having appeared 15 times with the Philadelphia Orchestra. He is well known to European audiences in Scandinavia, Israel, Turkey, Greece and France.

Famed conductor Toscanini hailed a concert of the trio as "an inspiring experience;" at the Berkshire Festival, Dr. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, appraised their concert as follows: "The marvelous musicality of these three artists has been unknown in trio playing for many years. They are worthy successors to the last great trio, Thibaud, Casals and Cortot," and Zino Francescatti, the famed violinist, wrote that they were "a great ensemble with great artists."

Tickets for the concert can be obtained now at Wellfleet's Town Hall and at the door of the church the night of the performance.

ADELE ADDISON returns to Tanglewood at Lenox, Mass., as one of the soloists Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in Bach's "The Passion According to St. John." Charles Munch will conduct the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony.

NEW YORK POST, THURSDAY, JULY 12, 1956 16

WORDS and MUSIC
By Harriett Johnson

Munch to Lead Bach at Tanglewood

With the Berkshire Festival now in its second week, concerts at Tanglewood over the week-end will be devoted exclusively to Mozart and Bach and will be held in the smaller Theater-Concert Hall which seats approximately 1,200. The four weeks of events in the 6,000-seat Music Shed begins July 20.

Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony, the ensemble which plays the events, will conduct two all-Bach concerts Saturday night and Sunday at 2:30. Saturday's program will include the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major; the Violin Concerto in E Major with William Kroll as soloist, and the Suite No. 2 in B Minor for flute and strings with the Bostonian's lady flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist. Sunday's event will be the "Passion According to St. John" with these soloists; Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, bassos. Hugh Ross has trained the chorus of Berkshire Music Center students.

Mozart Concertos Tomorrow

Tomorrow's concert finds three Mozart Concertos scheduled, each for a different combination. The well-known duo pianists, Genia Nemenoff and Pierre Luboshutz, will perform the Concerto in E Flat Major for two pianos, K. 365.

Gazette, Schenectady, NY

McCollum Replaces Lloyd For Tanglewood Concert

John McCollum, tenor, will replace David Lloyd in the role of the Evangelist at the Berkshire Festival concert performance of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

DR. CHARLES MUNCH will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students.

Other soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

Mr. Loyd has been prevented by illness from fulfilling this engagement. Mr. McCollum will also assume Mr. Lloyd's role in the Mozart "Mass in C minor on Aug. 4.

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts will open tomorrow with a chamber music program of music by Haydn, Mozart and Brahms performed by Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet. The program will be held in the Theater Concert Hall at 8:30 o'clock.

* * *

BORIS GOLDOVSKY, head of the Tanglewood Opera department, will appear as conductor and piano soloist on the Friday evening program assisted by Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff.

JOHN McCOLLUM
Takes Tenor Role

William Kroll, violinist; and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist, are soloist in the all-Bach program Saturday evening.

Dr. Munch will conduct the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon programs. The Sunday program will be given over entirely to the Tanglewood premiere of the Bach "Passion According to St. John."

* * *

TICKETS ARE available at the Tanglewood box office for all Festival concerts. Programs and a calendar of the more than 30 events at the Berkshire Music Center, with information of how to join the Friends' organization, will be mailed on request.

[36]

Two All-Bach Concerts Scheduled at Tanglewood Tomorrow and Sunday

July 1-3, 1956

Two all-Bach concerts will be featured tomorrow evening and Sunday afternoon at the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., under the direction of Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

TONIGHT'S all-Mozart program will feature three pianists from the same family, Pierre Luboshutz, Genia Nemenoff and Boris Goldovsky.

Tonight's program, at 8:30 o'clock, will include three movements from the "Posthorn" Serenade; the Concerto in F Major for three pianos, K. 242; the Piano Concerto in A Major, K. 488; and the Concerto in E-flat Major for two pianos, K. 365. Mr. Goldovsky will conduct all except the A major Concerto, for which he and his uncle, Mr. Luboshutz, will exchange places, Goldovsky playing the solo piano part and Luboshutz conducting.

TOMORROW evening's program will include the Brandenburg Concerto number 2 in F Major; the Violin Concerto number 2 in E Major; the Second and Third Suites for Orchestra.

Soloists tomorrow night will include William Richard Burgin and William Kroll, violinists; Roger Voisin, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; and Ralph Gomberg, oboe.

The Sunday afternoon program will be a first Tanglewood performance of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John." The Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross will assist the orchestra. Soloists, all former students at the Berkshire Music Center, will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence [illegible], contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

ALL RESERVED seats for tonight's and tomorrow night's programs have been sold and only a few remain for the Sunday afternoon program. General admission tickets will be on sale at the box office and in case of rain the programs will be held in the Music Shed.

The Music Shed concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will open on July 20 and will continue each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through Aug. 12.

- TOWN TIMES (WATERTOWN, CONN.), JULY 12, 1956

Impressions Of Tanglewood By Russian Author

by George Grebenschikoff

(Dr. George Grebenschikoff of Southbury and Lakeland, Fla. this year is celebrating his fiftieth anniversary as an author. His writings include plays, short stories, poems and novels. His major work is an eight volume epic of Russian life and he has been at work on it for the past thirty years. He was recently honored as a writer by Florida Southern College, Lakeland. Editor's note.)

Every pilgrim, whether he is from sunny Florida or from rigorous Siberia has to be happily surprised to find in the wilderness of New England, such a magnificent musical center as Tanglewood in the Berkshires.

Only the American practical mind and wise generosity together with men of art who are dedicated to uplifting ideas could create such an abode for pilgrims without which ordinary life would be dull and monotonous. It's a holy truth, "men cannot live by bread alone."

This season, the very soul of Tanglewood, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is celebrating its 75th anniversary. Eight years ago, this renowned organization had to replace the late Sergei Koussevitsky, one of the greatest conductors of our times. Their task was not an easy one but such a man was found, Charles Munch. He needs no phrases of praise or common flattery. The very lifting of his baton reveals his magic.

The first part of Saturday's program included Mozart's Symphony in D major and Sinfonia Concentrante. Mozart is one of those gigantic classics who, about two centuries ago, learned the mystery of bringing Heaven to Earth. Munch demonstrated his depth of understanding of this musical genius through his masterful interpretation.

The four soloists, Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; Sherman Walt, bassoon; magnified the perspective of the entire harmony of the great symphony. It seemed to this listener that the very secret of Mozart's creativeness was being revealed and there was a feeling of gratitude for its survival.

The second part of the program was performed by the Yale University Glee Club. They were vigorously accompanied by the orchestra under the direction of Hugh Ross. Martinu's Military Mass was presented in a modern style which for the religious piece sounded incongruous, especially for those of more conservative taste. Besides some of the harmony of the male voices was somewhat even and monotonous.

Goodman Excels in Mozart Concerto At Music Festival

Eminent Jazz musician Benny Goodman made his debut at the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., last Friday night, and judging from the audience reaction, Mr. Goodman was a tremendous success.

He performed as the soloist in the Mozart Concerto for Clarinet in A major, K. 622. Mr. Goodman was called back for a half dozen curtain calls during an ovation from the enthusiastic audience.

Wearing a light blue dinner jacket, Mr. Goodman proved himself a master of both modern and classic idiom as he expressed beautifully the subtle color of the clarinet tones against the string background.

The idyllic beauty of the second, adagio, movement was fully evident in Mr. Goodman's skilled performance of the piece.

His virtuosity was further proven in the swiftly moving third, Rondo-Allegro movement, with its spritely, leaping melody.

The orchestra for this second Festival concert of the current season at Tanglewood was the Chamber Orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Charles Munch conducting.

Although this was Mr. Goodman's debut at Tanglewood, he is no stranger to classical music, and has had a long-standing ambition to perform classics. He studied with Reginald Kell and has played with many of the principal symphony orchestras. He has commissioned works such as "Contrasts" by Bartok and Concertos for clarinet by Copeland and Hindemith, and has performed in each, according to information released by the Tanglewood management.

Mr. Goodman's performance was the second work presented in an all-Mozart evening of music in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood.

Cloudy and rainy skies cleared somewhat for the performance, but other than inside the hall, which was filled to capacity, the attendance was only moderate, due, perhaps, to the unpleasant weather earlier in the day.

The first work presented by the Chamber Orchestra was Mozart's familiar Symphony in G. minor, K. 550. After a warmup in the first movement, Molto Allegro, the orchestra under Mr. Munch gave a performance which was of the order of excellence to be expected from this great musical group. The lyric beauty of the Andante movement was noteworthy, and the skilled and graceful entrance of oboe and horn in the Menuetto was a thing of beauty in itself. The audience applauded generously at the conclusion of the last movement, marked Allegro assai, with its forceful power.

A fitting end to the evening of fine music, finely played, came with the performance of the Symphony in D. Major, K. 504, the "Prague" Symphony. The dynamic driving force of Mr. Munch's conducting made a stimulating finale of the "Prague," and one felt that the audience were well-pleased with the performance they had witnessed. Your reviewer was no exception to this statement.

Reserved seats for Bach's "Passion According To St. John," to be presented in the Theater Sunday at 2:30 p.m., are "sold out" according to information we have received, but admission to the grounds is still possible, and many people take advantage of good weather by listening to the music on the grassy lawn, while enjoying a picnic lunch.

In the final weekend of the Bach-Mozart Chamber orchestra concerts in the Theater Concert Hall, The Mozart Concerto for Three Pianos, K. 242, the Concerto in A major for Piano, K. 488; and the Concerto in E-flat major, for two Pianos, K. 365, will be presented on Friday, with pianists Lubushutz, Nemenoff and Goldovsky performing at 8:30 p.m.

On Saturday at 8:30 p.m. an all-Bach program will be conducted by Charles Munch featuring, the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F major, Violin Concerto in E major will William Kroll as soloist, Suite No. 2 in B minor for Flute and Strings with soloist Doriot Anthony Dwyer and Suite No. 3 in D. major.

L. F. M.

JEWISH CIVIC LEADER

THURSDAY, JULY 12, 1956

TANGLEWOOD LENOX, MASS. NOW through AUGUST 12

Berkshire Festival

BY THE

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

THEATRE - CONCERT HALL

FRI. July 13, at 8:30—MOZART PIANO CONCERTOS

Soloists: Boris Goldovsky, Luboshutz and Nemenoff

SAT. July 14, at 8:30—BACH PROGRAM (Munch)

Soloist: William Kroll, Violin

SUN. July 15, at 2:30—BACH—ST. JOHN PASSION (Munch)

Tickets Wed. $2, $3; Fri., Sat., Sun., $4, $5. (Admission $2)

—Reserved seats for July 13 & 14 all taken; for July 15, $5 only—

For programs and ticket information apply:

TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600

Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

AMUSEMENTS CALENDAR

July 9 - 14—Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge, The Solid Gold Cadillac. 8:45 p.m. Sat. Mat., 2:30 p.m. Next week. The Wayward Saint.
July 10 - 14—The Sharon Playhouse, Oh, Men! Oh, Women! 8:40 p.m. Wed. Mat., 2:30 p.m. Next week, Shadow and Substance.
July 13 - 14—Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, Lee, 4 and 9 p.m. Sonia Arova, Job Sanders, and others.
July 13—Tanglewood Theatre-Concert Hall, Chamber Orchestra, 8:30 p.m. Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.
July 14—Tanglewood Theatre-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Charles Munch conducting all-Bach program.
July 15—Tanglewood Treatre-Concert Hall, 2:30 p.m. Charles Munch conducting Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" with Festival Chorus.
July 15—Music Mountain, Chamber Music, 4 p.m.
July 17 - 18—Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, Lee, 9 p.m. Myra Kinch, Ted Shawn and others.
July 18—Norfolk Music School, 3:30 p.m. Bruce Simonds and others.
July 18—Children's Films, Salisbury Film Society, 4 p.m. Scoville Library.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Enterprise
CONCORD, Mass.
Weekly Ind. Rep.
Comb. Circ. 4728

JUL 12 1956

FESTIVAL WILL BEGIN FRIDAY AT TANGLEWOOD

Lenox—Learn how the magic of music can bring relaxation you never dreamed of by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood this weekend, July 13, 14, 15.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the Berkshire Music Festival has been described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time", and every visit to the scenic and enchanting Tanglewood estate in Lenox is a memorable one.

On Friday, July 13, at 8:30 p. m. the Festival Chamber Orchestra will play a selection of Mozart's works, while the following evening a night of Bach is scheduled. On Sunday at 2:30 the Chamber Orchestra will perform Bach's "The Passion According to St John" with chorus and soloists.

Tanglewood in Lenox, is located in the heart of the beautiful Berkshires, one of Massachusetts' most scenic playgrounds. Plan to spend the entire weekend touring this natural wonderland and enjoy the many facilities for swimming, boating, hiking and picknicking.

Lenox is located on Route 7, just south of Pittsfield. Main east-west routes 2 - 9, and 20 all connect with Route 7.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Free Press
MELROSE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,490

JUL 12 1956

Berkshire Music Festival July 13-15

Learn how the magic of music can bring relaxation you never dreamed of by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood this weekend July 13-14-15.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the Berkshire Music Festival has been described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time", and every visit to the scenic and enchanting Tanglewood estate in Lenox is a memorable one.

On Friday, July 13, at 8:30 p.m., the Festival Chamber Orchestra will play a selection of Mozart's works, while the following evening a night of Bach is scheduled. On Sunday at 2:30, the Chamber Orchestra will perform Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" with chorus and soloists.

Tanglewood in Lenox, is located in the heart of the beautiful Berkshires, one of Massachusetts' most scenic playgrounds. Plan to spend the entire weekend touring this natural wonderland and enjoy the many facilities for swimming, boating, hiking and picnicking.

Lenox is located on Route 7, just south of Pittsfield, main east-west routes 2-9 and 20 all connect with Route 7.

[37]

Berkshire Eagle, Thursday, July 12, 1956

Music

BSO Quartet Performs With Clarinetist Goodman

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE SECOND of the Wednesday chamber music programs at Tanglewood was played in the Theater-Concert Hall last night by the Boston Symphony string quartet assisted by Eugen Lehner, viola, and Benny Goodman, clarinet. The members of the quartet are Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; and Samuel Mayes, cello.

The Hayden E flat quartet, Opus 33, No. 2, was the first work of the evening and it was played with impressive poise and discipline. The excellence of the performance can only be properly appreciated if one is aware of the pitfalls it conceals. For all its transparency, this is mature music and it was made to sound so. Hayden would have lost his bet last night, however, for, although he wagered that "the ladies will always begin talking before the music is finished," there was rapt attention and quiet throughout the long final traps of silence he set to inveigle the unwary into breaking in with applause before the music was really over.

* * *

THE MOZART clarinet quintet achieved more unity after the first movement. The clarinet did not match the poetry which the first violin realized at the beginning nor did he find community of understanding with his colleagues in the details of simple note values. In the slow movement there was refinement and polish, but the performance would have been much lovelier if the clarinet had not remained proper and dull.

There is little Mozart that surpasses this quintet for pure melody and elaboration. The strings rode the happy themes and the wealth of variety to lofty spheres; the clarinet stayed closer to "The Sidewalks of New York."

* * *

THE BRAHMS G major string quintet received a muscular rendition. The first movement has infinite capacity for expansion. With players of such robust tone one test of strength is matched and exceeded by another until the performers get so excited there are unrestrained outbursts of high spirits. Yet it was vivid and tonally luscious. The only drawback of such exuberance is that the final Czardas which usually is a climax of fury and abandon becomes only more of the same.

Petrovec

TANGLEWOOD RARITY, a conducting appearance by Aaron Copland, will be made tonight in the Music Shed at concert by 100-member student orchestra. Mr. Copland, shown in rehearsal above, will be on the podium for his own First Symphony. The concert, which also includes works by Strauss, Weber and Lalo, is open without charge to members of the Friends.

Thurs., July 12, 1956. THE WALLINGFORD POST

Boston Symphony Opens Concert Series July 20

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Lenox, Mass., move into high gear next week when the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra of 106 pieces assembles at Tanglewood under the baton of Charles Munch, Music Director. When they complete their two weeks of free Espanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston under the leadership of Arthur Fiedler, 70 players of the Boston Symphony move to the Berkshire Hills of Western Massachusetts.

The entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate on Friday evening (July 20) the annual series of 12 week-end concerts in the huge 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, which is open on three sides so the music may spill out on the spacious lawns where additional thousands of music-lovers assemble under the stars and tall pines, or picnic in Sunday sunshine. In 1955 the Shed concerts attracted an audience of 108,336, or an average attendance of 9,028 persons.

A feature of the Shed series will be first Tanglewood performances of four symphonic works commissioned by the Boston Symphony during this, its 75th Anniversary season from Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi, who is guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, from Aaron Copland, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston. Charles Munch will also devote two of the Shed concerts to concert versions of Wagner operas. During the Shed season his podium will be shared by Pierre Monteux, who was conductor of the orchestra from 1919-1924 and who has been invited by Dr. Munch to share the conducting during the forthcoming European tour; by Richard Burgin, concertmaster since 1920; by Leonard Bernstein, who has headed the Berkshire Music Center's department of orchestra and conducting since 1946; and by Eleazor de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro.

Herald
CHICOPEE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,662

JUL 12 1956

MARGARET HARSHAW, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, who made her Tanglewood debut in 1955, returns to the Berkshire Festival for two concerts in 1955.

PIERRE MONTEUX, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra from 1919-1924, is returning to the orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood for the fifth consecutive summer, to conduct two concerts in the Music Shed.

Berkshire Eagle, Thursday, July 12, 1956

REPEAT PERFORMANCE will be given at the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood Saturday evening at 8:30 by Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, when she will be the soloist in Bach's Suite No. 2 in B minor, with the BSO chamber orchestra. She scored a hit last year in the same performance at Tanglewood.

Benny Goodman Draws 2,148; Duo Pianists Play Tomorrow

TANGLEWOOD — Despite a heavy downpour of rain shortly before last night's final appearance of Benny Goodman at the Berkshire Festival, a crowd of 2,148 turned out to hear the jazz clarinetist with the Boston Symphony String Quartet at the Theater Concert Hall.

Four more Wednesday evening concerts of chamber music are scheduled for this summer's Festival. Artists who will appear are Roger Voisin, conducting the Brass Ensemble of the orchestra; Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw, accompanied by Ralph Berkowitz, piano, on July 18; the Beaux Arts Trio on July 25; Rudolph Serkin, piano and members of the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Aug. 1; Zino Francescatti, violin, and Arthur Balsam, piano, on Aug. 8.

Friday evening a program of piano concertos by Mozart, inaugurating the final weekend of the Bach-Mozart concerts, will be given. The soloists will be the duo pianists, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, and their nephew, opera producer and commentator, Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department at the Berkshire Music Center. Mozart concertos for one, two and three pianos will be heard. The concert will begin with three movements from the composer's "Post-horn" Serenade.

Weekend of Relaxation Offered at Tanglewood

Learn how the magic of music can bring relaxation you never dreamed of by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood this weekend, July 13-14-15.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the Berkshire Music Festival has been described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time", and every visit to the scenic and enchanting Tanglewood estate in Lenox is a memorable one.

On Friday, July 13, at 8:30 p.m., the Festival Chamber Orchestra will play a selection of Mozart's works, while the following evening a night of Bach is scheduled. On Sunday at 2:30, the Chamber Orchestra will perform Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" with chorus and soloists.

Tanglewood in Lenox, is located in the heart of the beautiful Berkshires, one of Massachusetts' most scenic playgrounds. Plan to spend the entire weekend touring this natural wonderland and enjoy the many facilities for swimming, boating, hiking and picnicking.

(Continued on Back Page)

Tanglewood...

(Continued from Page 1)

Lenox is located on Route 7, just south of Pittsfield, Main east-west routes 2-9, and 20 all connect with Route 7.

Music

BSO Quartet Performs With Clarinetist Goodman

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE SECOND of the Wednesday chamber music programs at Tanglewood was played in the Theater-Concert Hall last night by the Boston Symphony string quartet assisted by Eugen Lehner, viola, and Benny Goodman, clarinet. The members of the quartet are Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; and Samuel Mayes, cello.

The Hayden E flat quartet, Opus 33, No. 2, was the first work of the evening and it was played with impressive poise and discipline. The excellence of the performance can only be properly appreciated if one is aware of the pitfalls it conceals. For all its transparency, this is mature music and it was made to sound so. Hayden would have lost his bet last night, however, for, although he wagered that "the ladies will always begin talking before the music is finished," there was rapt attention and quiet throughout the long final traps of silence he set to inveigle the unwary into breaking in with applause before the music was really over.

* * *

THE MOZART clarinet quintet achieved more unity after the first movement. The clarinet did not match the poetry which the first violin realized at the beginning nor did he find community of understanding with his colleagues in the details of simple note values. In the slow movement there was refinement and polish, but the performance would have been much lovelier if the clarinet had not remained proper and dull.

There is little Mozart that surpasses this quintet for pure melody and elaboration. The strings rode the happy themes and the wealth of variety to lofty spheres; the clarinet stayed closer to "The Sidewalks of New York."

* * *

THE BRAHMS G major string quintet received a muscular rendition. The first movement has infinite capacity for expansion. With players of such robust tone one test of strength is matched and exceeded by another until the performers get so excited there are unrestrained outbursts of high spirits. Yet it was vivid and tonally luscious. The only drawback of such exuberance is that the final Czardas which usually is a climax of fury and abandon becomes only more of the same.

Petrovec

TANGLEWOOD RARITY, a conducting appearance by Aaron Copland, will be made tonight in the Music Shed at concert by 100-member student orchestra. Mr. Copland, shown in rehearsal above, will be on the podium for his own First Symphony. The concert, which also includes works by Strauss, Weber and Lalo, is open without charge to members of the Friends.

Boston Symphony Opens Concert Series July 20

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Lenox, Mass., move into high gear next week when the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra of 106 pieces assembles at Tanglewood under the baton of Charles Munch, Music Director. When they complete their two weeks of free Espanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston under the leadership of Arthur Fiedler, 70 players of the Boston Symphony move to the Berkshire Hills of Western Massachusetts.

The entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate on Friday evening (July 20) the annual series of 12 week-end concerts in the huge 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, which is open on three sides so the music may spill out on the spacious lawns where additional thousands of music-lovers assemble under the stars and tall pines, or picnic in Sunday sunshine. In 1955 the Shed concerts attracted an audience of 108,336, or an average attendance of 9,028 persons.

A feature of the Shed series will be first Tanglewood performances of four symphonic works commissioned by the Boston Symphony during this, its 75th Anniversary season from Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi, who is guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, from Aaron Copland, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston. Charles Munch will also devote two of the Shed concerts to concert versions of Wagner operas. During the Shed season his podium will be shared by Pierre Monteux, who was conductor of the orchestra from 1919-1924 and who has been invited by Dr. Munch to share the conducting during the forthcoming European tour; by Richard Burgin, concertmaster since 1920; by Leonard Bernstein, who has headed the Berkshire Music Center's department of orchestra and conducting since 1946; and by Eleazor de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro.

MARGARET HARSHAW, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, who made her Tanglewood debut in 1955, returns to the Berkshire Festival for two concerts in 1955.

PIERRE MONTEUX, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra from 1919-1924, is returning to the orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood for the fifth consecutive summer, to conduct two concerts in the Music Shed.

Herald
CHICOPEE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,662

JUL 12 1956

REPEAT PERFORMANCE will be given at the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood Saturday evening at 8:30 by Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, when she will be the soloist in Bach's Suite No. 2 in B minor, with the BSO chamber orchestra. She scored a hit last year in the same performance at Tanglewood.

Weekend of Relaxation Offered at Tanglewood

Learn how the magic of music can bring relaxation you never dreamed of by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood this weekend, July 13-14-15.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the Berkshire Music Festival has been described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time", and every visit to the scenic and enchanting Tanglewood estate in Lenox is a memorable one.

On Friday, July 13, at 8:30 p.m., the Festival Chamber Orchestra will play a selection of Mozart's works, while the following evening a night of Bach is scheduled. On Sunday at 2:30, the Chamber Orchestra will perform Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" with chorus and soloists.

Tanglewood in Lenox, is located in the heart of the beautiful Berkshires, one of Massachusetts' most scenic playgrounds. Plan to spend the entire weekend touring this natural wonderland and enjoy the many facilities for swimming, boating, hiking and picnicking.

(Continued on Back Page)

Tanglewood...

(Continued from Page 1)

Lenox is located on Route 7, just south of Pittsfield, Main east-west routes 2-9, and 20 all connect with Route 7.

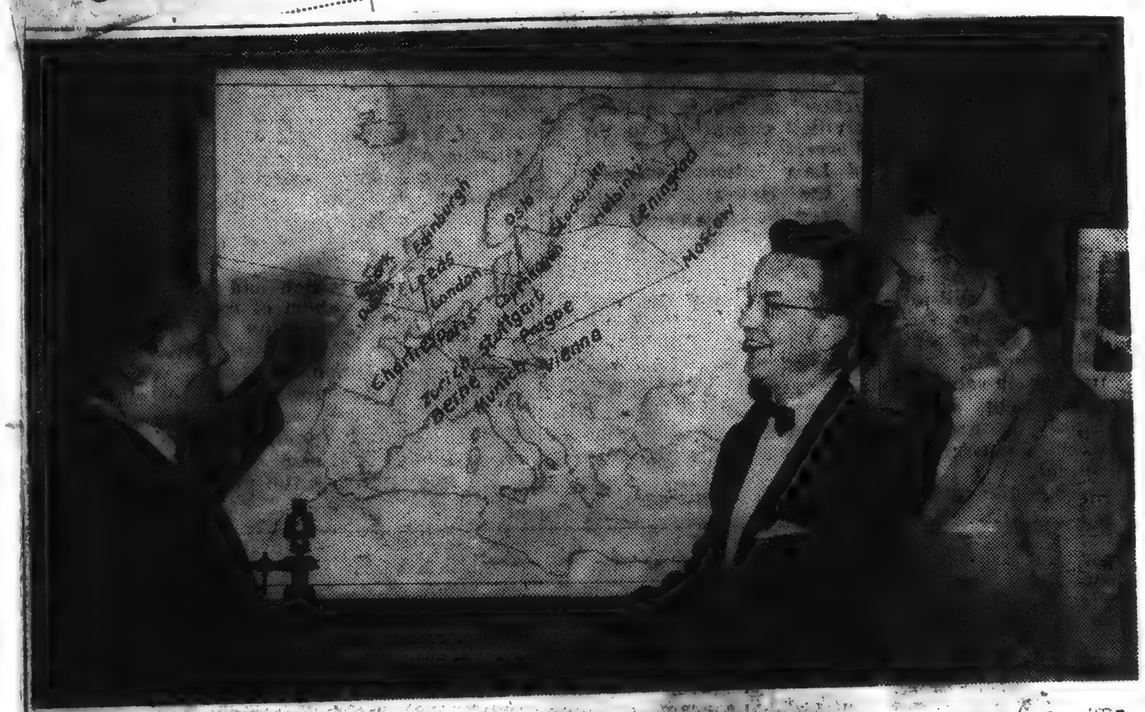
Benny Goodman Draws 2,148; Duo Pianists Play Tomorrow

TANGLEWOOD — Despite a heavy downpour of rain shortly before last night's final appearance of Benny Goodman at the Berkshire Festival, a crowd of 2,148 turned out to hear the jazz clarinetist with the Boston Symphony String Quartet at the Theater Concert Hall.

Four more Wednesday evening concerts of chamber music are scheduled for this summer's Festival. Artists who will appear are Roger Voisin, conducting the Brass Ensemble of the orchestra; Metropolitian Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw, accompanied by Ralph Berkowitz, piano, on July 18; the Beaux Arts Trio on July 25; Rudolph Serkin, piano and members of the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Aug. 1; Zino Francescatti, violin, and Arthur Balsam, piano, on Aug. 8.

Friday evening a program of piano concertos by Mozart, inaugurating the final weekend of the Bach-Mozart concerts, will be given. The soloists will be the duo pianists, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, and their nephew, opera producer and commentator, Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department at the Berkshire Music Center. Mozart concertos for one, two and three pianos will be heard. The concert will begin with three movements from the composer's "Post-horn" Serenade.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 12 1956



Joe Petrovec

Dolf C. Bulterman, Boston manager of the K.L.M. Royal Dutch Airlines, goes over the itinerary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's European tour with Thomas D. Perry, Jr., and G. W. Rector, manager and assistant manager, respectively, of the Boston Symphony.

Chamber Music at Festival This Week

Bach and Mozart to Feature Week-end Programs

Goldovsky and Luboshutz Will Conduct Friday Concert, and Music Director Munch Will Be on Podium Saturday and Sunday.—Kroll and Dwyer Are Soloists Saturday.

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox includes three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

Boris Goldovsky, the eminent opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera Theatre, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his debut as conductor and piano soloist on a Berkshire Festival program on Friday evening. He will conduct the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo pianists, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is piano soloist. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have not appeared at a Festival concert since 1950.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all-Bach concert Saturday evening. Both teach chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center.

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the festival chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross. Soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center.

All of this week's Berkshire Festival concerts are given in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious lawns, is sold on the day of performance, and in the event of rain the programs will be given in the capacious Music Shed.

The third week of Berkshire Festival concerts will commence with Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw in a recital of songs by Wagner and Richard Strauss, with Ralph Berkowitz at the piano; and the Brass Ensemble of the Boston Symphony, under the direction of Roger Voisin, in music by Gabrielli, Bonelli, Poulenc, Berezowsky (Wednesday, July 18, in the Theatre-Concert Hall).

The entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate the season's concerts in the 6000-seat Music Shed on Friday, July 20, when Charles Munch will give a program of orchestral works by Berlioz, Debussy, Roussel and Brahms. Dr. Munch will devote the Saturday, July 21, concert to Wagner, with Miss Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa (making his Tanglewood debut) and basso James Pease singing a concert version of Act I of "Die Walkure." Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor of the Sunday afternoon, July 22, concert, in a program of Rossini, Bartok and Schubert.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, has made changes in two of the programs the orchestra will play in the Music Shed

Tanglewood Turn to twelfth page

Tanglewood

(Continued from first page)

at Tanglewood. Instead of two all-Wagner programs on Saturday evening, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, August 12, Dr. Munch has made substitutions in the first half of each concert.

On July 21, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" will open the program, followed by Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6), which the conductor commissioned for the Boston Symphony's 75th Anniversary season, and which was named by the New York Music Critics' Circle the best new orchestral work presented in New York in the year 1955. Both the Barber and Martonu works will be receiving first performances at Tanglewood. They will replace the previously announced "A Faust Overture," Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," and Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

On August 12, Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica," will be substituted for the previously listed Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauser and A Siegfried Idyll.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
JUL 12 1956

Lenox

Tel. Eagle Office Lee 633 or Lenox 775

BSO, State, Town Officials Discuss Festival Traffic

LENOX—Representatives of the Boston Symphony Orchestra met Tuesday at Wheatleigh with representatives of the Lee, Lenox and Stockbridge Selectmen, state police and the state Department of Public Works to discuss traffic problems caused by Tanglewood.

According to a report given the Lenox board at its meeting last night by Selectman Charles F. House, the BSO announced that it would not initiate a survey of traffic problems.

Lenox Selectmen had recently written to the BSO suggesting that such a survey be made, particularly as related to traffic problems on West Street.

Survey Suggested

At the meeting, Capt. House took the position that an over-all survey should be made by some unbiased agent. William J. Goggins, district engineer of the Public Works Department, was asked if the state would carry out such a survey. He pointed out that $80,000 has been allocated by the state for this kind of work.

It was reported that turnpike authorities had overruled the idea of a temporary entrance and exit to the turnpike at Route 183 for Tanglewood traffic. Travelers to and from Tanglewood will be directed through the interchange at West Stockbridge and then via Routes 183 and 102 to the Festival grounds.

According to Capt. House's report, no work will be done this year on improvement of West Street. The state already has announced that it will adhere to its proposal of contributing 70 per cent, or $35,000, to the $50,000 project. The question of how the town and county will split the remaining $15,000 cost will be discussed at the Chapter 90 meeting in Pittsfield in September.

Money Allocated

The town of Lenox has already allocated $2,500 for West Street improvements.

The BSO announced at the meeting that Tanglewood's parking area on the Hawthorne Street side, originally used by box-holders, is being enlarged in order to relieve traffic on other approaches to the Festival grounds.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 12 1956

Goodman Plays Before 2,147 Second Time at Tanglewood

Benny Goodman made his second and final appearance of the season at the Berkshire Music festival at Tanglewood last night, as 2,147 persons attended the weekly chamber music program in the theater-concert hall.

With String Quartet

Mr. Goodman appeared with members of the Boston Symphony String quartet in a performance of Mozart's Clarinet Quintet in A Major.

The quartet, consisting of Richard Burgin and Alfred Grips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola, and Samuel Mayes, cello, also played Haydn's String Quartet in E-Flat Major and Brahms' String Quintet in G Major. Violinist Eugene Lehner joined the quarter for the latter piece.

A violent thunderstorm hit the Tanglewood grounds just before the concert, and several hundred persons who planned to sit on the lawn had to rush for cover. By the end of the concert, however, the skies were clear.

The second and final week-end series of chamber orchestra concerts will be held in the theater-concert hall Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon. These are reported to be completely sold out.

Mozart Tomorrow

Tomorrow night's program will be devoted entirely to the works of Mozart. Boris Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will be soloists. Works to be heard are the Concerto for Three Pianos, the Concerto in A Major for Piano and the Concerto in E-Flat Major for Two Pianos. Mr. Goldovsky and Mr. Luboshutz will be the conductors.

The Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon programs, to be conducted by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will be devoted entirely to works by Bach.

[39]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 20,000
JUL 12 1956

AT TANGLEWOOD—Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained at Tanglewood during the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will appear as a Festival soloist for the first time on Friday, July 13, at 8:30 p.m., in the Theatre-Concert Hall, in an all-Mozart program. Pierre Luboshutz will conduct with members of the Boston Symphony. Duo-pianists Luboshutz and Nemenoff are also soloists.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 12 1956

Joe Petrovec

Dolf C. Bulterman, Boston manager of the K.L.M. Royal Dutch Airlines, goes over the itinerary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's European tour with Thomas D. Perry, Jr., and G. W. Rector, manager and assistant manager, respectively, of the Boston Symphony.

Chamber Music at Festival This Week

Bach and Mozart to Feature Week-end Programs

Goldovsky and Luboshutz Will Conduct Friday Concert, and Music Director Munch Will Be on Podium Saturday and Sunday.—Kroll and Dwyer Are Soloists Saturday.

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox includes three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the all-Bach programs on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

Boris Goldovsky, the eminent opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera Theatre, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his debut as conductor and piano soloist on a Berkshire Festival program on Friday evening. He will conduct the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo pianists, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is piano soloist. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have not appeared at a Festival concert since 1950.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all-Bach concert Saturday evening. Both teach chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center.

Dr. Munch on Sunday afternoon will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the festival chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross. Soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center.

All of this week's Berkshire Festival concerts are given in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious lawns, is sold on the day of performance, and in the event of rain the programs will be given in the capacious Music Shed.

The third week of Berkshire Festival concerts will commence with Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw in a recital of songs by Wagner and Richard Strauss, with Ralph Berkowitz at the piano; and the Brass Ensemble of the Boston Symphony, under the direction of Roger Voisin, in music by Gabrielli, Bonelli, Poulenc, Berezowsky (Wednesday, July 18, in the Theatre-Concert Hall).

The entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate the season's concerts in the 6000-seat Music Shed on Friday, July 20, when Charles Munch will give a program of orchestral works by Berlioz, Debussy, Roussel and Brahms. Dr. Munch will devote the Saturday, July 21, concert to Wagner, with Miss Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa (making his Tanglewood debut) and basso James Pease singing a concert version of Act I of "Die Walkure." Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor of the Sunday afternoon, July 22, concert, in a program of Rossini, Bartok and Schubert.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, has made changes in two of the programs the orchestra will play in the Music Shed

Tanglewood Turn to twelfth page

Tanglewood

(Continued from first page)

at Tanglewood. Instead of two all-Wagner programs on Saturday evening, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, August 12, Dr. Munch has made substitutions in the first half of each concert.

On July 21, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" will open the program, followed by Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6), which the conductor commissioned for the Boston Symphony's 75th Anniversary season, and which was named by the New York Music Critics' Circle the best new orchestral work presented in New York in the year 1955. Both the Barber and Martonu works will be receiving first performances at Tanglewood. They will replace the previously announced "A Faust Overture," Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," and Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

On August 12, Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica," will be substituted for the previously listed Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauser and A Siegfried Idyll.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
JUL 12 1956

Lenox

Tel. Eagle Office Lee 683 or Lenox 775

BSO, State, Town Officials Discuss Festival Traffic

LENOX—Representatives of the Boston Symphony Orchestra met Tuesday at Wheatleigh with representatives of the Lee, Lenox and Stockbridge Selectmen, state police and the state Department of Public Works to discuss traffic problems caused by Tanglewood.

According to a report given the Lenox board at its meeting last night by Selectman Charles F. House, the BSO announced that it would not initiate a survey of traffic problems.

Lenox Selectmen had recently written to the BSO suggesting that such a survey be made, particularly as related to traffic problems on West Street.

Survey Suggested

At the meeting, Capt. House took the position that an over-all survey should be made by some unbiased agent. William J. Goggins, district engineer of the Public Works Department, was asked if the state would carry out such a survey. He pointed out that $80,000 has been allocated by the state for this kind of work.

It was reported that turnpike authorities had overruled the idea of a temporary entrance and exit to the turnpike at Route 183 for Tanglewood traffic. Travelers to and from Tanglewood will be directed through the interchange at West Stockbridge and then via Routes 183 and 102 to the Festival grounds.

According to Capt. House's report, no work will be done this year on improvement of West Street. The state already has announced that it will adhere to its proposal of contributing 70 per cent, or $35,000, to the $50,000 project. The question of how the town and county will split the remaining $15,000 cost will be discussed at the Chapter 90 meeting in Pittsfield in September.

Money Allocated

The town of Lenox has already allocated $2,500 for West Street improvements.

The BSO announced at the meeting that Tanglewood's parking area on the Hawthorne Street side, originally used by box-holders, is being enlarged in order to relieve traffic on other approaches to the Festival grounds.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 12 1956

Goodman Plays Before 2,147 Second Time at Tanglewood

Benny Goodman made his second and final appearance of the season at the Berkshire Music festival at Tanglewood last night, as 2,147 persons attended the weekly chamber music program in the theater-concert hall.

With String Quartet

Mr. Goodman appeared with members of the Boston Symphony String quartet in a performance of Mozart's Clarinet Quintet in A Major.

The quartet, consisting of Richard Burgin and Alfred Grips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola, and Samuel Mayes, cello, also played Haydn's String Quartet in E-Flat Major and Brahms' String Quintet in G Major. Violinist Eugene Lehner joined the quarter for the latter piece.

A violent thunderstorm hit the Tanglewood grounds just before the concert, and several hundred persons who planned to sit on the lawn had to rush for cover. By the end of the concert, however, the skies were clear.

The second and final week-end series of chamber orchestra concerts will be held in the theater-concert hall Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon. These are reported to be completely sold out.

Mozart Tomorrow

Tomorrow night's program will be devoted entirely to the works of Mozart. Boris Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will be soloists. Works to be heard are the Concerto for Three Pianos, the Concerto in A Major for Piano, and the Concerto in E-Flat Major for Two Pianos. Mr. Goldovsky and Mr. Luboshutz will be the conductors.

The Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon programs, to be conducted by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will be devoted entirely to works by Bach.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 20,000
JUL 12 1956

AT TANGLEWOOD—Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained at Tanglewood during the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will appear as a Festival soloist for the first time on Friday, July 13, at 8:30 p.m., in the Theatre-Concert Hall, in an all-Mozart program. Pierre Luboshutz will conduct with members of the Boston Symphony. Duo-pianists Luboshutz and Nemenoff are also soloists.

[39]

LAKEVILLE JOURNAL Thursday, July 12, 1956

Changes Made At Tanglewood

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has made changes in two of the programs the orchestra will play in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., during the current Berkshire Festival.

Instead of two all-Wagner programs on Saturday evening, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, Dr. Munch has made substitutions in the first half of each concert.

On July 21, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" will open the program, followed by Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6), which the conductor commissioned for the Boston Symphony's 75th Anniversary season, and which was named by the New York Music Critics' Circle the best new orchestral work presented in New York in the year 1955. Both the Barber and Martinu works will be receiving first performances at Tanglewood. They will replace the previously announced "A Faust Overture," Forest Mumurs from "Siegfried," and Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

On August 12, Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica," will be substituted for the previously listed Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauser and A Siegfried Idyll. On both programs, Dr. Munch will retain the concert versions of Wagner operas originally scheduled: Act 1 of "Die Walkure" on July 21, with Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease as soloists; and Act. III of "Die Meistersinger" (opening and final sceen), with Messrs. Da Costa and Pease and Marguertie Willauer in solo roles.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-0068
Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,064
JUL 12 1956

Big Shed To Open At Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Lenox, Mass., move into high gear next week when the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra of 106 pieces assembles at Tanglewood under the baton of Charles Munch, Music Director. When they complete their two weeks of free Esplanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston under the leadership of Arthur Fiedler, 70 players of the Boston Symphony move to the Berkshire Hills of Western Massachusetts to join the 36 principals who have been teaching chamber music to students of the orchestra's summer school, the Berkshire Music Center, and performing as a chamber orchestra in the fortnight of "Bach-Mozart" concerts that traditionally opens the Festival.

The entire Boston Smphony Orchestra will inaugurate on Friday evening (July 20) the annual series of twelve week-end concerts in the huge 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood.

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts (July 17-22) comprises a joint recital by the Boston Symphony's Brass Ensemble and by Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw and pianist Ralph Berkowitz, on Wednesday evening (July 18) in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall; a program of Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel and Brahms by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Dr. Munch (July 20); A Barber, Martinu and Wagner program will feature the first act of Die Walkure, sung in concert version by Miss Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa, and basso James Pease (July 21); and a program of Rossini, Bartok and [illegible] led by Mr. Monteux, [illegible] guest on the Tanglewood podium since 1951 (Sunday afternoon, July 22).

Music performed during the week for the first time at Berkshire Festival concerts will be: Wagner, A Faust Overture and Act 1, Die Walkure (July 21); and Rossini, Overture to L'Italiana in Algeri and Bartok, Concerto for Orchestra (July 22).

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m.; the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m.

This weekend's final "Bach-Mozart" chamber orchestra concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in Tanglewood's Theatre-Concert Hall are: Saturday evening, July 14: All-Bach program, conducted by Charles Munch: Brandenburg Concerto No. 2, in F Major; Violin Concerto in E Major, soloist: William Kroll; Suite No. 2, in B Minor for Flute an dStrings, soloist: Doriot Anthony Dwyer; Suite No. 3, in D Major. Sunday afternoon, July 15: Charles Munch conducting Bach's The Passion According to St. John, assisted by the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Festival students trained by Hugh Ross, and soloists: Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Enterprise
BEDFORD, Mass.
Weekly Ind. Rep.
Comb. Circ. 4,728
JUL 12 1956

FESTIVAL WILL BEGIN FRIDAY AT TANGLEWOOD

Lenox—Learn how the magic of music can bring relaxation you never dreamed of by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood this weekend, July 13, 14, 15.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the Berkshire Music Festival has been described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time", and every visit to the scenic and enchanting Tanglewood estate in Lenox is a memorable one.

On Friday, July 13, at 8:30 p. m., the Festival Chamber Orchestra will play a selection of Mozart's works, while the following evening a night of Bach is scheduled. On Sunday at 2:30 the Chamber Orchestra will perform Bach's "The Passion According to St John" with chorus and soloists.

Tanglewood in Lenox, is located in the heart of the beautiful Berkshires, one of Massachusetts' most scenic playgrounds. Plan to spend the entire weekend touring this natural wonderland and enjoy the many facilities for swimming, boating, hiking and picknicking.

Lenox is located on Route 7, just south of Pittsfield. Main east-west routes 2 - 9, and 20 all connect with Route 7.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Herald
CHICOPEE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,662
JUL 12 1956

Site of Music Festival

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in its 19th summer of music in the hills of western Massachusetts, the 17th in which the orchestra has participated under the direction of Charles Munch. The season continues until August 12. In 1955 Festival concerts attracted a record-breaking total attendance of 136,087 music lovers. Its chamber orchestra concerts in the intimate 1200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall averaged an attendance of 3032 persons. An average of 9,028 persons attended performances in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood (capacity 6000), with crowds overflowing on the spacious lawns.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928
JUL 12 1956

Benny Goodman Again Applauded At Tanglewood

In his second appearance at Tanglewood this season, Benny Goodman drew several rounds of enthusiastic applause. Although his style is not entirely suited to the classics, his willingness to conform merits approbation and encouragement. He is a master of the clarinet, his tone sure and clean, the changes from low to high register apparently effortless and his pianissimos breathlessly beautiful and controlled.

The Boston Symphony String Quartet made its debut last evening, with Mr. Goodman assisting in Mozart's Clarinet Quintet. The technical and tonal quality of this quartet showed why these men have been retained as first-chair players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. They are Richard Burgin, concertmaster; Alfred Krips, assistant concertmaster; Joseph Pasquale, solo violist, and Samuel Mayes, solo cellist. They have recently recorded Haydn's "Seven Last Words of Christ," for RCA-Victor.

The program opened with Haydn's E-flat Quartet Op. 33, No. 2, one of the most appealing, deceptively simple, in that its tempos must be unhurried, or its beauty is lost in the unheralded running passages. It is almost a violin solo with string accompaniment, but this gave one the opportunity to enjoy Mr. Burgin's exceptional artistry. The largo as introduced by the viola and cello was played with tender feeling by all members. The final movement was a delightful ending with typical Haydn humor, the theme broken into small bits with tantalizing rests between portions and finally finishing in a flippant manner.

The Mozart quintet, as already mentioned, richer in quality and content, gave the quartet opportunity to display their ensemble more fully and graciously. Mozart's use of muted strings in the second movement makes this one of the unforgettable compositions.

After an intermission the quartet assisted by Eugen Lehner, violist, played the incomparable quintet in C major, Op. 111 by Brahms. Here the intimate ensemble full-blown, the first movement controlled but intense giving way to the passionate Afanio in which the full resonance of the viola encompassed one with beautiful melodies, the purely classic allegretto, and the final Vivace in which the music interweaves with a brilliance that flows from each instrument, only the coda foreign and unsatisfying as if what went before could not be duplicated, so let each musician do his best he can.

The audience, numbering 2147, was enthusiastic in its appreciation and [illegible] of the new Boston [illegible] String Quartet.

Friday evening a program of piano concertos by Mozart will be given by the duo pianists, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, and their nephew, Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. The concert will begin with three movements from the [illegible]'s "Posthorn" Serena[illegible] B.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Enterprise
BEDFORD, Mass.
Weekly Ind. Rep.
Comb. Circ. 4,728

JUL 12 1956

FESTIVAL WILL BEGIN FRIDAY AT TANGLEWOOD

Lenox—Learn how the magic of music can bring relaxation you never dreamed of by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood this weekend, July 13, 14, 15.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the Berkshire Music Festival has been described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time", and every visit to the scenic and enchanting Tanglewood estate in Lenox is a memorable one.

On Friday, July 13, at 8:30 p. m., the Festival Chamber Orchestra will play a selection of Mozart's works, while the following evening a night of Bach is scheduled. On Sunday at 2:30 the Chamber Orchestra will perform Bach's "The Passion According to St John" with chorus and soloists.

Tanglewood in Lenox, is located in the heart of the beautiful Berkshires, one of Massachusetts' most scenic playgrounds. Plan to spend the entire weekend touring this natural wonderland and enjoy the many facilities for swimming, boating, hiking and picknicking.

Lenox is located on Route 7, just south of Pittsfield. Main east-west routes 2 - 9, and 20 all connect with Route 7.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

JUL 12 1956

Benny Goodman Again Applauded At Tanglewood

In his second appearance at Tanglewood this season, Benny Goodman drew several rounds of enthusiastic applause. Although his style is not entirely suited to the classics, his willingness to conform merits approbation and encouragement. He is a master of the clarinet, his tone sure and clean, the changes from low to high register apparently effortless and his pianissimos breathlessly beautiful and controlled.

The Boston Symphony String Quartet made its debut last evening, with Mr. Goodman assisting in Mozart's Clarinet Quintet. The technical and tonal quality of this quartet showed why these men have been retained as first chair players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. They are Richard Burgin, concertmaster; Alfred Krips, assistant concertmaster; Joseph Pasquale, solo violist, and Samuel Mayes, solo cellist. They have recently recorded Haydn's "Seven Last Words of Christ," for RCA-Victor.

The program opened with Haydn's E-flat Quartet Op. 33, No. 2, one of his most appealing, deceptively simple in that its tempos must be unhurried, or its beauty is lost in the unheralded running passages. It is almost a violin solo with string accompaniment, but this gave one the opportunity to enjoy Mr. Burgin's exceptional artistry. The largo as introduced by the viola and cello was played with tender feeling by all members. The final movement was a delightful ending with typical Haydn humor, the theme broken into small bits with tantalizing rests between portions and finally finishing in a flippant manner.

The Mozart quintet, as already mentioned, richer in quality and content, gave the quartet opportunity to display their ensemble more fully and graciously. Mozart's use of muted strings in the second movement makes this one of the unforgettable compositions.

After an intermission the quartet assisted by Eugen Lehner, violist, played the incomparable quintet in, C major, Op. 111 by Brahms. Here the intimate ensemble full-blown, the first movement controlled but intense giving way to the passionate Afahio in which the rotund resonance of the viola encompassed one with beautiful melodies the purely classic allegretto, and the final Vivace in which the music interweaves with a brilliance that glows from each instrument, only the coda foreign and unsatisfying, as it what went before could not be duplicated, so let each musician do best he can.

The audience numbering 2147, was enthusiastic in its appreciation and [illegible] of the new Boston Symphony String Quartet.

Friday evening a program of piano concertos by Mozart will be given by the duo pianists, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, and their nephew, Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. The concert will begin with three movements from the [illegible]'s "Posthorn" Serenade [illegible] B.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-0068

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,064

JUL 12 195[illegible]

Big Shed To Open At Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Lenox, Mass., move into high gear next week when the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra of 106 pieces assembles at Tanglewood under the baton of Charles Munch, Music Director. When they complete their two weeks of free Esplanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston under the leadership of Arthur Fiedler, 70 players of the Boston Symphony move to the Berkshire Hills of Western Massachusetts to join the 36 principals who have been teaching chamber music to students of the orchestra's summer school, the Berkshire Music Center, and performing as a chamber orchestra in the fortnight of "Bach-Mozart" concerts that traditionally opens the Festival.

The entire Boston Smphony Orchestra will inaugurate on Friday evening (July 20) the annual series of twelve week-end concerts in the huge 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood.

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts (July 17-22) comprises a joint recital by the Boston Symphony's Brass Ensemble and by Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw and pianist Ralph Berkowitz, on Wednesday evening (July 18) in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall; a program of Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel and Brahms by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Dr. Munch (July 20); A Barber, Martinu and Wagner program will feature the first act of Die Walkure, sung in concert version by Miss Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa, and basso James Pease (July 21), and a program of Rossini, Bartok and Schubert led by Mr. Monteux, a regular guest on the Tanglewood podium since 1951 (Sunday afternoon, July 22).

Music performed during the week for the first time at Berkshire Festival concerts will be: Wagner, A Faust Overture and Act 1, Die Walkure (July 21); and Rossini, Overture to L'Italiana in Algeri and Bartok, Concerto for Orchestra (July 22).

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m.; the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m.

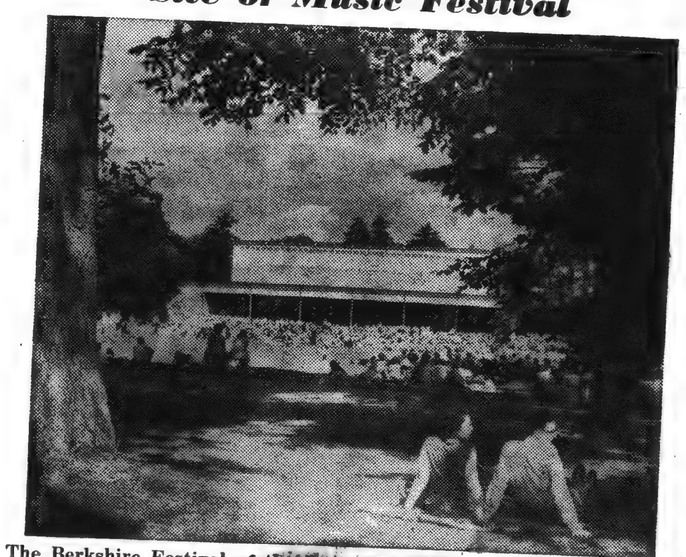
This weekend's final "Bach-Mozart" chamber orchestra concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in Tanglewood's Theatre-Concert Hall are: Saturday evening, July 14: All-Bach program, conducted by Charles Munch: Brandenburg Concerto No. 2, in F Major; Violin Concerto in E Major, soloist: Wiliam Kroll; Suite No. 2, in B Minor for Flute an dStrings, soloist: Doriot Anthony Dwyer; Suite No. 3, in D Major. Sunday afternoon, July 15: Charles Munch conducting Bach's The Passion According to St. John, assisted by the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Festival students trained by Hugh Ross, and soloists: Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald
CHICOPEE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,662

JUL 12 1956

Site of Music Festival



The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in its 19th summer of music in the hills of western Massachusetts, the 17th in which the orchestra has participated under the direction of Charles Munch. The season continues until August 12. In 1955 Festival concerts attracted a record-breaking total attendance of 136,087 music lovers. Its chamber orchestra concerts in the intimate 1200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall averaged an attendance of 3032 persons. An average of 9,028 persons attended performances in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood (capacity 6000), with crowds overflowing on the spacious lawns.

LAKEVILLE JOURNAL Thursday, July 12, 1956

Changes Made At Tanglewood

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has made changes in two of the programs the orchestra will play in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., during the current Berkshire Festival.

Instead of two all-Wagner programs on Saturday evening, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, Dr. Munch has made substitutions in the first half of each concert.

On July 21, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" will open the program, followed by Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6), which the conductor commissioned for the Boston Symphony's 75th Anniversary season, and which was named by the New York Music Critics' Circle the best new orchestral work presented in New York in the year 1955. Both the Barber and Martinu works will be receiving first performances at Tanglewood. They will replace the previously announced "A Faust Overture," Forest Mumurs from "Siegfried," and Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

On August 12, Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica," will be substituted for the previously listed Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauser and A Siegfried Idyll. On both programs, Dr. Munch will retain the concert versions of Wagner operas originally scheduled: Act 1 of "Die Walkure" on July 21, with Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease as soloists; and Act. III of "Die Meistersinger" (opening and final sceen), with Messrs. Da Costa and Pease and Marguertie Willauer in solo roles.

[40]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-0068

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,064

JUL 12 1956

TANGLEWOOD, FRIDAY, JULY 6
By E. B.

When deprived of the privilege of hearing the Boston Symphony orchestra for many months, one seems to forget the high degree of precision, ease and smoothness with which it plays, and the particularly beautiful quality of tone of its string section. Being reminded of these familiar pleasures added to the delight of this listener in the orchestra's first appearance this season at Tanglewood, when it was conducted by Charles Munch, on Friday evening, July sixth. The smaller, chamber orchestra played an all Mozart program: Symphony in G Minor, K. 550; Concerto for Clarinet, K. 622; Symphony in D Major, ("Prague"), K. 504. The soloist in the concerto was none other than Mr. Benny Goodman, of popular music fame.

Munch projected through the players a sense of latent power and strong emotion in the first and last movements of the G minor; there was a compelling, steady forward drive and inward vigor in his interpretation. While the Andante movement can too easily drag in tempo, and the final Allegro assai run on too speedily, the choice of tempi here sounded convincingly right.

Benny Goodman gave a performance of technical brilliance in the clarinet concerto. (The first and third movements demand agility of the player and allow him little breathing space). In the songful Adagio, the lyric mood was serenely maintained in a continuous flow of liquid sound. In the interpretation as a whole, there was an effect of heaviness; the phrasing was not sufficiently delicate, and not enough use made of soft playing. The audience was warmly responsive and recalled Mr. Goodman to the platform several times.

Although the evening's music was up to this point of a high order indeed, a new wellspring of excitement bubbled forth in the "Prague" symphony. Where all before had seemed a true expression of the composer's intentions, now all was still more alive and seemed to emerge from a source of energy still deeper within the music.

TANGLEWOOD, JULY 7
By E. B.

Saturday evening Munch led the orchestra in the first half of the program, which was again devoted to Mozart. The "Haffner" symphony was impressive, progressing from a mood of firmness and resolution, through one of more lightness and melodiousness to the finale of vigorous contrasts.

In the Sinfonia Concertante in E Flat, for oboe, clarinet, horn, and bassoon with orchestra, the special performers were members of the regular Boston orchestra: Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, James Stagliano, and Sherman Walt. The qaurtet plays often as a group in this composition, or in differently paired combinations, and as soloists, with or without orchestra. These many shifts in tone color create a richly woven tapestry of sound. The performers all took part with equal expertness.

So far Mozart amply held sole place. But suddenly we were jolted out of a world in which all was order and symmetry, where emotions were controlled. Hugh Ross was the energetic conductor of two modern works for chorus and orchestra. One was Bohuslav Martinu's Military Mass, and the other the world premiere of the Californian Henry Cowell's A Thanksgiving Psalm from the Dead Sea Scrolls. This is the first piece of music to provide a setting for any of the scrolls.

The Martinu mass is a series of anguished cries in a tormented, disordered world. The means of expression are a small orchestra of winds and percussion, a baritone, piano, and organ, combined with a men's chorus. The Yale Glee Club fulfilled the choral requirements in both requirements in both the Martinu and Cowell offerings. They did so with admirable musicianship, with their director Fenno Heath, singing in the group.

(Continued on Page Twelve)

GRADUATE NOTES

(Continued from Page Eleven)

The text of the Martinu composition includes the Lord's prayer, selections from the Psalms, and some new wording. The music is full of sudden contrasts, eerie tonal effects, rythmic surprises and violent climaxes, offset by some restrained and lyric passages. The total result is deeply moving and quite electrifying. Martinu uses a wealth of means to achieve his ends.

Cowell chose a rather uniform mood and old ecclesiastical modes to provide the setting for his unusual text. The orchestration is full and balanced. The harmonies based on the early modes create an atmosphere that easily transports one in imagination to the scenes of the text. The rythms are swinging and agreeable, and fit the words in a way that enhances them.

At the end of this memorable evening the composer was called to the front of the hall, where he received the congratulations of Mr. Ross and the acclaim of the audience.

TANGLEWOOD, SUNDAY, JULY 8
By A. C. S.

The fourth program in the first series at Tanglewood featured Lukas Foss in the dual role of conductor and performer. His program, consisting of works from the 18th and 20th centuries, began with Haydn's D Major Symphony, No. 86 which was given a straightforward (if uninspired reading.

Irving Fine, a member of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, was represented by his Serious Song: Lament for String Orchestra. Commissioned by the Louisville Orchestra for performance last year it is wonderfully constructed, uses many instrumental devices, and reaches climaxes of great intensity. Mr. Foss gave it sympathetic attention.

A group of five little pieces by Alexei Haieff entitled Divertimento followed. Each is fascinatingly orchestrated and full of whimsical surprises. This is music loaded with audience appeal.

The third contemporary work was The Unanswered Question by Charles Ives. The amazing fact connected with the piece is the date of composition—1908. Utilizing a polytonal technique that Ives found congenial and an offstage string group it relies overly much on its program rather than having an inate musical worth.

The highlight of the afternoon came in the Bach Concerto in D Minor where Mr. Foss both played the piano and conducted. It was a happy union of talents which resulted in an exciting performance.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

JUL 12 1956

MUSICAL EVENT AT TANGLEWOOD BEAUTY-FILLED

Benny Goodman in Final Appearance On Chamber Program

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 11—The second chamber music recital in the theater-concert hall tonight drew an audience of 2147, nearly twice the number which attended the first concert. We are told that remaining concerts this week are completely sold out.

Rain Drives Crowd

Preceding the concert, several hundred people who meant to sit on the lawn had to rush to cover for the rains came down during as spectacular a thunderstorm as one could wish. By the end of the concert the stars were shining and a tiny moon was in evidence.

Benny Goodman made his second and final appearance here, joining the members of the Boston Symphony string quartet in a splendid performance of Mozart's "Clarmet Quintet in A Major," K. 581. The Boston quartet consists of Richard Burgin and Alfred Grips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola and Samuel Mayes, cello. When four such expert players get together, one may expect fine performances, but one does not always expect or hear so fine an integration of forces as was evidenced tonight.

The group plays with remarkable unity and interpretive solidarity.

The program opened with a delightful reading of Haydn's "String Quartet in E-Flat Major, Op. 33, No. 2." The work has all the Haydn charm. There was delicacy, earthiness and a surprise or two as the music wended its way. The final presto was as sparkling a gem as music ever produced.

Mr. Goodman and his colleagues gave good accounts of themselves in the Mozart quintet, one of the loveliest works in the literature. We had wondered, after hearing the clarinet concerto, whether Mr. Goodman could blend with a string quartet, for his tone is individual. We found out that he could. Thus the performance was well-integrated and finely proportioned. The variations in the final movement were played with dazzling virtuosity.

Difficult Quintet

The final work was the Brahms "String Quintet in G Major, Op. III." For this work, Eugene Lehner, violinist, joined the quartet. There are stumbling blocks in the way of interpretation of this quintet, but tonight we had men who were musicians as well as masters of their instruments. It would be difficult to imagine a more sincere, carefully thought out interpretation. There was a nice play of romanticism against the reality which can usually be found within the music of Brahms. Above all, there was the beautiful blending of instruments and the constant play of colors. It was a performance to be remembered.

As noted, the next three concerts this week are said to be sold out. Friday night Boris Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will collaborate in an all-Mozart program in which they have been touring the country. The "Concerto in F Major for three pianos and orchestra, K. 242" and the "Concerto in E Flat Major for two pianos and orchestra, K. 365" will be featured. Mr. Goldovsky will be featured in the "Piano Concerto in A Major, K. 488." The concert will open with three movements from the "Serenade in K Major."

Saturday night Charles Munch will direct an all-Bach program featuring William Kroll in the "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra, in E Major, No. 2" and Doriot Dwyer in the "Suite No. 2 in B Minor for flute and orchestra. The program will open with the second Brandenburg Concerto and conclude with "Suite No. 3 in D Major, for Orchestra."

Sunday afternoon the "Passion according to St. John" will be sung by the festival choir and following soloists, John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan, barit-on; Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto and James Joyce, bass.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Journal
ROCKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Republican
Circ. 3,549

JUL 12 1956

Musical Weekend Scheduled at Tanglewood

Learn how the magic of music can bring relaxation by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood this weekend.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the Berkshire Music Festival has been described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time."

On Friday at 8:30 p.m., the Festival Chamber Orchestra will play a selection of Mozart's works, while the following evening a night of Bach is scheduled. On Sunday at 2:30, the Chamber Orchestra will perform Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" with chorus and soloists.

Lenox is located on Route 7, just south of Pittsfield, Main east-west routes 2-9, and 20 all connect with Route 7.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

JUL 11 1956

Benny Goodman At Tanglewood

The second week of the 1956 Berkshire Festival will begin this evening at Tanglewood, Lenox, with a chamber music concert in the intimate Theatre-Concert hall by the Boston Symphony String Quartet assisted by clarinetist, Benny Goodman, and violist, Eugen Lehner. The program is comprised of Haydn's Quartet in E Flat Major, Opus 33, No. 2; Mozart's Clarinet Quintet in A Major K 581, with Mr. Goodman assisting; and Brahms' Quintet in G Major for Strings, Opus 111, with Mr. Lehner assisting.

The Boston Symphony String Quartet, which will be making its first Tanglewood appearance as an ensemble, is made up of the first-chair string players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins, concertmaster and assistant concertmaster, respectively; Joseph de Pasquale, solo viola; and Samuel Mayes, solo cello. The ensemble's recent recording debut on RCA-Victor Records with a performance of Haydn's "Seven Last Words of Christ" has elicited wide critical acclaim throughout the nation.

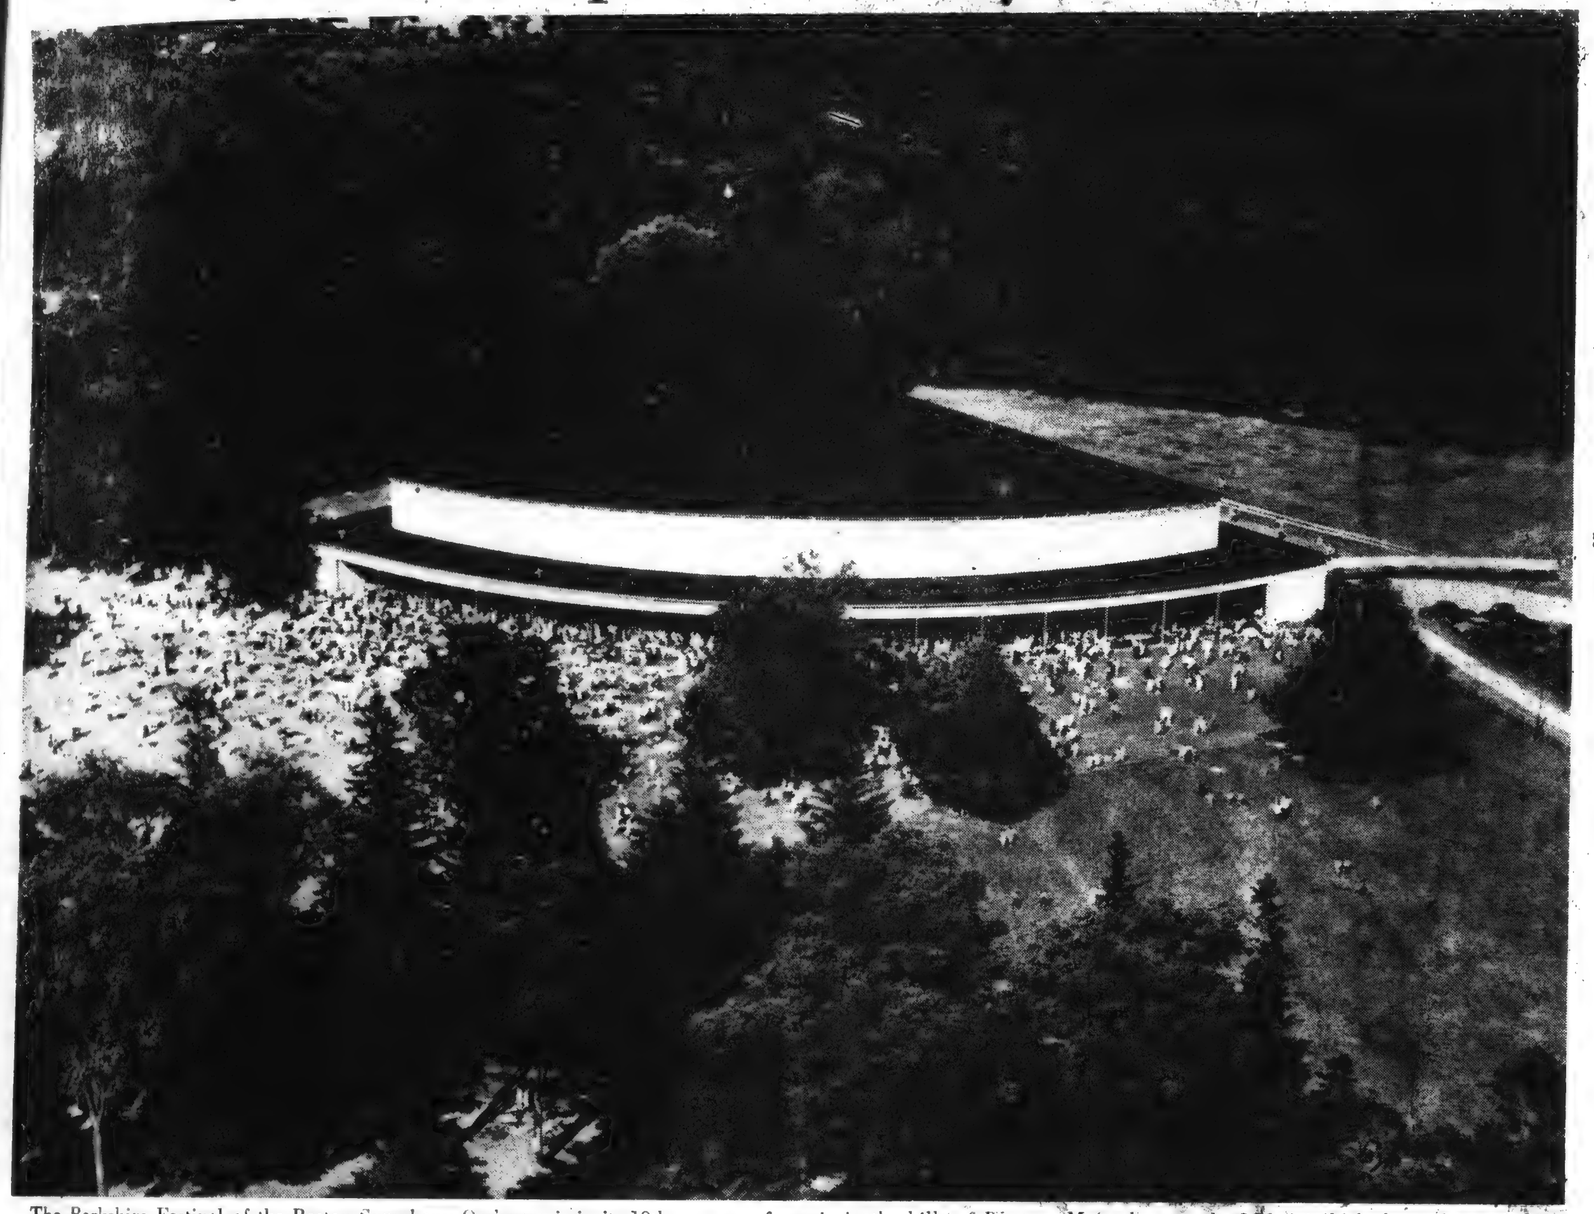
Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,064

JUL 12 1956

MARGARET HARSHAW . . . soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, who made her Tanglewood debut in 1955, returns to the Berkshire Festival for two concerts in 1955. On Wednesday, July 18 (8:30 p.m., Theatre-Concert Hall), Miss Harshaw will sing the Wesendonck Song Cycle of Wagner and a group of Richard Strauss songs, on the same program as a chamber music concert by The Brass Ensemble of the Boston Symphony. On Saturday, July 21 (8:30 p.m., Music Shed), the soprano will sing in a concert version of Act I of "Die Walkure," on an all-Wagner program. Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928
JUL 12 1956

Century-Old Hampshire County Landmark Passes



The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in its 19th summer of music in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the 17th in which the orchestra has participated under the direction of Charles Munch. The 1956 season of 24 concerts extends for six weeks from July 4-August 12. In 1955 Festival concerts attracted a record-breaking total attendance of 136.087 music lovers. It's chamber orchestra concerts in the intimate 1.200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall averaged an attendance of 3.032 persons. An average of 9.028 persons attended performances in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood (capacity 6.000), with crowds overflowing on the spacious lawns.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUL 12 1956

Change In Two Berkshire Programs

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has made changes in two of the programs the orchestra will play in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, during the current Berkshire Festival.

Instead of two all-Wagner programs on Saturday evening, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, Dr. Munch has made substitutions in the first half of each concert.

On July 21, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" will open the program, followed by Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6). They will replace the previously announced "A Faust Overture," Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," and Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

On Aug. 12, Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica," will be substituted for the previously listed Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauser and A Siegfried Idyll.

On both programs, Dr. Munch will retain the concert versions of Wagner operas originally scheduled: Act I of "Die Walkure" on July 21, with Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease as soloists; and Act II of "Die Meistersinger" (opening and final scene), with Messrs. Da Costa and Pease and Marguerite Willauer in solo roles.

WEEKLY CALENDAR

A schedule of places to go and things to do in The Bee's area

Music

The last two concerts of the Esplanade Concerts conducted by the Boston Pops Orchestra at Hatch Memorial Shell, Boston, Mass., will be held Friday evening, July 13, and Sunday evening July 15.

Boris Goldovsky and Rierre Luboshutz will conduct an all-Mozart concert by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. on Friday, July 13, at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Included on the program will be three piano concerti, with the duo pianists, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, and Mr. Goldovsky, as soloists. Also scheduled for this second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, is an all-Bach concert, Saturday, July 14, with Dr Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducting, and William Kroll and Doriet Anthony Dwyer as soloists. Dr Munch will also conduct the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "Passion According to St. John," on Sunday, July 15, at 2:30 p.m., when the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center under the direction of Hugh Ross. Ticket reservations may be made by calling Lenox, Mass. 600.

Chamber music by the Berkshire Quartet, featuring compositions by Mozart, Brahms and Beethoven, will be presented at Music Mountain, Falls Village, on Sunday, July 15, at 4 p.m. Janna Arschanska Dawson, pianist, will be assisting artist in the Brahms piano quartet. Further information may be had by writing to Music Mountain, Falls Village, Conn., or by telephone, [illegible]naan, TAylor 4-7126.

Marion Anderson, celebrated contralto, will be presented in a group of songs on July 20 in the Summer Pops concert of the Connecticut Symphony Orchestra at Fairfield University Stadium Bowl, Fairfield, with Evan Whallon conducting. Ticket information at Bridgeport FOrest 8-2586.

Eileen Farrell, Connecticut-born radio and television soprano, will be the guest artist at the third in the New Haven Pops concert series at the Yale Bowl, July 24. New Haven LOcust 2-3808.

Free carillon recitals are being given at Trinity College, Hartford, each Wednesday at 7:15 p.m. this month through August 29.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047
JUL 12 1956

[42]

SELL-OUT CROWD . . . the big shed at Tanglewood filled to capacity with the usual huge Sunday afternoon crowd. Director Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra while a summer sun [illegible] the heads of his listeners.
Tanglewood Photo

Music At Tanglewood Is Summer Lode Star

When the annual Berkshire Festival was a new apparition in the Berkshire Hills of western Massachusetts and showed signs of growing into a major gathering point of music-seekers, it was often compared to the Salzburg Festival in Europe. The comparison was inapt—nothing could be more different than the charming old Austrian town with its Baroque theatres and churches, and the expansive Tanglewood with its lawns and fine trees and its great semi-open Music Shed. Even the Boston Symphony Orchestra's school, the Berkshire Music Center, is totally unlike the Mozarteum in Salzburg, for here a student body of 400, ranging from the beginner to the skilled professional, make music under the supervision of a faculty including among others the Principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The comparison between these two projects in the old world and the new was nevertheless inevitable. Salzburg in those pre-war days was a mecca for musical pilgrims, Americans included. As the Berkshire Festival developed it was discovered that the very agreeable European custom of summer music had been successfully implanted in the United States as well. In addition to the popular programs enjoyed in such places as the Robin Hood Dell, and Symphony Hall in Boston where the Boston Pops have been given for seventy years, there was developing a taste for great symphony music by orchestras in their full winter [illegible] amplitude. Performances aiming at such a standard are now to be found in many parts of this country while Europe continues to make more summer music than ever before. There is only one explanation—the taste for music, the best music, has grown considerably as the science of mechanical reproduction has brought it into every home.

In our country the Berkshire Festival has set the pace. It grew from a local project for outdoor concerts in Lenox, Mass., first undertaken in 1934 by the citizens of Berkshire county. At first, an orchestra from the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky was brought from Boston, with a shell for the musicians and a hired tent for the audience. The next step was brought about by the gift to Boston's orchestra of the 200-acre estate at Tanglewood on the Lenox-Stockbridge line.

The grounds of Tanglewood extend to the shores of Lake Mahkeenac in Stockbridge. The property was laid out in 1849 by William Aspinwall Tappan, a Boston banker and merchant, who bought several farms for the purpose. The present house was completed in 1865. William Tappan's daughters, Ellen Sturgis Tappan (who married Richard C. Dixey) and Mary Aspinwall Tappan, unmarried, lived at Tanglewood for many years and there entertained many literary celebrities. Mrs. Dixey was an artist and has left a number of sketches which depict the social life at Tanglewood. Nathaniel Hawthorne lived at Tanglewood in the years 1851-1853, staying in a little red cottage on the edge of what is now Hawthorne Street, which runs through the center of the estate. It was here that Hawthorne planned Tanglewood Tales wrote The Wonder Book, and assembled the material for The House of Seven Gables. The cottage was burned down June 22, 1890. A replica on the original site was built and generously presented in 1948 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra by the National Federation of Music Clubs, for use as studios by the Berkshire Music Center. Tanglewood has expanses of lawn and meadow which set off to advantage its many magnificent trees—elms, pines, and birches. It is related that a tribe of Mohican Indians once settled upon the shores of the lake under their chief, Konapot. Indian arrowheads have been found there.

At Tanglewood, under a tent, an audience assembled to open the Festival in 1937. A sudden storm of rain such as sometimes happens in the Berkshire Hills drenched the audience and all but broke up the concert. The result of this was the erection in 1938 of the present Music Shed, which has given the Festivals their due security and permanence. The Shed seats 6000 and by virtue of the open sides and back, permits good hearing on the lawns outside and accommodates thousands more.

When the war came and reduced motor traffic to a trickle, the Festival concerts were necessarily suspended. In the summer of 1946 they were Actually they're both right. Bill spotted the little store next to Dufour's Garage in Lakeville one day on his way home from the farm. An impetuous fellow, he pulled up to the curb and rented it on the spot . . . "for an egg store."

(Continued on Page Six)

Somehow a store just selling eggs seemed to have a limited appeal. Mrs. Ford found it understandable when Bill complained that things were a little slow. "Naturally!" she commented.

"Bach-Mozart" concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the intimate Theatre will precede these on the two previous weekends, July 6 through July 15. Chamber groups will give concerts on the six Wednesday evenings of those weeks.

Evening concerts start at 8:30, matinees at 2:30. Saturday morning rehearsals, which an increasing number of people like to attend, begin at 10.

TANGLEWOOD ● Lenox, Mass. ● JULY 4 to AUG. 12

Berkshire Festival

By the BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
Fri. & Sat. Eves. & Afts. through 8 weeks
First 2 week-ends: "Bach-Mozart" concerts (July 6-15) Tickets $4 and $5
Last 4 week-ends: Shed concerts (July 20-Aug. 12)
Last 4 weekends: Shed concerts (July 20Aug. 12) Tickets $2.50, $3, $3.50 $4, $5.50, (Box Seats $6.50)
Also Chamber Musc concerts on 6 Wed. Eves. Tickets $2 and $3
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records
For programs and ticket information apply
TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Phone Lenox 600

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, FRIDAY, JULY 13, 19[illegible]

5 Opera Scenes At Tanglewood

The Berkshire Music Center's opera department will present scenes from five operas at 8:30 p. m. Monday, July 30, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The works to be represented are Berlioz' "The Trojans," Puccini's "La Rondine," and Verdi's "Don Carlo," "Falstaff" and "Aida." Boris Goldovsky will double as conductor and pianist. The department will also offer excerpts from fourteen Mozart operas Tuesday night, July 24; weekly afternoon recitals of opera scenes, beginning tomorrow; a full-scale production of Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin" Monday and Tuesday nights, Aug. 6 and 7, and a special production for the "Tanglewood on Parade" program on Thursday, Aug. 9.

Information about tickets is available from the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center office at Tanglewood (telephone, Lenox 600.)

In the second week end of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood tonight Mr. Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will be soloists with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony musicians in Mozart piano concertos. Messrs. Goldovsky and Luboshutz will also conduct. Charles Munch will direct a Bach instrumental program tomorrow night and Bach's St. John Passion on Sunday afternoon.

5 Opera Scenes At Tanglewood

The Berkshire Music Center's opera department will present scenes from five operas at 8:30 p. m. Monday, July 30, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The works to be represented are Berlioz' "The Trojans," Puccini's "La Rondine," and Verdi's "Don Carlo," "Falstaff" and "Aida." Boris Goldovsky will double as conductor and pianist. The department will also offer excerpts from fourteen Mozart operas Tuesday night, July 24; weekly afternoon recitals of opera scenes, beginning tomorrow; a full-scale production of Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin" Monday and Tuesday nights, Aug. 6 and 7, and a special production for the "Tanglewood on Parade" program on Thursday, Aug. 9.

Information about tickets is available from the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center office at Tanglewood (telephone, Lenox 600.)

In the second week end of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood tonight Mr. Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will be soloists with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony musicians in Mozart piano concertos.

[43]

SPELLBOUND CROWD . . . the big shed at Tanglewood filled to overflowing with the usual huge Sunday afternoon crowd. Director Charles Munch conducts his Boston Symphony Orchestra while a summer sun illumines the heads of his listeners. Tanglewood Photo

Music At Tanglewood Is Summer Lode Star

When the annual Berkshire Festival was a new apparition in the Berkshire Hills of western Massachusetts and showed signs of growing into a major gathering point of music-seekers, it was often compared to the Salzburg Festival in Europe. The comparison was inapt—nothing could be more different than the charming old Austrian town with its Baroque theatres and churches, and the expansive Tanglewood with its lawns and fine trees and its great semi-open Music Shed. Even the Boston Symphony Orchestra's school, the Berkshire Music Center, is totally unlike the Mozarteum in Salzburg, for here a student body of 400, ranging from the beginner to the skilled professional, make music under the supervision of a faculty including among others the Principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The comparison between these two projects in the old world and the new was nevertheless inevitable. Salzburg in those pre-war days was a mecca for musical pilgrims, Americans included. As the Berkshire Festival developed it was discovered that the very agreeable European custom of summer music had been successfully implanted in the United States as well. In addition to the popular programs enjoyed in such places as the Robin Hood Dell, and Symphony Hall in Boston where the Boston Pops have been given for seventy years, there was developing a taste for great symphony music by orchestras in their full winter amplitude. Performances aiming at such a standard are now to be found in many parts of this country while Europe continues to make more summer music than ever before. There is only one explanation—the taste for music, the best music, has grown considerably as the science of mechanical reproduction has brought it into every home.

In our country the Berkshire Festival has set the pace. It grew from a local project for outdoor concerts in Lenox, Mass., first undertaken in 1934 by the citizens of Berkshire county. At first, an orchestra from the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky was brought from Boston, with a shell for the musicians and a hired tent for the audience. The next step was brought about by the gift to Boston's orchestra of the 200-acre estate at Tanglewood on the Lenox-Stockbridge line.

The grounds of Tanglewood extend to the shores of Lake Mahkeenac in Stockbridge. The property was laid out in 1849 by William Aspinwall Tappan, a Boston banker and merchant, who bought several farms for the purpose. The present house was completed in 1865. William Tappan's daughters, Ellen Sturgis Tappan (who married Richard C. Dixey) and Mary Aspinwall Tappan, unmarried, lived at Tanglewood for many years and there entertained many literary celebrities. Mrs. Dixey was an artist and has left a number of sketches which depict the social life at Tanglewood. Nathaniel Hawthorne lived at Tanglewood for the years 1851-1853, staying in a small red cottage on the edge of what is now Hawthorne Street, which runs through the center of the estate. It was here that Hawthorne played with Tanglewood Tales wrote The Wonder Book, and assembled the material for The House of Seven Gables. The cottage was burned down Dec. 22, 1890. A replica on the original site was built and generously presented in 1948 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra by the National Federation of Music Clubs, to serve as studios by the Berkshire Music Center. Tanglewood has expanses of lawn and meadow which set off to advantage its many magnificent trees—elms, pines, and birches. It is related that a tribe of Mohican Indians once settled upon the shores of the lake under their chief, Konkapot. Indian arrowheads have been found there.

At Tanglewood, under a tent, an audience assembled to open the Festival in 1937. A sudden storm of rain such as sometimes happens in the Berkshire Hills drenched the audience and all but broke up the concert. The result of this was the erection in 1938 of the present Music Shed, which has given the Festivals their due security and permanence. The Shed seats 6000 and by virtue of the open sides and back, permits good hearing on the lawns outside and accommodates thousands more.

When the war came and reduced motor traffic to a trickle, the Festival concerts were necessarily suspended. In the summer of 1946 they were

(Continued on Page Six)

TANGLEWOOD ● Lenox, Mass. ● JULY 4 to AUG. 12

Berkshire Festival

By the BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
Fri. & Sat. Eves. & Afts. through 6 weeks
First 2 week-ends: "Bach-Mozart" concerts (July 6-15) Tickets $4 and $5
Last 4 week-ends: Shed concerts (July 20-Aug. 12)
Last 4 weekends: Shed concerts (July 20Aug. 12) Tickets $2.50, $3, $3.50 $4, $5.50, (Box Seats $6.50)
Also Chamber Musc concerts on 6 Wed. Eves. Tickets $2 and $3
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records
For programs and ticket information apply
TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Phone Lenox 600

Actually they're both right. Bill spotted the little store next to Dufour's Garage in Lakeville one day on his way home from the farm. An impetuous fellow, he pulled up to the curb and rented it on the spot . . . "for an egg store."

Somehow a store just selling eggs seemed to have a limited appeal. Mrs. Ford found it understandable when Bill complained that things were a little slow. "Naturally!" she commented.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, FRIDAY, JULY 13, 1951

5 Opera Scenes At Tanglewood

The Berkshire Music Center's opera department will present scenes from five operas at 8:30 p. m. Monday, July 30, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The works to be represented are Berlioz' "The Trojans," Puccini's "La Rondine," and Verdi's "Don Carlo," "Falstaff" and "Aida." Boris Goldovsky will double as conductor and pianist. The department will also offer excerpts from fourteen Mozart operas Tuesday night, July 24; weekly afternoon recitals of opera scenes, beginning tomorrow; a full-scale production of Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin" Monday and Tuesday nights, Aug. 6 and 7, and a special production for the "Tanglewood on Parade" program on Thursday, Aug. 9.

Information about tickets is available from the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center office at Tanglewood (telephone, Lenox 600.)

In the second week end of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood tonight Mr. Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will be soloists with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony musicians in Mozart piano concertos. Messrs. Goldovsky and Luboshutz will also conduct. Charles Munch will direct a Bach instrumental program tomorrow night and Bach's St. John Passion on Sunday afternoon.

5 Opera Scenes At Tanglewood

The Berkshire Music Center's opera department will present scenes from five operas at 8:30 p. m. Monday, July 30, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The works to be represented are Berlioz' "The Trojans," Puccini's "La Rondine," and Verdi's "Don Carlo," "Falstaff" and "Aida." Boris Goldovsky will double as conductor and pianist. The department will also offer excerpts from fourteen Mozart operas Tuesday night, July 24; weekly afternoon recitals of opera scenes, beginning tomorrow; a full-scale production of Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin" Monday and Tuesday nights, Aug. 6 and 7, and a special production for the "Tanglewood on Parade" program on Thursday, Aug. 9.

Information about tickets is available from the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center office at Tanglewood (telephone, Lenox 600.)

In the second week end of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood tonight Mr. Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will be soloists with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony musicians in Mozart piano concertos.

"Bach-Mozart" concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the intimate Theatre will precede these on the two previous weekends, July 6 through July 15. Chamber groups will give concerts on the six Wednesday evenings of those weeks.

Evening concerts start at 8:30, matinees at 2:30. Saturday morning rehearsals, which an increasing number of people like to attend, begin at 10.

[43]

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746
JUL 13 1956

Dream Audience Furnished Performers At Lenox; Don't Even Scatter for Rain

By A STAFF REPORTER

Lenox, July 12 — Fabulous Tanglewood, the world's summer music center, furnishes performers with the "dream" audience which by decree, edict, regulation and precedent can do nothing but listen.

Smoking at Proper Time

Periods for sneezing, coughing and lighting cigarets are regulated by the powers that be and when a customer, whether a music lover or one who wants to be seen at the right place, sits down at Tanglewood, he has to be in condition to withstand not only the demands of the music but the fickle weather of the Berkshire hills.

Wednesday night furnished an example of the kind of audience that has become the byword at Tanglewood.

Costumed for fair and warm weather, the overflow audience, attracted by the appearance of Benny Goodman, who played with the string quartet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, adapted quickly to the most vicious electrical rainstorm of the season. Blankets and raincoats were broken out and nary a music lover retreated from the elements.

The usual picnics around the grounds of the onetime estate of a multimillionaire were washed out by the storm but the cold, wet ground failed to dampen the ardor of more than 2000.

Blankets Spread Out

The storm proved only a minor inconvenience. As the sky cleared, blankets were spread and the 1000 or more who had been admitted as standees parked themselves under trees, against posts, on camp chairs they had brought and under umbrellas in the fringe area of the auditorium.

When the gong sounds, signaling the arrival on stage of the performing artists, the buzzing of the audience halts, those who haven't reached reserved seats are shut out and nothing is allowed to interfer or compete with the music. Pictures taken by flash bulb are taboo and even walking on the hardsurfaced walks in close proximity to the auditorium is frowned on.

Tanglewood enthusiasts don't have to see the performers to be sent. The public address system delivers the sounds to reaches far beyond the auditorium and the sound is what counts. While it may appear so, music lovers stretched out on the ground, under trees and in the bush land on the estate, are not alseep. They are concentrating on the sounds, according to a number stumbled over during Goodman's Wednesday night concert.

"His tone is good but his fingering is not up to standard," one expert of the clarinet, said, although his vantage point to qualify as an authority on fingering was open to question.

For Goodman, the audience ranged in age from sub-teens to those in the old age assistance bracket but no rock 'n rollers were in evidence. Had there been, they would have had little to cheer for as the performers limited themselves strictly to long hair music.

That the rich man's Steve Allen was the big draw was early established. Around the shed the audience participation dealt with Goodman's second appearance at the concert series, both of which were marked by rain. They talked of Alice Hammond (Mrs. Goodman) and her return to Elm Court in Lenox, the estate which was established by her grandparents and which is now a guest home for visitors to the Berkshires. They talked, too, of Rachel, the 13-year-old daughter of Benny and Alice Goodman, who was reported in the audience but was not identified. Neither Mrs. Goodman nor daughter Rachel put in an appearance backstage among the autograph seekers after the concert.

Wednesday night was not the night to get the true flavor of Tanglewood, because of the storm, but storm or no storm, there was no doubt that the music center in the Berkshires has a distinctive flavor, unmatched by any other musical concoction in the United States.

The Berkshire Eagle, Friday, July 13, 1956

TANGLEWOOD
Lenox, Mass. • NOW thru AUGUST 12

Berkshire Festival
BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

THEATER-CONCERT HALL

FRI., July 13, at 8:30—MOZART PIANO CONCERTOS
Soloists: Boris Goldovsky, Luboshutz and Nemenoff
SAT., July 14, at 8:30—BACH PROGRAM (Munch)
Soloist: William Kroll, Violin
SUN., July 15, at 2:30—BACH—ST. JOHN PASSION (Munch)
Tickets Wed. $2, $3; Fri., Sat., Sun., $4, $5.
— Reserved seats for July 13 & 14 all taken; for July 15, $5 only —

ADMISSION $2 —
LAST 4 Weekends: Shed Concerts (July 20-Aug. 12)
Tickets: $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50 (Box Seats $6.50)

Baldwin Piano
For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Phone Lenox 600
RCA Victor Records

Public Events

Tonight

7:30—Mount Carmel benefit lawn party. Mount Carmel School grounds.

8:30—Bach-Mozart series. Theater-Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox.

8:40—"The Philadelphia Story." Williamstown Summer Theater.

8:45—"The Solid Gold Cadillac." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"The Desperate Hours." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

9:00—Sonia Arova and Job Sanders. Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, Becket.

YW Sponsoring Tanglewood Trip

Reservations for July 22 Open to the 16th

The Springfield YWCA at 26 Howard St. is sponsoring its annual trip to Tanglewood on July 22. That afternoon the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Pierre Monteux conducting, will present Rossini's "Overture to L'Italiana in Algeri," Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra" and Schubert's "Symphony No. 7 in C Major."

All interested in the trip may call the YWCA for reservations, which will close on July 16. The bus will arrive at Tanglewood in time for lunch.

✠

Mrs. H. H. Van Tuyl of Magnolia Ter., recently returned from a two-month visit with her daughter, Mrs. F. Turner Cooke, of Portland, Ore. Mr. and Mrs. Cooke, formerly of Springfield, left Portland for an extensive two months' tour of California when their daughter, Mrs. Polly Cooke Norman, left for Anchorage, Alaska to make her home there.

Berkshire Eagle, Friday, July 13, 1956

Tonight's Concert In Music Shed At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD—Because of threatening weather, officials of the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced this afternoon that tonight's concert, scheduled for the Theater-Concert Hall, has been shifted to the Music Shed.

The program, beginning at 8:30, will be featured by the appearance of the duo pianists, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, and Boris Goldovsky, Mr. Luboshutz's nephew, in an all-Mozart program.

Jazz Master Benny Goodman Plays Classical Clarinet at Tanglewood

How are the lights and what's on the stage were among the details that jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman had to concern himself with when he appeared Wednesday night at a classical concert at Tanglewood in Lenox. In first picture, Goodman, center, swaps clarinet techniques with shed lighting expert William T. Lahart of Lenox, left, and Rodman Henry, of Pittsfield and Boston, assistant to the stage manager. Wet grounds from an electrical storm failed to dampen the ardor of four Pittsfield youths who wanted to hear Goodman play longhair. The quartet who spread a blanket on the lawn well outside the auditorium, are, from the left, Robin Reeves, Andrew Clarke, Virginia Hebb and Peter Brigham. Although it was not part of his contract, Goodman held fourth like a king outside his dressing room, signing autograph books for his juvenile admirers, most of whom compared him with Steve Allen, TV star who played Goodman in the movie, "The Benny Goodman Story." "I know I don't," was Goodman's standard answer to comment that he doesn't look a bit like Allen.

Boston Symphony Announces Itinerary Of Trip Abroad

TANGLEWOOD — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play 27 concerts in 13 countries during its five-and-a-half week tour of Europe in August and September, manager Thomas D. Perry Jr. announced today.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, its music director for the past seven years, the 106 players of the Boston Symphony will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival here on Aug. 12.

The first of two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on Friday evening, Aug. 24, followed by a matinee in Dublin the next day. Five concerts will be given at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, Aug. 26-30, then the symphony will visit Scandinavia for four days.

A highlight of the tour is the invitation, recently issued by the ministry of Culture in Moscow and immediately accepted by the Board of Trustees of the orchestra, for the Boston Symphony to be the first American orchestra to perform in the U.S.S.R. During the six days, Sept. 5-10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, a pair of concerts will be given each in Leningrad and Moscow. The U.S.S.R. will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour, including transportation by air and train, and will also pay a stipend for the four concerts. It is expected the Russian government will fly the members of the orchestra, its staff and equipment from Helsinki to Leningrad, and from Moscow to its next date in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia.

Concerts subsequently will be performed in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres—the orchestra has been invited to play in the famous Cathedral—Leeds and London.

The itinerary follows:

Cork, Ireland, Aug. 24; Dublin, Ireland, Aug. 25 (matinee); Edinburgh, Scotland, Aug. 26 through 30; Copenhagen, Denmark, Aug. 31; Oslo, Norway, Sept. 1; Stockholm, Sweden, Sept. 3; Helsinki, Finland, Sept. 4; Leningrad, U.S.S.R., Sept. 5 and 6; Moscow, U.S.S.R., Sept. 8 and 9; Prague, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 11; Vienna, Austria, Sept. 12; Stuttgart, Germany, Sept. 13; Munich, Germany, Sept. 14; Zurich, Switzerland, Sept. 16; Berne, Switzerland, Sept. 17; Paris, France, Sept. 19 and 20; Chartres, France, Sept. 21; Leeds, England, Sept. 23; London, England, Sept. 24 and 25.

Gazette, Northampton

Benny Goodman At Tanglewood

The second week of the 1956 Berkshire Festival will begin this evening at Tanglewood, Lenox, with a chamber music concert in the intimate Theatre-Concert hall by the Boston Symphony String Quartet assisted by clarinetist, Benny Goodman, and violist, Eugen Lehner. The program is comprised of Haydn's Quartet in E Flat Major, Opus 33, No. 2; Mozart's Clarinet Quintet in A Major K 581, with Mr. Goodman assisting; and Brahms' Quintet in G Major for Strings, Opus 111, with Mr. Lehner assisting.

The Boston Symphony String Quartet, which will be making its first Tanglewood appearance as an ensemble, is made up of the first-chair string players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins, concertmaster and assistant concertmaster, respectively; Joseph de Pasquale, solo viola; and Samuel Mayes, solo cello. The ensemble's recent recording debut on RCA-Victor Records with a performance of Haydn's "Seven Last Words of Christ" has elicited wide critical acclaim throughout the nation.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

JUL 14 1956

Benny Goodman Again Applauded At Tanglewood

In his second appearance at Tanglewood this season, Benny Goodman drew several rounds of enthusiastic applause. Although his style is not entirely suited to the classics, his willingness to conform merits approbation and encouragement. He is a master of the clarinet, his tone sure and clean, the changes from low to high register apparently effortless and his pianissimos breathlessly beautiful and controlled.

The Boston Symphony String Quartet made its debut last evening, with Mr. Goodman assisting in Mozart's Clarinet Quintet. The technical and tonal quality of this quartet showed why these men have been retained as first-chair players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. They are Richard Burgin, concertmaster; Alfred Krips, assistant concertmaster; Joseph de Pasquale, solo violist, and Samuel Mayes, solo cellist. They have recently recorded Haydn's "Seven Last Words of Christ," for RCA-Victor.

The program opened with Haydn's E-flat Quartet Op. 33, No. 2, one of his most appealing, deceptively simple in that its tempos must be unhurried, or its beauty is lost in the unheralded running passages. It is almost a violin solo with string accompaniment, but this gave one the opportunity to enjoy Mr. Burgin's exceptional artistry. The largo as introduced by the viola and cello was played with tender feeling by all members. The final movement was a delightful ending with typical Haydn humor, the theme broken into small bits with tantalizing rests between portions and finally finishing in a flippant manner.

The Mozart quintet, as already mentioned, richer in quality and content, gave the quartet opportunity to display their ensemble more fully and graciously. Mozart's use of muted strings in the second movement makes this one of the unforgettable compositions.

After an intermission the quartet assisted by Eugen Lehner, violist, played the incomparable quintet in G major, Op. 111 by Brahms. Here the intimate ensemble full-blown, the first movement controlled but intense giving way to the passionate Afanlo in which the rotund resonance of the viola encompassed one with beautiful melodies, the purely classic allegretto, and the final Vivace in which the music interweaves with a brilliance that glows from each instrument, only the coda foreign and unsatisfying, as if what went before could not be duplicated, so let each finish as best he can.

The audience numbering 2147, was enthusiastic in its appreciation and acceptance of the new Boston Symphony String Quartet.

Friday evening a program of piano concertos by Mozart will be given by the duo pianists, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, and their nephew, Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. The concert will begin with three movements from the composer's "Posthorn" Serenade. — MdeB B.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

JUL 14 1956

Lenox Weekend To Feature Munch

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Director of The Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood in Lenox, returns to lead the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this evening, and tomorrow afternoon's two all-Bach concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Beginning next week-end, the Festival concerts will move into the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood for four week-ends of concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Tonight's concert at 8:30 p.m. will present a program of orchestral music by Bach, beginning with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major and continuing with the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E Major. The concertino soloists in the Brandenburg Concerto will be the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Roger Voisin, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; and Richard Burgin, violin. Violin soloist in the E Major Concerto will be William Kroll, founder of the string quartet which bears his name and co-head (with Richard Burgin) of the Berkshire Music Center's chamber music department. After the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's Second and Third Suites for Orchestra, with Mrs. Dwyer as flute soloist in the second suite.

Bach Programs At Tanglewood

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, returns to the podium of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood tonight and Sunday afternoon to conduct two Bach concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall. Beginning next weekend, the concerts will move into the giant Music Shed for four weekends of concerts by the full Boston Symphony.

Tonight's concert at 8:30 will present a program of orchestral music by Bach, beginning with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F major and continuing with the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E major. The concertino soloists in the Brandenburg Concerto will be the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Roger Voisin, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; and Richard Burgin, violin.

Violin soloist in the E major Concerto will be William Kroll, founder of the string quartet which bears his name and co-head (with Richard Burgin) of the Berkshire Music Center's chamber music department. After the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's Second and Third Suites for Orchestra, with Mrs. Dwyer as flute soloist in the Second Suite.

Sunday afternoon Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" in its first Tanglewood performance. Assisting will be the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, and a quintet of vocal soloists, all of whom are former students at the Berkshire Music Center, and who have since gone on to concert and operatic careers. They are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

JUL 14 1956

Lenox Weekend To Feature Munch

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Director of The Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood in Lenox, returns to lead the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this evening, and tomorrow afternoon's two all-Bach concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Beginning next week-end, the Festival concerts will move into the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood for four week-ends of concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Tonight's concert at 8:30 p.m. will present a program of orchestral music by Bach, beginning with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major and continuing with the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E Major. The concertino soloists in the Brandenburg Concerto will be the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Roger Voisin, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; and Richard Burgin, violin. Violin soloist in the E Major Concerto will be William Kroll, founder of the string quartet which bears his name and co-head (with Richard Burgin) of the Berkshire Music Center's chamber music department. After the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's Second and Third Suites for Orchestra, with Mrs. Dwyer as flute soloist in the second suite.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

JUL 14 1956

Domain Concert Sunday

The regular Sunday afternoon concerts of the Domain School of Conducting in Hancock, Maine, will begin on July 15 this year, two weeks earlier than usual as Mr. Monteux leaves in mid-August for the Boston Symphony tour of Europe.

Ginia Davis, soprano, and Emery Davis, clarinet, will be soloists at the first concert. Joseph Barone will conduct the Orchestra of the School, of which he is the director and Mr. Monteux the master.

On Thursday evening, July 19, at 8:30 Miss Davis will give a song recital with Mr. Hubert Doris at the piano. She recently returned from Europe where she sang twice with the BBC Symphony in London, with the Birmingham Symphony, and with the Pas de loup Orchestra in Paris. She gave recitals in Paris, St. Brieuc, and London, sang in the opera, "Le Fou," of Marcel Landowski, and for the radio in France, Italy, and Spain.

Emery Davis has been bass clarinetist with the Detroit Symphony this season. Mr. Doris is on the faculty of the Columbia University Music Department.

[45]

Boston Symphony Announces Itinerary Of Trip Abroad

TANGLEWOOD — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play 27 concerts in 13 countries during its five-and-a-half week tour of Europe in August and September, manager Thomas D. Perry Jr. announced today.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, its music director for the past seven years, the 106 players of the Boston Symphony will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival here on Aug. 12.

The first of two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on Friday evening, Aug. 24, followed by a matinee in Dublin the next day. Five concerts will be given at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, Aug. 26-30, then the symphony will visit Scandinavia for four days.

A highlight of the tour is the invitation, recently issued by the ministry of Culture in Moscow and immediately accepted by the Board of Trustees of the orchestra, for the Boston Symphony to be the first American orchestra to perform in the U.S.S.R. During the six days, Sept. 5-10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, a pair of concerts will be given each in Leningrad and Moscow. The U.S.S.R. will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour, including transportation by air and train, and will also pay a stipend for the four concerts. It is expected the Russian government will fly the members of the orchestra, its staff and equipment from Helsinki to Leningrad, and from Moscow to its next date in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia.

Concerts subsequently will be performed in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres—the orchestra has been invited to play in the famous Cathedral—Leeds and London.

The itinerary follows:

Cork, Ireland, Aug. 24; Dublin, Ireland, Aug. 25 (matinee); Edinburgh, Scotland, Aug. 26 through 30; Copenhagen, Denmark, Aug. 31; Oslo, Norway, Sept. 1; Stockholm, Sweden, Sept. 3; Helsinki, Finland, Sept. 4; Leningrad, U.S.S.R., Sept. 5 and 6; Moscow, U.S.S.R., Sept. 8 and 9; Prague, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 11; Vienna, Austria, Sept. 12; Stuttgart, Germany, Sept. 13; Munich, Germany, Sept. 14; Zurich, Switzerland, Sept. 16; Berne, Switzerland, Sept. 17; Paris, France, Sept. 19 and 20; Chartres, France, Sept. 21; Leeds, England, Sept. 23; London, England, Sept. 24 and 25.

Gazette, Northampton

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

JUL 14 1956

Lenox Weekend To Feature Munch

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Director of The Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood in Lenox, returns to lead the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this evening, and tomorrow afternoon's two all-Bach concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Beginning next week-end, the Festival concerts will move into the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood for four week-ends of concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Tonight's concert at 8:30 p.m. will present a program of orchestral music by Bach, beginning with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major and continuing with the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E Major. The concertino soloists in the Brandenburg Concerto will be the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Roger Voisin, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; and Richard Burgin, violin. Violin soloist in the E Major Concerto will be William Kroll, founder of the string quartet which bears his name and co-head (with Richard Burgin) of the Berkshire Music Center's chamber music department. After the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's Second and Third Suites for Orchestra, with Mrs. Dwyer as flute soloist in the second suite.

Benny Goodman At Tanglewood

The second week of the 1956 Berkshire Festival will begin this evening at Tanglewood, Lenox, with a chamber music concert in the intimate Theatre-Concert hall by the Boston Symphony String Quartet assisted by clarinetist, Benny Goodman, and violist, Eugen Lehner. The program is comprised of Haydn's Quartet in E Flat Major, Opus 33, No. 2; Mozart's Clarinet Quintet in A Major K 581, with Mr. Goodman assisting; and Brahms' Quintet in G Major for Strings, Opus 111, with Mr. Lehner assisting.

The Boston Symphony String Quartet, which will be making its first Tanglewood appearance as an ensemble, is made up of the first-chair string players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins, concertmaster and assistant concertmaster, respectively; Joseph de Pasquale, solo viola; and Samuel Mayes, solo cello. The ensemble's recent recording debut on RCA-Victor Records with a performance of Haydn's "Seven Last Words of Christ" has elicited wide critical acclaim throughout the nation.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

JUL 14 1956

Bach Programs At Tanglewood

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, returns to the podium of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood tonight and Sunday afternoon to conduct two Bach concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall. Beginning next weekend, the concerts will move into the giant Music Shed for four weekends of concerts by the full Boston Symphony.

Tonight's concert at 8:30 will present a program of orchestral music by Bach, beginning with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F major and continuing with the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E major. The concertino soloists in the Brandenburg Concerto will be the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Roger Voisin, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; and Richard Burgin, violin.

Violin soloist in the E major Concerto will be William Kroll, founder of the string quartet which bears his name and co-head (with Richard Burgin) of the Berkshire Music Center's chamber music department. After the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's Second and Third Suites for Orchestra, with Mrs. Dwyer as flute soloist in the Second Suite.

Sunday afternoon Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" in its first Tanglewood performance. Assisting will be the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, and a quintet of vocal soloists, all of whom are former students at the Berkshire Music Center, and who have since gone on to concert and operatic careers. They are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

Benny Goodman Again Applauded At Tanglewood

In his second appearance at Tanglewood this season, Benny Goodman drew several rounds of enthusiastic applause. Although his style is not entirely suited to the classics, his willingness to conform merits approbation and encouragement. He is a master of the clarinet, his tone sure and clean, the changes from low to high register apparently effortless and his pianissimos breathlessly beautiful and controlled.

The Boston Symphony String Quartet made its debut last evening, with Mr. Goodman assisting in Mozart's Clarinet Quintet. The technical and tonal quality of this quartet showed why these men have been retained as first-chair players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. They are Richard Burgin, concertmaster; Alfred Krips, assistant concertmaster; Joseph de Pasquale, solo violist, and Samuel Mayes, solo cellist. They have recently recorded Haydn's "Seven Last Words of Christ," for RCA-Victor.

The program opened with Haydn's E-flat Quartet Op. 33, No. 2, one of his most appealing, deceptively simple in that its tempos must be unhurried, or its beauty is lost in the unheralded running passages. It is almost a violin solo with string accompaniment, but this gave one the opportunity to enjoy Mr. Burgin's exceptional artistry. The largo as introduced by the viola and cello was played with tender feeling by all members. The final movement was a delightful ending with typical Haydn humor, the theme broken into small bits with tantalizing rests between portions and finally finishing in a flippant manner.

The Mozart quintet, as already mentioned, richer in quality and content, gave the quartet opportunity to display their ensemble more fully and graciously. Mozart's use of muted strings in the second movement makes this one of the unforgettable compositions.

After an intermission the quartet assisted by Eugen Lehner, violist, played the incomparable quintet in G major, Op. 111 by Brahms. Here the intimate ensemble full-blown, the first movement controlled but intense giving way to the passionate Afahio in which the rotund resonance of the viola encompassed one with beautiful melodies, the purely classic allegretto, and the final Vivace in which the music interweaves with a brilliance that glows from each instrument, only the coda foreign and unsatisfying, as if what went before could not be duplicated, so let each finish as best he can.

The audience numbering 2147, was enthusiastic in its appreciation and acceptance of the new Boston Symphony String Quartet.

Friday evening a program of piano concertos by Mozart will be given by the duo pianists, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, and their nephew, Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. The concert will begin with three movements from the composer's "Posthorn" Serenade. — MdeB B.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

JUL 14 1956

Lenox Weekend To Feature Munch

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Director of The Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood in Lenox, returns to lead the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this evening, and tomorrow afternoon's two all-Bach concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Beginning next week-end, the Festival concerts will move into the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood for four week-ends of concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Tonight's concert at 8:30 p.m. will present a program of orchestral music by Bach, beginning with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major and continuing with the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E Major. The concertino soloists in the Brandenburg Concerto will be the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Roger Voisin, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; and Richard Burgin, violin. Violin soloist in the E Major Concerto will be William Kroll, founder of the string quartet which bears his name and co-head (with Richard Burgin) of the Berkshire Music Center's chamber music department. After the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's Second and Third Suites for Orchestra, with Mrs. Dwyer as flute soloist in the second suite.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

JUL 14 1956

Domain Concert Sunday

The regular Sunday afternoon concerts of the Domain School of Conducting in Hancock, Maine, will begin on July 15 this year, two weeks earlier than usual as Mr. Monteux leaves in mid-August for the Boston Symphony tour of Europe.

Ginia Davis, soprano, and Emery Davis, clarinet, will be soloists at the first concert. Joseph Barone will conduct the Orchestra of the School, of which he is the director and Mr. Monteux the master.

On Thursday evening, July 19, at 8:30 Miss Davis will give a song recital with Mr. Hubert Doris at the piano. She recently returned from Europe where she sang twice with the BBC Symphony in London, with the Birmingham Symphony, and with the Pas de loup Orchestra in Paris. She gave recitals in Paris, St. Brieuc, and London, sang in the opera, "Le Fou," of Marcel Landowski, and for the radio in France, Italy, and Spain.

Emery Davis has been bass clarinetist with the Detroit Symphony this season. Mr. Doris is on the faculty of the Columbia University Music Department.

[45]

NEW YORK POST, SUNDAY, JULY 15, 1956 14

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

All-Mozart Draws 2,200 at Lenox

Lenox, Mass., July 13—Three concertos, three performers and three pianos describes quantitatively the order of musical fare here Friday night at the Tanglewood Estate, home of the Berkshire Festival.

The delight of the evening, qualitatively can only be measured, however, by those 2,200-plus courageous listeners who braved dampness and rain to attend the all-Mozart program presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the three collaborating artists.

Within the music's limited frame, the program offered considerable variety. Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff, the eminent duoapianists, top artists in the genre, participated in two of the concertos. Boris Goldovsky played a solo concerto, was the third pianist for the three-piano concerto, and conducted most of the concert. Luboshutz was on the podium for the Concerto in A Major, K.488, in which Goldovsky was the soloist. The latter conducted the three-piano work from his instrument. He also opened the concert with a buoyant performance of three movements from the charming Serenade in D Major, K. 320 and 320 A.

Nobody could deny that this was a versatile trio and skilled too. True, Miss Nemenoff had no chance to display other gifts than her first-rate art as a member of a team, but she more than compensated in personality and loveliness for her lack of varied opportunity.

Originally scheduled for the small Theater-Concert Hall which seats 1,200, the management decided four hours before the program was to start to hold it instead in the 6,000-seat Music Shed. Announcements were sent out over the radio to this effect with the result that over a thousand additional enthusiasts, who would ordinarily have overflowed onto the grass had the weather been good, sat in the shed and enjoyed the music undampened.

The Concerto in F Major, for Three Pianos and Orchestra, K. 242, benefited from an excellent performance by the trio, particularly enhanced by the silken tone, imaginative coloring and sensitive understandings of Luboshutz and Nemenoff as the most important solo participants. Goldovsky, himself a creditable pianist, though obviously not as dedicated as the former two, was a worthy adjunct to them.

Primarily a conductor, he officiated with mastery whenever he had the opportunity, as also did Luboshutz.

Luboshutz and Miss Nemenoff closed the concert with an ingratiating rendition of the Concerto in E Flat Major for Two Pianos and Orchestra, K. 365.

Weather permitting, the two-all Bach concerts remaining for the week-end will be held in the Theater-Concert Hall. The four coming weeks of orchestral concerts in the big shed will open Friday, July 20, with the full complement of the 105 strong Boston Symphony, playing under the direction of Charles Munch.

Sunday Music . . .

Guggenheim Memorial Concert by Goldman Band, Richard Franko Goldman conducting. On the Mall, Central Park, 8:30.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173

JUL 15 1956

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 874,544

JUL 15 1956

New Records: Brahms' Second by Munch, Boston Symphony

By CYRUS DURGIN

After some five years, Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra again have recorded a Brahms symphony—the Second, in D major. It is a glorious performance, this, a fine successor to the recording of the Fourth by the same forces, and—one hopes—a forerunner of discs by them of Brahms' F major and C minor symphonies.

The virtuosic brilliance of ensemble and individual solo performance, the orchestra's sweet richness of tone and Munch's own vital but superbly-proportioned reading of the score, all play their part in the thorough-going superiority of the performance. These attributes have had as excellent work in the R.C.A.-Victor engineering. The second side is filled out with Brahms' "Tragic" Overture, as beautifully done.

Berkshire Woodwinds

From the Boston firm of Unicorn have come two delectable records by that group of Boston Symphony players who call themselves the Berkshire Woodwind Ensemble. The first of the two discs, "Woodwind Classics," brings two little-known and long-lost scores by Beethoven—the G major Trio for piano, flute and bassoon, (circa 1786), and the Quintet for oboe, three horns and bassoon, plus a Little Suite from "Near the Gentlemen," by Oliver Shaw, born in Middlebore, Mass., in 1779. The two works of Beethoven are charming if decidedly minor, curiosities in their way, especially the Quintet, whose score was lost and the music reconstructed in 1861 by a Viennese named L. A. Zellner.

"Modernists," the second Berkshire Woodwind Ensemble disc, contains four thoroughly attractive works: Walter Piston's early (1[illegible]) Three Pieces; the Suite (1940) by Randall Thompson; Vittorio Rieti's Sonata (1934), and the Debussy- and Ravel-flavored [illegible] (1942) for flute, oboe, clarinet, bassoon and horn, by the late Joseph Jongen. Both these records are distinguished by the clean, balanced playing always expected of these high-ranking artists, and by a recording technique of the finest quality. As for the music itself, the two Americans have it well over the products of their European confreres.

The young American pianist, Byron Janis, has done himself much credit with a Beethoven record of two Sonatas, the "Waldstein" and the E major, Op. 109. His technique is large and his interpretation mature. Recorded in England, these performances have very good reproduction of piano tone. R.C.A.-Victor.

Benny Rides Again

BG Plays Mozart At Tanglewood

By TUCKER KEISER

Benny Goodman was conspicuously absent in the Newport Jazz Festival lineup of top jazz musicians last week end. However, he was not far away, performing instead with a "name" band, the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. In fact, he made two appearances in the Berkshires within the week, the second as a feature attraction Wednesday in the chamber music series.

At the opening concert, Mr. Goodman gave the first performance at the Berkshire Festival of Mozart's Clarinet Concerto. Oddly enough, this work has had only two previous hearings during the history of the orchestra.

The concerto was the very last work in this form written by Mozart, completed just two months before his death. It was composed for Anton Stradler, a friend and fellow Mason whose character was much maligned by earlier Mozart biographers. By one he was called "a tosspot, a reckless liver, as well as a sponge in money matters."

Whatever his personal defects, Mozart must have thought highly of his ability as a clarinet player because two of the composer's finest pieces were created expressly for him, the Clarinet Quintet and the Concerto. Contemporaries speak of his "charm and vocal quality of tone and refinement of style."

Critics point out Mozart's instinctive "feel" for the instrument in composing these works. Though originally sketched for the basset horn (a primitive clarinet with a lower range than the common clarinet in A), the solo part was skillfully transposed, taking advantage of the color in the lowest range and sparingly employing those extremely high notes which have a tendency to shriek.

Mozart does not give the solo part exhibition passages for display purposes. There are no cadenzas. But the heavily embellished solo requires a performer of extraordinary ability. Not only does he have to play difficult fingerings smoothly but he has to integrate his line with an orchestra playing with the delicacy of a chamber music ensemble.

Mr. Goodman's ability with the clarinet is not news; his stylish Mozart is. For some time now he has been studying with Reginald Kell, considered by many to be the finest clarinetist today.

Kell's playing is characterized by unusually suave phrasing and almost vocal delineation of the clarinet line. He has coached Mr. Goodman to play in much the same manner, with the result that the Concerto was a remarkably beautiful performance. And though Mr. Munch conducted the preceding and following Mozart symphonies with a good deal of whimsical inpetuosity, he did give Mr. Goodman a superably tailored accompaniment, matching phrase for phrase.

Mr. Goodman, however, seemed unusually self-conscious. During the orchestral interludes he fingered the clarinet, constantly adjusted the mouthpiece, and kept an uneasy eye roving from music or conductor. This apparent nervousness attracted attention during the orchestral portions, yet one could detect no signs of uncertainty in the solo part itself.

The Boston Symphony debut by the "King of Swing" was in no sense Mr. Goodman's symphonic debut, for he has appeared with many other orchestras. In fact, he has been frequently heard in the concert hall playing Bartok's "Contrasts" and Hindemith's "Clarinet Concerto," both commissioned by him for his own use.

We should by all means have a repeat performance this winter in Symphony Hall.

With full orchestra on hand, the Boston Symphony Orchestra moves into the Music Shed this coming week end. Friday evening Charles Munch conducts Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel, and Brahms. Saturday evening's concert is devoted to an all-Wagner program including the first act of "Die Walkure" with Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, baritone, and James Pease, bass singing the solo roles. Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux features Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544

JUL 15 1956

TENOR John McCollum will be one of the four soloists in the Berkshire Festival first performance of Bach's St. John Passion, at Tanglewood, this afternoon.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544

JUL 15 1956

EVENING CITIZEN, WINSTED, CONN., TUESDAY, JULY 3, 1956

KROLL QUARTET OPENS SEASON AT TANGLEWOOD

The first of the season's concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be given Wednesday evening, when the Kroll string quartet will be heard in music by Mozart, Prokofiev and Beethoven and as usual a number of Winsted people will be in attendance.

Friday evening, Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston symphony players in an all-Mozart program, with Benny Goodman as soloist. Works to be performed include the Clarinet concerto (K622), the G Minor symphony and the "Prague" symphony.

Saturday evening, Munch will conduct the "Haffner" symphony and the Sinfonia Concertante by Mozart. Hugh Ross will lead Martinu's Military Mass and a Thanksgiving Psalm from "The Dead Sea Scrolls," by Henry Cowell, in which the Yale Glee club will take part. The Yale Glee club, directed by Fenno Heath, will be making its first appearance at Tanglewood.

Sunday, Lukas Foss will conduct the Haydn symphony No. 86; a "Serious Song for Strings," by Irving Fine; Alexei [illegible] Divertimento"; Charles Ives' "The Unanswered Question" and Bach's Piano Concerto in D Minor, in which Mr. Foss will be soloist.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544

JUL 15 1956

Berkshire Festival Concerts

The Berkshire Festival's preliminary series of Bach-Mozart concerts will be completed this afternoon at 2:30 in the Theatre-Concert hall at Tanglewood, with the first performance there of Bach's The Passion According to St. John. Charles Munch will conduct. The Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will asisst, and the soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

The main series of concerts, by the full numbers of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed, will begin next Friday night. A chamber music concert will be played Wednesday at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall, and the first of four public morning rehearsals will take place Saturday at 10. Programs for the week:

Wednesday at 8:30, Theatre—Concert Hall. Gabrieli: Canzon Septimi Toni, No. 1; Bonelli: Toccata from Ricercari e Canzoni; Poulenc: Sonata for Horn, Trumpet and Trombone; Berezowsky: Brass Suite; Wagner: Five Songs on Poems by Mathilde Wesendonck; Richard Strauss: Four Songs, soloist, Margadet Harshaw, soprano.

Friday at 8:30, Music Shed. Charles Munch conducting. Berlioz: Overture, "The Roman Carnival"; Debussy: "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun"; Ravel: Second Suite from "Daphnis and Chloe"; Brahms: Second Symphony.

Saturday at 8:30, Music Shed. Charles Munch conducting. Samuel Barber: Adagio for Strings; Martinu: Symphonie Fantasies; Wagner: Act I of "Die Walkuere," soloists, Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; James Pease, bass.

Sunday, July 22, at 2:30, Music Shed. Pierre Monteux conducting. Rossini: Overture to "E'Italiana in Algeri"; Bartok: Concerto for Orchestra; Schubert: Seventh Symphony, in C major.

[46]

NEW YORK POST, SUNDAY, JULY 15, 1956 14

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

All-Mozart Draws 2,200 at Lenox

Lenox, Mass., July 13—Three concertos, three performers and three pianos describes quantitatively the order of musical fare here Friday night at the Tanglewood Estate, home of the Berkshire Festival.

The delight of the evening, qualitatively can only be measured, however, by those 2,200-plus courageous listeners who braved dampness and rain to attend the all-Mozart program presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the three collaborating artists.

Within the music's limited frame, the program offered considerable variety. Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff, the eminent duoapianists, top artists in the genre, participated in two of the concertos. Boris Goldovsky played a solo concerto, was the third pianist for the three-piano concerto, and conducted most of the concert. Luboshutz was on the podium for the Concerto in A Major, K.488, in which Goldovsky was the soloist. The latter conducted the three-piano work from his instrument. He also opened the concert with a buoyant performance of three movements from the charming Serenade in D Major, K. 320 and 320 A.

Nobody could deny that this was a versatile trio and skilled too. True, Miss Nemenoff had no chance to display other gifts than her first-rate art as a member of a team, but she more than compensated in personality and loveliness for her lack of varied opportunity.

Originally scheduled for the small Theater-Concert Hall which seats 1,200, the management decided four hours before the program was to start to hold it instead in the 6,000-seat Music Shed. Announcements were sent out over the radio to this effect with the result that over a thousand additional enthusiasts, who would ordinarily have overflowed onto the grass had the weather been good, sat in the shed and enjoyed the music undampened.

The Concerto in F Major for Three Pianos and Orchestra K. 242, benefited from an excellent performance by the trio, particularly enhanced by the silken tone, imaginative coloring and sensitive understandings of Luboshutz and Nemenoff as the most important solo participants. Goldovsky, himself a creditable pianist, though obviously not as dedicated as the former two, was a worthy adjunct to them.

Primarily a conductor, he officiated with mastery whenever he had the opportunity, as also did Luboshutz.

Luboshutz and Miss Nemenoff closed the concert with an ingratiating rendition of the Concerto in E Flat Major for Two Pianos and Orchestra, K. 365.

Weather permitting, the two all Bach concerts remaining for the week-end will be held in the Theater-Concert Hall. The four coming weeks of orchestral concerts in the big shed will open Friday, July 20, with the full complement of the 105 strong Boston Symphony, playing under the direction of Charles Munch.

Sunday Music . . .

Guggenheim Memorial Concert by Goldman Band, Richard Franko Goldman conducting. On the Mall, Central Park, 8:30.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173

JUL 15 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544

JUL 15 1956

New Records: Brahms' Second by Munch, Boston Symphony

By CYRUS DURGIN

After some five years, Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra again have recorded a Brahms symphony—the Second, in D major. It is a glorious performance, this, a fine successor to the recording of the Fourth by the same forces, and—one hopes—a forerunner of discs by them of Brahms' F major and C minor symphonies.

The virtuosic brilliance of ensemble and individual solo performance, the orchestra's sweet richness of tone and Munch's own vital but superbly-proportioned reading of the score, all play their part in the thorough-going superiority of the performance. These attributes have had as excellent work in the R.C.A.-Victor engineering. The second side is filled out with Brahms' "Tragic" Overture, as beautifully done.

Berkshire Woodwinds

From the Boston firm of Unicorn have come two delectable records by that group of Boston Symphony players who call themselves the Berkshire Woodwind Ensemble. The first of the two discs, "Woodwind Classics," brings two little-known and long-lost scores by Beethoven—the G major Trio for piano, flute and bassoon, (circa 1786), and the Quintet for oboe, three horns and bassoon, plus a Little Suite from "For the Gentlemen," by Oliver Shaw, born in Middleboro, Mass., in 1779. The two works of Beethoven are charming if decidedly minor, curiosities in their way, especially the Quintet, whose score was lost and the music reconstructed in 1861 by a Viennese named L. A. Zellner.

"Modernists," the second Berkshire Woodwind Ensemble disc, contains four thoroughly attractive works: Walter Piston's early (1930) Three Pieces; the Suite (1940) by Randall Thompson; Vittorio Rieti's Sonata (1924), and the Debussy-and-Ravel-flavored Ceteja (1942) for flute, oboe, clarinet, bassoon and horn, by the late Joseph Jongen. Both these records are distinguished by the clean, balanced playing always expected of these high-ranking artists, and by a recording technique of the finest quality. As for the music itself, the two Americans have it well over the products of their European confreres.

The young American pianist, Byron Janis, has done himself much credit with a Beethoven record of two Sonatas, the "Waldstein" and the E major, Op. 109. His technique is large and his interpretation mature. Recorded in England, these performances have very good reproduction of piano tone. R.C.A.-Victor.

Benny Rides Again

BG Plays Mozart At Tanglewood

By TUCKER KEISER

Benny Goodman was conspicuously absent in the Newport Jazz Festival lineup of top jazz musicians last week end. However, he was not far away, performing instead with a "name" band, the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. In fact, he made two appearances in the Berkshires within the week, the second as a feature attraction Wednesday in the chamber music series.

At the opening concert, Mr. Goodman gave the first performance at the Berkshire Festival of Mozart's Clarinet Concerto. Oddly enough, this work has had only two previous hearings during the history of the orchestra.

The concerto was the very last work in this form written by Mozart, completed just two months before his death. It was composed for Anton Stradler, a friend and fellow Mason whose character was much maligned by earlier Mozart biographers. By one he was called "a tosspot, a reckless liver, as well as a sponge in money matters."

Whatever his personal defects, Mozart must have thought highly of his ability as a clarinet player because two of the composer's finest pieces were created expressly for him, the Clarinet Quintet and the Concerto. Contemporaries speak of his "charm and vocal quality of tone and refinement of style."

Critics point out Mozart's instinctive "feel" for the instrument in composing these works. Though originally sketched for the basset horn (a primitive clarinet with a lower range than the common clarinet in A), the solo part was skillfully transposed, taking advantage of the color in the lowest range and sparingly employing those extremely high notes which have a tendency to shriek.

Mozart does not give the solo part exhibition passages for display purposes. There are no cadenzas. But the heavily embellished solo requires a performer of extraordinary ability. Not only does he have to play difficult fingerings smoothly but he has to integrate his line with an orchestra playing with the delicacy of a chamber music ensemble.

Mr. Goodman's ability with the clarinet is not news; his stylish Mozart is. For some time now he has been studying with Reginald Kell, considered by many to be the finest clarinetist today.

Kell's playing is characterized by unusually suave phrasing and almost vocal delineation of the clarinet line. He has coached Mr. Goodman to play in much the same manner, with the result that the Concerto was a remarkably beautiful performance. And though Mr. Munch conducted the preceding and following Mozart symphonies with a good deal of whimsical inpetuosity, he did give Mr. Goodman a superably tailored accompaniment, matching phrase for phrase.

Mr. Goodman, however, seemed unusually self-conscious. During the orchestral interludes he fingered the clarinet, constantly adjusted the mouthpiece, and kept an uneasy eye roving from music to conductor. This apparent nervousness attracted attention during the orchestral portions, yet one could detect no signs of uncertainty in the solo part itself.

The Boston Symphony debut by the "King of Swing" was in no sense Mr. Goodman's symphonic debut, for he has appeared with many other orchestras. In fact, he has been frequently heard in the concert hall playing Bartok's "Contrasts" and Hindemith's "Clarinet Concerto," both commissioned by him for his own use.

We should by all means have a repeat performance this winter in Symphony Hall.

With full orchestra on hand, the Boston Symphony Orchestra moves into the Music Shed this coming week end. Friday evening Charles Munch conducts Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel, and Brahms. Saturday evening's concert is devoted to an all-Wagner program including the first act of "Die Walkure" with Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, baritone, and James Pease, bass singing the solo roles. Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux features Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544

JUL 15

TENOR John McCollum will be one of the four soloists in the Berkshire Festival first performance of Bach's St. John Passion, at Tanglewood, this afternoon.

EVENING CITIZEN, WINSTED, CONN., TUESDAY, JULY 3, 1956

KROLL QUARTET OPENS SEASON AT TANGLEWOOD

The first of the season's concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be given Wednesday evening, when the Kroll string quartet will be heard in music by Mozart, Prokofiev and Beethoven and as usual a number of Winsted people will be in attendance.

Friday evening, Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston symphony players in an all-Mozart program, with Benny Goodman as soloist. Works to be performed include the Clarinet concerto (K622), the G Minor symphony and the "Prague" symphony.

Saturday evening, Munch will conduct the "Haffner" symphony and the Sinfonia Concertante by Mozart. Hugh Ross will lead Martinu's Military Mass and a Thanksgiving psalm from "The Dead Sea Scrolls," by Henry Cowell, in which the Yale Glee club will take part. The Yale Glee club, directed by Fenno Heath, will be making its first appearance at Tanglewood.

Sunday, Lukas Foss will conduct the Haydn symphony No. 86; a "Serious Song for Strings" by Irving Fine; Alexei Haieff's "Divertimento"; Charles Ives' "The Unanswered Question" and Bach's Piano Concerto in D Minor, in which Mr. Foss will be soloist.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544

JUL 15

Berkshire Festival Concerts

The Berkshire Festival's preliminary series of Bach-Mozart concerts will be completed this afternoon at 2:30 in the Theatre-Concert hall at Tanglewood, with the first performance there of Bach's The Passion According to St. John. Charles Munch will conduct. The Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will asisst, and the soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

The main series of concerts, by the full numbers of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed, will begin next Friday night. A chamber music concert will be played Wednesday at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall, and the first of four public morning rehearsals will take place Saturday at 10. Programs for the week:

Wednesday at 8:30, Theatre—Concert Hall. Gabrieli: Canzon Septimi Toni, No. 1; Bonelli: Toccata from Ricercari e Canzoni; Poulenc: Sonata for Horn, Trumpet and Trombone; Berezowsky: Brass Suite; Wagner: Five Songs on Poems by Mathilde Wesendonck; Richard Strauss: Four Songs, soloist, Margadet Harshaw, soprano.

Friday at 8:30, Music Shed. Charles Munch conducting. Berlioz: Overture, "The Roman Carnival"; Debussy: "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun"; Ravel: Second Suite from "Daphnis and Chloe"; Brahms: Second Symphony.

Saturday at 8:30, Music Shed. Charles Munch conducting. Samuel Barber: Adagio for Strings; Martinu: Symphonie Fantasies; Wagner: Act 1 of "Die Walkuere," soloists, Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; James Pease, bass.

Sunday, July 22, at 2:30, Music Shed. Pierre Monteux conducting. Rossini: Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri"; Bartok: Concerto for Orchestra; Schubert: Seventh Symphony, in C major.

[16]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173
JUL 15 1956

MUSIC REVIEW

TANGLEWOOD, July 14—The first of two all-Bach concerts slated for Tanglewood this summer took place tonight in the theatre-concert hall. The audience, unusually large for a program in the traditional Bach-Mozart series, numbered nearly 5000. Every seat in the hall was taken, and the rapt listeners, seated on folding chairs, blankets and the grass, extended almost to the entrance gate.

Charles Munch led members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in selections that were festively major keyed. With the conductor's characteristic exuberance infused into every measure, the concert was ideally suited for a summer series such as the Berkshire Festival.

There were indeed many exciting places. The opening movement of the Second Brandenburg Concerto, the final section of the E Major Violin Concerto, the fugal passage in the overture to Suite No. 2, and the gigue of Suite No. 3 were impressively set forth.

The portions of the evening which stick in the memory are the calmer, less active movements of the concertos. Here we heard extraordinarily beautiful playing with breadth and restraint underlying the tempered emotionalism of the music.

The sense of unfulfillment at the conclusion of the concert, for all the individual brilliance of the performance, was caused by an all too obvious striving on the part of the conductor to maintain a stringent intensity throughout the program. After setting so high a level of excitement in the opening Brandenburg, it was virtually impossible to create a feeling of climax later by simply forcing the tempo.

There were two featured soloists on tonight's bill. William Kroll, so long associated with exquisitely balance chamber music, had some difficulty in scaling the violin concerto to the demands of a large ensemble, though his playing of the adagio was masterly.

By now Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the orchestra, and Mr. Munch completely understand each other's notions about the suite No. 2 with its long and difficult solo part.

T. K.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 253,604
JUL 15 1956

Berkshire Festival Programs Starting 3rd Week Thursday

The Berkshire Festival con-day evening the annual series of certs at Lenox, Mass., move into twelve week-end concerts in the high gear next week when the huge 6,000-seat Music Shed at entire Boston Symphony Orches- Tanglewood, which is open on tra of 106 pieces assembles at three sides so the music may Tanglewood under the baton of spill out on the spacious lawns. Charles Munch, Music Director, where additional thousands of When they complete their two music-lovers assemble under the weeks of free Esplanade concerts stars and tall pines, or picnic in on the Charles River in Boston Sunday sunshine. In 1955 the under the leadership of Arthur Shed concerts attracted an audi- Fiedler, 70 players of the Bos- ence of 108,336, or an average ton Symphony move to the Berk- attendance of 9,028 persons.

shire Hills of Western Massachu- A feature of the Shed series setts to join the 36 principals will be first Tanglewood performwho have been teaching chamber- ances of four symphonic works music to students of the orches- commissioned by the Boston Sym- tra in the fortnight of "Bach-phony Orchestra during this Mozart" concerts that tradition- 75th Anniversary season ally opens the Festival. Italian composer Gian Carlo [illegible] of Petrassi, who is [illegible] Orchestra will inaugurate on Fri- composition at the [illegible] day evening the annual series of concerts at Lenox, Mass., move into twelve week-end concerts in the high gear next week when the huge 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, which is open on three sides so the music may spill out on the spacious lawns. When they complete their two weeks of free Esplanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston under the leadership of Arthur Fiedler, 70 players of the Boston Symphony move to the Berkshire Hills of Western Massachusetts to join the 36 principals who have been teaching chamber music to students of the orchestra in the fortnight of "Bach-Mozart" concerts that traditionally opens the Festival.

The entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate on Friday evening the annual series of concerts at Lenox, Mass., move into high gear next week when the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra of 106 pieces assembles at Tanglewood under the baton of Charles Munch, Music Director

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173

JUL 15 1956

MUSIC REVIEW

TANGLEWOOD, July 14—The first of two all-Bach concerts slated for Tanglewood this summer took place tonight in the theatre-concert hall. The audience, unusually large for a program in the traditional Bach-Mozart series, numbered nearly 5000. Every seat in the hall was taken, and the rapt listeners, seated on folding chairs, blankets and the grass, extended almost to the entrance gate.

Charles Munch led members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in selections that were festively major keyed. With the conductor's characteristic exuberance infused into every measure, the concert was ideally suited for a summer series such as the Berkshire Festival.

There were indeed many exciting places. The opening movement of the Second Brandenburg Concerto, the final section of the E Major Violin Concerto, the fugal passage in the overture to Suite No. 2, and the gigue of Suite No. 3 were impressively set forth.

The portions of the evening which stick in the memory are the calmer, less active movements of the concertos. Here we heard extraordinarily beautiful playing with breadth and restraint underlying the tempered emotionalism of the music.

The sense of unfulfillment at the conclusion of the concert, for all the individual brilliance of the performance, was caused by an all too obvious striving on the part of the conductor to maintain a stringent intensity throughout the program. After setting so high a level of excitement in the opening Brandenburg, it was virtually impossible to create a feeling of climax later by simply forcing the tempo.

There were two featured soloists on tonight's bill. William Kroll, so long associated with exquisitely balance chamber music, had some difficulty in scaling the violin concerto to the demands of a large ensemble though his playing of the adagio was masterly.

By now Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the orchestra, and Mr. Munch completely understand each other's notions about the suite No. 2 with its long and difficult solo part.

T. K.

Newsweek

July 16/56.

THE ARTS

Opera and a [illegible]

Goffredo Petrassi, one [illegible] most distinguished composers, [illegible] himself under a big birch tree at Tanglewood last week, lit a cigarette, and savored the natural beauty of the scene about him. As the current European composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center, he was on hand to create some man-made beauty among the rolling hills surrounding Lenox, Mass.

[illegible] followed Luigi Dallapiccola, [illegible] Italian composer; Boris [illegible] from Germany, and Oliver Me[illegible] from France who, among others, [illegible] visited in previous years. As Aaron Copland, the school's assistant director, explained, such men "dress up the campus."

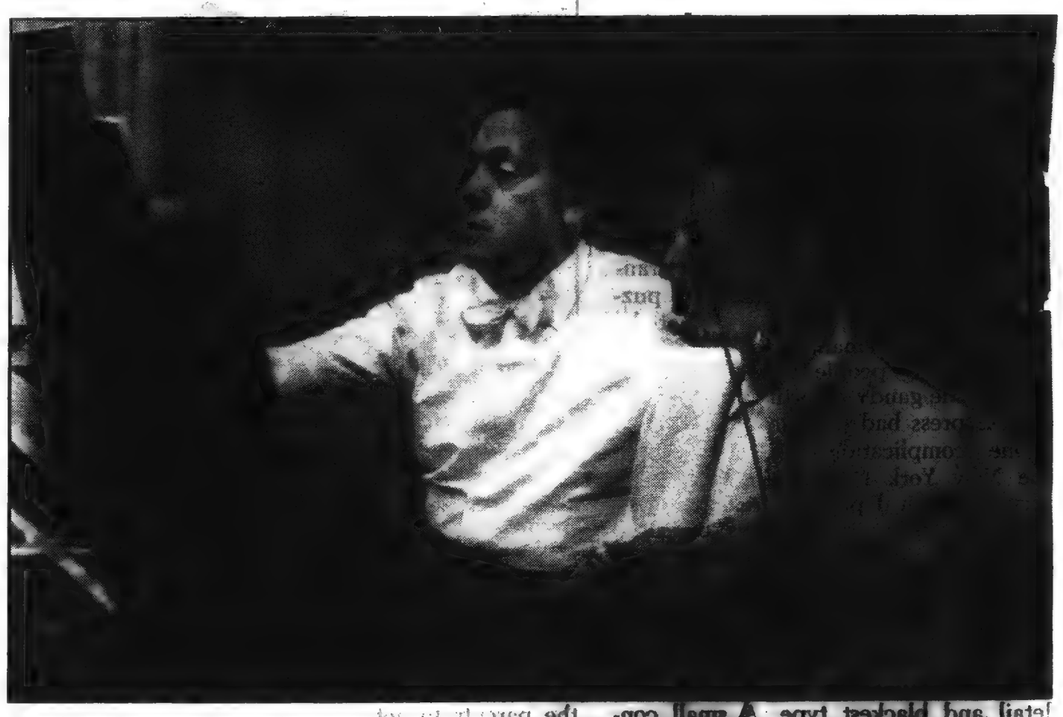
Until this year, Petrassi has been slightly annoyed because he was not so well known in the U.S. as Dallapiccola. He is, as he proudly points out, president of the International Society of Contemporary Composers and has been named composer-in-residence at the American Academy in Rome.

Recognition: Last winter, however, his "Fifth Concerto for Orchestra" was commissioned by the Boston Symphony for its 75th anniversary season. Now that he is at Tanglewood for the summer, the musical forces there will perform four of his major works, including the "Fifth Concerto" and "Morte dell' Aria," an opera which the University of Illinois produced last winter.

In pursuit of his own individual style—which favors small combinations of instruments over large symphonic ensembles—Petrassi went through the inevitable period of being called a follower of Stravinsky and Hindemith. Dallapiccola, for his part, has been a disciple of the twelve-tone system of Schönberg. Now both men at 52 stand in the vanguard of a movement which has profoundly affected the course of Italian music since the end of the war.

It may come as a shock to the followers of the $64,000 question but Italy is not the opera-loving nation it once was. These days, the country most addicted to opera is West Germany, which maintains twenty major government-supported opera companies to Italy's eleven, and regularly subsidizes some 80 less important houses. In comparison to Italy's smaller and random grants to some 70 or 80 private companies. The most significant trend in Italian music since the '30s is (1) the rediscovery of seventeenth- and eighteenth-century old masters like Frescobaldi, Monteverdi, Corelli, and Vivaldi and (2) the growing interest in symphonic music on the part of intellectual circles, as opposed to a continuing provincial regard for the operatic realism of Mascagni and Puccini.

At Tanglewood last week, Petrassi discussed the new trend: "The West Germans who look at opera are a much younger group than in Italy," he explained, "and a lot freer to appreciate diverse kinds of opera. In Germany, as opposed to Italy, opera is a more integrated part of musical culture. Opera is still considered separate in Italy. Until 1918, there was only opera in Italy. Meanwhile, Germany had always had an orchestral school, but in Italy, the prime musical form remained opera. Then, interest in symphonic music grew and is still growing . . . No, opera is not passé in Italy, but it has to have a renaissance. When you have great works like Alban Berg's "Lulu" and "Wozzeck," opera has to continue. When the general ideas of the musical world have been established, then there will be a real renaissance."



Tanglewood class: Petrassi (left) teaching Richard W. Hillert of Wausau, Wis.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 253,604

JUL 15 1956

Berkshire Festival Programs Starting 3rd Week Thursday

The Berkshire Festival con-day evening the annual series of certs at Lenox, Mass., move intotwelve week-end concerts in the high gear next week when thehuge 6,000-seat Music Shed at entire Boston Symphony Orches-Tanglewood, which is open on tra of 106 pieces assembles atthree sides so the music may Tanglewood under the baton ofspill out on the spacious lawns, Charles Munch, Music Director.where additional thousands of When they complete their twomusic-lovers assemble under the weeks of free Esplanade concertsstars and tall pines, or picnic in on the Charles River in BostonSunday sunshine. In 1955 the under the leadership of ArthurShed concerts attracted an audi-Fiedler, 70 players of the Bos-ence of 108,336, or an average ton Symphony move to the Berk-attendance of 9,028 persons.

shire Hills of Western Massachu- A feature of the Shed series setts to join the 36 principalswill be first Tanglewood perform-who have been teaching chamberances of four symphonic works music to students of the orches-commissioned by the Boston Sym-tra in the fortnight of "Bach-phony Orchestra during this its Mozart" concerts that tradition-75th Anniversary season, from ally opens the Festival. Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi, who is guest teacher of Orchestra will inagurate on Fri-composition at the Berkshire

The entire Boston Symphony

Music Center this summer, from Aaron Copland, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston. The American compositions will be played in Europe this fall when the Boston Symphony undertakes a five-and-a-half week tour of 12 countries, including a week in the U.S.S.R. Charles Munch will also devote two of the Shed concerts to concert versions of Wagner operas.

During the Shed season his conductor stand will be shared by Pierre Monteux, who was conductor of the orchestra from 1919-1924 and who has been invited by Dr. Munch to share the conducting during the forthcoming European tour; by Richard Burgin, concert-master of the orchestra since 1920; by Leonard Bernstein, who has headed the Berkshire Music Center's department of orchestra and conducting since 1946; and by Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro, who is filling Mr. Bernstein's post on the music school's faculty during the latter's sabbatical this summer.

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts comprises a joint recital by the Boston Symphony's Brass Ensemble and by Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw and pianist Ralph Berkowitz, on Wednesday evening in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall.

MUSIC

STADIUM CONCERTS—Final performances of the season by the Stadium Symphony Orchestra—Thursday, July 19: Thomas Scherman conducting, with Zino Francescatti, violin. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 21: Milton Rosenstock directing a program of music by Cole Porter, with Dorothy Sarnoff and Martha Wright, sopranos; Robert Rounseville, tenor; Conrad Thibault, baritone; and a chorus. . . . ¶ Monday, July 23: Vladimir Golschmann conducting, with Tossy Spivakovsky, violin, and Aldo Parisot, cello. . . . ¶ Tuesday, July 24: Vladimir Golschmann conducting a Beethoven-Brahms program. . . . ¶ Wednesday, July 25: Vladimir Golschmann conducting an all-Tchaikovsky program, with Alexander Uninsky, piano. . . . ¶ Thursday, July 26: Julius Rudel conducting a concert version of Verdi's "Rigoletto," with Lois Hunt, soprano; Leonard Warren, baritone; Nicola Moscona, bass; and others. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 28: Salvatore Dell'Isola directing a Rodgers and Hammerstein program, with Annamary Dickey, soprano; Claramae Turner, contralto; William Tabbert, tenor; Jack Russell, baritone; and a chorus. (Lewisohn Stadium, Amsterdam Ave. at 138th St. AD 4-5800. Tickets are also available at the Steinway Hall box office, 113 W. 57th St., CI 7-5534. Evenings at 8:30. In the event of threatening weather, substitute plans are broadcast at 5, 6, and 7:05 P.M. over WNYC and at 7:05 P.M. over WQXR.)

CENTRAL PARK MALL CONCERTS—Richard Franko Goldman conducting the Goldman Band in this summer's series of Guggenheim Memorial Concerts. (Sundays, Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays at 8:45, through Friday, July 27.). . . ¶ Franz Bloo conducting the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra on Saturdays during the month of July at 8:30.)

CARNEGIE MUSIC AND DANCE JUBILEE FESTIVAL—Pearl Primus and her dance company. (Carnegie Recital Hall, Saturday, July 21, at 8:45. For tickets, call Ch 5-6606.)

IN THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Friday, July 20, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony; no soloists. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 21, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; and James Pease, bass. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 22, at 2:30: Pierre Monteux conducting the Boston Symphony; no soloists. . . . ¶ Wednesday, July 25, at 8:30: A program of chamber music by the Beaux Arts Trio. . . . ¶ Friday, July 27, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston

July 21/56

[47]

The Philadelphia Forum, May, 1956.

Music at Tanglewood

By John N. Burk
Boston Symphony Orchestra

When the annual Berkshire Festival was a new apparition in the Berkshire Hills of Western Massachusetts and showed signs of growing into a major gathering point of music-seekers, it was often compared to the Salzburg Festival in Europe. The comparison was inapt — nothing could be more different than the charming old Austrian town with its Baroque theatres and churches, and the expansive Tanglewood with its lawns and fine trees and its great semi-open Music Shed. Even the Boston Symphony Orchestra's school, the Berkshire Music Center, is totally unlike the Mozarteum in Salzburg, for here a student body of 400 from the beginner to the skilled professional make music under the supervision of a faculty including among others the Principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The comparison between these two projects in the old world and the new was nevertheless inevitable. Salzburg in those pre-war days was a mecca for musical pilgrims, Americans included. As the Berkshire Festival developed it was discovered that the very agreeable European custom of summer music had been successfully implanted in the United States as well. In addition to the popular programs enjoyed in such places as the Robin Hood Dell, and Symphony Hall in Boston where the Boston Pops have been given for seventy years, there was developing a taste for great symphonic music by orchestras in their full winter amplitude. Performances aiming at such a standard are now to be found in many parts of this country while Europe continues to make more summer music than ever before. There is only one explanation — the taste for music, the best music, has grown considerably as the science of mechanical reproduction has brought it into every home.

In our country the Berkshire Festival has set the pace. It grew from a local project for outdoor concerts in Lenox, Massachusetts, first undertaken in 1934 by the citizens of Berkshire County. At first an orchestra from the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Society was engaged under the direction of Henry Hadley. Two years later the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky was brought from Boston, with a shell for the musicians and a hired tent for the audience. The next step was brought about by the gift to Boston's orchestra of the 200-acre estate at Tanglewood on the Lenox-Stockbridge line.

The grounds of Tanglewood extend to the shores of Lake Mahkeenac in Stockbridge. The property was laid out in 1849 by William Aspinwall Tappan, a Boston banker and merchant, who bought several farms for the purpose. The present house was completed in 1865. William Tappan's daughters, Ellen Sturgis Tappan (who married Richard C. Dixey) and Mary Aspinwall Tappan, unmarried, lived at Tanglewood for many years and there entertained many literary celebrities. Mrs. Dixey was an artist and has left a number of sketches which depict the social life at Tanglewood. Nathaniel Hawthorne lived at Tanglewood in the years 1851-1853, staying in a little red cottage on the edge of what is now Hawthorne Street, which runs through the center of the estate. It was here that Hawthorne planned Tanglewood Tales, wrote The Wonder Book, and assembled the material for The House of Seven Gables. The cottage was burned down June 22, 1890. A replica on the original site was built and generously presented in 1948 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra by the National Federation of Music Clubs, for use as studios by the Berkshire Music Center. Tanglewood has expanses of lawn and meadow which set off to advantage its many magnificent trees — elms, pines, and birches. It is related that a tribe of Mohican Indians once settled upon the shores of the lake under their chief, Konkapot. Indian arrowheads have been found there.

AT Tanglewood, under a tent, an audience assembled to open the Festival in 1937. A sudden storm of rain such as sometimes happens in the Berkshire Hills drenched the audience and all but broke up the concert. The result of this was the erection in 1938 of the present Music Shed, which has given the Festivals their due security and permanence. The Shed seats 6000 and by virtue of the open sides and back, permits good hearing on the lawns outside and accommodates thousands more.

When the war came and reduced motor traffic to a trickle, the Festival concerts were necessarily suspended. In the summer of 1946 they were resumed in full force and have continued to grow until the annual attendance exceeds 130,000 and draws visitors from every state in the union.

It was in 1940 that there was established the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, the school which holds its annual session with the Festival and through the same six-week period through July and early August. The school was the realization of the lifelong ambition of Serge Koussevitzky to bring into being a center of the arts where talented young people, especially musicians on the threshold of their careers, could dwell with the best of professional musicians, work with them, broaden themselves as artists, and develop their insight as interpreters.

When, after the death of Dr. Koussevitzky, Charles Munch became the Director of the Festivals in 1951, he also became the Director of the Berkshire Music Center. The performances of the school, given not only in the Shed, but in the smaller Theatre-Concert Hall and the still smaller Chamber Music Hall, make it possible for visitors to attend opera, chamber, orchestral and choral concerts almost daily throughout the Festival season, in addition to the Festival concerts of each week-end.

The Shed concerts this summer will take place on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 20 through August 12. The "Bach-Mozart" concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the intimate Theatre will precede these on the two previous week-ends,

(Continued on page 17, column 1)

July 6 through July 15. Chamber groups will give concerts on the six Wednesday evenings of those weeks.

SUBSCRIPTIONS are now being filled at Symphony Hall, Boston, for these series as well as for the Shed series of each week.

The concerts in the Music Shed will be as follows (a star indicates a work commissioned for the 75th anniversary of this Orchestra in its first Berkshire Festival performance):

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 20: (Charles Munch) Berlioz — "The Roman Carnival" Overture; Debussy — The Afternoon of a Faun; Ravel — Rapsodie Espagnole; Brahms — Symphony No. 2

SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 21: (Charles Munch) Wagner — "A Faust Overture"; "Waldweben" from Siegfried; Prelude and "Love-Death" from Tristan and Isolde; Die Walkuere, Act I (Soloists: Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert DaCosta, tenor; James Pease, bass)

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 22: (Pierre Monteux) Rossini — Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri"; Bartok — Concerto for Orchestra; Schubert — Symphony No. 7 in C Major

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 27: (Charles Munch) Beethoven — Overture, "Leonore" No. 2; *Petrassi — Concerto for Orchestra, No. 3; Tchaikovsky — Symphony No. 4

SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 28: (Charles Munch) *Hanson — Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann — Piano Concerto in A Minor (Soloist: Rudolf Serkin); Honegger — Symphony No. 5; Debussy — "La Mer"

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 29: (Richard Burgin) Handel — Concerto Grosso in D Minor, Opus 6, No. 10; Hindemith — Violin Concerto (Soloist: Ruth Posselt); Mahler — Symphony No. 1

FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 3: (Eleazar de Carvalho) Barraud — Suite; Falla — "The Three-Cornered Hat"; Ravel — Piano Concerto (Soloist: Jocy de Oliveira); Stravinsky — "Petrouchka"

SATURDAY EVENING, AUGUST 4: (Leonard Bernstein) Moevs — Variations for Orchestra; Mozart — Kyrie and Gloria from the Mass in C Minor (with Chorus and Soloists — Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor); Prokofieff — Symphony No. 5 (Concert in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky)

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, AUGUST 5: (Charles Munch) *Copland — Symphonic Ode; Tchaikovsky — Concerto for Violin (Soloist: Zino Francescatti); Schumann — Symphony No. 2

FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 10: (Charles Munch) Haydn — Symphony No. 102 in B Flat; *Piston — Symphony No. 6; Strauss — "Don Juan"; Dukas — "L'Apprenti Sorcier"

SATURDAY EVENING, AUGUST 11: (Pierre Monteux) Freed — Festival Overture; Brahms — Symphony No. 3; Enesco — Suite for Orchestra; Strauss — Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier"

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, AUGUST 12: (Charles Munch) Wagner — Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhaeuser; A Siegfried Idyll; Die Meistersinger von Nuernberg, Act III (opening and final scene; chorus and soloists — Marguerite Willauer, Albert Da Costa and James Pease)

In the chamber orchestra series (July 6-15) music of Bach and Mozart will predominate. Benny Goodman will

[48]

Music at Tanglewood

By John N. Burk
Boston Symphony Orchestra

When the annual Berkshire Festival was a new apparition in the Berkshire Hills of Western Massachusetts and showed signs of growing into a major gathering point of music-seekers, it was often compared to the Salzburg Festival in Europe. The comparison was inapt — nothing could be more different than the charming old Austrian town with its Baroque theatres and churches, and the expansive Tanglewood with its lawns and fine trees and its great semi-open Music Shed. Even the Boston Symphony Orchestra's school, the Berkshire Music Center, is totally unlike the Mozarteum in Salzburg, for here a student body of 400 from the beginner to the skilled professional make music under the supervision of a faculty including among others the Principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The comparison between these two projects in the old world and the new was nevertheless inevitable. Salzburg in those pre-war days was a mecca for musical pilgrims, Americans included. As the Berkshire Festival developed it was discovered that the very agreeable European custom of summer music had been successfully implanted in the United States as well. In addition to the popular programs enjoyed in such places as the Robin Hood Dell, and Symphony Hall in Boston where the Boston Pops have been given for seventy years, there was developing a taste for great symphonic music by orchestras in their full winter amplitude. Performances aiming at such a standard are now to be found in many parts of this country while Europe continues to make more summer music than ever before. There is only one explanation — the taste for music, the best music, has grown considerably as the science of mechanical reproduction has brought it into every home.

In our country the Berkshire Festival has set the pace. It grew from a local project for outdoor concerts in Lenox, Massachusetts, first undertaken in 1934 by the citizens of Berkshire County. At first an orchestra from the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Society was engaged under the direction of Henry Hadley. Two years later the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky was brought from Boston, with a shell for the musicians and a hired tent for the audience. The next step was brought about by the gift to Boston's orchestra of the 200-acre estate at Tanglewood on the Lenox-Stockbridge line.

The grounds of Tanglewood extend to the shores of Lake Mahkeenac in Stockbridge. The property was laid out in 1849 by William Aspinwall Tappan, a Boston banker and merchant, who bought several farms for the purpose. The present house was completed in 1865. William Tappan's daughters, Ellen Sturgis Tappan (who married Richard C. Dixey) and Mary Aspinwall Tappan, unmarried, lived at Tanglewood for many years and there entertained many literary celebrities. Mrs. Dixey was an artist and has left a number of sketches which depict the social life at Tanglewood. Nathaniel Hawthorne lived at Tanglewood in the years 1851-1853, staying in a little red cottage on the edge of what is now Hawthorne Street, which runs through the center of the estate. It was here that Hawthorne planned Tanglewood Tales, wrote The Wonder Book, and assembled the material for The House of Seven Gables. The cottage was burned down June 22, 1890. A replica on the original site was built and generously presented in 1948 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra by the National Federation of Music Clubs, for use as studios by the Berkshire Music Center. Tanglewood has expanses of lawn and meadow which set off to advantage its many magnificent trees — elms, pines, and birches. It is related that a tribe of Mohican Indians once settled upon the shores of the lake under their chief, Konkapot. Indian arrowheads have been found there.

AT Tanglewood, under a tent, an audience assembled to open the Festival in 1937. A sudden storm of rain such as sometimes happens in the Berkshire Hills drenched the audience and all but broke up the concert. The result of this was the erection in 1938 of the present Music Shed, which has given the Festivals their due security and permanence. The Shed seats 6000 and by virtue of the open sides and back, permits good hearing on the lawns outside and accommodates thousands more.

When the war came and reduced motor traffic to a trickle, the Festival concerts were necessarily suspended. In the summer of 1946 they were resumed in full force and have continued to grow until the annual attendance exceeds 130,000 and draws visitors from every state in the union.

It was in 1940 that there was established the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, the school which holds its annual session with the Festival and through the same six-week period through July and early August. The school was the realization of the lifelong ambition of Serge Koussevitzky to bring into being a center of the arts where talented young people, especially musicians on the threshold of their careers, could dwell with the best of professional musicians, work with them, broaden themselves as artists, and develop their insight as interpreters.

When, after the death of Dr. Koussevitzky, Charles Munch became the Director of the Festivals in 1951, he also became the Director of the Berkshire Music Center. The performances of the school, given not only in the Shed, but in the smaller Theatre-Concert Hall and the still smaller Chamber Music Hall, make it possible for visitors to attend opera, chamber, orchestral and choral concerts almost daily throughout the Festival season, in addition to the Festival concerts of each week-end.

The Shed concerts this summer will take place on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 20 through August 12. The "Bach-Mozart" concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the intimate Theatre will precede these on the two previous week-ends,

(Continued on page 17, column 1)

July 6 through July 15. Chamber groups will give concerts on the six Wednesday evenings of those weeks.

SUBSCRIPTIONS are now being filled at Symphony Hall, Boston, for these series as well as for the Shed series of each week.

The concerts in the Music Shed will be as follows (a star indicates a work commissioned for the 75th anniversary of this Orchestra in its first Berkshire Festival performance):

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 20: (Charles Munch) Berlioz — "The Roman Carnival" Overture; Debussy — The Afternoon of a Faun; Ravel — Rapsodie Espagnole; Brahms — Symphony No. 2

SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 21: (Charles Munch) Wagner — "A Faust Overture"; "Waldweben" from Siegfried; Prelude and "Love-Death" from Tristan and Isolde; Die Walkuere, Act I (Soloists: Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert DaCosta, tenor; James Pease, bass)

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 22: (Pierre Monteux) Rossini — Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri"; Bartok — Concerto for Orchestra; Schubert — Symphony No. 7 in C Major

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 27: (Charles Munch) Beethoven — Overture, "Leonore" No. 2; *Petrassi — Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5; Tchaikovsky — Symphony No. 4

SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 28: (Charles Munch) *Hanson — Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann — Piano Concerto in A Minor (Soloist: Rudolf Serkin); Honegger — Symphony No. 5; Debussy — "La Mer"

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 29: (Richard Burgin) Handel — Concerto Grosso in D Minor, Opus 6, No. 10; Hindemith — Violin Concerto (Soloist: Ruth Posselt); Mahler — Symphony No. 1

FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 3: (Eleazar de Carvalho) Barraud — Suite; Falla — "The Three-Cornered Hat"; Ravel — Piano Concerto (Soloist: Jocy de Oliveira); Stravinsky — "Petrouchka"

SATURDAY EVENING, AUGUST 4: (Leonard Bernstein) Moevs — Variations for Orchestra; Mozart — Kyrie and Gloria from the Mass in C Minor (with Chorus and Soloists — Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor); Prokofieff — Symphony No. 5 (Concert in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky)

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, AUGUST 5: (Charles Munch) *Copland — Symphonic Ode; Tchaikovsky — Concerto for Violin (Soloist: Zino Francescatti); Schumann — Symphony No. 2

FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 10: (Charles Munch) Haydn — Symphony No. 102 in B Flat; *Piston — Symphony No. 6; Strauss — "Don Juan"; Dukas — "L'Apprenti Sorcier"

SATURDAY EVENING, AUGUST 11: (Pierre Monteux) Freed — Festival Overture; Brahms — Symphony No. 3; Enesco — Suite for Orchestra; Strauss — Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier"

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, AUGUST 12: (Charles Munch) Wagner — Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhaeuser; A Siegfried Idyll; Die Meistersinger von Nuernberg, Act III (opening and final scene; chorus and soloists — Marguerite Willauer, Albert Da Costa and James Pease)

In the chamber orchestra series (July 6-15) music of Bach and Mozart will predominate. Benny Goodman will

THE BERKSHIRES

THE Berkshires, a gracious, wooded, hill region in the western most end of Massachusetts is especially loved by music lovers, sports enthusiasts and those who seek country relaxation and scenic drives.

Internationally known are the summer concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on the magnificent estate at Tanglewood. Music lovers flood here every July and August to sit in a covered amphitheatre surrounded by trees and lawns and delight in music conducted by Charles Munch and guest conductors. Tickets should be purchased in advance, but if this isn't possible late comers usually find room on the grass. Even if you don't care for the music, the estate is worth a visit.

There are series of concerts by jazz artists, folk music groups and leading string quartets. A dance festival at Jacob's Pillow, a few miles away, attracts leading ballet and modern dance companies. Performances are given every summer week end, but again it is advisable to make reservations in advance.

The Berkshires also boast the most famous country fair in the nation: the Great Barrington Fair which lasts a full week in the middle of September. Horse racing and corn husking have been hotly contested amid the fall foliage here for the past hundred years.

The Berkshire region has 73,098 acres of State Forests, 13 rivers, 59 lakes, 23 camping areas, 14 golf courses and 16 ski developments. Mountain climbing, trout fishing in the streams, horseback riding and picnicking are favorite pastimes.

Mt. Greylock, the highest mountain in Massachusetts, stands 3,491 feet high in the middle of a great state forest seven miles from Pittsfield. It is easily ascended by car although there are many foot trails through the unspoiled woods for nature lovers.

The Berkshires are probably best enjoyed [illegible]. They abound with unexpected falls, like Bish[illegible], lushly foliaged nooks like Bartholemew's Co[illegible] and old colonial homes. It's a five to six hour drive from Boston to reach them. The area is also serviced by trains and buses from both Boston and New York, being about equidistant from the two cities.

There are over 40 hotels and inns, 35 guest houses and motels, most of the latter equipped with TV, several near swimming pools and ponds.

For the historically minded there are these sedate towns of Lee and Lenox with their old mansions and beautiful estates. The little town of Sheffield with its elm vaulted streets was the first settled in this area (1725). The Sheffield Old Parish Church by the central green is a fine example of New England church architecture. The town also boosts two covered bridges.

In Great Barrington the William Cullen Bryant house can bring back the past. Williamstown, home of Williams College, boasts a summer theatre and several historic museums.

And when you get hungry their are scores of dining spots that feature the finest New England cooking with specialties ranging from outdoor barbecues to native brook trout.

Thousands of music lovers [illegible] Tanglewood each summer [illegible] below, left, for [illegible] by the Boston Symphony. Below right, the astronomical observatory at Williams College in Williamstown, Mass., said to be the oldest university observatory in the United States. A good example of the unspoiled Berkshire Hills is the lovely Stockbridge Bowl, Lake Mahkeenac, shown above right on page 25.

[49]

THE BERKSHIRES

THE Berkshires, a gracious, wooded, hill region in the westernmost end of Massachusetts is especially beloved by music lovers, sports enthusiasts and those who want country relaxation and scenic drives.

Internationally known are the summer concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on the magnificent estate at Tanglewood. Music lovers flood here every July and August to sit in a covered amphitheatre surrounded by trees and lawns and delight in music conducted by Charles Munch and guest conductors. Tickets should be bought in advance, but if this isn't possible late comers can usually find room on the grass. Even if you don't come for the music, the estate is worth a visit.

Nearby are series of concerts by jazz artists, folk music groups and leading string quartets. A dance festival at Jacob's Pillow, a few miles away, attracts leading ballet and modern dance companies. Performances are given every summer week end, but again it is advisable to make reservations in advance.

The Berkshires also boast the most famous country fair in the nation: the Great Barrington Fair which lasts a full week in the middle of September. Horse racing and corn husking have been hotly contested amid the fall foliage here for the past hundred years.

The Berkshire region has 73,098 acres of State Forests, 13 rivers, 59 lakes, 23 camping areas, 14 golf courses and 16 ski developments. Mountain climbing, trout fishing in the streams, horseback riding and picnicking are favorite pastimes.

Mt. Greylock, the highest mountain in Massachusetts, stands 3,491 feet high in the middle of a great state forest seven miles from Pittsfield. It is easily ascended by car although there are many foot trails through the unspoiled woods for nature lovers.

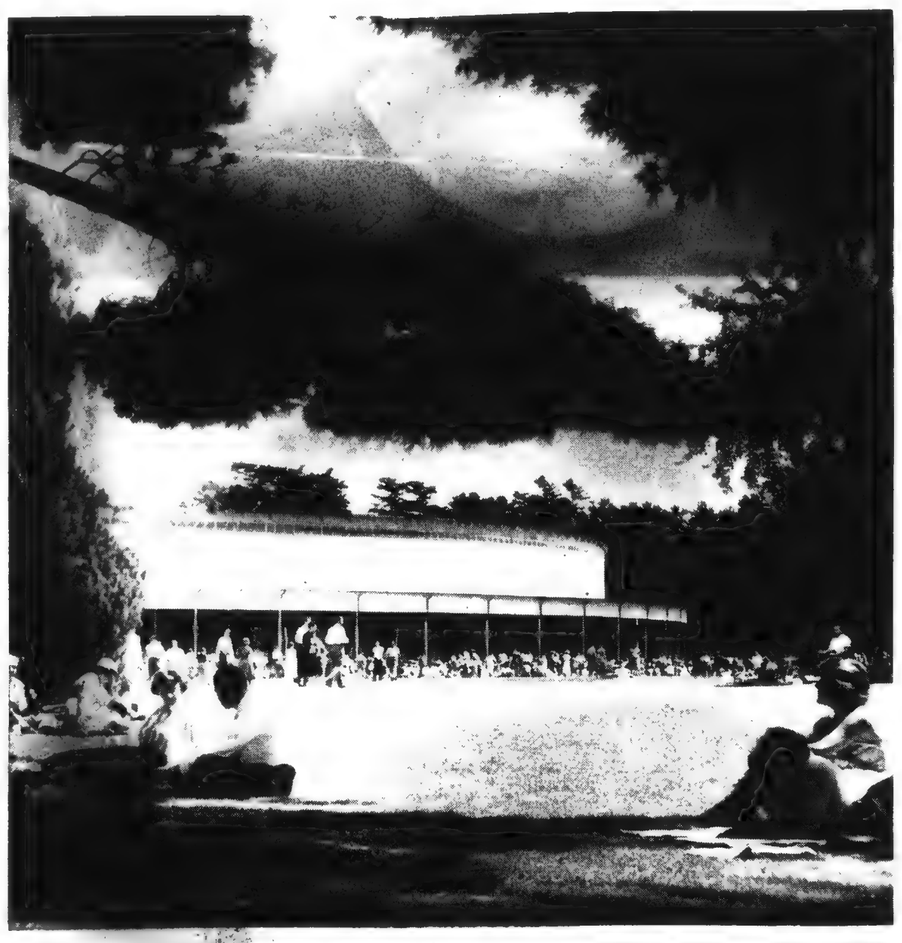
The Berkshires are probably best enjoyed by car. They abound with unexpected falls, like Bish Bash falls, lushly foliaged nooks like Bartholemew's Cobble and old colonial homes. It's a five to six hour drive from Boston to reach them. The area is also serviced by trains and buses from both Boston and New York, being about equidistant from the two cities.

There are over 40 hotels and inns, 35 guest houses and motels, most of the latter equipped with TV, several near swimming pools and ponds.

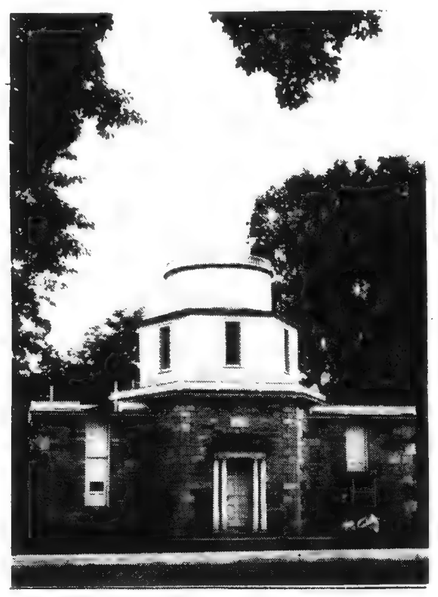
For the historically minded there are these sedate towns of Lee and Lenox with their old mansions and beautiful estates. The little town of Sheffield with its elm vaulted streets was the first settled in this area (1725). The Sheffield Old Parish Church by the central green is a fine example of New England church architecture. The town also boosts two covered bridges.

In Great Barrington the William Cullen Bryant house can bring back the past. Williamstown, home of Williams College, boasts a summer theatre and several historic museums.

And when you get hungry their are scores of dining spots that feature the finest New England cooking with specialties ranging from outdoor barbecues to native brook trout.



Thousands of music lovers converge on Tanglewood each year at festival time, below, left, for six weeks of classical concerts by the Boston Symphony. Below right, the astronomical observatory at Williams College in Williamstown, Mass., said to be the oldest university observatory in the United States. A good example of the unspoiled Berkshire Hills is the lovely Stockbridge Bowl, Lake Mahkeenac, shown above right on page 25.



The New York Times

NOVEMBER 15, 1951.

U. S. FOUND LOSING IN 'CULTURAL WAR'

State Department Aide Notes Athletes, Artists and Dancers Sent Abroad by Soviet

The United States is losing a world-wide cultural war with the Soviet Union, which last year sent abroad 39,000 athletes, scientists, writers, artists, musicians and ballet dancers in a "gigantic propaganda offensive" against this country, a State Department official declared here yesterday.

The speaker was Edward W. Barrett, assistant Secretary of State for public affairs. At a conference arranged by the Institute of International Education in Town Hall he asserted that the Russian offensive was "intended to prove once and for all that the West, and particularly the United States, is without culture and that the Soviet Union is the very cradle of culture."

Addressing representatives of 100 national organizations, Mr. Barrett noted that while the Soviet Union lately had been well represented at various international festivals and contests in such fields as the motion picture, music and the dance, the United States has been represented "only occasionally or not at all." At the Milan Fair last year, he said, the sixteen Russian exhibits were "the largest and most artistically presented."

"Their presence," Mr. Barrett added, "made a favorable impression and the absence of American participation permitted the Soviets to say that Americans were too busy preparing for war and too materialistic to attend. We lost that contest without a struggle."

Propaganda Expenditure

The Soviet Union's expenditure for propaganda in France alone has been estimated conservatively at $150,000,000 a year, or "more than the United States Government is spending on its program of information and educational exchange around the world," according to Mr. Barrett.

Recounting the rebuffs of the State Department's efforts to establish a basis for cultural relations with the Soviet Union in recent years, the assistant secretary said that in 1948 and 1949 twenty-five official overtures were made for various types of cultural exchange but that in each case the Russians either turned down or ignored the proposals.

Mr. Barrett observed that cultural exchange was "a major tool of Soviet propaganda", and that the Communist party used the Russian education system as well as all cultural activities to further the policies of the Soviet Government.

On the other hand, he said, the object of the United States is to create mutual respect and understanding among nations.

Sharing Stressed

"We do not have anything to sell, but we have much to share," he continued. "It is not our desire to dominate; it is our desire to trade as equals on the common ground of friendship and trust."

Mr. Barrett urged private financial support for developing the arts and culture of this country and acting as sponsor throughout the world. He said that the United States Government was neither disposed nor equipped to handle such projects.

Kenneth Holland, president of the institute, declared that there was a great need for leaders and specialists to plan and administer the expanding international activities of the United States.

The New York Times

NOVEMBER 24, 1951.

ON THE CULTURAL FRONT

Assistant Secretary of State Barrett has properly called attention to an area of the propaganda war in which we are lagging: the cultural front. He points out that the Soviet Union sent abroad last year the impressive number of 39,000 scientists, writers, musicians and the like to prove that Russia is the cradle of culture, while the United States has no culture. At important foreign cultural events, such as the Milan Fair last year, we have been represented little, if at all, while Soviet exhibits and personnel have been overwhelming.

The reason for this disparity is easily understood. The Soviet Government regards such exhibits as of major propaganda importance and devotes huge funds to this purpose. For the most part, however, American cultural figures who go abroad to display their skills do so because foreigners are willing to pay to see them perform. The shortage of American dollars abroad is a powerful factor militating against such commercial appearances. It does not affect Soviet performers in the same degree, since their services are frequently available on a free or virtually free basis. Furthermore, some of our cultural products seen abroad—gangster films, for example—may actually have a negative impact in forming foreign opinion.

Mr. Barrett was wise, we believe, in disclaiming any intention or desire on the part of our Government to go into competition with the Soviet regime in an official program of cultural export. But this very fact deepens the responsibility of private American enterprise, the great philanthropic foundations and related groups in seeing to it that our present backwardness is ended. In every field of culture the United States has representatives who will bear comparison with those of other countries. Whether it be chess masters or piano virtuosi, there are Americans whom foreigners ought to be able to see in action.

The New York Times DECEMBER 4, 1951.

EXPORT OF CULTURE

The men in the Kremlin ceaselessly expound the propaganda theme of Russia's cultural superiority over the rest of the world. We in the United States do not usually think of culture as playing any part in the propaganda war. And yet when the Russians are represented in European festivals and the United States is not, the loss is ours. We can be proud of a vibrant and flourishing culture. But because of our foolish disregard of the immense importance of the "cultural offensive" we have, as Assistant Secretary Barrett said the other day, lost many an intellectual battle threughout the civilized world without a struggle.

Now we have a golden opportunity to recoup some of this loss if we will only take full advantage of it. In Paris five months from now the Congress of Cultural Freedom is planning a festival, of which the theme will be the intellectual and artistic achievements of the free world in the twentieth century. The festival will embrace music, the drama, the dance, painting, and various other art forms, as conceived not by an all-powerful state which tells its artist-servants what they can and cannot do but by individual creators exercising the priceless gifts of freedom and self-expression.

The United States will be represented in the Paris festival, but—thus far at least—only by virtue of private philanthropy. The American committee for the festival, a private group, is now raising funds to make sure that our country is properly represented. Present plans are to send to Paris the New York City Ballet, and Boston Symphony, and arrange for temporary "export" of modern masterpieces from public and private collections. It is a fine thing that some private individuals and foundations have been willing to meet the expenditures involved, but obviously more examples of America's impressive cultural life could be brought to Europe if more funds were available.

Fri., July 6, 1956

HEATERS

eeman

ERKSHIRE FESTIVA

l lead pieces by Martin ry Cowell with the ai of the Yale Glee Club day afternoon (July 8)
of Haydn and Bach, in also three contemporary y Irving Fine, Alexei nd Charles Ives will be ukas Foss, a member of position department of shire Music Center, the Symphony Orchestra's music school at Tangled Mr. Foss will be piano

ove concerts, and those llowing week, July 11-will all be given in the 1,200-seat Theatre-Con-
Tanglewood, even-
:30 P.M., Sunday after-
2:30 P.M.

E DANCE: with a Thursday ma-
playing both matinees ngs Friday and Satur-
5-6-7, the next pro-
Jacob's Pillow near Lee,
Mass., will feature the debut of the Dokoudovsky-Stroganova Ballet in world premieres of "Schumann's 'Spring' Symphony" (Mats. only) and "The Abyss" (Alexandre Tcherepnine) (Eves.) Ruth St. Denis, commemorating the 50th anniversary of her first concert appearances, will dance four of her historic solos including "Cobra" and "Yogi", first seen in 1906. And Myra Kinch has announced "Sad Self Hereafter", newest addition to her collection of satires, plus three solos and "Giselle's Revenge", a contemporary spoof on the foibles of romantic ballet, after the manner of Chas. Addams, the cartoonist. In the latter work William Mille will dance Albrecht, and Ruth Alexander will contribute to the zany proceedings as Will.

of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening (July 4) with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 6,) Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players, in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening (July 7) concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh day, July 5-6-7, the next program at Jacob's Pillow near Lee, Mass., will feature the debut of the Dokoudovsky-Stroganova Ballet in world premieres of "Schumann's 'Spring' Symphony" (Mats. only) and "The Abyss" (Alexandre Tcherepnine) (Eves.) Ruth St. Denis, commemorating the 50th anniversary of her first concert appearances, will dance four of her historic solos including "Cobra" and "Yogi", first seen in 1906. And Myra Kinch has announced "Sad Self Hereafter", newest addition to her collection of satires, plus three solos and "Giselle's Revenge", a contemporary spoof on the foibles of romantic ballet, after the manner of Chas. Addams, the cartoonist. In the latter work William Mille will dance Albrecht, and Ruth Alexander will contribute to the zany proceedings as Will.

Wednesday evening (July 4) with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 6,) Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players, in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening (July 7) concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh

[50]

The New York Times

NOVEMBER 29, 1951.

EXPOSITION OF ARTS IS PLANNED IN PARIS

What Western World Has Done in Music, Ballet, Drama and Thought to Be Shown in May

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 28—An exposition of what the free creative mind has produced during this century in the arts will be held in Paris next May under the auspices of the Congress for Cultural Freedom, which includes leading intellectuals in the Western countries.

Under the title "Masterpieces of the Twentieth Century," some of the outstanding artists and intellectual leaders of our time will present a cavalcade of music, opera, ballet, drama, art, literature and philosophy during the month, according to Nicolas Nabokov, secretary general of the congress.

Mr. Nabokov said the festival would be an answer to the propaganda that has sought, and, to some extend, has succeeded "in planting in our own minds doubts of the validity, strength and vitality of our Western culture."

During the twentieth century, Mr. Nabokov said, "free creative imagination of the poets, painters and composers has produced an abundant flow of masterpieces in all the arts." At the same time, he added, as a by-product of political upheaval there has been a violent reaction against the free creative spirit.

Powerful political movements, he said, have tried to stifle free creation. "Narrow restrictive rules have sought to transform the artist into an instrument of the state, producing works tailored to the utilitarian needs of totalitarian regimes."

What has been done in the past fifty years in the free world will be shown in music by such organizations as the Vienna State Opera and Vienna Philharmonic, the chorus and orchestra of the Academy of St. Cecilia in Rome, R. I. A. S. Orchestra of Berlin, Orchestre de la Suisse Romande from Geneva, France's Conservatory Orchestra and National Orchestra.

Concert programs will present works of Debussy, Ravel, Schoenberg, Milhaud, Honegger and others, including some written by the Russian composers Shostakovich and Prokofieff and forbidden in the Soviet Union. Igor Stravinsky will conduct a program of his ballets and a concert of his music. Some of the outstanding conductors in the world also will participate.

Georges Balanchine's New York City Ballet will give performances. Two new ballets have been commissioned from the French composers Georges Auric and Henri Sauguet.

The Vienna Opera will give two performances of Alban Berg's "Wozzeck" and negotiations are under way for a performance by an all-Negro cast of Virgil Thomson's opera, "Four Saints in Three Acts," with book by Gertrude Stein.

In art, a comprehensive exhibition of contemporary painting is planned. Works are being collected in Europe and America.

Some of the most important dramatic works of modern times will be staged. Two notable productions will be Kafka's "The Trial," staged by Jean Louis Barrault, leading French actor and producer, and Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra," with Sir Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh.

A series of afternoon forums, led by noted writers and philosophers, is planned. One of the forums will discuss freedom of the press.

NEW YORK
Herald Tribune
Sunday, January 20, 1952

Boston Symphony, City Ballet Going to Paris Festival in May

By Paul V. Beckley

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will make its first European appearance with three concerts at the Festival of the Arts at Paris in May, it was disclosed yesterday ina joint announcement by Nicolas Nabokov, secretary-general of the Congress for Cultural Freedom, and George E. Judd, manager of the Boston orchestra.

As the major American representative at the festival, which is sponsored by the Congress, the Boston Symphony will stay in Europe two weeks and also play in Belgium, Holland, Austria, Switzerland and other Fernch communities. The cost of this overseas trip for the 104-member orchestra is estimated from $150,000 to $175,000.

One of the principal motives of the Congress in sponsoring the spring festival, it was said, is to combat the current Communist party line in Europe which has been insulting Western art and culture as "decadent."

Mr. Nabokov is director of the exposition committee of the Congress and Julius Fleischmann, of Cincinnati, its American chairman. Sidney Hook is chairman of the American committee of the Congress and has conducted negotiations with the American participants.

The American cultural invasion of Paris will be further abetted by the inclusion of a number of American paintings in an exhibition of 200 contemporary works representative of Western culture assembled by James Johnson Sweeney, a former director of the Museum of Modern Art. A number of American poets and writers are also scheduled to address literary forums during the festival.

The Boston Daily Globe
FRIDAY, JAN. 4, 1952

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY AND EUROPE

In its 71st year of history-making, the Boston Symphony Orchestra continues to make history. Next Spring it will play for the first time in Europe.

The occasion is special. Since 1914 our Western world has been forced to remember what in years of tranquil prosperity it is so easy to forget; that a civilization, if it leave any heritage at all, does so not in money and guns, but in the arts, sciences, philosophy, and religion. The content of these is spiritual, although the word more commonly used to designate them is culture. Thus it is the Congress for Cultural Freedom which has invited the Boston Symphony Orchestra to Paris in May for three, possibly four, concerts in a month of "Masterpieces of the 20th Century," designed to show specimens of vital creative achievement in all the arts by peoples not under stultifying interference by State control. When we consider what an extinguisher cap has descended on the arts in Russia since her revolution went sour, this point need not be labored.

That the Boston Symphony Orchestra should have been chosen is striking but not startling. To begin with the most prosaic fact, the expenses of this trip, beyond what the orchestra itself earns in Paris and on tour in Belgium, Holland, Austria, Bordeaux, Strassbourg, and Zurich and by radio broadcast, are to be paid by the Cultural Congress without cost to our local supporters. A less prosaic fact is the repute for world eminence which the Boston orchestra has had, and, save for a short interval during and after the first World War, has maintained since the early years of this century.

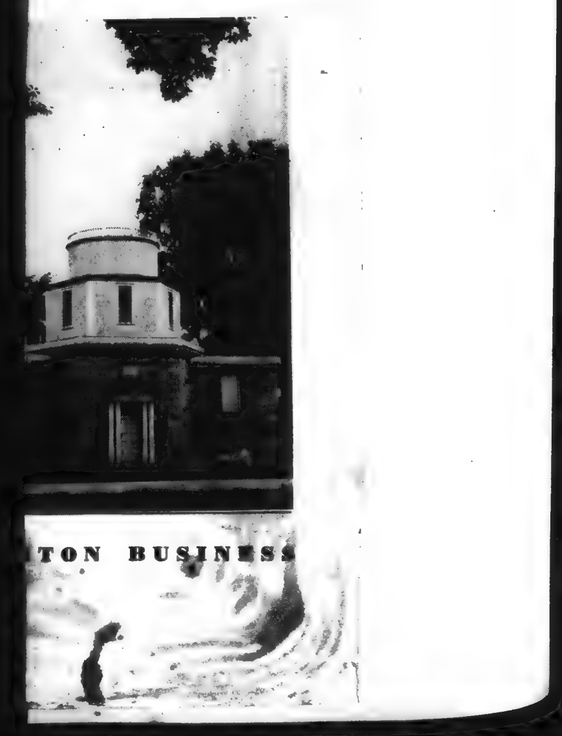
This eminence is an historical process. It began in 1881 with imported European players and famous conductors; it continues now when at least half the players when they go to Paris will be seeing Europe for the first time. They go as a virtuoso orchestra, not indeed the first to be heard in Europe nor the only one in America, but the fact of the invitation speaks for itself. Most of the great European orchestras, especially those on the Continent, have been adjuncts of opera houses; the Boston orchestra has cultivated in its public an eager taste for music in its most advanced form, the symphony; and while distinguished soloists quite properly remain ornaments to many of its programs, it has nevertheless been a pioneer in the promulgation of pure symphonic performances.

The art of performance itself is today also in somewhat special case. For the past two decades the major works of musical literature, instrumental and choral, have had performances of grandeur never dreamed of by the composers who penned them during the past two and one-half centuries—an exemplification of the process by which artists, out of sheer inner necessity, create works beyond the immediate comprehension or capacities of most of their contemporaries, only to have them taken up by mankind in some later age as a challenge and triumphantly achieved. It behooves us, therefore, to speak tentatively of the works of contemporary composers which will be played in Paris and on tour by the Boston Symphony Orchestra along with classics of the regular repertory.

Thus we send back to Europe something which originated there but which has achieved a distinctive excellence on American soil. We can scarcely be said to await a verdict, for that has been rendered decade after decade since the turn of the present century by eminent visiting European composers, conductors, and performers; but we do eagerly await the highly competent critical appraisals which its playing is certain to elicit.

As for cultural freedom, what better proof could we send to Europe? For without it the Boston Symphony Orchestra could not exist. Its very presence here, and soon-to-be in Europe, is testimony that freedom is the life blood and vital breath of the creative spirit.

UNCLE DUDLEY.

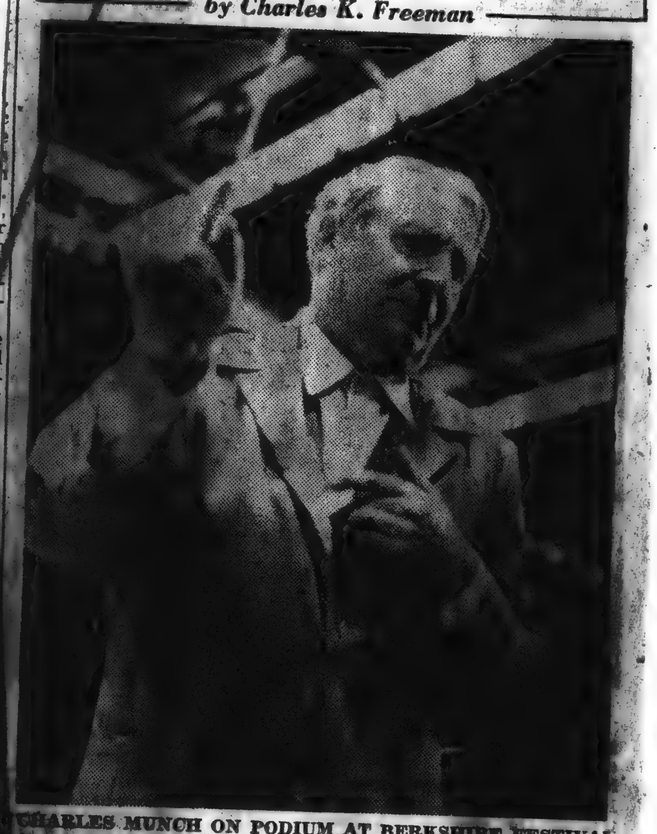


...n Symphony. Beginning ...rvatory at Williams College in ..., Mass., said to be the oldest ...servatory in the United States. ...mple of the unspoiled Berkshire ... lovely Stockbridge Bowl, Lake ... shown above right on page 25.

...TON BUSINESS

Daily Item, Port Chester, N. Y.
18 Fri. July 6, 1956

at the
NEW YORK THEATERS
by Charles K. Freeman



CHARLES MUNCH ON PODIUM AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

TANGLEWOOD AND JACOBS PILLOW

This being the week when the crowds move towards the major music and dance festivals we bring you news of the programs that will enchant disciples (and they are legion) of the events in the Berkshires.

Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch. For the seventeenth summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

* * * *

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening (July 4) with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 6,) Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players, in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening (July 7) concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon (July 8) a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood, and Mr. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11-13-14-15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 P.M., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 P.M.

* * * *

AND THE DANCE:

Opened with a Thursday matinee and playing both matinees and evenings Friday and Saturday, July 5-6-7, the next program at Jacob's Pillow near Lee, Mass., will feature the debut of the Dokoudovsky-Stroganova Ballet in world premieres of "Schumann's "Spring Symphony" (Mats. only) and "The Abyss" (Alexandre Tcheropnine) (Eves.) Ruth St. Denis, commemorating the 50th anniversary of her first concert appearances, will dance four of her historic solos including "Cobra" and "Yogi", first seen in 1906. And Myra Kinch has announced "Sad Self Hereafter", newest addition to her collection of satires, plus three solos and "Giselle's Revenge", a contemporary spoof on the foibles of romantic ballet, after the manner of Chas. Addams, the cartoonist. In the latter work William Milie will dance Albrecht, and Ruth Alexander will contribute to the zany proceedings as Will.

Standard-Star, New Rochelle, N.

at the
NEW YORK
by Charles K

CHARLES MUNCH ON PODIUM A

TANGLEWOOD AND JACOBS PILLOW

This being the week when the crowds move towards the major music and dance festivals we bring you news of the programs that will enchant disciples (and they are legion) of the events in the Berkshires.

Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch. For the seventeenth summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

* * * *

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening (July 4) with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 6,) Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening (July 7) concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh

[50]

ANNED IN PARIS and America.

st important dra-
odern times will notable produc-
n's "The Trial," Louis Barrault,
r and producer,

and Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra," with Sir Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh.

A series of afternoon forums led by noted writers and philosophers is planned. One of the forums will discuss freedom of the press.

NEW YORK
Herald Tribune
Sunday, January 20, 1952

Symphony, City Ballet Paris Festival in May

Beckley

phony Orches-first European ce concerts at Arts at Paris
sed yesterday ent by Nico-
y-general of ltural Freeid, manager

ican repre-
, which is gress, the stay in lso play in
ria. Switn commu-
overseas rchestra
0,000 to otives of ng the spring festival, it was said, is to combat the current Communist party line in Europe which has been insulting Western art and culture as "decadent."

Mr. Nabokov is director of the exposition committee of the Congress and Julius Fleischmann, of Cincinnati, its American chairman. Sidney Hook is chairman of the American committee of the Congress and has conducted negotiations with the American participants.

The American cultural invasion of Paris will be further abetted by the inclusion of a number of American paintings in an exhibition of 200 contemporary works representative of Western culture assembled by James Johnson Sweeney, a former director of the Museum of Modern Art. A number of American poets and writers are also scheduled to address literary forums during the festival.

rches-
n Eur the Most ally ncts nas for rm-sts ry
n
n-

contemporaries, only to have them taken up by mankind in some later age as a challenge and triumphantly achieved. It behooves us, therefore, to speak tentatively of the works of contemporary composers which will be played in Paris and on tour by the Boston Symphony Orchestra along with classics of the regular repertory.

Thus we send back to Europe something which originated there but which has achieved a distinctive excellence on American soil. We can scarcely be said to await a verdict, for that has been rendered decade after decade since the turn of the present century by eminent visiting European composers, conductors, and performers; but we do eagerly await the highly competent critical appraisals which its playing is certain to elicit.

As for cultural freedom, what better proof could we send to Europe? For without it the Boston Symphony Orchestra could not exist. Its very presence here, and soon-to-be in Europe, is testimony that freedom is the life blood and vital breath of the creative spirit.

UNCLE DUDLEY.

Daily Item, Port Chester, N. Y.
18 Fri., July 6, 1956

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

CHARLES MUNCH ON PODIUM AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

TANGLEWOOD AND JACOBS PILLOW

This being the week when the crowds move towards the major music and dance festivals we bring you news of the programs that will enchant disciples (and they are legion) of the events in the Berkshires.

Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch. For the seventeenth summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

* * * *

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening (July 4) with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 6,) Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening (July 7) concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon (July 8) a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood, and Mr. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11-13-14-15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 P.M., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 P.M.

* * * *

AND THE DANCE:

Opened with a Thursday matinee and playing both matinees and evenings Friday and Saturday, July 5-6-7, the next program at Jacob's Pillow near Lee, Mass., will feature the debut of the Dokoudovsky-Stroganova Ballet in world premieres of "Schumann's 'Spring' Symphony" (Mats. only) and "The Abyss" (Alexandre Tcherepnine) (Eves.) Ruth St. Denis, commemorating the 50th anniversary of her first concert appearances, will dance four of her historic solos including "Cobra" and "Yogi", first seen in 1906. And Myra Kinch has announced "Sad Self Hereafter", newest addition to her collection of satires, plus three solos and "Giselle's Revenge", a contemporary spoof on the foibles of romantic ballet, after the manner of Chas. Addams, the cartoonist. In the latter work William Milie will dance Albrecht, and Ruth Alexander will contribute to the zany proceedings as Wili.

Standard-Star, New Rochelle, N. Y., Fri., July 6, 1956

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

CHARLES MUNCH ON PODIUM AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

TANGLEWOOD AND JACOBS PILLOW

This being the week when the crowds move towards the major music and dance festivals we bring you news of the programs that will enchant disciples (and they are legion) of the events in the Berkshires.

Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch. For the seventeenth summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

* * * *

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening (July 4) with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 6,) Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening (July 7) concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon (July 8) a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood, and Mr. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11-13-14-15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 P.M., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 P.M.

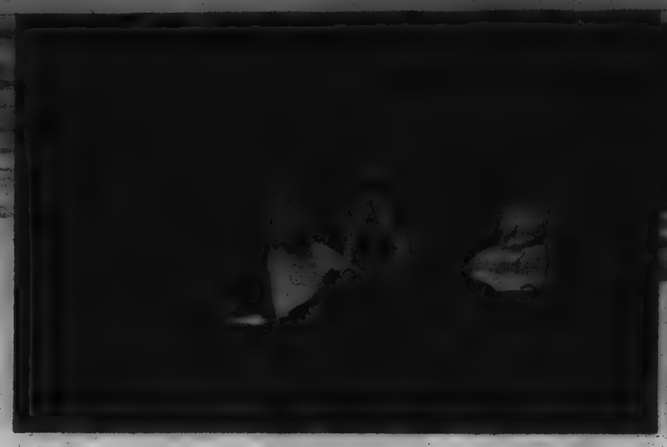
* * * *

AND THE DANCE:

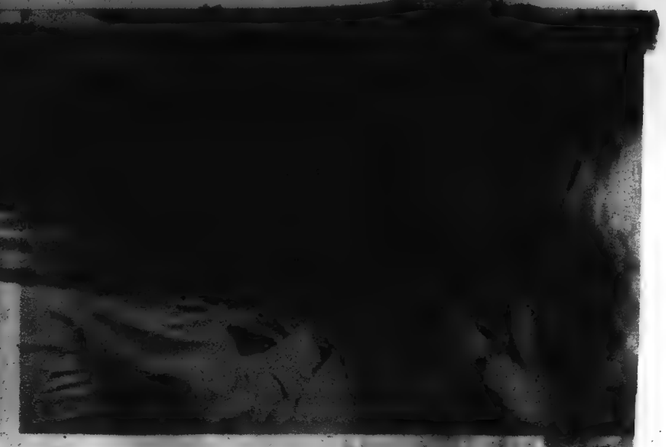
Opened with a Thursday matinee and playing both matinees and evenings Friday and Saturday, July 5-6-7, the next program at Jacob's Pillow near Lee, Mass., will feature the debut of the Dokoudovsky-Stroganova Ballet in world premieres of "Schumann's 'Spring' Symphony" (Mats. only) and "The Abyss" (Alexandre Tcherepnine) (Eves.) Ruth St. Denis, commemorating the 50th anniversary of her first concert appearances, will dance four of her historic solos including "Cobra" and "Yogi", first seen in 1906. And Myra Kinch has announced "Sad Self Hereafter", newest addition to her collection of satires, plus three solos and "Giselle's Revenge", a contemporary spoof on the foibles of romantic ballet, after the manner of Chas. Addams, the cartoonist. In the latter work William Milie will dance Albrecht, and Ruth Alexander will contribute to the zany proceedings as Wili.

[50]

ed mornings and afternoons



Before concerts we always relaxed on the shady lawn



Leonard Bernstein discussed music—with me!

SEVENTEEN— APRIL-195

s... Young Musician at Tanglewood

Fun and study at Berkshire

IG, AGE 19, CHARLOTTESVILLE, VIRGINIA

The students practiced mornings and afternoons

Before concerts we always relaxed on the shady lawn

Leonard Bernstein discussed music—with me!

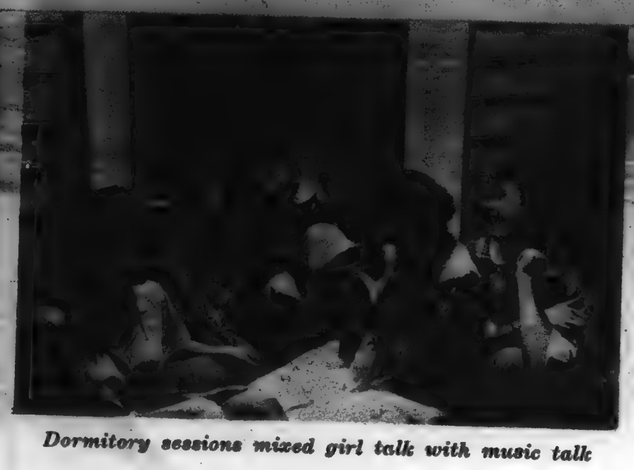
SEVENTEEN— APRIL-1951

It's all yours... Young Musician at Tanglewood

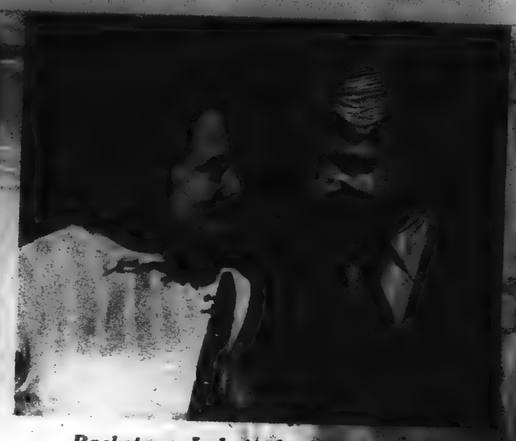
Fun and study at Berkshire

BY ELSA LUDEWIG, AGE 19, CHARLOTTESVILLE, VIRGINIA

I danced after concerts with clarinetist John Grande



Dormitory sessions mixed girl talk with music talk



Backstage, I chatted with Charles Münch

Festival — summer heaven for the musical

"Berkshire Hills," my father read from the road map. "A scenic mountain resort region in western part of Massachusetts. Annual Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood estate near Lenox in midsummer." And we were on our way there, getting closer every minute.

I had dreamed about Tanglewood for years. I had read every word in newspapers and magazines about the famous outdoor concerts held there each summer. Fellow mu[illegible] given me glowing reports of their studies ther[illegible] was to have a summer in Tanglewood and a[illegible] the world-renowned Boston Symphon[illegible] famous conductor, Charles Münch.

My first glimpse of the place w[illegible] inspiring six weeks of my life wa[illegible]ath-ta[illegible] "shed" I had seen in photographs was outlin[illegible] liant blue sky. Morning mist was still rising f[illegible] to wreath about the towering Berkshires. The opp[illegible]lay my loved clarinet in such beautiful surroundi[illegible]ud-denly more wonderful than ever.

My music training had begun at six with p[illegible] But even earlier than that, I was exposed to a [illegible] string quartet in which my father played first violin. T[illegible]quartet met at our house, and some of my most indelible m[illegible]s are of the sound of chamber music floating upstairs as I fell off to sleep.

Later came the elementary school band. At my father's suggestion, I chose clarinet since it was both a band and orchestra instrument. But it wasn't until I began playing with the high school band in my freshman year that music became exciting and real to me. At that point, I headed my Christmas list with a request for a recording of Dvořák's New World Symphony.

Besides playing the clarinet in the school band, I also played in piano recitals and accompanied my (continued on page 139)

Quiet summer mornings in the Berkshires were ideal for clarinet practice

I danced after concerts with clarinetist John Grande

Dormitory sessions mixed girl talk with music talk

Backstage, I chatted with Charles Münch

Festival — summer heaven for the musical

"Berkshire Hills," my father read from the road map. "A scenic mountain resort region in western part of Massachusetts. Annual Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood estate near Lenox in midsummer." And we were on our way there, getting closer every minute.

I had dreamed about Tanglewood for years. I had read every word in newspapers and magazines about the famous outdoor concerts held there each summer. Fellow music students had given me glowing reports of their studies there. And now I, too, was to have a summer in Tanglewood and a chance to play with the world-renowned Boston Symphony Orchestra and its famous conductor, Charles Münch.

My first glimpse of the place where I was to spend the most inspiring six weeks of my life was breath-taking. The huge music "shed" I had seen in photographs was outlined against a brilliant blue sky. Morning mist was still rising from the lake to wreath about the towering Berkshires. The opportunity to play my loved clarinet in such beautiful surroundings seemed suddenly more wonderful than ever.

My music training had begun at six with piano lessons. But even earlier than that, I was exposed to a biweekly string quartet in which my father played first violin. The quartet met at our house, and some of my most indelible memories are of the sound of chamber music floating upstairs as I fell off to sleep.

Later came the elementary school band. At my father's suggestion, I chose clarinet since it was both a band and orchestra instrument. But it wasn't until I began playing with the high school band in my freshman year that music became exciting and real to me. At that point, I headed my Christmas list with a request for a recording of Dvořák's New World Symphony.

Besides playing the clarinet in the school band, I also played in piano recitals and accompanied my (continued on page 164)

Quiet summer mornings in the Berkshires were ideal for clarinet practice

IT'S ALL OURS

continued from page 137

Young Musician at Tanglewood

flute-playing brother and other band members in solos at the music festivals. My brother and I also gave programs for various clubs and hospitals, sometimes joined by my father on the violin. Since we were able to use any combination of violin, flute, clarinet or piano for which we found music, the programs were varied at least.

In my later high school years I began to devote most of my leisure time to music, all the way from playing a loud but not the most accurate glockenspiel in our Military Band to joining numerous woodwind ensembles in chamber music. It became a foregone conclusion that music would be my major subject in college. I chose Oberlin Conservatory, a highly rated school I knew would give me both the musical training and campus atmosphere I desired.

At Oberlin I began to think about how wonderful it would be to spend a summer in Tanglewood. I applied and my audition came on a lovely April Sunday morning. It left me one nervous wreck after another girl for [illegible] for [illegible] for [illegible] accepted.

At Tanglewood, from many different [illegible] interested in learning music, outstanding [illegible] the nation's music [illegible] musicians who [illegible] their own professional [illegible] members of one of the nation's [illegible] orchestras; the Boston Symphony [illegible] there was a wealth of experience and knowledge for us students to draw upon. All kinds of musical groups were represented: full orchestra, chamber groups large and small, choirs, distinguished solo artists. The music itself included opera and operatic performances as well as many new works by both recognized composers and students. We could talk to the Boston Symphony members, observe them at work and at performances, and were instructed by them in sectional and chamber music rehearsals. Many of us took private lessons. My teacher was Gino Cioffi, the first clarinetist of the Boston Symphony.

Through observation, I learned the kind of detail which gave me an idea of what being a professional musician really is. For example, on concert nights I noticed the early arrival of the first oboist to test his reeds in the hall." I watched the players warming up and after the performance noted how relaxed or tense they were, how friendly the members were to each other. One clarinetist always shook hands with other members of the orchestra and exchanged a few pleasantries before getting to work. I looked up beforehand the clarinet solos in the works to be performed and then listened to the player's tone quality of the instruments in these solo passages. Sometimes I watched the conductor to see how he would handle certain sections. These experiences, together with the daily lessons and rehearsals, deepened my understanding of music as a way of life.

Each morning we came from our dormitories in nearby Lenox to enjoy Tanglewood's beauty all over again. After some pleasant chitchat around the bulletin board at the Main House, the hub of Tanglewood where the offices and many practice rooms are located, I went on to orchestra rehearsal, while some students went to Festival Chorus or to private practice.

After about three hours of "Can't you pull more tone out of those fiddles?" "No, no, no, second clarinet! It comes after the beat, not on it!" "That's fine, that's wonderful, let's see if you can do it again," rehearsal was over. The orchestra members converged toward the cafeteria, meeting other students from opera sessions, chorus rehearsals and conducting classes.

Since lunch was not included in the regular fees, we formed a club of about twelve persons, each contributing a dollar a week to buy groceries for our sandwich lunches in the cafeteria. It was a friendly gathering and the chatter ran on: "Who's got the peanut butter?" "Grace, your oboe solo in the Shostakovitch was the greatest this morning." "Isn't there any more lettuce?" "Pierre, sing us a French song." It was a time for relaxing on the lawn, for browsing in the music store, for writing letters, for one-thirty, back again to [illegible] for me, chamber music classes. After an hour or two of rehearsing, we were free to go back to the dorm, swim in the lake or even organize a group for more music.

Student concert nights were filled with anticipation and excitement. White dresses and dinner jackets were seen everywhere. In the last few minutes before the concert, the performers quickly looked over their parts, and some frantically tried out reeds. The back of the vast Tanglewood shed filled with players. A trumpeter would do warm-up exercises near the edge of the woods, a cellist run up and down scales, oboists and bassoonists would squawk on reeds; other musicians stood in groups talking and joking. Then it was [illegible] time, and one by one the orchestra filed [illegible] to the rustling of pages and the whispered words of encouragement among the players. Out came the conductor. A smile to the orchestra, a quick glance over the players to see that all were ready and then the downbeat. Pages went by, important solos and passages came and went, one number after another was played, until finally the concert was over. Then completely relaxed, with much congratulation and gaiety, the orchestra would disperse—some to an [illegible], others to eating places in Lenox and Pittsfield, all eventually returning to the dorms to discuss the evening and then to catch as much sleep as possible.

Dormitory life was one of the pleasantest aspects of Tanglewood. We had our serious discussions, but there was much laughter and fun, too. Our talk about music often began as we walked back to the dorm eating ice cream cones, interrupted only by the solemn declaration of our firmest conviction, "There's nothing quite like ice cream!" Once at home our conversations continued until the night's events were exhausted. We then branched off to other subjects. We wondered how orchestra members felt about their jobs, how much they were paid, how hard they worked. We freely exchanged tips that our teachers had given us and discussed different ways of approaching our musical problems. We felt ourselves gaining insight into other musicians' lives and their ideas, learning a point here or there about the playing of an instrument, or simply meeting and becoming better acquainted with people around us.

So Tanglewood was an idyllic place to spend a summer. The beauty of the Berkshire Hills seemed to combine with our music, pervading all our experiences and giving them greater meaning. It was a wonderful combination of work and fun, of learning and producing, of friendliness and comradeship which left each of us with one deep desire—to return.

THE END

"Warming up" my clarinet backstage to play in a student concert

DISC/ussion

Music moves outdoors this month all across the country, from the hills of southern California through the Colorado Rockies, the lake country of Michigan, the Tennessee mountains, Massachusetts' Berkshires, to the swank coast of Rhode Island. And Americans will flock to the Summer Music Festivals held in these and many more localities. Not since must they travel abroad to Salzburg in Austria, Bayreuth in Germany, and Edinburgh in Scotland to hear great orchestras, conductors, and soloists. The Summer Music Festivals in the United States now rank with the best Europe has to offer. While these concerts are attended primarily by music lovers, it is noticeable that they attract tourists in general and stimulate their interest in music.

The Music Shed at Tanglewood in the Berkshires

With Tanglewood in the Berkshires now an established institution and the summer concerts of the Hollywood Bowl and those in Aspen, Colo., following close behind, there are also new summer music centers at Sewanee in the Tennessee mountains, Stratford in Connecticut, and the Jazz Festival in New Orleans. There's hardly a part of the country that will be farther than a few hours' drive from some spot where you can hear the best of music and musicians—at a price that will please you.

With the development of these Summer Festivals, dealers throughout the country have found an increased demand for records of the compositions played at the concerts. For example, to celebrate the 200th anniversary of the birth of Mozart, with programs all over the country accenting his music, there are many new releases seldom, or never, recorded before. Decca has a magnificent new recording of the "Coronation" Mass in C Major, with Maria Stader and the Berlin Philharmonic, Markevitch conducting. A must for the Mozart lover is a London coupling of Symphonies Nos. 13 and 40 by The Vienna Philharmonic, Karl Munchinger, conductor. Wilhelm Backhaus, of London, also has recorded [illegible] of both piano studies [illegible] Fantasia in C [illegible] are the Sonatas No. [illegible] and the Rondo in A Major, [illegible] piano sound, great performances. Earlier this year Columbia [illegible] a dual performance of the Mozart Symphony No. 39. It's a reheated piece with Bruno Walter and the New York Philharmonic, and then the [illegible] polished work. This recording gives a dramatic account of what goes into the preparation of a concert.

For those who can't get to the Summer Festivals there is light, bright listening in the ballet disc "Le Beau Danube" (Strauss, of course), in a recording for Capitol by the Orchestra of the Paris Opera, conducted by Rosenthal. Also a ballet issued by Westminster: Karayev's "Seven Beauties," interesting, dark, very Russian music; and Elliott Carter's ballet "The Minotaur," recorded for Mercury by Howard Hanson and the Eastman-Rochester Symphony.

Angel introduces Sir Thomas Beecham to their label with Schubert's Symphony No. 6 coupled with Grieg's "In Autumn" and his "Old Norwegian Romance"—the best in fidelity. And Grieg comes in for some rare treatment in Vox's disc of his "Lyric Suite," "Norwegian Dances," and "Holberg Suite."

There's a lot of nostalgia in MGM's Kurt Weill Favorites, covering "Lady in the Dark," "Knickerbocker Holiday," "Street Scene," "Johnny Johnson," and "One Touch of Venus." For those who don't go in so strongly for classical music, jazz comes to a high point with RCA Victor's "The Jazz Workshop"—featuring fabulous Manny Albam, discoverer of many famous jazz figures. Along with this, try Harry Gold's "Parade of the Pieces" (London), a wild "ride" from "Bull House Blues," and "Skeleton Jangle" to "Long John Stomp."

John Erwin

The American MAGAZINE
July 35¢

The Saturday Evening Post
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
JUN 30 1956

IT'S ALL YOURS

continued from page 137

Young Musician at Tanglewood

flute-playing brother and other band members in solos at the music festivals. My brother and I also gave programs for various clubs and hospitals, sometimes joined by my father on the violin. Since we were able to use any combination of violin, flute, clarinet or piano for which we found music, the programs were varied at least.

In my later high school years I began to devote most of my leisure time to music, all the way from playing a loud but not the most accurate glockenspiel in our Military Band to joining numerous woodwind ensembles in chamber music. It became a foregone conclusion that music would be my major subject in college. I chose Oberlin Conservatory, a highly rated school I knew would give me both the musical training and campus atmosphere I desired.

At Oberlin I began to think about how wonderful it would be to spend a summer in Tanglewood. I applied and my audition came on a lovely April Sunday morning. It left me one nervous and anxious girl for several weeks until, after many frantic bike rides home after classes for the mail, word came that I was accepted.

At Tanglewood I met musicians from many different parts of the country interested in learning more about music, outstanding students from the nation's music schools, young musicians who had had their first few professional jobs, and members of one of the nation's fine orchestras, the Boston Symphony. Here was a wealth of experience and knowledge for the students to draw upon. All kinds of musical groups were represented: full orchestra, chamber groups, large and small choirs, distinguished solo artists. The music itself included sonata and operatic performances, as well as many new works by both recognized composers and students. We could talk to the Boston Symphony members, observe them at work and at performances, and were instructed by them in sectional and chamber group rehearsals. Many of us took private lessons. My teacher was Gino Cioffi, the first clarinetist of the Boston Symphony.

Through observation, I learned the kind of detail which gave me an idea of what being a professional musician means. For example, on concert nights, I noticed the early arrival of the first oboist to test his reeds in the "shed." I watched the players before, during and after the performances, saw how relaxed or tense they were, how friendly the members were to each other. One clarinetist always shook hands with other members of the orchestra and exchanged a few pleasantries before getting to work. I looked up beforehand the clarinet solos in the works to be performed and then listened to the playing and balance of the instruments in those passages. At times I watched the conductor to see how he would handle certain sections. These experiences, together with the daily lessons and rehearsals, deepened my understanding of music as a way of life.

"Warming up" my clarinet backstage to play in a student concert

Each morning we came from our dormitories in nearby Lenox to enjoy Tanglewood's beauty all over again. After some pleasant chitchat around the bulletin board at the Main House, the hub of Tanglewood where the offices and many practice rooms are located, I went on to orchestra rehearsal, while some students went to Festival Chorus or to private practice.

After about three hours of "Can't you pull more tone out of those fiddles?" "No, no, no, second clarinet! It comes after the beat, not on it!" "That's fine, that's wonderful, let's see if you can do it again," rehearsal was over. The orchestra members converged toward the cafeteria, meeting other students from opera sessions, chorus rehearsals and conducting classes.

Since lunch was not included in the regular fees, we formed a club of about twelve persons, each contributing a dollar a week to buy groceries for our sandwich lunches in the cafeteria. It was a friendly gathering and the chatter ran on: "Who's got the peanut butter?" "Grace, your oboe solo in the Shostakovitch was the greatest this morning." "Isn't there any more lettuce?" "Pierre, sing us a French song." It was a time for relaxing on the lawn, for browsing at the music store, for writing letters. At one-thirty, back again to work—for me, chamber music classes. After an hour or two of rehearsing, we were free to go back to the dorm, swim in the lake or even organize a group for more music.

Student concert nights were filled with anticipation and excitement. White dresses and dinner jackets were seen everywhere. In the last few minutes before the concert, the performers quickly looked over their parts, and some frantically tried out reeds. The back of the vast Tanglewood shed filled with players. A trumpeter would do warm-up exercises near the edge of the woods, a cellist run up and down scales, oboists and bassoonists would squawk on reeds; other musicians stood in groups talking and joking. Then it was concert time, and one by one the orchestra filed onstage to the rustling of pages and the whispered words of encouragement among the players. Out came the conductor. A smile to the orchestra, a quick glance over the players to see that all were ready and then the downbeat. Pages went by, important solos and passages came and went, one number after another was played, until finally the concert was over. Then completely relaxed, with much congratulation and gaiety, the orchestra would disperse—some to an Inn nearby, others to eating places in Lenox and Pittsfield, all eventually returning to the dorms to discuss the evening and then to catch as much sleep as possible.

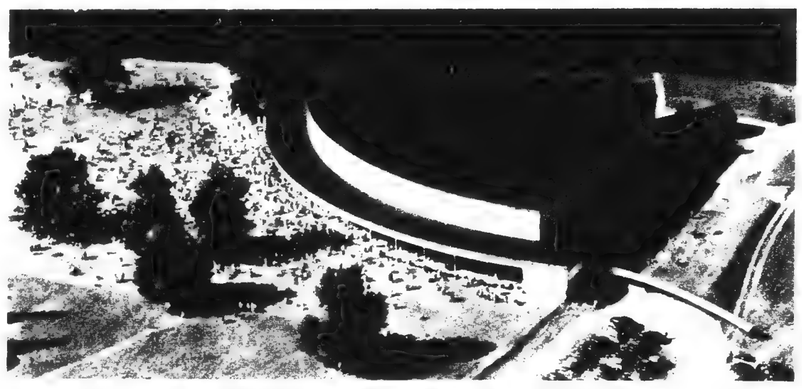
Dormitory life was one of the pleasantest aspects of Tanglewood. We had our serious discussions, but there was much laughter and fun too. Our talk about music often began as we walked back to the dorm eating ice cream cones, interrupted only by the solemn declaration of our firmest conviction, "There's nothing quite like ice cream!" Once at home our conversations continued until the night's events were exhausted. We then branched off to other subjects. We wondered how orchestra members felt about their jobs, how much they were paid, how hard they worked. We freely exchanged tips that our teachers had given us and discussed different ways of approaching our musical problems. We felt ourselves gaining insight into other musicians' lives and their ideas, learning a point here or there about the playing of an instrument, or simply meeting and becoming better acquainted with people around us.

So Tanglewood was an idyllic place to spend a summer. The beauty of the Berkshire Hills seemed to combine with our music, pervading all our experiences and giving them greater meaning. It was a wonderful combination of work and fun, of learning and producing, of friendliness and comradeship which left each of us with one deep desire—to return.

THE END

DISC/ussion

Music moves outdoors this month all across the nation, from the hills of southern California through the Colorado Rockies, the lake country of Michigan, the Tennessee mountains, Massachusetts' Berkshires, to the swank coast of Rhode Island. And Americans will flock to the Summer Music Festivals held in these and many more localities. No longer must they travel abroad to Salzburg in Austria, Bayreuth in Germany, and Edinburgh in Scotland to hear great orchestras, conductors, and soloists. The Summer Music Festivals in the United States now rank with the best Europe has to offer. While these concerts are attended primarily by music lovers, it is noticeable that they attract tourists in general and stimulate their interest in music.



The Music Shed at Tanglewood in the Berkshires

With Tanglewood in the Berkshires now an established institution and the summer concerts of the Hollywood Bowl and those in Aspen, Colo., following close behind, there are also new summer music centers at Sewanee in the Tennessee mountains, Stratford in Connecticut, and the Jazz Festival in Newport, R. I. There's hardly a part of the country that will be farther than a few hours' drive from some spot where you can hear the best of music and musicians at a price that will please you.

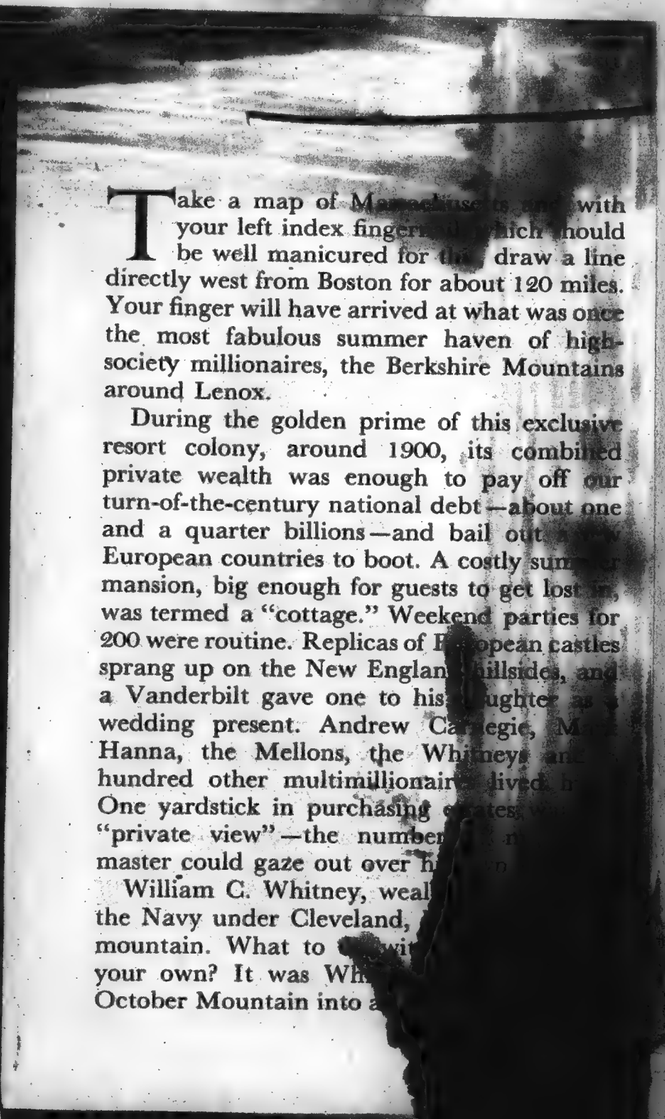
With the development of these Summer Festivals, dealers throughout the country have found an increased demand for records of the compositions played at the concerts. For example, to celebrate the 200th anniversary of the birth of Mozart, with programs all over the country accenting his music, there are many new releases seldom, or never, recorded before. Decca has a magnificent new recording of the "Coronation" Mass in C Major, with Maria Stader and the Berlin Philharmonic, Markevitch conducting. A must for the Mozart lover is a London coupling of Symphonies Nos. 33 and 40 by The Vienna Philharmonic, Karl Munchinger, conductor. Wilhelm Backhaus for London, also has recorded the favorite of both piano students and professionals, the Fantasia in C Major, with this are the Sonatas Nos. 10 and 14 and the Rondo in A Minor. Excellent piano sound, great performance. Earlier this year Columbia issued a dual performance of the Mozart Symphony No. 39—as a rehearsal piece with Bruno Walter and the New York Philharmonic, and then the finished, polished work. This recording gives a dramatic account of what goes into the preparation of a concert.

For those who can't get to the Summer Festivals there is light, bright listening in the ballet disc "Le Beau Danube" (Strauss, of course), in a recording for Capitol by the Orchestra of the Paris Opera, conducted by Rosenthal. Also a ballet issued by Westminster: Karayev's "Seven Beauties," interesting, dark, very Russian music; and Elliott Carter's ballet "The Minotaur," recorded for Mercury by Howard Hanson and the Eastman Rochester Symphony.

Angel introduces Sir Thomas Beecham to their label with Schubert's Symphony No. 6 coupled with Grieg's "In Autumn" and his "Old Norwegian Romance" the best in fidelity. And Grieg comes in for some rare treatment in Vox's disc of his "Lyric Suite," "Norwegian Dances," and "Holberg Suite."

There's a lot of nostalgia in MGM's Kurt Weill Favorites, covering "Lady in the Dark," "Knickerbocker Holiday," "Street Scene," "Johnny Johnson," and "One Touch of Venus." For those who don't go in so strongly for classical music, jazz comes to a high point with RCA Victor's "The Jazz Workshop"—featuring fabulous Manny Albam, discoverer of many famous jazz figures. Along with this, try Harry Gold's "Parade of the Pieces" (London), a wild "ride" from "Bush House Blues," and "Skeleton Jangle" to "Long John Stomp."

John Erwin



Take a map of Massachusetts and with your left index finger (which should be well manicured for this) draw a line directly west from Boston for about 120 miles. Your finger will have arrived at what was once the most fabulous summer haven of high-society millionaires, the Berkshire Mountains around Lenox.

During the golden prime of this exclusive resort colony, around 1900, its combined private wealth was enough to pay off our turn-of-the-century national debt—about one and a quarter billions—and bail out [illegible] European countries to boot. A costly summer mansion, big enough for guests to get lost in, was termed a "cottage." Weekend parties for 200 were routine. Replicas of European castles sprang up on the New England hillsides, and a Vanderbilt gave one to his daughter as a wedding present. Andrew Carnegie, Mark Hanna, the Mellons, the Whitneys and a hundred other multimillionaires lived [illegible]. One yardstick in purchasing estates was the "private view"—the number [illegible] master could gaze out over his [illegible].

William C. Whitney, wealthy Secretary of the Navy under Cleveland, [illegible] mountain. What to do with your own? It was Whitney who made October Mountain into a [illegible]

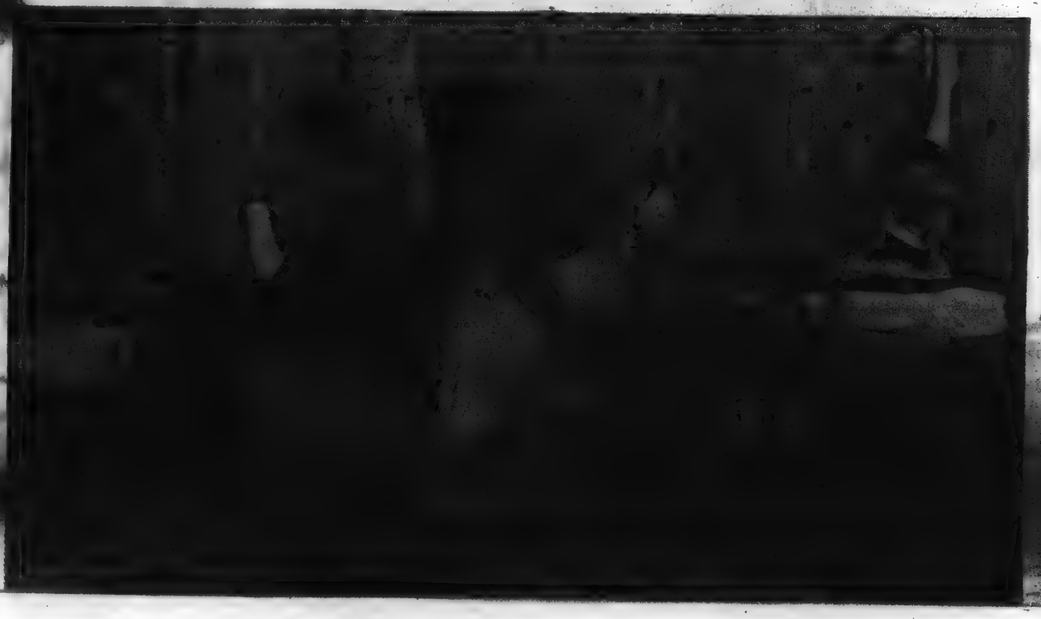
...ers swirl around the Tallyho Room at Eastover, where bare feet ...hionable and jackets and ties practically taboo.

Working Girls Taylwood on a Frolic

At this once private, and still fabulous mansion, stenographers can live like heiresses for $75 a week, with plenty of everything but men.

By ASHLEY HALSEY, JR.

Guests have their choice of cottage rooms, like the one shown here, or dormitory accommodations. In the summer, all-inclusive rates range from $71.75 to $99.75 a week. The place is usually booked solid.



A custom-made artificial stream for canoeing. If a guest prefers dim lights, there's dancing every evening until three.

Square dancers swirl around the Tallyho Room at Eastover, where bare feet are fashionable and jackets and ties practically taboo.

Working Girls on a Frolic

At this once private and still fabulous mansion, stenographers can live like heiresses for $75 a week, with plenty of everything but men.

By ASHLEY HALSEY, JR.

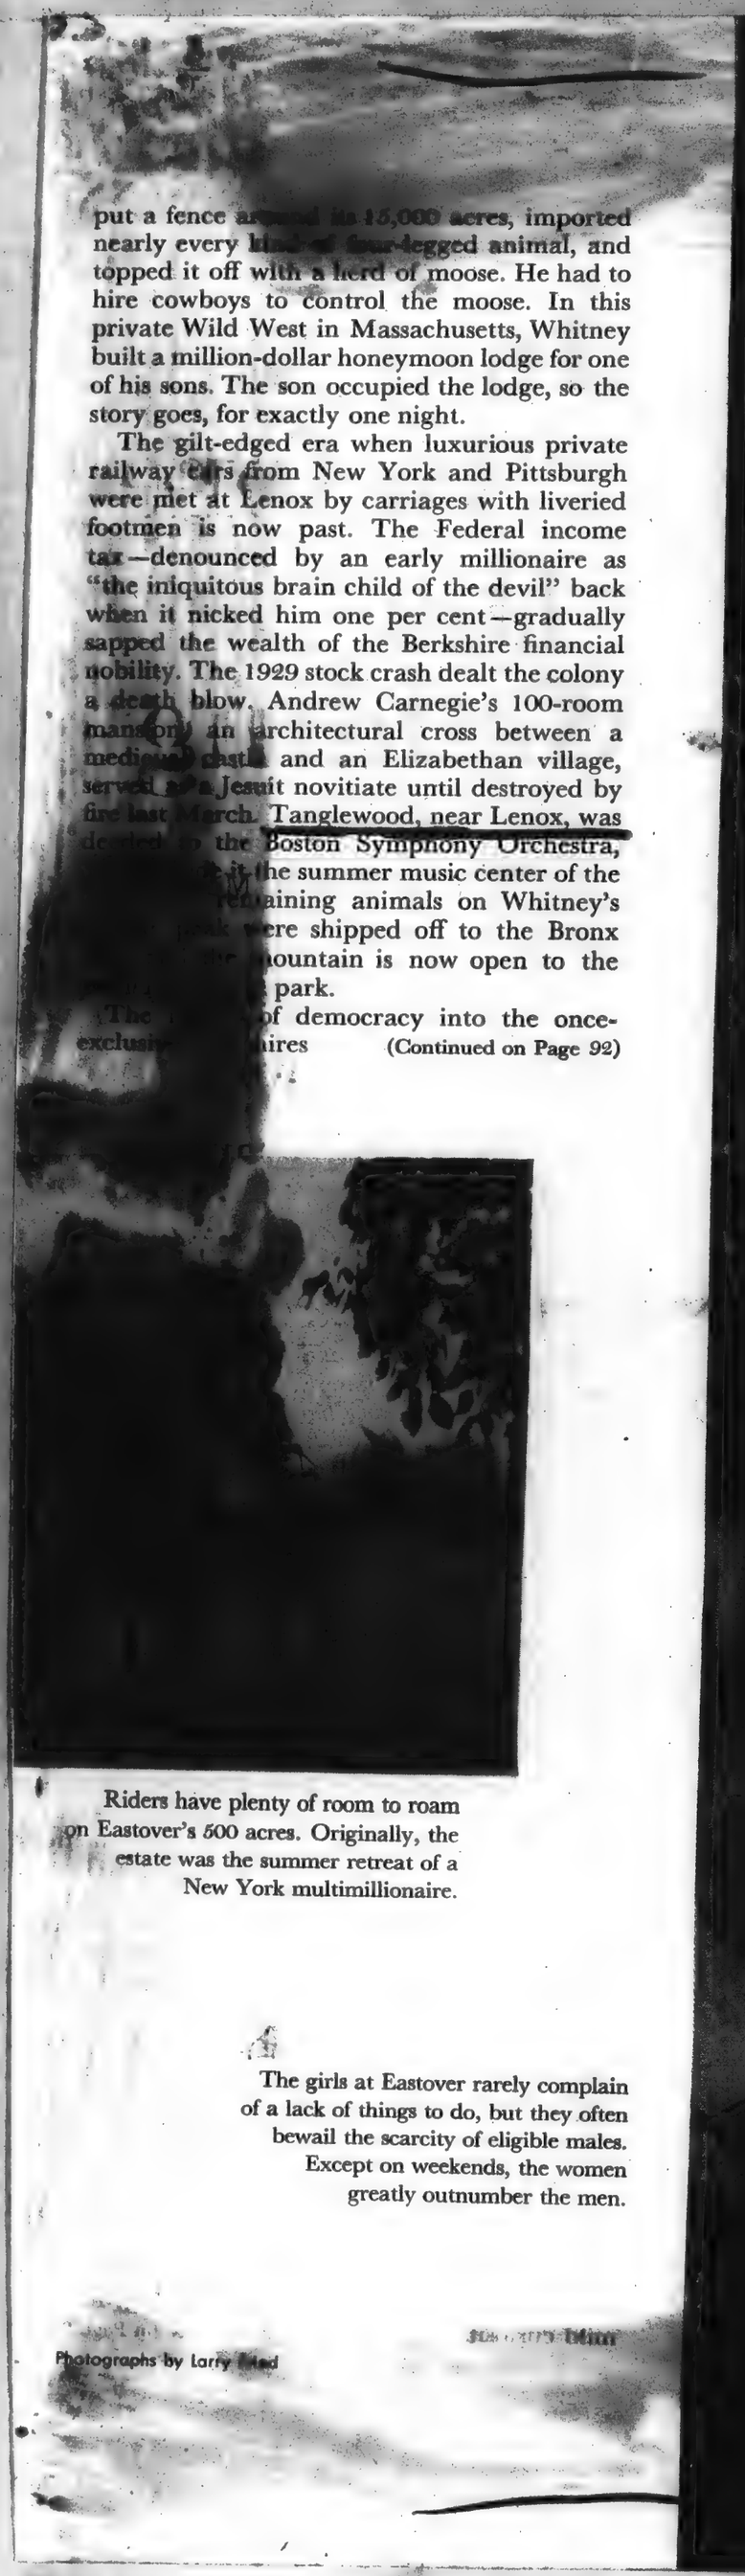
Take a map of Massachusetts and with your left index fingernail, which should be well manicured for this, draw a line directly west from Boston for about 120 miles. Your finger will have arrived at what was once the most fabulous summer haven of high-society millionaires, the Berkshire Mountains around Lenox.

During the golden prime of this exclusive resort colony, around 1900, its combined private wealth was enough to pay off our turn-of-the-century national debt—about one and a quarter billions—and bail out a few European countries to boot. A costly summer mansion, big enough for guests to get lost in, was termed a "cottage." Weekend parties for 200 were routine. Replicas of European castles sprang up on the New England hillsides, and a Vanderbilt gave one to his daughter as a wedding present. Andrew Carnegie, Mark Hanna, the Mellons, the Whitneys and a hundred other multimillionaires lived high. One yardstick in purchasing estates was the "private view"—the number of miles [illegible] master could gaze out over his own land.

William C. Whitney, wealthy Secretary of the Navy under Cleveland, [illegible] mountain. What to do with [illegible] your own? It was Whitney [illegible] October Mountain into a [illegible] 200.

Guests have their choice of cottage rooms, like the one shown here, or dormitory accommodations. In the summer, all-inclusive rates range from $71.75 to $99.75 a week. The place is usually booked solid.

A custom-made artificial stream for canoeing. If a guest prefers dim lights, there's dancing every evening until three.



put a fence around its 15,000 acres, imported nearly every kind of four-legged animal, and topped it off with a herd of moose. He had to hire cowboys to control the moose. In this private Wild West in Massachusetts, Whitney built a million-dollar honeymoon lodge for one of his sons. The son occupied the lodge, so the story goes, for exactly one night.

The gilt-edged era when luxurious private railway cars from New York and Pittsburgh were met at Lenox by carriages with liveried footmen is now past. The Federal income tax—denounced by an early millionaire as "the iniquitous brain child of the devil" back when it nicked him one per cent—gradually sapped the wealth of the Berkshire financial nobility. The 1929 stock crash dealt the colony a death blow. Andrew Carnegie's 100-room mansion, an architectural cross between a medieval castle and an Elizabethan village, served as a Jesuit novitiate until destroyed by fire last March. Tanglewood, near Lenox, was deeded to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, [illegible] the summer music center of the [illegible]aining animals on Whitney's [illegible]ere shipped off to the Bronx [illegible]ountain is now open to the [illegible] park.

The [illegible]f democracy into the once-exclusi[illegible]hires (Continued on Page 92)

Riders have plenty of room to roam on Eastover's 500 acres. Originally, the estate was the summer retreat of a New York multimillionaire.

The girls at Eastover rarely complain of a lack of things to do, but they often bewail the scarcity of eligible males. Except on weekends, the women greatly outnumber the men.

Photographs by Larry Reed

put a fence around its 15,000 acres, imported nearly every kind of four-legged animal, and topped it off with a herd of moose. He had to hire cowboys to control the moose. In this private Wild West in Massachusetts, Whitney built a million-dollar honeymoon lodge for one of his sons. The son occupied the lodge, so the story goes, for exactly one night.

The gilt-edged era when luxurious private railway cars from New York and Pittsburgh were met at Lenox by carriages with liveried footmen is now past. The Federal income tax—denounced by an early millionaire as "the iniquitous brain child of the devil" back when it nicked him one per cent—gradually sapped the wealth of the Berkshire financial nobility. The 1929 stock crash dealt the colony a death blow. Andrew Carnegie's 100-room mansion, an architectural cross between a medieval castle and an Elizabethan village, served as a Jesuit novitiate until destroyed by fire last March. Tanglewood, near Lenox, was deeded to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which made it the summer music center of the East. The remaining animals on Whitney's private peak were shipped off to the Bronx Zoo, and the mountain is now open to the public as a state park.

The march of democracy into the once-exclusive Berkshires (Continued on Page 92)

Riders have plenty of room to roam on Eastover's 500 acres. Originally, the estate was the summer retreat of a New York multimillionaire.

The girls at Eastover rarely complain of a lack of things to do, but they often bewail the scarcity of eligible males. Except on weekends, the women greatly outnumber the men.

Photographs by Larry Fried

Working Girls on a Frolic (Continued from Page 29)

is most triumphant just across the Housatonic River from the former Whitney summit. There at a handsome old estate called Eastover, a onetime streetcar conductor named George Bisacca plays host every week to 350 young office workers who come as paying guests. George's standing as a party giver in some ways excels that of Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, reigning dowager of the region around 1900. When Mrs. Stokes' son telegraphed from Yale "Bringing '96 for weekend,' meaning his chums of the Class of 1896, she is said to have wired back: "Place already crowded with guests, bring only fifty."

George, on the other hand, has accommodated as many as 679 weekend guests over [illegible] Day. "When you realize [illegible] this pint-sized palace was [illegible] summer cottage' for a family of five you can see how much I've changed and utilized it. Of course, with [illegible] there, they were sleeping [illegible] except in tents."

[illegible] has been known to complain [illegible] om. The heavy decorum of the [illegible] era went out with velvet dra[illegible] ow there is dancing [illegible] orchestra [illegible] tly until three A.M., [illegible] ming at [illegible] ny hour in an underwater-light[illegible] nd a choice of fifty daytime [illegible] ared to the customer's energ[illegible] f it.

Eastover is [illegible] where callusproof devotees of da[illegible] whirl eight hours a day or nigh[illegible] days a week. The fun begins at three P.M. on the flagstone patio beside the pool, with the dancers and a small "hot" band all in bathing suits. It continues in the dim-lighted night-club atmosphere of the basement Carriage Ro[illegible] om five to six, switches to the big d[illegible] e Tallyho recreational [illegible] to one and resumes in [illegible] Room from one until three.

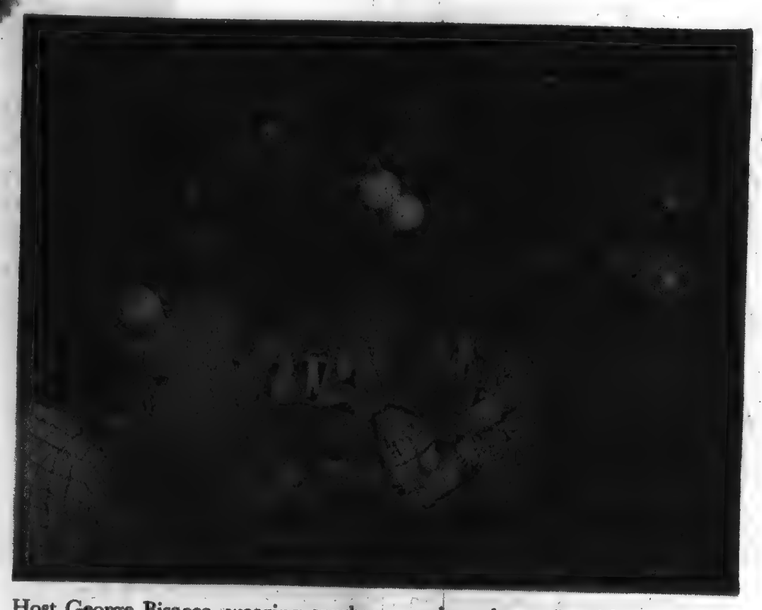
The tail-[illegible] ar collar days are long gone at [illegible] er. Nobody dresses formally now, [illegible] n semiformally. A man wearing a necktie is suspected of snobbishness, and anyone in a jacket is presumed to be suffering from a chill. An improper Bostonian named Murphy told me, "Here you can throw away not only your necktie but your shirt and shoes too." During square dances, many vacationers skip around barefoot in the sole-slapping hillbilly tradition. Rows of shoes are parked on the side lines.

In a skit, an Eastover "cave man" captures two working girls on vacation.

The weekly schedule includes hours of free instruction for all who want to learn square dancing, ballroom dancing, archery, golf, tennis, swimming and diving.

Those who really want rest can sleep until 10:45, eat a quick breakfast at the [illegible] terrace, sun bathe at the poo[illegible] tranquil hour of p[illegible] ed library from 7:30 to 8:3[illegible] d go to bed at 9:00.

Eastover's most lethargic guest—or so she seem[illegible] ndary as "the la[illegible] ." A truly shapely [illegible] e flowed languidly [illegible] at hel[illegible] e of everyone around her. She explain[illegible] in a stagy New York accent that she was taking a vacation from the horrid rush of life in Manhattan. Naturally, her performance attracted attention from men as well as women. Thus she met a slow-moving young blond giant from Tennessee. When last seen, they were disappearing together, not so slowly. Not every girl gets her man as easily as the lazy beauty did. Their most audible complaint is "Where are the boys?" One apprehensive male likened it to the cry of a female wolf pack.



Host George Bisacca, wearing sombrero and cowboy suit, with guests during one of the weekly masquerade balls at Eastover, his Lenox, Mass., resort.

As a host who tries to provide his guests with every reasonable pleasure, George Bisacca faces the perennial problem of the young female frankly.

At the campfire fun sessions which climax evening hayrides, he speaks up, "Ladies, this isn't going to make you happy—the fact is that Eastover can guarantee you almost everything but a man. But keep your eyes open. Thar's men in them thar hills."

And it is literally true. During the great manpower shortages of July and August, some local stalwarts crash the gate for dances. Eastover has an eight-foot-high, iron picket fence, manned by two night watchmen, and its pastoral flanks are guarded by barbed wire. Even so, the local lads invade the "girl preserve" via the woods, the bypaths and by wading through a brook. If they're spotted they are asked to leave. On weekends, young men from the urban areas swarm up from wherever they have been toiling, and young womanhood glows with pleasure.

Still, George Bisacca, and Ruth, his blond wife and business helpmate, feel sympathy for the young huntresses who hate to spend their vacationtime in what George termed "a manless paradise." A frustrated sylph who departed in midweek summed up the case. "Paradise without men?" she said. "It can't be."

Until they learned that nearly all resorts lack men, the Bisaccas wondered whether Eastover suffered from a social blight. Now Ruth says, "I think the answer is simple. The boys spend their money right through the year, dating the girls, while the girls save every cent they can for a big vacation splurge. So they have money to go places, and the boys don't."

George is working on the theory that to attract men, you have to offer what they want. "What they want on vacation," he explains, "is to do something they can't do at home. The boy-meets-girl routine can go on anywhere. Men on vacation want to shoot, fish, play tennis—that sort of thing." So George is emphasizing such largely masculine sports as skeet shooting.

"George is a recreational genius," says Ray Glasscock, a Yale University sociologist who is George's summertime promotion director. "Who else would think of arranging for a gal to get her man with a shotgun?"

Another of George's prize schemes for promoting "boy-meets-girl" is his seasonal membership plan. For a modest fee, thirty presentable young men of the vicinity use Eastover as a country club. They golf, play tennis, swim, eat and dance. George, with shrewd psychology, has one rigid rule: They must come stag. If they wish feminine companionship, they date Eastover girl guests. With a full moon rising over October Mountain, it works like magic.

George Bisacca has come a long way since he took fares as a boy on a running-board trolley in his home town, Bridgeport, Connecticut. He turned to the resort business nine years ago as an escape from office boredom. Until then, he owned an auto agency, a tire firm and a string of gasoline stations in Stamford, Connecticut.

During World War II, George, who was overage, enlisted as a private in the state guard or stand-by militia. He arrived at a summer training camp on a motorcycle, flying a Confederate flag as an expression of his individualism. He didn't make the best soldier in the world, even on a stand-by basis. He had a habit of dropping things. This disgusted his captain, who finally told a seventeen-year-old private, "Private Shaw, follow this blankety-blank Private Bisacca, and whatever he drops, you pick up." George believes he was the only private who had his own orderly.

To prove to himself that war is not all hell and picking up afterward, George went on a summer outing to Ted Hilton's famous Connecticut resort. It was there that he decided that he, too, should be a resort operator. "There were four hundred and seventy-five girls and about twenty-five of us old men and Four-F's there," he recalls. "I had the grandest time of my life. Never could forget it. It left me bored with any automotive business."

At a gasoline distributors' [illegible] later on, he mentioned his [illegible] the resort field. A distributor [illegible] Berkshire playground [illegible] help him. Then they went [illegible] forgetful ways. A week [illegible] George's surprise, he received [illegible] Lenox real-estate man a list of enormous old Berkshire estates which could be had for relatively little money.

He went to Lenox, where some mansions had been standing vacant ever since the 1929 stock-market crash. The real-estate man offered a choice of six. Eastover, which George selected, was a huge brick Georgian mansion flanked by marble-balustraded terraces. It had belonged to the late Harris C. Fahnestock, a multimillionaire New Yorker who did not shrink from listing his profession in Who's Who as "capitalist." As millionaire estates go, Eastover was relatively modest. It contained only thirty-two rooms and stood on a mere 500 acres. After an unsuccessful season as a school it had been closed for seven years. Cobwebs shrouded its windows. Dilapidness crept down its walls [illegible] plumbing, gingerly tested, [illegible] noises.

"The moment I [illegible] that I was going to convert Eastover into a vacation resort," George recalls, "my friends, my relatives and my mother-in-law all told me I was crazy. The bankers thought so too. After all, as they pointed out, what had the auto and tire business [illegible] about running a resort? Yankee bankers in the Berkshires [illegible] especially gloomy—gave me only one chance in a hundred of succeeding."

The pessimism was increased by George's determination to make the luxury mansion a vacation rendezvous not for the well-to-do but for youthful secretaries, clerks and office workers. I kept telling myself that secretaries who made twenty dollars [illegible] back in [illegible] are now making six[illegible] and eighty dollars [illegible] and looking for a [illegible] to spend [illegible] George explains. "But [illegible] have done [illegible] to run Eastover, Geo[illegible] went ahead with his long-shot gam[illegible] make the place appeal to younger [illegible] . He began a rip-out-and-rebuild pr[illegible] of awesome proportions. The form[illegible] lodge became a series of suites accom[illegible] dating two to four persons. A little schoolhouse across the road from Eastover was bought, repainted its original brick red, and converted into guest rooms. So was the upper floor of the two-story carriage house. In addition, George built a guest ranch house, and cottages for honeymooners. "After all," he says, "when we start romances around here we ought to see them through."

From all indications, the sole outdoor pastime of Eastover's original high-society occupants was a sedentary exercise called tallyhoing. The place had no tennis courts, and no pool except an ornamental lily pond. But the carriage house contained a dozen moldering tallyhos, barouches, surreys and wagons. The tallyho has been described as a four-horse pleasure coach built for speed rather than comfort. Riding in it behind four spirited horses required spirited sitting. The pastime enjoyed its widest popularity in the days of rub-on (Continued on Page 94)

Working Girls on a Frolic (Continued from Page 29)

is most triumphant just across the Housatonic River from the former Whitney summit. There, at a handsome old estate called Eastover, a onetime streetcar conductor named George Bisacca plays host every week to 350 young office workers who come as paying guests. George's standing as a party giver in some ways excels that of Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, reigning dowager of the region around 1900. When Mrs. Stokes' son telegraphed from Yale, "Bringing '96 for weekend," meaning his chums of the Class of 1896, she is said to have wired back: "Place already crowded with guests, bring only fifty."

George, on the other hand, has accommodated as many as 679 weekend guests over Labor Day. "When you realize," he says, that this pint-sized palace was built as a 'summer cottage' for a family of five you can see how much I've changed and enlarged it. Of course, with more than a hundred here, they were sleeping everywhere except in tents."

No Eastover guest has been known to complain of boredom. The heavy decorum of the Victorian era went out with the velvet draperies. Now there is dancing to orchestra music nightly until three A.M., swimming at almost any hour in an underwater-lighted pool, and a choice of fifteen daytime sports geared to the customer's energy or lack of it.

Eastover is one place where callusproof devotees of dancing can whirl eight hours a day or night, seven days a week. The fun begins at three P.M. on the flagstone patio beside the pool, with the dancers and a small "hot" band all in bathing suits. It continues in the dim-lighted night-club atmosphere of the basement Carriage Room from five to six, switches to the big dance floor of the Tallyho recreational center from ten to one and resumes in the Carriage Room from one until three.

The tail-coat and hard-collar days are long gone at Eastover. Nobody dresses formally now, even semiformally. A man wearing a necktie is suspected of snobbishness, and anyone in a jacket is presumed to be suffering from a chill. An improper Bostonian named Murphy told me, "Here you can throw away not only your necktie but your shirt and shoes too." During square dances, many vacationers skip around barefoot in the sole-slapping hillbilly tradition. Rows of shoes are parked on the side lines.

In a skit, an Eastover "cave man" captures two working girls on vacation.

The weekly schedule includes hours of free instruction for all who want to learn square dancing, ballroom dancing, archery, golf, tennis, swimming and diving.

Those who really want rest can sleep until 10:45, eat a quick breakfast at the snack bar on the south terrace, sun-bathe at the pool all day, take in a tranquil hour of piano music in the paneled library from 7:30 to 8:30 and go to bed at 9:00.

Eastover's most lethargic guest—or so she seemed—became legendary as "the lazy-moving beauty." A truly shapely creature, she flowed languidly along at half the pace of everyone around her. She explained in a stagy New York accent that she was taking a vacation from the horrid rush of life in Manhattan. Naturally, her performance attracted attention from men as well as women. Thus she met a slow-moving young blond giant from Tennessee. When last seen, they were disappearing together, not so slowly. Not every girl gets her man as easily as the lazy beauty did. Their most audible complaint is "Where are the boys?" One apprehensive male likened it to the cry of a female wolf pack.

Host George Bisacca, wearing sombrero and cowboy suit, with guests during one of the weekly masquerade balls at Eastover, his Lenox, Mass., resort.

As a host who tries to provide his guests with every reasonable pleasure, George Bisacca faces the perennial problem of the young female frankly.

At the campfire fun sessions which climax evening hayrides, he speaks up, "Ladies, this isn't going to make you happy—the fact is that Eastover can guarantee you almost everything but a man. But keep your eyes open. Thar's men in them thar hills."

And it is literally true. During the great manpower shortages of July and August, some local stalwarts crash the gate for dances. Eastover has an eight-foot-high, iron picket fence, manned by two night watchmen, and its pastoral flanks are guarded by barbed wire. Even so, the local lads invade the "girl preserve" via the woods, the bypaths and by wading through a brook. If they're spotted they are asked to leave. On weekends, young men from the urban areas swarm up from wherever they have been toiling, and young womanhood glows with pleasure.

Still, George Bisacca, and Ruth, his blond wife and business helpmate, feel sympathy for the young huntresses who hate to spend their vacationtime in what George termed "a manless paradise." A frustrated sylph who departed in midweek summed up the case. "Paradise without men?" she said. "It can't be."

Until they learned that nearly all resorts lack men, the Bisaccas wondered whether Eastover suffered from a social blight. Now Ruth says, "I think the answer is simple. The boys spend their money right through the year, dating the girls, while the girls save every cent they can for a big vacation splurge. So they have money to go places, and the boys don't."

George is working on the theory that to attract men you have to offer what they want. "What they want on vacation," he explains, "is to do something they can't do at home. The boy-meets-girl routine can go on anywhere. Men on vacation want to shoot, fish, play tennis—that sort of thing." So George is emphasizing such largely masculine sports as skeet shooting.

"George is a recreational genius," says Ray Glasscock, a Yale University sociologist who is George's summertime promotion director. "Who else would think of arranging for a gal to get her man with a shotgun?"

Another of George's prize schemes for promoting "boy-meets-girl" is his seasonal membership plan. For a modest fee, thirty presentable young men of the vicinity use Eastover as a country club. They golf, play tennis, swim, eat and dance. George, with shrewd psychology, has one rigid rule: They must come stag. If they wish feminine companionship, they date Eastover girl guests. With a full moon rising over October Mountain, it works like magic.

George Bisacca has come a long way since he took fares as a boy on a running-board trolley in his home town, Bridgeport, Connecticut. He turned to the resort business nine years ago as an escape from office boredom. Until then, he owned an auto agency, a tire firm and a string of gasoline stations in Stamford, Connecticut.

During World War II, George, who was overage, enlisted as a private in the state guard or stand-by militia. He arrived at a summer training camp on a motorcycle, flying a Confederate flag as an expression of his individualism. He didn't make the best soldier in the world, even on a stand-by basis. He had a habit of dropping things. This disgusted his captain, who finally told a seventeen-year-old private, "Private Shaw, follow this blankety-blank Private Bisacca, and whatever he drops, you pick up." George believes he was the only private who had his own orderly.

To prove to himself that war is not all hell and picking up afterward, George went on a summer outing to Ted Hilton's famous Connecticut resort. It was there that he decided that he, too, should be a resort operator. "There were four hundred and seventy-five girls and about twenty-five of us old men and Four-F's there," he recalls. "I had the grandest time of my life. Never could forget it. It left me bored with my automotive business."

At a gasoline distributors' convention later on, he mentioned his wish to go into the resort field. A distributor from the Berkshire playground region swore to help him. Then they went their separate forgetful ways. A week afterward, to George's surprise, he received from a Lenox real-estate man a list of enormous old Berkshire estates which could be had for relatively little money.

He went to Lenox, where some mansions had been standing vacant ever since the 1929 stock-market crash. The real-estate man offered a choice of six. Eastover, which George selected, was a red-brick Georgian mansion flanked by marble-balustraded terraces. It had belonged to the late Harris C. Fahnestock, a multi-millionaire New Yorker who did not shrink from listing his profession in Who's Who as "capitalist." As millionaire estates go, Eastover was relatively modest. It contained only thirty-five rooms and stood on a mere 500 acres. After an unsuccessful season as a school, it had been closed for seven years. Cobwebs shrouded its windows. Dampness crept down its walls. Venerable plumbing, gingerly tested, emitted weird noises.

"The moment I announced that I was going to convert Eastover into a vacation resort," George recalls, "my friends, my relatives and my mother-in-law all told me I was crazy. The bankers thought so too. After all, as they pointed out, what had the auto and tire business taught me about running a resort? Two old-time Yankee bankers in the Berkshires were especially gloomy—gave me only one chance in a hundred of succeeding."

The pessimism was increased by George's determination to make the luxury mansion a vacation rendezvous not for the well-to-do but for youthful secretaries, clerks and office workers. "I kept telling myself that secretaries who made twenty dollars a week back in 1940 were now making sixty and eighty dollars and looking for a place to spend it," George explains. "But I did have doubts."

Undaunted by the dim, grim look of Eastover, George went ahead with his long-shot gamble to make the place appeal to younger folks. He began a rip-out-and-rebuild program of awesome proportions. The former lodge became a series of suites accommodating two to four persons. A little schoolhouse across the road from Eastover was bought, repainted its original brick red and converted into guest rooms. So was the upper floor of the two-story carriage house. In addition, George built a guest ranch house, and cottages for honeymooners. "After all," he says, "when we start romances around here we ought to see them through."

From all indications, the sole outdoor pastime of Eastover's original high-society occupants was a sedentary exercise called tallyhoing. The place had no tennis courts, and no pool except an ornamental lily pond. But the carriage house contained a dozen moldering tallyhos, barouches, surreys and wagons. The tallyho has been described as a four-horse pleasure coach built for speed rather than comfort. Riding in it behind four spirited horses required spirited sitting. The pastime enjoyed its widest popularity in the days of rub-on (Continued on Page 94)

(Continued from Page 92) patent liniments, good for the sore spots of "horse or human."

Tallyhoing millionaires are now extinct around Lenox, but the gamest aspect of their sport continues at Eastover. Every Tuesday night George marshals all horse-drawn vehicles, including some Fahnestock relics, for a hayride down a rocky mountain road. If he is short of old-fashioned horsepower, he uses farm tractors to haul the wagons.

To provide an assortment of recreations, George did a face-lifting job over much of the estate. The excavations alone ran to several million cubic feet. Below the east terrace, facing majestic October Mountain, there stood three formal gardens. Or so they said. All George found was a tangle of rosebushes. In place of the gardens went a seventy-foot outdoor pool, a $115,000 year-round indoor pool, and clay tennis courts. George also planted a sizable pine grove for barbecues, which include unlimited helpings of broiled lobsters. He built a softball diamond, a ski tow, an abbreviated golf course, a stable for twenty riding horses and a mile-long canoeing stream.

Construction of the canoe stream was epic in itself. George's wife and business associate, Ruth, who lived through it and audited the bills, tells the story best:

"First, George bought eighty acres just to get a little corner of a brook that ran down into the Housatonic River. But the brook ran the wrong way. So he got official permission to reverse its course, and put a bulldozer to work. The bulldozer bogged down. George got another machine, made especially to dig in swampy ground. That got stuck too. Next he took to using dynamite. He blasted away until the brook quit running north and began running south. I think he had it terrified. Then he invested nearly two thousand dollars in a fleet of aluminum canoes. Now he plans to build a large lake. The lake will be twelve feet above the level of the stream, so he is going to pump water up into the lake. Nothing stops him."

During his first two years at Eastover, George lost $30,000. One hot summer before water was piped from the Lenox municipal works, the local wells went dry. The staff had to haul every drop from Lenox by truck and farm wagon. Guests were rationed like lifeboat survivors. In the third season the water flowed freely and the financial tide also turned. George sold his three businesses in Stamford, one after another, and concentrated upon what he calls "my true love." He plays host from noon until past midnight with the energy of a circus ringmaster.

Currently, his income compares comfortably with many a corporation president's pay. It enables him to live in a new ranch-type home with his wife and two teen-age daughters, and, during off-seasons, take the kind of travel vacations that he prefers. During the summer season, winter holiday weekends and skiing time, however, George and Ruth work hard. Presiding over the weekly masquerade ball, George bursts onstage in a sombrero, chaps and cowboy boots as the Frisco Kid. During Lenox Old-Fashioned Days, a community event of which he is chief organizer, he canters along on horseback as the "big chief," stripped to the waist and wearing a huge Indian feather bonnet.

When not playing master of ceremonies, George is a ready participant in stunts and talent programs. He is constantly organizing skits, involving the re-enactment of the "great Lenox bank robbery of 1870," the capture of horse thieves or the lethal performance of a Civil War bugler who returned home to find his wife mothering an infant by another man. The bugler killed his wife, the other man and himself. His ghostly trumpeting is said to be heard above October Mountain to this day.

George has a special interest in the Civil War period which finds prankish expression at times. He solemnly announces that "the orchestra will now play the national anthem." The crowd rises. The musicians, mostly Southerners, burst into Dixie.

Southern partisanship is manifest in other ways in this ancient stronghold of rock-ribbed Unionism. An affable visitor named Sherman Grant met short shrift. One of George's Sunday-afternoon stunts involves a kangaroo court for "spies" who are supposed to fall backward into the lily pool when the firing squad shoots blanks. Sherman Grant was convicted of being a Federal spy on "the only Confederate soil in Massachusetts." He refused a blindfold, but accepted a cigarette before doing a graceful backward flip into the pool.

George is supported in his Confederate sympathies by staff members. Nearly all the summertime staff consists of college boys and girls, some of whom return year after year. More than half come from the South. The pronounced you-all accent at Eastover goes back to a pioneer staffer, Leroy (Sonny) Martin, son of a Raleigh, North Carolina, banker. George met Sonny, a genial giant, years ago at another resort. Sonny worked at Eastover while earning two degrees, and is now taking a Ph.D. in applied mathematics at Harvard. Years back, he presented George with a Confederate flag which flies at Eastover under The Stars and Stripes.

The staffers' status completes the social revolution in the old millionaire's mansion, for they enjoy full guest privileges while not on duty. You may dance with the pretty collegian chambermaid who tidied your room. Or you may play tennis with the lanky lad who served your breakfast—and get licked.

During the summer rush, Eastover operates with 110 helpers, a staffer for every three guests. Meals are served at almost the instant that you sit down in the big dining room. Elsewhere, self-service is a general rule. You help yourself to soft drinks, settling up on the honor system when you leave. You get your own sports equipment from the lockers, paying only if you rent riding horses from the stable concessionaire. Otherwise the summer rates, ranging from $71.75 a week for dormitory accommodations to $99.75 for double cottage rooms, are all-inclusive. Due to the volume of its patronage, Eastover currently grosses about $500,000 a year.

The guests come largely from the Greater New York area, 135 miles by super-highway, or from the vicinity of Boston. To each gathering of new arrivals, George gives a little spiel on the splendors of the Berkshires' millionaire past. With the democratic fervor of his streetcar-conductor days, he tells how Andrew Carnegie, pocketing $20,000,000 a year before there were any income taxes, broke a steel-mill strike with private detectives rather than pay his workers seven dollars a week. Then, compressing neatly, as befits [illegible] millionaire's mansion, he adds: "However, the millionaires both this country. [illegible] are part of a by[illegible], the size of which we shall never see again."

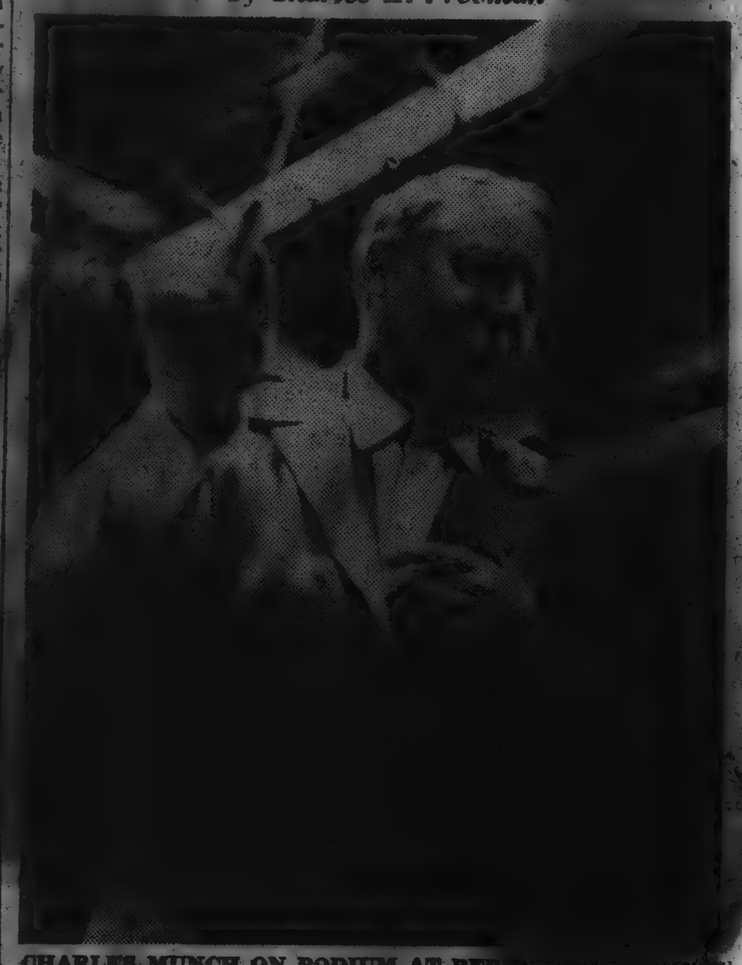
At that climax, one of George's staff hecklers is likely to call out irreverently, "Why, George, you're climbing into the millionaire bracket yourself. . . . Folks, take a free look at the last surviving moneybags in the Berkshires."

THE END

Daily News, Tarrytown, N. Y., Friday, July 6, 1956

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman



CHARLES MUNCH ON PODIUM AT BER[illegible]

TANGLEWOOD AND JACOBS PILLOW

This being the week when the crowds move towards the major music and dance festivals we bring you news of the programs that will enchant disciples (and they are legion) of the events in the Berkshires.

Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch. For the seventeenth summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

* * * *

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening (July 4) with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 6,) Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening (July 7) concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martin[illegible] and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon (July 8) a concert of [illegible] Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood, and Mr. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11-13-14-15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 P.M., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 P.M.

* * * *

AND THE DANCE:

Opened with a Thursday matinee and playing both matinees and evenings Friday and Saturday, July 5-6-7, the next program at Jacob's Pillow near Lee, Mass., will feature the debut of the Dokoudovsky-Stroganova Ballet in world premieres of "Schumann's 'Spring' Symphony" (Mats. only) and "The Abyss" (Alexandre Tcherepnine) (Eves.) Ruth St. Denis, commemorating the 50th anniversary of her first concert appearances, will dance four of her historic solos including "Cobra" and "Yogi", first seen in 1906. And Myra Kinch has announced "Sad Self Hereafter", newest addition to her collection of satires, plus three solos and "Giselle's Revenge", a contemporary spoof on the foibles of romantic ballet, after the manner of Chas. Addams, the cartoonist. In the latter work William Milie will dance Albrecht, and Ruth Alexander will contribute to the zany proceedings as Wili.

(Continued from Page 92)

patent liniments, good for the sore spots of "horse or human."

Tallyhoing millionaires are now extinct around Lenox, but the gamest aspect of their sport continues at Eastover. Every Tuesday night George marshals all horse-drawn vehicles, including some Fahnestock relics, for a hayride down a rocky mountain road. If he is short of old-fashioned horsepower, he uses farm tractors to haul the wagons.

To provide an assortment of recreations, George did a face-lifting job over much of the estate. The excavations alone ran to several million cubic feet. Below the east terrace, facing majestic October Mountain, there stood three formal gardens. Or so they said. All George found was a tangle of rosebushes. In place of the gardens went a seventy-foot outdoor pool, a $115,000 year-round indoor pool, and clay tennis courts. George also planted a sizable pine grove for barbecues, which include unlimited helpings of broiled lobsters. He built a softball diamond, a ski tow, an abbreviated golf course, a stable for twenty riding horses and a mile-long canoeing stream.

Construction of the canoe stream was epic in itself. George's wife and business associate, Ruth, who lived through it and audited the bills, tells the story best:

"First, George bought eighty acres just to get a little corner of a brook that ran down into the Housatonic River. But the brook ran the wrong way. So he got official permission to reverse its course, and put a bulldozer to work. The bulldozer bogged down. George got another machine, made especially to dig in swampy ground. That got stuck too. Next he took to using dynamite. He blasted away until the brook quit running north and began running south. I think he had it terrified. Then he invested nearly two thousand dollars in a fleet of aluminum canoes. Now he plans to build a large lake. The lake will be twelve feet above the level of the stream, so he is going to pump water up into the lake. Nothing stops him."

During his first two years at Eastover, George lost $30,000. One hot summer before water was piped from the Lenox municipal works, the local wells went dry. The staff had to haul every drop from Lenox by truck and farm wagon. Guests were rationed like lifeboat survivors. In the third season the water flowed freely and the financial tide also turned. George sold his three businesses in Stamford, one after another, and concentrated upon what he calls "my true love." He plays host from noon until past midnight with the energy of a circus ringmaster.

Currently, his income compares comfortably with many a corporation president's pay. It enables him to live in a new ranch-type home with his wife and two teen-age daughters, and, during off-seasons, take the kind of travel vacations that he prefers. During the summer season, winter holiday weekends and skiing time, however, George and Ruth work hard. Presiding over the weekly masquerade ball, George bursts onstage in a sombrero, chaps and cowboy boots as the Frisco Kid. During Lenox Old-Fashioned Days, a community event of which he is chief organizer, he canters along on horseback as the "big chief," stripped to the waist and wearing a huge Indian feather bonnet.

When not playing master of ceremonies, George is a ready participant in stunts and talent programs. He is constantly organizing skits, involving the re-enactment of the "great Lenox bank robbery of 1870," the capture of horse thieves or the lethal performance of a Civil War bugler who returned home to find his wife mothering an infant by another man. The bugler killed his wife, the other man and himself. His ghostly trumpeting is said to be heard above October Mountain to this day.

George has a special interest in the Civil War period which finds prankish expression at times. He solemnly announces that "the orchestra will now play the national anthem." The crowd rises. The musicians, mostly Southerners, burst into Dixie.

Southern partisanship is manifest in other ways in this ancient stronghold of rock-ribbed Unionism. An affable visitor named Sherman Grant met short shrift. One of George's Sunday-afternoon stunts involves a kangaroo court for "spies" who are supposed to fall backward into the lily pool when the firing squad shoots blanks. Sherman Grant was convicted of being a Federal spy on "the only Confederate soil in Massachusetts." He refused a blindfold, but accepted a cigarette before doing a graceful backward flip into the pool.

George is supported in his Confederate sympathies by staff members. Nearly all the summertime staff consists of college boys and girls, some of whom return year after year. More than half come from the South. The pronounced you-all accent at Eastover goes back to a pioneer staffer, Leroy (Sonny) Martin, son of a Raleigh, North Carolina, banker. George met Sonny, a genial giant, years ago at another resort. Sonny worked at Eastover while earning two degrees, and is now taking a Ph.D. in applied mathematics at Harvard. Years back, he presented George with a Confederate flag which flies at Eastover under The Stars and Stripes.

The staffers' status completes the social revolution in the old millionaire's mansion, for they enjoy full guest privileges while not on duty. You may dance with the pretty collegian chambermaid who tidied your room. Or you may play tennis with the lanky lad who served your breakfast—and get licked.

During the summer rush, Eastover operates with 110 helpers, a staffer for every three guests. Meals are served at almost the instant that you sit down in the big dining room. Elsewhere, self-service is a general rule. You help yourself to soft drinks, settling up on the honor system when you leave. You get your own sports equipment from the lockers, paying only if you rent riding horses from the stable concessionaire. Otherwise the summer rates, ranging from $71.75 a week for dormitory accommodations to $99.75 for double cottage rooms, are all-inclusive. Due to the volume of its patronage, Eastover currently grosses about $500,000 a year.

The guests come largely from the Greater New York area, 135 miles by super-highway, or from the vicinity of Boston. To each gathering of new arrivals, George gives a little spiel on the splendors of the Berkshires' millionaire past. With the democratic fervor of his streetcar-conductor days, he tells how Andrew Carnegie, pocketing $20,000,000 a year before there were any income taxes, broke a steel-mill strike with private detectives rather than pay his workers seven dollars a week. Then, compromising neatly, as befits the owner of a millionaire's mansion, he adds: "However, those millionaires built this country. Now they are part of a bygone era, the like of which we shall never see again."

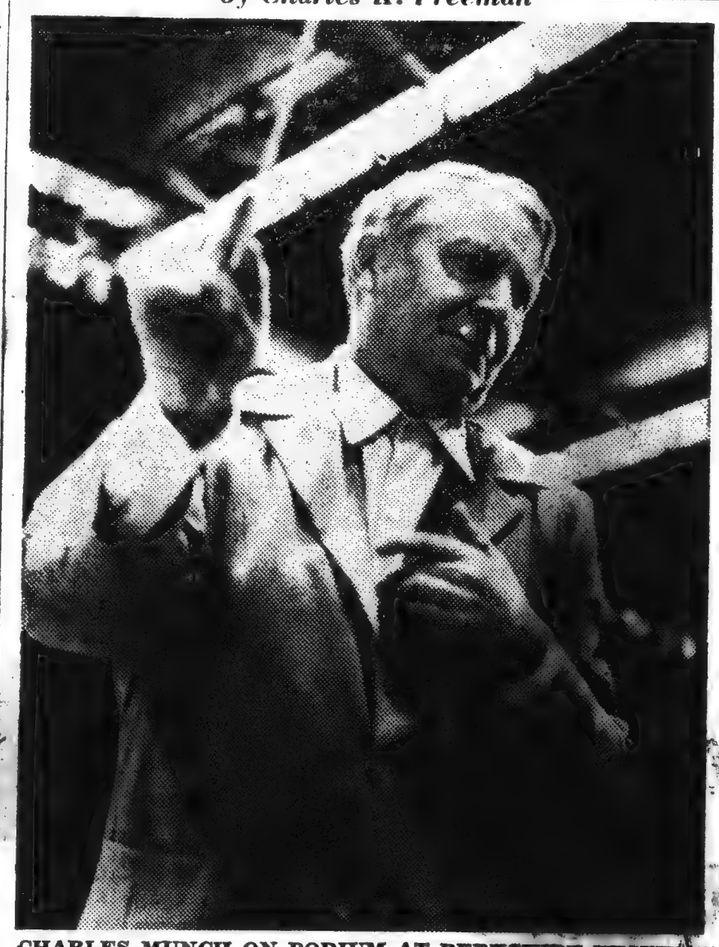
At that climax, one of George's staff hecklers is likely to call out irreverently, "Why, George, you're climbing into the millionaire bracket yourself. . . . Folks, take a free look at the sole surviving moneybags in the Berkshires."

THE END

Daily News, Tarrytown, N. Y., Friday, July 6, 1956

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman



CHARLES MUNCH ON PODIUM AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

TANGLEWOOD AND JACOBS PILLOW

This being the week when the crowds move towards the major music and dance festivals we bring you news of the programs that will enchant disciples (and they are legion) of the events in the Berkshires.

Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch. For the seventeenth summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

* * * *

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening (July 4) with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 6,) Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening (July 7) concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martin and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon (July 8) a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood, and Mr. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11-13-14-15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 P.M., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 P.M.

* * * *

AND THE DANCE:

Opened with a Thursday matinee and playing both matinees and evenings Friday and Saturday, July 5-6-7, the next program at Jacob's Pillow near Lee, Mass., will feature the debut of the Dokoudovsky-Stroganova Ballet in world premieres of "Schumann's 'Spring' Symphony" (Mats. only) and "The Abyss" (Alexandre Teherepnine) (Eves.) Ruth St. Denis, commemorating the 50th anniversary of her first concert appearances, will dance four of her historic solos including "Cobra" and "Yogi", first seen in 1906. And Myra Kinch has announced "Sad Self Hereafter", newest addition to her collection of satires, plus three solos and "Giselle's Revenge", a contemporary spoof on the foibles of romantic ballet, after the manner of Chas. Addams, the cartoonist. In the latter work William Milie will dance Albrecht, and Ruth Alexander will contribute to the zany proceedings as Wili.

June [illegible]-21 programs, reviews, listi cue

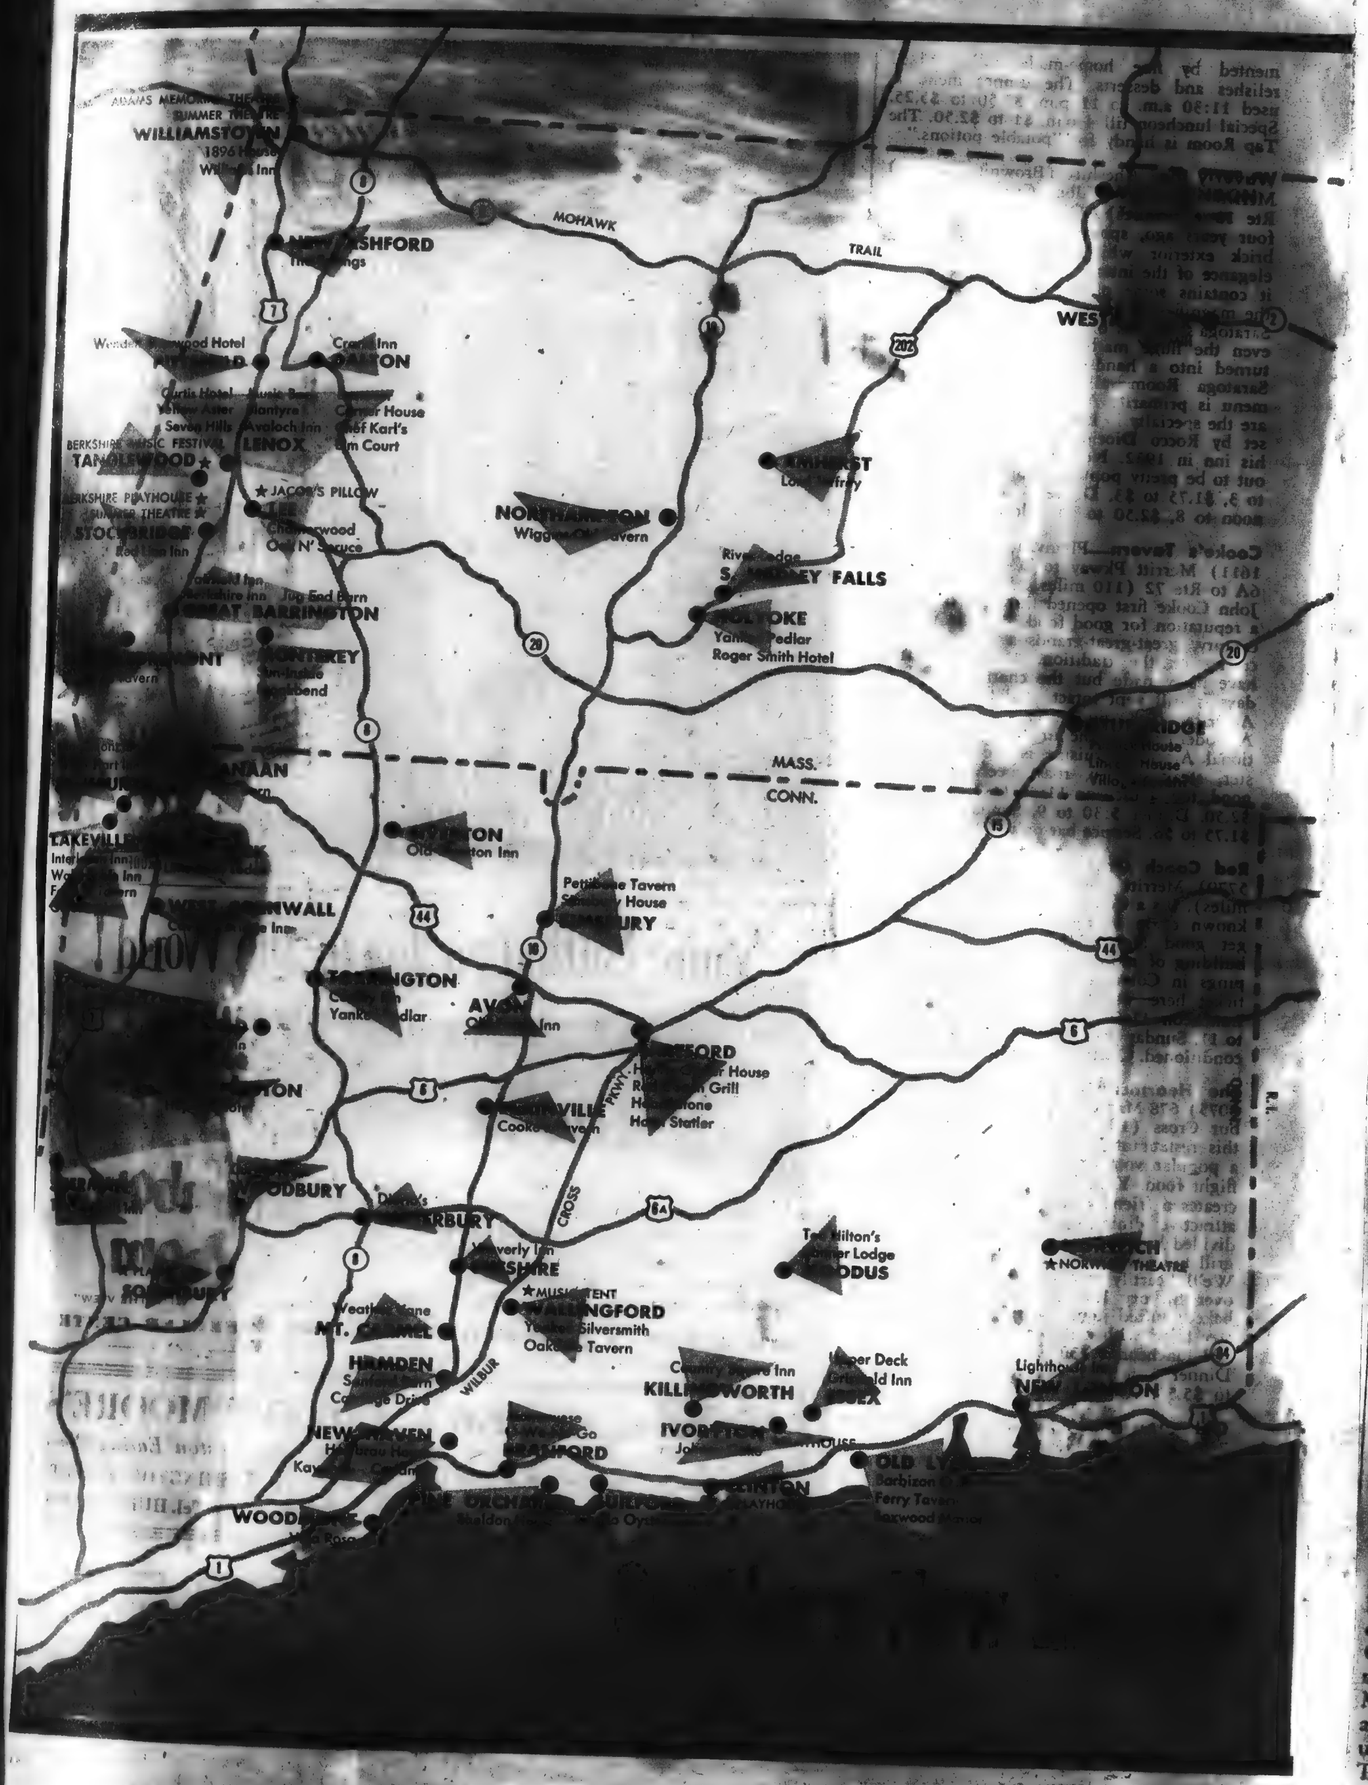
m



THE BERKSHIRES

Within recent years, the Berkshires (less than three hours from the city via the Taconic State Parkway) have become a favored vacation area for innumerable New Yorkers.

These rolling hills of Western Massachusetts constitute an ideal playground, offering sports, scenery, and culture, too. From Ashley Falls to Williamstown, the sports-minded visitor can swim, fish, sail, play golf, (38 courses in this area). These knowledgeable knolls are also alive with music, art, dance, and theatre.

Number-one draw is, of course, the Music Festival at Tanglewood. On this beautiful, 200-acre estate near Lenox, the Boston Symphony, under the baton of Charles Munch, will again offer a season of music, July 4th to August 12th. Soloists include Rudolf Serkin, Benny Goodman, and Francescatti.

The story is by now a so well-known are musical events of the from Tanglewood Music Mountain, on a grassy hillside surrounded by 115 acres of forest. Music Mountain has the intimate character of the early days of Tanglewood. Here the Fine Arts Quartet offers Mozart, Brahms, Beethoven in song, [illegible] afternoon concerts and August.

Within walking distance of Tanglewood, the concert-[illegible] Stephanie and Phillip Barber converted a giant wagon shop on a former estate into a permanent home for hot jazz. The youthful, bright Barbers also operate the most pleasant, informal Music Inn on the estate. On the jazz music program this summer are sessions by Count Basie and Richard Dyer-Bennet. In Lenox, the Pro Musica Antiqua will again offer, in August, their distinguished concerts of medieval, Renaissance and Baroque music. Also, the Berkshire Folk Music Festival and Workshop will feature weekly hoedowns and hollers, plus concerts of guitar music, folk and classical.

Jacob's Pillow is to dance what Tanglewood is to music. Near Lee, it is the most important of our summer dance institutions. From June 29th to September 1st, the dance roster will include Melissa Hayden, Geoffrey Holder, Mia

(Continued on page 35)

SOUTHERN NEW ENGLAND COUNTRY DINING (Cont.)

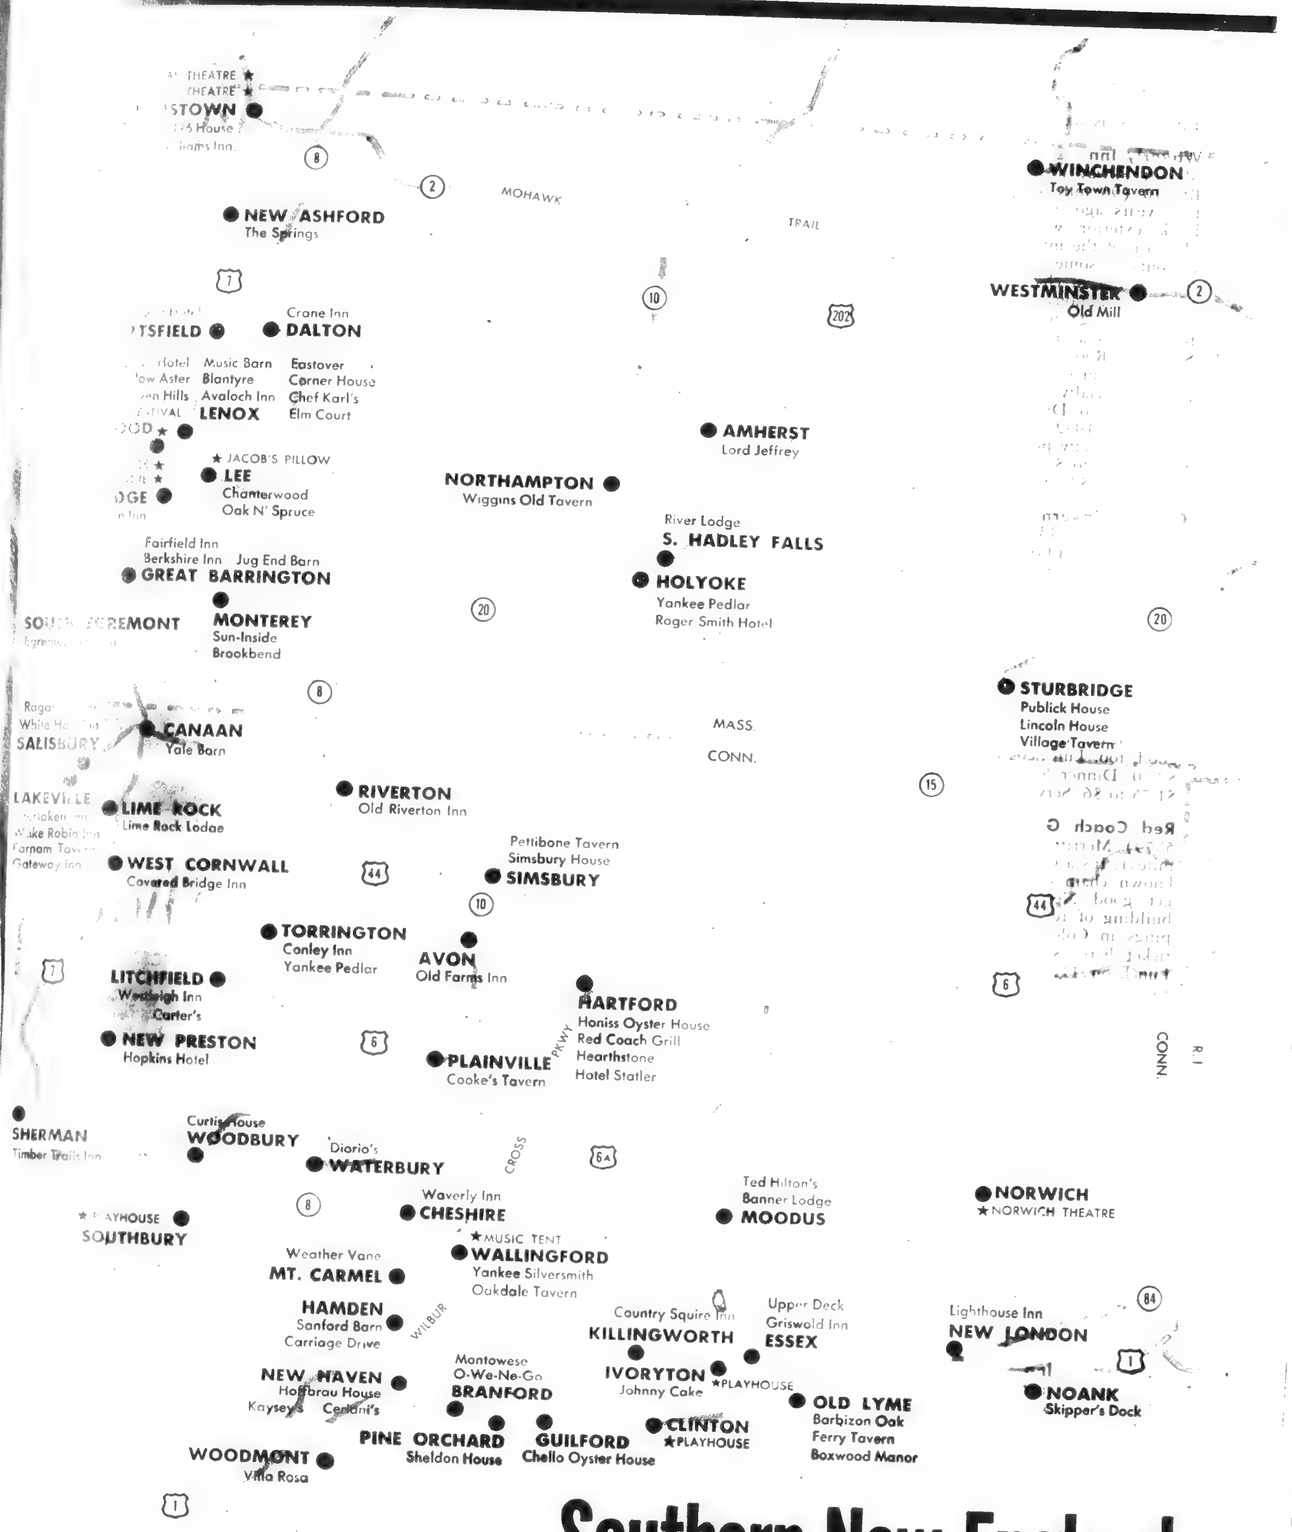
[illegible] Leon Danielian, Ruth St. Denis. Top event will be the eastern debut of the San Francisco Ballet at Jacob's Pillow in July. Two barn showcases, offering weekly drama will be the white-frame Berkshire Playhouse, one of the East's most handsome, at Stockbridge, and the new Summer Theatre in Williamstown. Both open in late June.

Top art attraction is the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute at Williamstown. This excellent, Vermont-marble, classic-styled museum, opened last summer, is filled with the Clark's own art, which includes top samples of Goya, Degas, Renoir, Turner, and Sargent. Admission is free. Gallery is closed Mondays. Visit, too, the Shaker Museum at Old Chatham, New York, a few minutes drive from the Berkshires proper. The 7,000 Shaker items here prove that early America produced some striking modern designs long before Paul Wiswell Frankl or Charles Eames.

For scenery, drive to the Bash Bish Falls in Taconic State Park, a wild and unspoiled spot of exceptional beauty. Then drive to the top of Mount Greylock (3491 feet), and from there view [illegible] Catskills, and [illegible] Vermont's [illegible]

[illegible] fish. Go to the Berkshire Trout Farm near Sheffield. It's [illegible] half mile of stream stocked with sands of brook, brown and rainbow trout. Daily [illegible] season, and no license is required. Fish for trout or [illegible] Berkshires here.

cue



Southern New England

THE BERKSHIRES

WITHIN recent years, the Berkshires (less than three hours from the city via the Taconic State Parkway) have become a favored vacation area for innumerable New Yorkers.

These rolling hills of Western Massachusetts constitute an ideal playground, offering sports, scenery, and culture, too. From Ashley Falls to Williamstown, the sports-minded visitor can swim, fish, sail, play golf (18 courses in this area). These knowledgeable knolls are also alive with music, art, dance, and theatre.

Number-one draw is, of course, the Music Festival at Tanglewood. On this beautiful, 200-acre estate near Lenox, the Boston Symphony, under the baton of Charles Munch, will again offer a season of music, July 4th to August 12th. Soloists include Rudolf Serkin, Benny Goodman, and Zino Francescatti.

The Tanglewood story is by now a [illegible] one. Not so well-known are [illegible] of the other musical events of the [illegible] Thirty miles from Tanglewood near Falls Village is Music Mountain, on a grassy hilltop surrounded by 115 acres of forest. Music Mountain has the intimate character of the early days of Tanglewood. Here the Berkshire Quartet offers Mozart, Brahms, and Beethoven in a long, clapboard [illegible] At South Mountain, near Pittsfield, [illegible] Saturday afternoon concerts are held during July and August in a remodeled hillside church. The chamber music concerts are a gift of the late Elizabeth Coolidge.

Within walking distance of Tanglewood, the concerti become more gutty. Stephanie and Phillip Barber have converted a giant wagonbarn on a handsome estate into a permanent music hall for jazz. The youthful, bright Barbers also operate the most pleasant, informal Music Inn on the estate. On the jazz-folk music program this summer are sessions by Count Basie and Richard Dyer-Bennet. In Lenox, the Pro Musica Antiqua will again offer, in August, their distinguished concerts of medieval, Renaissance, and Baroque music. Also, the Berkshire Folk Music Festival and Workshop will feature weekly hoedowns and hollers, plus concerts of guitar music, folk and classical.

Jacob's Pillow is to dance what Tanglewood is to music. Near Lee, it is the most important of our summer dance institutions. From June 29th to September 1st, the dance roster will include Melissa Hayden, Geoffrey Holder, Mia

(Continued on page 35)

SOUTHERN NEW ENGLAND COUNTRY DINING (Cont.)

Slavenska, Leon Danielian, Ruth St. Denis. Top event will be the eastern début of the San Francisco Ballet at Jacob's Pillow in July. Two barn showcases offering weekly drama will be the white-frame Berkshire Playhouse, one of the East's most handsome, in Stockbridge, and the new Summer Theatre in Williamstown. Both open in late June.

Top art attraction is the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute at Williamstown. This excellent, Vermont-marble, classic-styled museum opened last summer, is filled with the Clarks' own art, which includes top samples of Goya, Degas, Renoir, Turner, and Homer. Admission is free. Gallery is closed Mondays. Visit, too, the Shaker Museum at Old Chatham, New York, a few minutes drive from the Berkshires proper. The 7,000 Shaker items here prove that America produced some striking 'modern' designs long before Paul Widdicomb or Charles Eames.

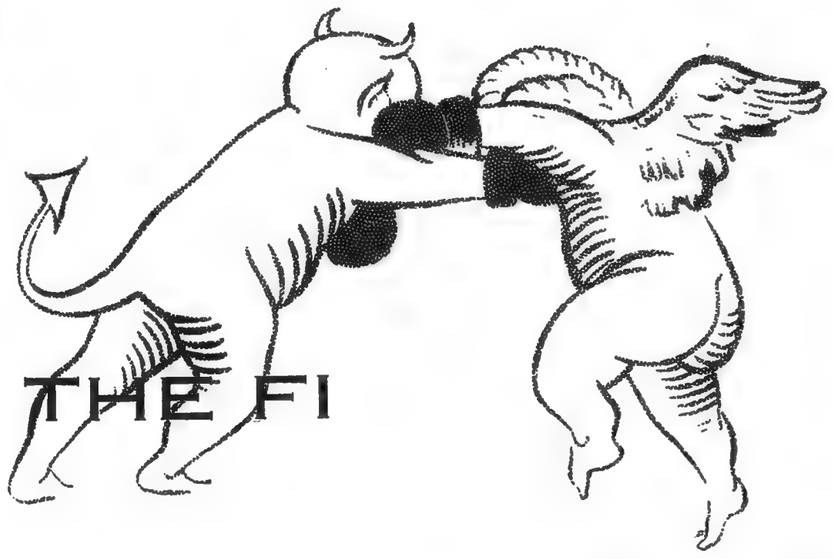
For scenery, drive to the Bash Bish Forest and its 100 foot falls. It's an unspoiled spot of exceptional beauty. Or drive to the top of Mount Greylock (3491 feet), and from there view New York's Catskills and Adirondacks as well as Vermont's Green Mountains.

Perhaps you'd just like to float and fish. Go to the Berkshire Trout Farm near Sheffield. It's a 14-acre lake and a half mile of stream stocked with thousands of brook, brown, and rainbow trout. Daily fee: $4.50. There is no season, and no license is necessary. Rainbow trout or Serkin playing Mozart, the Berkshires have it.

POP GOES THE FIEDLER

Continued from page 60

sembles across the nation, including the Boston Symphony itself. "A Strauss waltz", he will tell you, "is as good a thing of its kind as a Beethoven symphony. It's nice to eat a good chunk of beef, but you want a slice of good dessert too." And the consummation devoutly to be wished [illegible] dessert: "I'm very particular



THE HI AND THE FI

HI-FI MUSIC salutes the Boston Symphony Orchestra for its unparalleled services to music during its first 75 years — for its superb performances in its concerts and on recordings; for the inspiration it has given constantly to every orchestra in the United States; for the tours it has made through the United States and Europe, bringing the best in symphonic music to new audiences and serving as an American cultural ambassador; for its recognition of contemporary composers throughout its history; for its pioneering in establishing and continuing on an ever-increasing scope the Berkshire Festival and the Berkshire Music Center. May the Boston Symphony Orchestra long continue in the distinguished tradition of its first 75 years.

THE BOSTON Symphony Orchestra was the first permanent symphonic ensemble in the United States. Its organization as an orchestra of full-time musicians devoted to the achievement of ideal performances of great symphonic music, independent of box-office receipts and privately financed, has been the pattern for all succeeding American orchestras. With a guarantee fund of $1,000,000, banker Henry Lee Higginson established an orchestra modeled after the Vienna Philharmonic, a dream he had cherished since his days as a music student in Vienna in 1860. Quality was Major Higginson's only criterion, plus an unswerving loyalty to musical idealism that persists today among all of America's major orchestras no less than the Boston.

Major Higginson engaged the best musicians he could find and fetched George Henschel from London as conductor, a discerning musician who brought European standards of orchestral music making to America. Each of the 10 succeeding conductors, great musicians all, added something to the sheen and brilliance that is the Boston Orchestra's. Wilhelm Gericke, who followed pioneer Henschel after two years, was the polisher. Arthur Nikish was the poetizer and firebrand. Emil Paur introduced new composers. Gericke's second term refined the now proficient orchestra. Under the great Karl Muck, the scholar of the baton, the Boston Symphony became the byword of musical perfection the world over. A four-year term between Muck's two periods with the orchestra was a holding operation, with Max Fiedler in charge.

Henri Rabaud was for a year the first of the French conductors. Pierre Monteux spent five years trying to rebuild the orchestra in the face of a disastrous strike that resulted in wholesale resignations and left the orchestra a skeleton. A great epoch began with Serge Koussevitzky's appointment in 1924.

Koussevitzky was a titan. The Boston Symphony as we know it today is the repository of his dreams and the product of his work, and its foreward-looking policy toward the music of our time was his doing. In his 25 years in Boston, Koussevitzky brought the orchestra to a tonal richness and opulence and a brilliance of virtuosity practically unequalled among orchestras. The famous French conductor, Charles Munch, succeeded Koussevitzky in 1949, and his leadership has brought a new golden age to the orchestra.

Constant expansion of its activities has been characteristic of the Boston Symphony from its beginning. The first season in 1881 had 24 Saturday evening concerts. Shortly after that the final Friday rehearsals were opened to the public and eventually these too became regular concerts. Now other rehearsals are open. In 1885 began that great New England institution, the "pops" concerts, first called "Promenade Concerts". From those happy days, the Boston Symphony has turned itself regularly every May into the sparkling Boston Pops, and the flowing melodies of light music accompanies the popping of champagne corks in a Symphony Hall with a vintner's license. Many conductors have led the Pops. Since 1930 its conductor has been Arthur Fiedler, who was responsible for another expansion, the free concerts given since 1929 on the Esplanade in July and August.

The Boston Symphony has carried its music far afield in many ways. In 1952 it made its first European and trans-continental tours. From 1936, when it took over an embryo festival from local residents, the orchestra has played at Lenox, Massachusetts, in the summer, since 1938 on its own beautiful estate of Tanglewood. The Berkshire Music Center, run in conjunction with the festival, was started by Dr. Koussevitzky in 1940, and each year 400 young musicians study there with a distinguished faculty. It was the pioneer recording orchestra, and also pioneered in broadcasting its concerts, having been on the air as early as 1926. It was featured this fall in what was believed to be the first telecast of a complete concert, at the opening of the new auditorium at M.I.T.

The Boston Orchestra is, by any standards, a very big business. From the 26-concert season of 1881, with 60 players and an unusually generous budget of $100,000, the orchestra now has the longest season of any in the world — 46 weeks with 104 playing members plus an additional 30-odd managerial, office, and custodial employees, and a budget that has for some years run well over $1,500,000 annually. It operates a school, the Berkshire Music Center. It is part owner of a radio station. It possesses a vintner's license in Boston for the Pops, and operates a restaurant at Tanglewood. It counts among its possessions such oddments as tractors, necessary for the upkeep of its two Lenox estates, Tanglewood and Wheatleigh. It also owns Symphony Hall in Boston and dispenses more than $130,000 annually in pensions.

IN THIS 75th Anniversary year, the Boston Orchestra will, by present accounts, achieve the legendary 53-week year. The season opened on September 30th for a week of concerts in Boston prior to a tour that went as far South as New Orleans, then north to Detroit and Ann Arbor. The regular season continues until April 28th, with the usual monthly week on the road for concerts in New York, Washington, and Brooklyn. On May 1st, all but a few principals become the Boston Pops and play daily until June 30th. On July 2nd, the chamber music section goes to Tanglewood, while the balance becomes the Esplanade Orchestra, playing daily from July 2–15. The entire orchestra is at Tanglewood from July 16th through August 12th. The Esplanade Orchestra has an additional week, August 13–18. Then they all leave for Europe on August 20th, play in Edinburgh for a week from the 26th, and tour northern Europe (perhaps Russia) until September 30th, exactly 53 weeks after the year opened with a week of rehearsals.

POP GOES THE FIEDLER

Continued from page 60

sembles across the nation, including the Boston Symphony itself. "A Strauss waltz", he will tell you, "is as good a thing of its kind as a Beethoven symphony. It's nice to eat a good chunk of beef, but you want a slice of good dessert too." And the consummation devoutly to be wished

The Man Who Came to Boston

Here Is an Intimate Picture of Charles Munch, Who Is Making New History for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Now in Its 75th Year — By Helen Gauntlett

Acutely aware of the special capacities, technical and coloristic, of every instrument

Above: Attendance at rehearsals is a part of Boston's social activities

Albert Schweitzer and Munch are life-long friends. Eugène Munch was Schweitzer's first organ teacher

CONSIDERABLE surprise greeted the Boston Symphony Orchestra announcement in the spring of 1948 that Charles Munch would take over as Music Director when Serge Koussevitzky retired at the end of his 25th season in 1949. Munch had for some years been regarded as France's greatest conductor, but he was not well known in America, though the astute Virgil Thomson, with unusual perspicacity, had prophesied as early as 1933 that Munch would eventually lead the Bostonians.

According to George Judd, then manager of the orchestra, it was all very simple. "We heard him, we liked him, and we liked what he did with our orchestra, so when Dr. Koussevitzky decided to retire, we hired him." Munch's first appearances in the U. S. had been in 1946–47, when he guest-conducted in Boston, New York, Chicago, and Los Angeles to the kind of critical acclaim rarely heaped on visiting conductors. "A magnetic leader, no egocentric or sensationalist, but a thoroughly-equipped and full-blooded interpreter. This was conducting and, more, it was music . . . [Munch is] a musician singularly keen of ear, sensitive to tonal values, acutely aware of the special capacities, technical and coloristic, of every instrument." Thus Olin Downes in The New York Times described his first concerts, a judgment confirmed by more appearances the following season, and echoed by critics and audiences alike wherever Munch conducted.

To inherit the mantle of that towering figure of modern music, Serge Koussevitzky, was a challenge that perhaps some conductors might have met with imitation, others with an abrupt and complete division of the old and the new. Charles Munch, being a dedicated musician and a highly individualistic one of wide experience, did neither. By the wise edict laid down by Henry Lee Higginson, the orchestra's founder, the music director has total responsibility for all things musical, from programming to guest conductors. However, Munch did not take over the direction of the Berkshire Festival and the Berkshire Music Center until after Koussevitzky's death. Munch's first program duplicated that with which Wilhelm Gericke sembles across the nation, including the Boston Symphony itself. "A Strauss waltz", he will tell you, "is as good a thing of its kind as a Beethoven symphony. It's nice to eat a good chunk of beef, but you want a slice of good dessert too." And the consummation devoutly to be wished is a perfect dessert: "I'm very particular about that."

POP GOES THE FIEDLER

Continued from page 60

Speaking of being particular, Fiedler has especially pleased his home town in [illegible] which that proper had opened Symphony Hall in 1900. It was a resounding success, and in very short order the Boston Symphony was as indisputably Munch's own, as it had been Koussevitzky's for so long.

During his third season in Boston, Munch was ill, and in his four months absence guest conductors took over, with that brilliant martinet of the baton, Ernest Ansermet, in charge for most of that time. Comments on Munch's return in March are revealing: "The instant he began conducting you knew he was back at the head of his orchestra. They played for him as they have not quite played since last October. Boston has been well served by various gentlemen, but Mr. Munch remained the true and admired master of this orchestra. There was a basic passion and sweetness, both in tone and manner of playing, which had been missing all this time." (Cyrus Durgin in the Boston Globe)

In Munch's seven seasons in Boston, he has introduced much new music and many neglected classics, and his always well-balanced programs have included most of the standard repertory. He has been largely responsible for the re-emergence of the music of the great French romantic composer, Hector Berlioz. For this 75th Anniversary season, fifteen new works, eight by American composers, have been commissioned and are being presented. Munch's terms as music director have meant a constant and continuing expansion of the orchestra's activities and of its audience.

In the course of that first and overwhelmingly successful European tour, Munch couducted the Boston Symphony in Strasbourg in what must have been the culmination of a lifetime of music making. The orchestra's first concert, in Paris, was one of the most brilliant occasions of this century; in Brussels they stopped traffic. But Strasbourg was a triumphal homecoming such as is given to few men. Two of his brothers were in the packed hall, and there was about Munch something almost transfigured in the expression upon his face as he led his brilliant Bostonians in a transcendant performance of the Brahms Fourth Symphony. For Charles Munch is an Alsatian whose career began in the Strasbourg of his birth, and his family has long been important to its musical life.

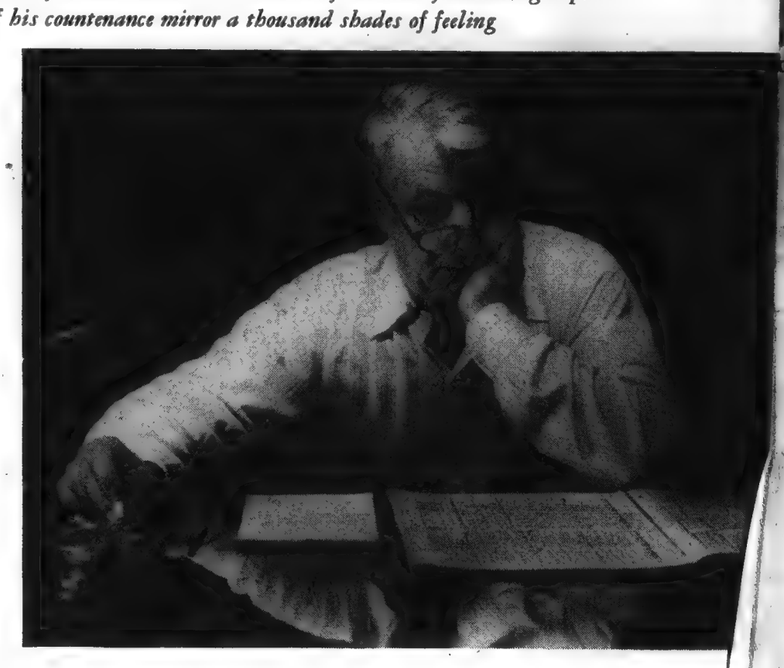
Charles Munch comes from a great tradition, and one quite unknown to America, even among the most familiar of the European-trained conductors. For generations the Munches had been organists and cantors, teachers and church musicians in Alsace. Charles Munch's grandfather was such an organist and teacher, first in Dorlisheim, then in Niederbronn, and Bach's Well Tempered Clavichord was the foundation for the musical education of his children. His sons, Eugène and Ernest, later studied in Berlin at the Musikhochschule, and returned to Alsace to take up their own careers as organists and teachers, Eugène at the Protestant Temple in Mulhouse, and Ernest at the St. William Church in Strasbourg. It was Eugène Munch who was Albert Schweitzer's first organ teacher, and it was Eugène who introduced him to Bach.

Schweitzer was only ten when his life-long association with the Munches began, one that made of him a great musician, and one that has been a profound influence on Charles Munch. From his studies with Eugène Munch, Schweitzer went on to Paris and work with Charles-Marie Widor, and in 1893 he returned to Strasbourg to study theology at the University and to play music with Ernest Munch.

One of Ernest Munch's first steps when he became organist at St. William was to establish a choir "for the presentation of music in the service of worship. Bach's works are written for the service of worship. As his cantatas and passions have no place in our order of service, and yet are essentially and unchangeably ecclesiastical in character, there is nothing to do except to arrange services of worship with the works of Bach, if they are to be rendered in the atmosphere in which they arose." [1] This

[1] This and other quotations from Albert Schweitzer are taken from "Music in the Life of Albert Schweitzer", copyrighted 1951 by Charles R. Joy. Used by permission of Harper & Brothers.

The music he draws from his orchestra is written upon his face, as upon the scores in front of his musicians. This is one of the most fascinating aspects of Munch the conductor. The extreme mobility and the expressive power of his countenance mirror a thousand shades of feeling



POP GOES THE FIEDLER

Continued from page 60

sembles across the nation, including the Boston Symphony itself. "A Strauss waltz", he will tell you, "is as good a thing of its kind as a Beethoven symphony. It's nice to eat a good chunk of beef, but you want a slice of good dessert too." And the consummation devoutly to be wished is a perfect dessert: "I'm very particular was long before the days of the Bach cult, and less than 15 years after a Bach cantata had first been heard in Strasbourg. It was a bold venture that had wide repercussions. And it was never the dull, plowed-through Bach of Sir Henry Wood's youth in England. It was Bach as a living force.

Three conductors of the Boston Symphony: Pierre Monteux, 1919 to 1924; Serge Koussevitzky, 1924 to 1949; and Charles Munch, who took over in 1949

When Charles was born in 1891, the fifth of Ernest Munch's six children, his father was already embarked on his plan to perform not only the few cantatas of Bach already well known, but also, one after the other, all of the Bach vocal works. And from this, and the passionate discussions that went on in the Munch home about details of interpretation, came Dr. Schweitzer's epoch-making book on Bach.

Eugène Munch had been a great organist, and a gifted conductor and teacher and, like his brother, firmly oriented toward France, but it was Ernest Munch who, as an organist and orchestra leader, established a school in Alsace. "It is thanks to him above all else that the Protestant churches have gifted organists and choir leaders. Others continue faithful to his ideal, because of the impetus they received from him. He accomplished the work to which he was called." [1] He was a past master in the art of directing a great vocal ensemble, as are the three Munches now conducting, Charles in Boston, brother Fritz in Strasbourg, and cousin Hans, Eugène's son, in Basel.

This, then, was Charles Munch's background, reflected today in his predilection for choral works, and his great skill in leading them. Bach is his Bible, as it was his father's and his grandfather's, and if there are disagreements with details of his Bach, or Mozart, or Haydn, so there have always been with classical music, and Munch at least has devoted a lifetime to studying them.

The ancient city of Strasbourg, a free city for centuries and enthusiastically French since 1681, was annexed by Germany in 1871 after the Franco-Prussian war. In those years between wars, it was the strategic center of Franco-German artistic rivalry, and the most important conductors and musicians of the time appeared with Ernest Munch's choir and with his orchestra. The best in music was heard — orchestral, instrumental, and choral, old and new. After the performances, the soloists and other participants were always invited to have dinner at the Munch's, where they held passionate discussions, particularly when Widor and Gustave Bret, the founders of the Paris Bach Society, were present. That was when the young Charles learned really to love music.

The technicality that made the very French-feeling Munches temporary German citizens Continued on page 61

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY on RCA Victor Records

Debussy: Blessed Damozel
Berlioz: Summer Nights • Munch LM 1907
Ravel: Bolero, Ma Mère L'Oye • Koussevitzky LM 1012
Menotti: Concerto for Violin and Orchestra
Honneggar: Symphony No. 2 for String Orchestra • Spivakovsky, Munch LM 1868
Khatchaturian: Concerto for Piano and Orchestra • Kapell, Koussevitzky LM 1006
Brahms: Concerto in D • Heifetz, Koussevitzky LCT 1043
Tchaikovsky: Concerto in D • Milstein, Munch LM 1760
Bruch: Concerto No. 1 • Menuhin, Munch
Mendelssohn: Symphony No. 4 • Koussevitzky LM 1797
Brahms: Concerto No. 2 • Rubinstein, Munch LM 1728
Chopin: Concerto No. 2
Saint-Saëns: Concerto No. 4 • Brailowsky, Munch LM 1871
Prokofiev: Concerto No. 2 • Heifetz, Koussevitzky LCT 6
Mozart: Concertos Nos. 12 & 18 • Kraus, Monteux LM 1783
Berlioz: The Damnation of Faust • Munch LM 6114
Ravel: Daphnis and Chloe • Munch LM 1893
R. Strauss: Don Quixote • Munch LM 1781
Berlioz: Harold in Italy, Damnation of Faust (Excerpts) • Koussevitzky LCT 1146
Rachmaninov: Isle of the Dead
Prokofiev: "Classical" Symphony • Koussevitzky LM 1102
Prokofiev: Lieutenant Kije Suite, Romeo and Juliet Ballet Suite No. 2, The Love for Three Oranges • Koussevitzky LCT 1144
Munch Conducts French Music LM 1700
Scriabin: Poème D'Extase
Liszt: Les Préludes • Monteux LM 1775
Stravinsky: Rite of Spring • Monteux LM 1149
Berlioz: Romeo and Juliet • Munch LM 6011
Tchaikovsky: Romeo and Juliet Overture • Koussevitzky LCT 1145
Copland: Salón México, Appalachian Spring • Koussevitzky LCT 1134
Tchaikovsky: Serenade for Strings • Koussevitzky LM 1056
Delibes: Sylvia, Coppélia • Monteux LM 1913
Berlioz: Symphonie Fantastique • Munch LM 1900
Schumann: Symphony No. 1 • Munch LM 1190
Schubert: Symphony No. 2 • Munch
Schubert: Symphony No. 8 • Koussevitzky LM 9032
Sibelius: Symphony No. 2 • Koussevitzky LM 1172
Beethoven: Symphony No. 3 • Koussevitzky LM 1145
Brahms: Symphony No. 3 • Koussevitzky LM 1025
Harris: Symphony No. 3
Hanson: Symphony No. 3 • Koussevitzky LCT 1153
Brahms: Symphony No. 4 • Munch LM 1086
Tchaikovsky: Symphony No. 4 • Koussevitzky LM 1008
Beethoven: Symphony No. 5 • Koussevitzky LM 1021
Beethoven: Symphony No. 5
Schubert: Symphony No. 8 • Munch LM 1923
Honeggar: Symphony No. 5
Roussel: Bacchus Et Ariane
Ravel: Pavane For A Dead Princess • Munch LM 1741
Prokofiev: Symphony No. 5 • Koussevitzky LM 1045
Sibelius: Symphony No. 5 • Koussevitzky LCT 1151
Tchaikovsky: Symphony No. 5 • Koussevitzky LM 1047
Tchaikovsky: Symphony No. 6 • Monteux LM 1901
Beethoven: Symphony No. 7 • Munch LM 1034
Haydn: Symphony No. 94 • Koussevitzky
Haydn: Symphony No. 104 • Munch LM 9034
Handel: Water Music Suite
Mozart: The Marriage of Figaro: Overture
Schumann: Genovena: Overture • Munch LM 7009
Mozart: Eine Kleine Nachtmusik
Haydn: Symphony No. 92 • Koussevitzky LM 1102

THE BOSTON POPS ORCHESTRA Arthur Fiedler Conducting on RCA Victor Records

Luigini: Ballet Égyptien
Massenet: Le Cid—Ballet Suite • LM 1084
Boston Pops Plays • LRM 7002
Boston Pops Plays Leroy Anderson Favorites • LRM 7042
Boston Pops Program, A • LM 9027
Boston Pops Virtuoso Pieces • LRM 7035
Tchaikovsky: Capriccio Italien, 1812 Overture • LM 1134
Classical Juke Box, The Comedians • LM 1106
Classical Music For People Who Hate Classical Music • LM 1752
Family All Together, The • LM 1879
Fiedler's 25th • LM 1790
Offenbach: Gaîté Parisienne In High Fidelity
Meyerbeer: Les Patineurs • LM 1817
Gilbert And Sullivan Overtures
Musical Comedy Medleys • LM 1798
Heart Of The Piano Concerto, The • LM 1105
Heart Of The Symphony • LM 1085
In The Latin Flavor • LM 162
Kreisler Favorites • LRM 7047
Khatchaturian: Masquerade
Tchaikovsky: The Nutcracker Suite No. 2 • LM 1029
Britten: Matinées Musicals
Anderson: Irish Suite • LM 1093
Smetana: The Moldau
Dvořák: Husitská Overture
Brahms: Hungarian Dances Nos. 1–6 • LM 9017
Music For A Summer Night • LM 1910
Operatic Ballet Music • LM 9005
Opera Without Singing • LRM 7045
Peer Gynt Suite No. 1 • LM 7002
Prokofiev: Peter And The Wolf
Goethe: The Sorcerer's Apprentice
Dukas: Scherzo
Saint-Saëns: Henry VIII Dances; Dance of the Gypsy
German: Dances From King Henry VII; Morris Dance, Shepherd's Dance, Torch Dance • LM 1803
Slaughter On Tenth Avenue And Other Ballet Selections • LM 1726
Sousa Marches • LM 69
Mr. Strauss Comes To Boston • LM 1809
Strauss Waltzes • LM 68
Strauss Waltzes And Polkas • LRM 7041
Chopin: Les Sylphides • LM 1919
Waltzing With Waldteufel
Strauss Polkas • LM 1226
Addinsell: Warsaw Concerto
Liszt: Liebestraum No. 3
Grieg: Peer Gynt Suite No. 2 • LRM 7052
Grofé: Grand Canyon Suite • LM 1928

POP GOES THE FIEDLER

Continued from page 60

sembles across the nation, including the Boston Symphony itself. "A Strauss waltz", he will tell you, "is as good a thing of its kind as a Beethoven symphony. It's nice to eat a good chunk of beef, but you want a slice of good dessert too." And the consummation devoutly to be wished is a perfect dessert: "I'm very particular about that."

Speaking of being particular, Fiedler has especially pleased his home town in his personal life, about which that proper community can be more particular than any other. The conductor is Jewish-born, and his marriage to Ellen Bottomley, a prominent Roman Catholic socialite, lifted many an eyebrow some years back. The union has been as blissful as a fairy story. Mrs. Fiedler is today as familiar to local television and newspaper audiences as is her distinguished husband, and their three youngsters are a continuing refutation of the snobbery that once looked over its lorgnette at the couple.

Withal, Fiedler's life is pretty much bound up in his orchestra and his family, but he still finds time for one hobby of long standing. To put it in the vernacular, he is a "spark". That is to say, he chases fires. His convertible, which he drives with the top down even in the dead of winter, is equipped with short-wave radio so that he is never out of touch with the Boston Fire Department. It also boasts a siren, and it is a rare conflagration that does not lure the august maestro almost as fast as the smoke-eaters. A hot number every which way, this phenomenon known as Arthur Fiedler.

HE CAME TO BOSTON

Continued from page 24

meant also that the four Munch sons were drafted into the German army, and for his four years' service Charles Munch makes no apology. Albert Schweitzer was taken from his medical mission in a French colony and imprisoned, and former foreign minister Robert Schuman was drafted into the German armament factories because of their Alsatian birth. The unwilling obligations of the Munches to their temporary German nationality ended, Charles took up his career in music again, not in the opera house that has been the way to the podium for most European conductors, but as an orchestra man, first as assistant and then concertmaster at Strasbourg and professor at the Conservatory, and then as concertmaster at the Gewandhaus in Leipzig, under the late Wilhelm Furtwängler and Bruno Walter.

Munch, as a leading violinist, had an important part in Leipzig's musical life, but he left in 1932 when the Nazis were coming to power and trying to force him in the process into declaring himself a German citizen. He had not studied conducting at the conservatory, though he admits to having firmly anchored in his mind the idea that one day he would mount the podium. He studied the techniques of his father, conductors Ropartz and Bastide at Strasbourg, and Furtwängler in Leipzig, "with the attention of an entomologist who studies the behavior of insects."

From his first appearance on the podium, he was a great success, and was in demand first in Paris, and soon around the world. Munch says that happy chance ("I was too stupid to be anything else") brought him to the [illegible]. Actually, it was a long, hard, and [illegible] schooling in the orchestra. And [illegible] ties behind his acknowledged [illegible] as a conductor has been his penetrating musicianship, his devotion to the composers' ideas, his magnetism as a [illegible], and his ability to impart to his musicians and thus to the public the ideal that is constantly before him.

From his first concert with the Straram Orchestra in Paris in November, 1933, he went on to lead the Conservatoire Orchestra, then the [illegible] he founded and called the [illegible]nic, and, in 1937, Fra[illegible] guished or[illegible] du Conservatoire. [illegible] conductor of this [illegible], and as professor at [illegible] quite extraordinary [illegible] took on almost [illegible] scandale. His career on the podium was only five years old, yet this was the summit of achievement for a French conductor. However, the talk died down quickly enough, sembles across the nation, including the Boston Symphony itself. "A Strauss waltz", he will tell you, "is as good a thing of its kind as a Beethoven symphony. It's nice to eat a good chunk of beef, but you want a slice of good dessert too." And the consummation devoutly to be wished is a perfect dessert: "I'm very particular about that."

Continued on page 62

POP GOES THE FIEDLER

Continued from page 60

Speaking of being particular, Fiedler has especially pleased his home town in his personal life, about which that proper community can be more particular than any other. The conductor is Jewish-born, and his marriage to Ellen Bottomley, a prominent Roman Catholic socialite, lifted many an eyebrow some years back. The union has been as blissful as a fairy story. Mrs. Fiedler is today as familiar to local television and newspaper audiences as is her distinguished husband, and their three youngsters are a continuing refutation of the snobbery that once looked over its lorgnette at the couple.

Withal, Fiedler's life is pretty much bound up in his orchestra and his family, but he still finds time for one hobby of long standing. To put it in the vernacular, he is a "spark". That is to say, he chases fires. His convertible, which he drives with the top down even in the dead of winter, is equipped with short-wave radio so that he is never out of touch with the Boston Fire Department. It also boasts a siren, and it is a rare conflagration that does not lure the august maestro almost as fast as the smoke-eaters. A hot number every which way, this phenomenon known as Arthur Fiedler.

HE CAME TO BOSTON

Continued from page 24

meant also that the four Munch sons were drafted into the German army, and for his four years' service Charles Munch makes no apology. Albert Schweitzer was taken from his medical mission in a French colony and imprisoned, and former foreign minister Robert Schuman was drafted into the German armament factories because of their Alsatian birth. The unwilling obligations of the Munches to their temporary German nationality ended, Charles took up his career in music again, not in the opera house that has been the way to the podium for most European conductors, but as an orchestra man, first as assistant and then concertmaster at Strasbourg and professor at the Conservatory, and then as concertmaster at the Gewandhaus in Leipzig, under the late Wilhelm Furtwängler and Bruno Walter.

Munch, as a leading violinist, had an important part in Leipzig's musical life, but he left in 1932 when the Nazis were coming to power and trying to force him in the process into declaring himself a German citizen. He had not studied conducting at the conservatory, though he admits to having firmly anchored in his mind the idea that one day he would mount the podium. He studied the techniques of his father, conductors Ropartz and Bastide at Strasbourg, and Furtwängler in Leipzig, "with the attention of an entomologist who studies the behavior of insects."

From his first appearance on the podium, he was a great success, and was in demand first in Paris, and soon around the world. Munch says that happy chance ("I was too stupid to be anything else.") brought him to the podium. Actually, it was a long, hard, and thorough schooling in the orchestra. And what lies behind his acknowledged greatness as a conductor has been his penetrating musicianship, his devotion to the composers' ideas, his magnetism as a conductor, and his ability to impart to his musicians and thus to the public the ideal that is constantly before him.

From his first concert with the Straram Orchestra in Paris in November, 1932, he went on to lead the Lamoureux Orchestra, then the orchestra which he founded and called the Paris Philharmonic, and, in 1937, France's oldest and most distinguished orchestra, the Société des Concerts du Conservatoire. Munch's appointment as conductor of this famous official orchestra, and as professor at the Conservatoire, was quite extraordinary and at the time it took on almost the dimensions of un scandale. His career on the podium was only five years old, yet this was the summit of achievement for a French conductor. However, the talk died down quickly enough,

Continued on page 62

free ns all ed to l the disen-
h all ed.

HE CAME TO BOSTON

Continued from page 61

and for the next eight years he led this orchestra even through the German occupation, when he kept together his musicians and resisted all Nazi efforts at intimidation. Munch is no politician, but the Germans never understood his cold and utter correctness, nor his refusal to be considered German because of his Alsatian birth. They probably still don't understand his continued unwillingness to conduct in Germany, his insistence on dropping the umlaut from his name, which even in French is customary, and his prohibition of the Muench spelling. For his services to music and his very important assistance to the Resistance during the war, Munch was given the red ribbon of the Legion d'Honneur in 1945, and made a Commander in 1952.

The handsome Charles Munch had become very quickly "Le Beau Charles" in the Paris press, something of a matinee idol with a corps of feminine admirers known as "Les Munchettes", an accolade unsought and unusual for a serious musician utterly without pretension or flamboyance. Even today he enjoys the sort of status in France that only a national hero or popular crooner attains here.

It was principally his dislike of being tied to tiresome administrative detail that led Munch to resign from the Conservatory in 1945, to begin his still unceasing round of guest engagements. He was the first musician allowed to leave Paris after the liberation, when he flew to England to conduct concerts of the London Philharmonic and BBC Orchestras, and he has since then conducted most of the world's major orchestras. Munch likes to conduct, and mid-season vacations in Boston will find him conducting in Montreal or Paris, and during his brief respites in early and late summer, at Strasbourg, or Bordeaux, or Salzburg, where last summer he led the Furtwängler memorial concerts. He thinks it important to bring great music to the widest possible audience.

The tall dignified figure with the thick silvery hair, striding across the stage to the podium, has become a familiar figure on the American musical scene. But the audiences who see the well-tailored back and the expressive, well-shaped hands, and hear the music he draws from his orchestra miss one of the most fascinating aspects of Munch the conductor. The music is written upon his face as upon the scores in front of his musicians. The extreme mobility, the expressive power of his countenance, is transformed into a mirror reflecting a thousand shades of feeling. His musicians speak of his Berlioz with a special awe, for in this music even more than any other, he transforms himself into the composer himself. Every performance, whether it is the wildly romantic Symphonie Fantastique or the reverent Requiem, al that is constantly before

Continued on page 63

rst concert with the Straram
Paris in November, 1932, he he founded and ic, and, in certs music as Orchestra, was it career on the podium, as only yet this was the summit of or a French conductor. How-died down quickly enough,

ntinued on page 62

HE CAME TO BOSTON

Continued from page 62

Munch is like a man imbued with the life and spirit of another. And since the composer no less than the conductor is likely to have different feelings on different days, details of the performance are rarely the same.

Off the podium, Munch is a shy and modest man who has always preferred to let his music speak for him. Two years ago, however, an enterprising French publisher prevailed upon him to personalize his profession in a small book, one of the collection "Mon Metiers" in which leading French figures were represented. Last year "Je Suis Chef d'Orchestre" was published here as "I Am A Conductor," an admirable English translation [1] that keeps all the wit and charm of the French edition, and with an excellent introduction. Anyone interested in music and what goes into the making of a conductor will find it fascinating.

There are no more severe critics of a conductor than the musicians who work for him. Musicians have analyzed Munch carefully. Their universal feeling is something close to adoration, with the utmost respect for his musicianship. He is very fair, but he expects and gets accuracy. He insists members study scores and warm up before he appears for rehearsal. New works are played through once to get the general idea, then the difficult sections worked over, and finally the whole is put together again. Old works are rehearsed by touching up a few difficult spots. There is no elaborate polishing of detail. His men are accomplished musicians and adults, not to be treated as children, repeating a detail over and over and learning by rote. And "a musician is a musician, not a race", as he said during the war, nor a sex for that matter, for in his French orchestras there were women, and he has brought two, one a first desk "man", into the once-sacred male purlieus of the Boston Orchestra. After his first appearances with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony in January and February, 1947, the members of the orchestra gave him a farewell unprecedented in the long history of that organization: members themselves gave a party for him on the stage following his final concert.

Munch is extraordinarily sensitive and, if a musician flubs, he does not look at him until the poor man has recovered from his embarrassment. But he can also cast a gimlet eye at an ill-prepared or sleepy instrumentalist. He often illustrates by singing, and even during a performance his pleasant baritone can sometimes be heard over the orchestra. He has temperament and temper, but when he is angry he freezes up and is very inclined to blame

[1] "I Am a Conductor", by Charles Munch. Translated from the French by Leonard Burkat. Oxford University Press, 1955.

Continued on page 64

HE CAME TO BOSTON

Continued from page 64

him to become a notable collector. His knowledge of painting is that of the expert. He is a cultured and urbane man of great charm and, apart from his collections, of simple tastes — in food, in drink (Scotch, Alsatian wines, and beer, which he often drinks after a concert unlike Sir Thomas Beecham. "He drinks champagne, I drink beer.") He is very generous with his time. For all his fantastically busy schedule he finds time always for students and embryo composers, often extending a helping hand to a needy musician, or contributing to something that interests him. (He and Toscanini were the largest contributors to the Symphony of the Air when NBC's orphans decided to stay in being.) He has a passion for authenticity that once induced him to find some real church bells in Paris to replace what he considered the unsatisfactory chimes used in the last movement of the Berlioz Symphonie Fantastique.

A year ago, at the invitation of Mayor Hynes, Munch conducted a mammoth choir of high school students in a concert of Christmas carols at the plaza in front of City Hall. It is the sort of civic occasion that the Boston conductor always leads, and Munch loved it, perhaps most of all the screaming sirens of the police escort that sped him to City Hall. Munch is a real speed demon and has been known to complain of the American laws that make speed so difficult. Both Munch and his chauffeur-valet Roger have garnered quite a few tickets. Once, with Roger driving "Faster! Faster!" down the parkway to New York, they were stopped by the police. While Roger was palavering with authority, Munch disappeared. The dignified conductor of a great orchestra was found, back of the police car, impishly letting air out of its tires. That little joke earned the two a long delay and many explanations in a local police court, and a fine neither will admit.

Munch is a deeply studious man. He spends much of his time reading scores, especially new scores. Periods of relaxation will find him in an antique shop or an art gallery or playing golf. One story of Munch the golfer has been amusing the Berkshires for years. The pro at the country club where he plays daily once told him firmly, "Relax, maestro, relax like you were conducting your orchestra." He did not realize that that is something Munch does not do on the podium.

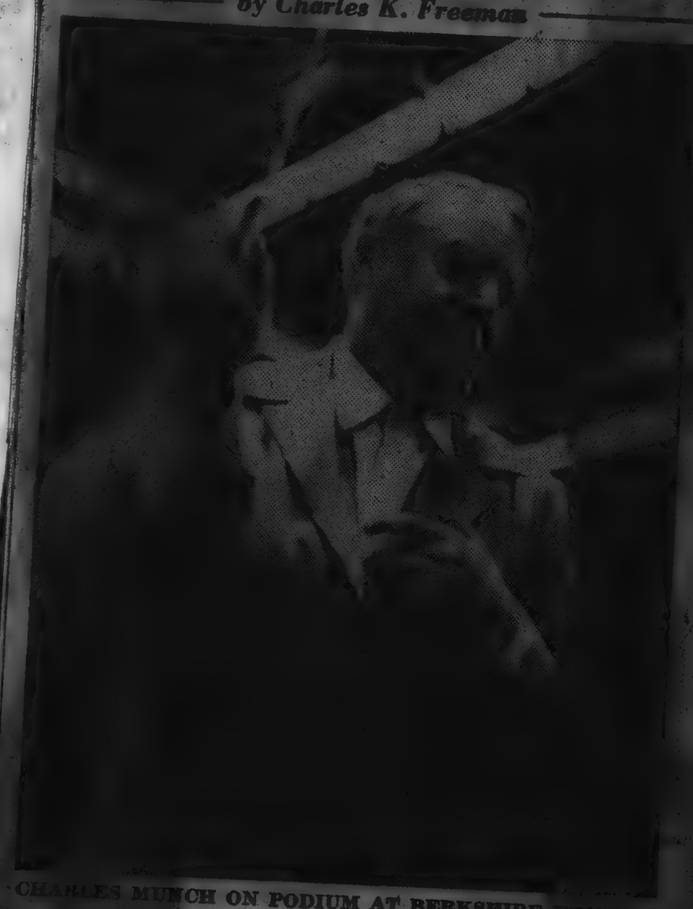
As a musician, Munch is both technician and artist. The first guards the second, and the second inspires the first. He used to tell his students at the Paris Conservatory: "Remember this: the ears and the heart as well as the arms have their part in your conducting." He prefers a fine, thin sound, one not so big or wide as to obscure neatness and facility. His interpretations have

Concluded on page 66

Citizen Register, Ossining, N. Y., Friday, July 6, 1956

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman



CHARLES MUNCH ON PODIUM AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

TANGLEWOOD AND JACOBS PILLOW

This being the week when the crowds move towards the major music and dance festivals we bring you news of the programs that will enchant disciples (and they are legion) of the events in the Berkshires.

Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch. For the seventeenth summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

* * * *

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening (July 4) with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 6,) Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. On Saturday evening (July 7) concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon (July 8) a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood, and Mr. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11-13-14-15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 P.M., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 P.M.

* * * *

AND THE DANCE:

Opened with a Thursday matinee and playing both matinees and evenings Friday and Saturday, July 5-6-7, the next program at Jacob's Pillow near Lee, Mass., will feature the debut of the Dokoudovsky-Stroganova Ballet in world premieres of "Schumann's 'Spring' Symphony" (Mats. only) and "The Abyss" (Alexandre Tcherepnine) (Eves.) Ruth St. Denis, commemorating the 50th anniversary of her first concert appearances, will dance four of her historic solos including "Cobra" and "Yogi", first seen in 1906! And Myra Kinch has announced "Sad Self Hereafter", newest addition to her collection of satires, plus three solos and "Giselle's Revenge", a contemporary spoof on the fables of romantic ballet, after the manner of Chas. Addams, the cartoonist. In the latter work William Milie will dance Albrecht, and Ruth Alexander will contribute to the zany proceedings as Wili.

[60]

HE CAME TO BOSTON

Continued from page 62

Munch is like a man imbued with the life and spirit of another. And since the composer no less than the conductor is likely to have different feelings on different days, details of the performance are rarely the same.

Off the podium, Munch is a shy and modest man who has always preferred to let his music speak for him. Two years ago, however, an enterprising French publisher prevailed upon him to personalize his profession in a small book, one of the collection "Mon Metiers" in which leading French figures were represented. Last year "Je Suis Chef d'Orchestre" was published here as "I Am A Conductor," an admirable English translation [2] that keeps all the wit and charm of the French edition, and with an excellent introduction. Anyone interested in music and what goes into the making of a conductor will find it fascinating.

There are no more severe critics of a conductor than the musicians who work for him. Musicians have analyzed Munch carefully. Their universal feeling is something close to adoration, with the utmost respect for his musicianship. He is very fair, but he expects and gets accuracy. He insists members study scores and warm up before he appears for rehearsal. New works are played through once to get the general idea, then the difficult sections worked over, and finally the whole is put together again. Old works are rehearsed by touching up a few difficult spots. There is no elaborate polishing of detail. His men are accomplished musicians and adults, not to be treated as children, repeating a detail over and over and learning by rote. And "a musician is a musician, not a race", as he said during the war, nor a sex for that matter, for in his French orchestras there were women, and he has brought two, one a first desk "man", into the once-sacred male purlieus of the Boston Orchestra. After his first appearances with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony in January and February, 1947, the members of the orchestra gave him a farewell unprecedented in the long history of that organization: members themselves gave a party for him on the stage following his final concert.

Munch is extraordinarily sensitive and, if a musician flubs, he does not look at him until the poor man has recovered from his embarrassment. But he can also cast a gimlet eye at an ill-prepared or sleepy instrumentalist. He often illustrates by singing, and even during a performance his pleasant baritone can sometimes be heard over the orchestra. He has temperament and temper, but when he is angry he freezes up and is very inclined to blame

[2] "I Am a Conductor", by Charles Munch. Translated from the French by Leonard Burkat. Oxford University Press, 1955.

Continued on page 64

HE CAME TO BOSTON

Continued from page 64

him to become a notable collector. His knowledge of painting is that of the expert. He is a cultured and urbane man of great charm and, apart from his collections, of simple tastes — in food, in drink (Scotch, Alsatian wines, and beer, which he often drinks after a concert unlike Sir Thomas Beecham. "He drinks champagne, I drink beer.") He is very generous with his time. For all his fantastically busy schedule he finds time always for students and embryo composers, often extending a helping hand to a needy musician, or contributing to something that interests him. (He and Toscanini were the largest contributors to the Symphony of the Air when NBC's orphans decided to stay in being.) He has a passion for authenticity that once induced him to find some real church bells in Paris to replace what he considered the unsatisfactory chimes used in the last movement of the Berlioz Symphonie Fantastique.

A year ago, at the invitation of Mayor Hynes, Munch conducted a mammoth choir of high school students in a concert of Christmas carols at the plaza in front of City Hall. It is the sort of civic occasion that the Boston conductor always leads, and Munch loved it, perhaps most of all the screaming sirens of the police escort that sped him to City Hall. Munch is a real speed demon and has been known to complain of the American laws that make speed so difficult. Both Munch and his chauffeur-valet Roger have garnered quite a few tickets. Once, with Roger driving "Faster! Faster!" down the parkway to New York, they were stopped by the police. While Roger was palavering with authority, Munch disappeared. The dignified conductor of a great orchestra was found, back of the police car, impishly letting air out of its tires. That little joke earned the two a long delay and many explanations in a local police court, and a fine neither will admit.

Munch is a deeply studious man. He spends much of his time reading scores, especially new scores. Periods of relaxation will find him in an antique shop or an art gallery or playing golf. One story of Munch the golfer has been amusing the Berkshires for years. The pro at the country club where he plays daily once told him firmly, "Relax, maestro, relax like you were conducting your orchestra." He did not realize that that is something Munch does not do on the podium.

As a musician, Munch is both technician and artist. The first guards the second, and the second inspires the first. He used to tell his students at the Paris Conservatory: "Remember this: the ears and the heart as well as the arms have their part in your conducting." He prefers a fine, thin sound, one not so big or wide as to obscure neatness and facility. His interpretations have

Concluded on page 66

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

CHARLES MUNCH ON PODIUM AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

TANGLEWOOD AND JACOBS PILLOW

This being the week when the crowds move towards the major music and dance festivals we bring you news of the programs that will enchant disciples (and they are legion) of the events in the Berkshires.

Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch. For the seventeenth summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

* * * *

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening (July 4) with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 6,) Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening (July 7) concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon (July 8) a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood, and Mr. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11-13-14-15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 P.M., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 P.M.

* * * *

AND THE DANCE:

Opened with a Thursday matinee and playing both matinees and evenings Friday and Saturday, July 5-6-7, the next program at Jacob's Pillow near Lee, Mass., will feature the debut of the Dokoudovsky-Stroganova Ballet in world premieres of "Schumann's 'Spring' Symphony" (Mats. only) and "The Abyss" (Alexandre Tcherepnine) (Eves.) Ruth St. Denis, commemorating the 50th anniversary of her first concert appearances, will dance four of her historic solos including "Cobra" and "Yogi", first seen in 1906. And Myra Kinch has announced "Sad Self Hereafter", newest addition to her collection of satires, plus three solos and "Giselle's Revenge", a contemporary spoof on the foibles of romantic ballet, after the manner of Chas. Addams, the cartoonist. In the latter work William Milie will dance Albrecht, and Ruth Alexander will contribute to the zany proceedings as Wili.

[60]

HE CAME TO BOSTON

Continued from page 63

himself, taking out his temper on himself in the privacy of his study.

Munch is a man of that genuine humility one hears about but so rarely encounters. He is deeply studious and tries unceasingly to achieve the perfect performance, but he will take advice on musical matters if, having thought it over, he thinks it good. Unlike most in his profession, he admires other conductors. Two, he says, are masters; Toscanini and Monteux. "When Toscanini is in front of an orchestra, it is suddenly transformed way beyond its usual capacities. He can no more be succeeded than Beethoven or Ravel or Monet." The story has often been told of his once playing under Toscanini's wrathful eye with the wrong edition of the score in front of him. It was Munch who brought Pierre Monteux back to the Boston podium for the first time since his difficult, strike-torn days as the orchestra's regular conductor. Munch has shared the podium with Monteux for all the tours, and will again this year in Europe.

Munch's shyness leads him to avoid parties, and even to leave Symphony Hall before any of the audience has time to come around to the Green Room. When he first came to Boston, there were social obligations to attend to, and the story is told of Munch at tea parties, sitting for an hour very amiably and saying not a word. His friends understand this, but it must have puzzled Boston hostesses. His English is still on the rudimentary side, but even in French (which he speaks with the most Parisian of accents while his German has a French accent) he is the least voluble of men, preferring to sit happily listening to his friends, or playing a cut-throat brand of belotte with his musicians, who are his greatest friends. He often drops in to visit them, and enjoys small dinners at their homes. And he adores their children.

No one is more aware of the duties of a conductor and his prerogatives when in front of an orchestra, but Munch regards himself as part of the orchestra and wants to be accepted as such. It was his own idea to share the discomforts of the French Radio Orchestra's rugged two-month bus tour of America, though he was the Government-appointed conductor. He takes upon himself none of the privileges and none of the customary flamboyance of a great conductor. His attitude toward applause is characteristic of this feeling. One somewhat perfunctory bow to acknowledge the applause that greets his appearance, then he mounts the podium and proceeds without more ado. At the conclusion of the number, he steps down and from the front of the orchestra makes his bow, then gestures to the orchestra to rise and indicates that the applause is for them.

Munch has an instinctive love for beauty and an informed taste that has led eloquence and vitality, and driving force and vigor. He has an imagination and intensity that make his readings of French music electrifying, and works like the Tchaikovsky Pathetique passion and despair incarnate. He has the thorough schooling and taste that give his interpretations of classical music style and care for its inwardness and structural design. He is a very flexible musician and much moved by his feelings, so that interpretations are likely to differ in detail from performance to performance, and even from rehearsal to performance. His taste in music is eclectic and cosmopolitan although, like many French conductors, he avoids most Russian music.

Continued on page 65

HE CAME TO BOSTON

Continued from page 65

Munch has two homes these days. For his seven or eight months in Boston he lives in nearby Milton, in a simple grey, stucco house that belongs to the family of the late Episcopal Bishop Lawrence. In the winter his wife is usually there with him. She is the former Genevieve Maury, a writer and granddaughter of the founder of the Nestlé Chocolate Company. They were married in 1933 after what must have been one of the longest courtships on record. He first met the Mme. Munch-to-be in Paris in 1912 when he was studying there with Lucien Capet; they corresponded through the Red Cross during the first war, and kept it up through the years, but it did not end in marriage until Munch was firmly established as a conductor.

Spring and late summer find the Munches in their spacious apartment in the luxurious 16th arrondissment in Paris, a large apartment filled with beauty, priceless pictures, sculpture, and carefully kept books that bespeak the well-rounded mind and elegant taste. During the Berkshire Festival he stays at a once-famous country house, now a very quiet but swank inn. Roger, the chauffeur-valet-handy man is always with him, as he's been for some 25 years, and if ever an ancient cliché was disproved, it is by Roger's worship of his "boss".

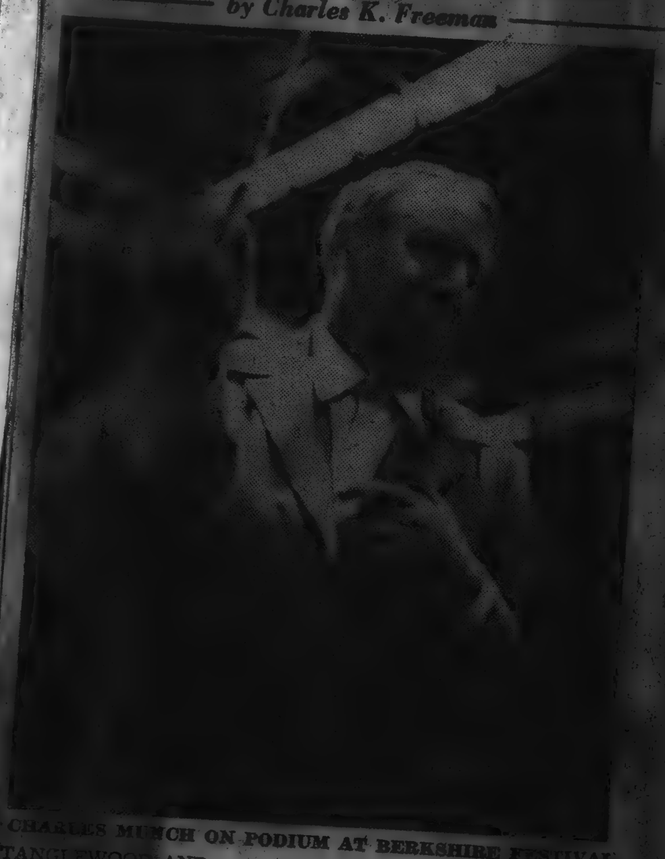
Munch has brought honors to the Boston Symphony — two Grand Prix du Disques awards, for the Brahms Fourth Symphony and for the magnificent Berlioz "Romeo and Juliet". His period there has been another golden age of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, characterized by the brilliant and extraordinarily well balanced orchestra, the sheen of its tone, and a vigor and youthful sound, with an extraordinarily large, varied and always interesting repertory.

The Board of Directors of the orchestra has been happy in its choice of conductors. The warmth of regard and the spirit of co-operation between the Board and Munch has been unheard of in all the history of such organizations. It will continue, too, for Munch recently signed another three-year contract to take effect next season.

Citizen Register, Ossining, N. Y., Friday, July 6, 1956

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman



CHARLES MUNCH ON PODIUM AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

TANGLEWOOD AND JACOB'S PILLOW

This being the week when the crowds move towards the major music and dance festivals we bring you news of the programs that will enchant disciples (and they are legion) of the events in the Berkshires.

Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch. For the seventeenth summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

* * * *

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening (July 4) with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 6,) Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman [illegible] Tanglewood debut as soloist. The Saturday evening (July 7) concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart [illegible] and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon (July 8) a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood, and Mr. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11-13-14-15, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 P.M., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 P.M.

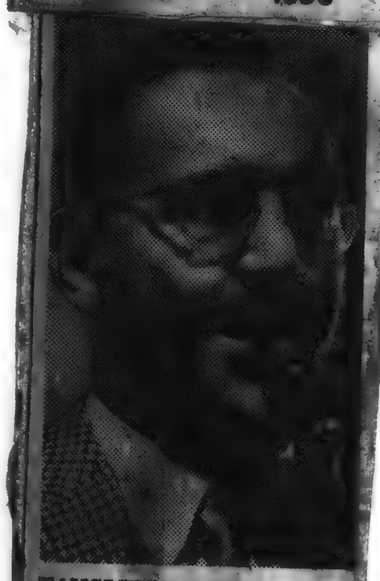
* * * *

AND THE DANCE:

Opened with a Thursday matinee and playing both matinees and evenings Friday and Saturday, July 5-6-7, the next program at Jacob's Pillow near Lee, Mass., will feature the debut of the Dokoudovsky-Stroganova Ballet in world premieres of "Schumann's 'Spring' Symphony" (Mats. only) and "The Abyss" (Alexandre Tcherepnine) (Eves.) Ruth St. Denis, commemorating the 50th anniversary of her first concert appearances, will dance four of her historic solos including "Cobra" and "Yogi", first seen in 1906. And Myra Kinch has announced "Sad Self Hereafter", newest addition to her collection of satires, plus three solos and "Giselle's Revenge", a contemporary spoof on the fables of romantic ballet, after the manner of Chas. Addams, the cartoonist. In the latter work William Milie will dance Albrecht, and Ruth Alexander will contribute to the zany proceedings as Wili.

[60]

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
Circ. D. 133,704
JUL 3 1956



TANGLEWOOD Debut—Benny Goodman, noted jazz clarinetist, will play in the Theatre-Concert Hall of Berkshire Music Center Friday night. Charles Munch conducting members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Goodman will perform Mozart's Concerto for Clarinet. On July 11, Goodman will appear in a Chamber Music Concert with the Boston Symphony String Quartet.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847
JUL 7 1956

BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL:

All-Mozart Program

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 7.—Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony's chamber group opened the Berkshire Festival's first weekend of orchestral concerts in the theatre-concert hall last night. The continued wet weather cut the audience to 2,051 but did not dampen their endorsement of the musicians' performance.

An all-Mozart program marked not only the traditional concept of these concerts highlighting the music of Bach and Mozart, but also the Mozart anniversary so extensively observed this year. It listed the G Minor and "Prague" symphonies and the Clarinet Concerto in A (K. 622) with Benny Goodman as soloist.

Virile Mood

In a virile mood, Munch put the orchestra through its paces, using his baton almost as a lash. At times he drove the men at such speed that only an accomplished group like this could have played with the precision and clarity it did.

Indeed, it was hard to believe that Mozart was being played. For the performances lacked the quality and style usually associated with this composer. Truly fine moments occurred, in the slow movement of the "Prague" symphony, for instance, but generally the tenseness conveyed through Munch was at odds with the general nature of the music.

Goodman's inherently musical nature and technical dexterity carried him successfully through the concerto. He disclosed little feeling for the style, staying mostly on the surface of the music. His performance was, nevertheless, an admirable achievement, considering the many years he has accustomed himself to the world of jazz and swing.

The concerto itself qualifies more as functional than beautiful, a fact made quite clear by the symphonies preceding and following it.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
JUL 8 1956

Benny Goodman Is Soloist

Munch Directs Program Of Mozart at Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., July 7.—The Berkshire Festival's first orchestral concert took place in the theater-concert hall last night, under the direction of Charles Munch. An audience of 2,05[illegible] heard an all-Mozart program consisting of the "Symphony in G Minor, K. 550;" the "Concerto for clarinet in A major, K. 622," and the "Prague" Symphony.

Soloist in the concerto was Benny Goodman, who made his first appearance with the Boston Symphony on this occasion. Incidentally, Mr. Goodman joins the Boston Symphony string quartet in a performance of the Mozart Quintet next Wednesday evening.

Frankly, it was not one of the Bostonians' very best nights. Weather, of course, had something to do with the frequently poor quality of the string tone, but the heave and strain, the breakneck speed of the first movement in the "G Minor" could be debited to Mr. Munch's conducting. Occasionally glimpses of Mozartian light sifted through the section, and when they did the effect was something like revelation.

There was better work in the andante, but in that section too, one noted extra-curricular tensions. Of the three movements the menuetto was by far the best, though it was not nearly a patch on the fluidity of line that one ordinarily associates with this group.

Mr. Goodman played the solo clarinet part in the concerto with good technique. His tone was not the most ensorcelling in the world, with the result that his performance failed to produce anything at all songlike. Moreover, the Mozartian style in the phrasing, the delicate interrelations between soloist and orchestra went more or less by the board. Anyway, Mr. Goodman's rhythm passages were fine, he was given an ovation at the conclusion.

The "Prague" Symphony opened with a certain solemnity in the adagio, and then suddenly went frenetic in the ensuing allegro. The slow movement proceeded without untoward event, but the final presto, despite some excellent playing in spurts, had just too much vim and vigor and too many guillotine-like downbeats for comfort.

R. B.

KANSAS CITY MO. STAR
JUL 1 1956

A LURE AT TANGLEWOOD

SUMMER MUSIC FESTIVAL WILL OPEN WEDNESDAY NIGHT.

Schedule for Six Weeks Calls for 24 Major Concerts—Boston Symphony and Charles Munch Chief Attractions.

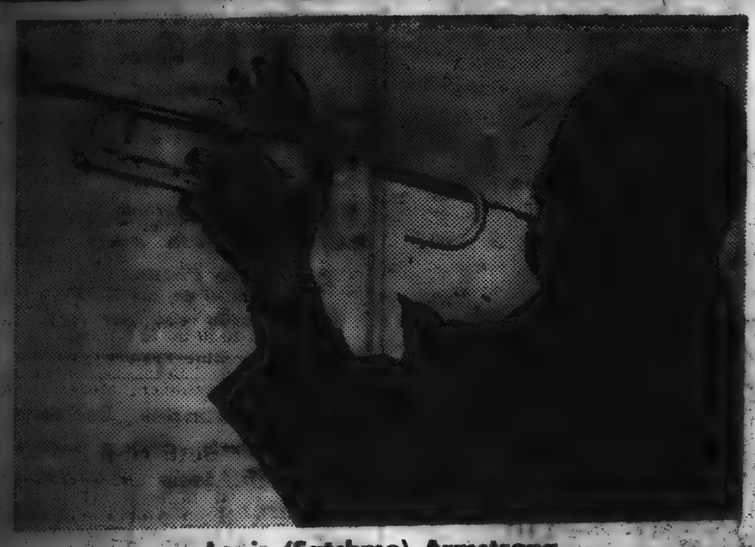
Lenox, Mass., June 30.—Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, here, of the annual Berkshire festival of the Boston Symphony orchestra, led by its music director, Charles Munch. For the 17th summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

The 1956 Berkshire festival of 24 concerts commences Wednesday evening with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofiev and Beethoven by the Kroll string quartet. On Friday night, Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Mozart program, with the jazz clarinetist, Benny Goodman, making his Tanglewood debut as soloist.

The Saturday night concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee club.

On Sunday afternoon, July 8, a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives, will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music center, the Boston Symphony orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood. Foss will be piano soloist.

AUFBAU
Friday, July 13, 1956



Louis (Satchmo) Armstrong
tritt am 14. Juli mit seinem Ensemble unter Mitwirkung von Dave Brubeck und dem Brubeck Quartet im Stadium auf. Der orchestrale Teil steht unter der Leitung von Leonard Bernstein.

Eröffnung in Tanglewood

Fünf moderne Werke

W.S. Die diesjährige besondere Note der Eröffnungswoche bestand in der Aufführung fünf moderner Werke, die ihren Platz zwischen Bach, Haydn und Mozart fanden. Den tiefsten Eindruck erweckte die Military Mass von Martinu, während des Krieges für die freiwillige tschechische Armee in Frankreich komponiert. Emigrantenschicksal in der Grösse seiner Verantwortung und Sehnsucht nach der Heimat hat in der Musik, nicht zuletzt auch in den orchestralen Zwischenteilen, selten einen so unmittelbar ans Herz greifenden Ausdruck gefunden wie hier. Die Aufführung — Yale Glee Club unter Hugh Ross — war hervorragend.

Erstaunlich ähnlich hierzu in ihrer mystischen Stimmung erschien Charles Edward Ives "The Unanswered Question". Eine Solotrompete stellt immer wieder die ewige Frage der Existenz, ein Holzbläserquartett versucht, jedesmal lebendiger, schneller und lauter werdend, zum Schlusse versagend, die Frage zu beantworten, während ein unsichtbares Streichorchester von Anfang bis zu Ende in ausgeglichener Ruhe und Gelöstheit verbleibt.

Weitere moderne Werke waren "A Thanksgiving Psalm" von Henry Cowell, "Lament for String Orchestra" von Irving Fine und "Divertimento" von Alexei Haieff, letzteres besonderes in rhythmischer Beziehung originell und interessant.

Im übrigen war Mozart im Jahre 1956 verständlicherweise Mittelpunkt dieser ersten Kammerorchester-Woche mit den Symphonien in G moll, der Haffner und der Prager, von denen vor allem die letztere unter Charles Muench besonders beglückend geboten wurde. Benny Goodman zeigte wieder einmal in Mozarts Klarinettenkonzert, dass seine Musikalität eine ausserordentlich vielseitige ist. Nach einer verständlichen Erregung zu Beginn spielte er den langsamen Satz mit unvergleichlicher Wärme.

Den grössten musikalischen Eindruck hinterliess Bachs d moll Klavierkonzert, gespielt und geleitet von Lukas Foss in energischer Vitalität und doch so ruhiger Ausgeglichenheit, dass eine einzigartige Gestaltung dieses Werks zustande kam.

Wer Freude an Musik und Natur hat, sollte gelegentlich ein Wochenende in Tanglewood verbringen. Der Abstand vom Alltag, das Umgebensein von den lieblichen Bergen und Seen der Berkshires, öffnen dem zumeist überarbeiteten Städter wieder einmal Ohr und Auge für ein Erleben, das echte Freude und damit innere Ruhe und erneute Kraft gewährt.

WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS COMMERCIAL NEWS

VICTUALLER'S LICENSE TO TANGLEWOOD

The Selectmen of the Town of Stockbridge have approved a common victualler's license to the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the operation of a cafeteria at the Tanglewood Music Center in Lenox.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 - Richmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
JUL 13 1956

Tonight's Concert In Music Shed At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD—Because of threatening weather, officials of the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced this afternoon that tonight's concert, scheduled for the Theater-Concert Hall, has been shifted to the Music Shed.

The program, beginning at 8:30, will be featured by the appearance of the duo pianists, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, and Boris Goldovsky, Mr. Luboshutz's nephew, in an all-Mozart program.

[61]

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
Circ. D. 133,704

JUL 3 1956

TANGLEWOOD Debut—Benny Goodman, noted jazz clarinetist, will play in the Theater-Concert Hall of Berkshire Music Center Friday night, Charles Munch conducting members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Goodman will perform Mozart's Concerto for Clarinet. On July 11, Goodman will appear in a Chamber Music Concert with the Boston Symphony String Quartet.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847

JUL 7 1956

BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL:

All-Mozart Program

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 7.—Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony's chamber group opened the Berkshire Festival's first weekend of orchestral concerts in the theatre-concert hall last night. The continued wet weather cut the audience to 2,051 but did not dampen their endorsement of the musicians' performance.

An all-Mozart program marked not only the traditional concept of these concerts highlighting the music of Bach and Mozart, but also the Mozart anniversary so extensively observed this year. It listed the G Minor and "Prague" symphonies and the Clarinet Concerto in A (K. 622) with Benny Goodman as soloist.

Virile Mood

In a virile mood, Munch put the orchestra through its paces, using his baton almost as a lash. At times he drove the men at such speed that only an accomplished group like this could have played with the precision and clarity it did.

Indeed, it was hard to believe that Mozart was being played. For the performances lacked the quality and style usually associated with this composer. Truly fine moments occurred, in the slow movement of the "Prague" symphony for instance, but generally the tenseness conveyed through Munch was at odds with the general nature of the music.

Goodman's inherently musical nature and technical dexterity carried him successfully through the concerto. He disclosed little feeling for the style, staying mostly on the surface of the music. His performance was, nevertheless, an admirable achievement, considering the many years he has accustomed himself to the world of jazz and swing.

The concerto itself qualifies more as functional than beautiful, a fact made quite clear by the symphonies preceding and following it.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

JUL 8 1956

Benny Goodman Is Soloist

Munch Directs Program Of Mozart at Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., July 7.—The Berkshire Festival's first orchestral concert took place in the theater-concert hall last night, under the direction of Charles Munch. An audience of 2,051 heard an all-Mozart program consisting of the "Symphony in G Minor, K. 550;" the "Concerto for clarinet in A major, K. 622," and the "Prague" Symphony.

Soloist in the concerto was Benny Goodman, who made his first appearance with the Boston Symphony on this occasion. Incidentally, Mr. Goodman joins the Boston Symphony string quartet in a performance of the Mozart Quintet next Wednesday evening.

Frankly, it was not one of the Bostonians' very best nights. Weather, of course, had something to do with the frequently poor quality of the string tone, but the heave and strain, the breakneck speed of the first movement in the "G Minor" could be debited to Mr. Munch's conducting. Occasionally glimpses of Mozartian light sifted through the section, and when they did the effect was something like revelation.

There was better work in the andante, but in that section too, one noted extra-curricular tensions. Of the three movements the menuetto was by far the best, though it was not nearly a patch on the fluidity of line that one ordinarily associates with this group.

Mr. Goodman played the solo clarinet part in the concerto with good technique. His tone was not the most ensorcelling in the world, with the result that his performance failed to produce anything at all songlike. Moreover, the Mozartian style in the phrasing, the delicate interrelations between soloist and orchestra went more or less by the board. Anyway, Mr. Goodman's rhythm passages were fine, he was given an ovation at the conclusion.

The "Prague" Symphony opened with a certain serenity in the adagio, and then suddenly went frenetic in the ensuing allegro. The slow movement proceeded without untoward event, but the final presto, despite some excellent playing in spurts, had just too much vim and vigor and too many guillotine-like downbeats for comfort. R. B.

KANSAS CITY MO. STAR

JUL 1 1956

A LURE AT TANGLEWOOD

SUMMER MUSIC FESTIVAL WILL OPEN WEDNESDAY NIGHT.

Schedule for Six Weeks Calls for 24 Major Concerts—Boston Symphony and Charles Munch Chief Attractions.

Lenox, Mass., June 30.—Symphony, choral and chamber music come again to the Berkshire hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, here, of the annual Berkshire festival of the Boston Symphony orchestra, led by its music director, Charles Munch. For the 17th summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12, on the spacious pine-clad estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

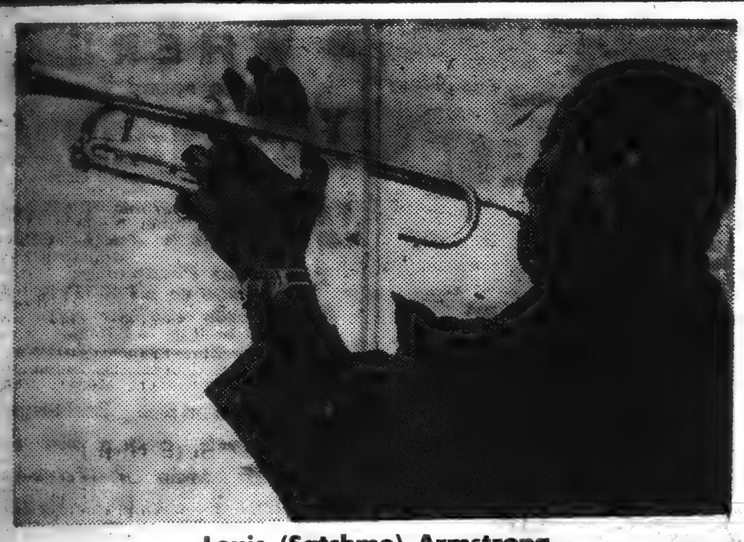
The 1956 Berkshire festival of 24 concerts commences Wednesday evening with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofiev and Beethoven by the Kroll string quartet. On Friday night, Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Mozart program, with the jazz clarinetist, Benny Goodman, making his Tanglewood debut as soloist.

The Saturday night concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee club.

On Sunday afternoon, July 8, a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives, will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music center, the Boston Symphony orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood. Foss will be piano soloist.

AUFBAU

Friday, July 13, 1956



Louis (Satchmo) Armstrong
tritt am 14. Juli mit seinem Ensemble unter Mitwirkung von Dave Brubeck und dem Brubeck Quartet im Stadium auf. Der orchestrale Teil steht unter der Leitung von Leonard Bernstein.

Eröffnung in Tanglewood

Fünf moderne Werke

W.S. Die diesjährige besondere Note der Eröffnungswoche bestand in der Aufführung fünf moderner Werke, die ihren Platz zwischen Bach, Haydn und Mozart fanden. Den tiefsten Eindruck erweckte die Military Mass von Martinu, während des Krieges für die freiwillige tschechische Armee in Frankreich komponiert. Emigrantenschicksal in der Grösse seiner Verantwortung und Sehnsucht nach der Heimat hat in der Musik, nicht zuletzt auch in den orchestralen Zwischenteilen, selten einen so unmittelbar ans Herz greifenden Ausdruck gefunden wie hier. Die Aufführung — Yale Glee Club unter Hugh Ross — war hervorragend.

Erstaunlich ähnlich hierzu in ihrer mystischen Stimmung erschien Charles Edward Ives "The Unanswered Question". Eine Solotrompete stellt immer wieder die ewige Frage der Existenz, ein Holzbläserquartett versucht, jedesmal lebendiger, schneller und lauter werdend, zum Schlusse versagend, die Frage zu beantworten, während ein unsichtbares Streichorchester von Anfang bis zu Ende in ausgeglichener Ruhe und Gelöstheit verbleibt.

Weitere moderne Werke waren "A Thanksgiving Psalm" von Henry Cowell, "Lament for String Orchestra" von Irving Fine und "Divertimento" von Alexei Haieff, letzteres besonderes in rhythmischer Beziehung originell und interessant.

Im übrigen war Mozart im Jahre 1956 verständlicherweise Mittelpunkt dieser ersten Kammerorchester-Woche mit den Symphonien in G moll, der Haffner und der Prager, von denen vor allem die letztere unter Charles Muench besonders beglückend geboten wurde. Benny Goodman zeigte wieder einmal in Mozarts Klarinettenkonzert, dass seine Musikalität eine ausserordentlich vielseitige ist. Nach einer verständlichen Erregung zu Beginn spielte er den langsamen Satz mit unvergleichbarer Wärme.

Den grössten musikalischen Eindruck hinterliess Bachs d moll Klavierkonzert, gespielt und geleitet von Lukas Foss in energischer Vitalität und doch so ruhiger Ausgeglichenheit, dass eine einzigartige Gestaltung dieses Werks zustande kam.

Wer Freude an Musik und Natur hat, sollte gelegentlich ein Wochenende in Tanglewood verbringen. Der Abstand vom Alltag, das Umgebensein von den lieblichen Bergen und Seen der Berkshires, öffnen dem zumeist überarbeiteten Städter wieder einmal Ohr und Auge für ein Erleben, das echte Freude und damit innere Ruhe und erneute Kraft gewährt.

WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS COMMERCIAL NEWS

VICTUALLER'S LICENSE TO TANGLEWOOD

The Selectmen of the Town of Stockbridge have approved a common victualler's license to the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the operation of a cafeteria at the Tanglewood Music Center in Lenox.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

JUL 13 1956

Tonight's Concert In Music Shed At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD—Because of threatening weather, officials of the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced this afternoon that tonight's concert, scheduled for the Theater-Concert Hall, has been shifted to the Music Shed.

The program, beginning at 8:30, will be featured by the appearance of the duo pianists, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, and Boris Goldovsky, Mr. Luboshutz's nephew, in an all-Mozart program.

[61]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Italian News
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 12,414
JUL 13 1956

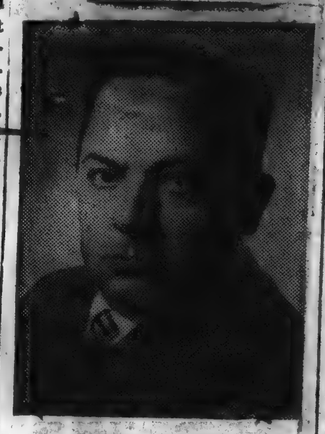
Petrassi – from music shop worker to composer

Italian at Tanglewood

Goffredo Petrassi, celebrated modern Italian composer, is guest teacher of composition this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjuction with its Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Petrassi's Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for its 75th anniversary, was first performed during Boston's Salute to Rome last December.

The work will receive its Tanglewood premiere at a Berkshire Festival concert on Friday evening, July 27, Charles Munch conducting. In addition, his opera "Morte dell'Aria", composed in 1949-1950, will be performed by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center on Saturday afternoon, July 28.



GOFFREDO PETRASSI

TO CONDUCT

Petrassi himself will conduct his 1948 composition, "Sonata da Camera", at the concert of contemporary music under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation on July 23, and Tanglewood's choral department will present his 1940-1941 work, "Coro di Morti", a dramatic madrigal for male chorus, three pianos, brass, double basses and percussion at the July 19 concert by the student symphony orchestra.

Petrassi was born at Zagarolo near Rome on July 16, 1904.

He had experience in music before he sytematically studied it, for he worked in a music shop. Not until 1925 at the age of twenty-one did he take his first lessons in composition. He studied with Di Donato and in the class of Alessandro Bustini in the Santa Cecilia Conservatory in Rome and also took organ practice with Rienzi and Germani.

NAMED PROFESSOR

In 1939 he became a professor of composition at the Santa Cecilia Academy and has remained in that position ever since. He recently completed a term as president of the International Society of Contemporary Music.

Although Petrassi's works were at first basically diatonic, he has arrived at using the twelve-tone technique in a manner that is not radical and is wholly personal in expression. His critics have noted the influence of Hindemith and Stravinsky in his work, an influence needless to say almost inescapable in contemporary composition.

COMMENT

John Weissmann, describing the composer in the magazine "The Score" of June, 1950, wrote: "The early critics of Petrassi's music hardly ever mentioned his name without bringing in those of Hindemith and Stravinsky as well. But although Petrassi uses the same grammatical premises as those stated in Hindemith's "Craft of Musical Composition," they serve an entirely different musical imagination; and although he may have acquired some of his orchestral virtuosity from a thorough study of Stravinsky's scores, his revelry in orchestral consonance and his use of bizarre color combinations are worlds apart from Stravinsky's. Hindemith's instrumental style, is rooted in an unbroken instrumental tradition and his development has consisted in a gradual simplification and humanization of this style. Of course he has written many stage works and choral compositions, but they are just as instrumental in conception as Bach's B Minor Mass compared with one of Palestrina's. Petrassi's instrumental writing, on the other hand, contains vocal elements; his outlines are more melodic than Hindemith's.

ITALIAN INTEREST

John N. Burk, program annotater for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has written: "It could be said that the existence of the artist Petrassi has been made possible by the lively interest in instrumental, even in non-delineative, music in his own country today. The present 'symphonic Italy' intensively revives and nurtures the rich store of their own 17th century music, the works of Vivaldi, Corelli and a host of others. The popularity of purely instrumental music all but disappeared in Italy through the last two centuries while opera prevailed, with its vocal emphasis and eventually with its strength of verismo in Puccini, Mascagni and their fellows. Pioneers such as Sgambati (born 1841), Martucci (1856), Bossi (1861), and Sinigaglia (1868), whose instrumental works were a complement to their theatrical efforts, were in most cases more notable for what they started in others than for what they themselves composed. They were followed by a generation of conscous zealots in whom the theatre was kept incidental to the purely instrumental field: Respighi (born 1879), Pizzetti (1880), Malipiero (1882), Casella (1883), Rieti (1898). Petrassi acknowledges a considerable debt to Casella who, like Malipiero, dedicated himself to the cause of pure neo-classicism. Since Petrassi's earliest compositions, he has nevertheless abandoned the neo-classical forms to seek a more liberal mode of expression adhering to contemporary realism."

WAS IN HUB

Petrassi, who began composing upon his graduation from Santa Cecilia Conservtaory in 1932, has composed many works for orchestra, choir, chamber orchestra, opera and ballet.

In recent years he has been artistic director of the Accademia Filarmonica Romana and superintendent of the Teatro La Fenice in Venice.

Petrassi was in Boston during the Salute to Rome and he attended the premiere of his Fifth Concerto for Orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928
JUL 13 1956

Tanglewood Operas Open On July 30

An evening comprising acts from five 19th Century operas will be given by students of the opera department of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, on Monday, July 30, At 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, in Lenox, under the direction of the opera department's head, Boris Goldovsky, 30 students who comprise the active division —those studying for professional careers—will perform works by Berlioz, Puccini and Verdi.

Admission is through membership in the Friends, the organization through which contributions are made to assist the Berkshire Music Center. As will be the case when the Tanglewood opera department presents its major production of the season a week later—Lukas Foss' three-act opera, "Griffelkin," on Aug. 6 and 7—all seats are reserved, and special tickets are required, available now at the Friends' office in Tanglewood, or by telephone to Lenox 600.

Mr. Goldovsky announces that the program for July 30 will consist of the fourth act from Hector Berlioz' massive "The Trojans," which his New England Opera Company premiered in this country in March of 1955 in Boston; Puccini's "La Rondine" (The Swallow), Act 1, never done at Tanglewood; an act from Verdi's "Don Carlo," which Tanglewood students performed during the 1940 session of the school; Act 1, Scene 2 from Verdi's last masterpiece, "Falstaff"; also, scenes from "Aida" by the same composer.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,857
JUL 13 1956

Students to Give Acts From Operas Of 19th Century

An evening comprising acts from five 19th century operas will be given by students of the opera department of the Boston Symphony orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music center, on Monday, July 30. At 8.30 in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood in Lenox, under the direction of the opera department's head, Boris Goldovsky, 30 students who comprise the active division—those studying for professional careers—will perform works by Berlioz, Puccini and Verdi.

Admission is through membership in the Friends, the organization through which contributions are made to assist the Berkshire Music center. As will be the case when the Tanglewood opera department presents its major production of the season a week later —Lukas Foss' three-act opera, "Griffelkin," on Aug. 6 and 7—all seats are reserved, and special tickets are required, available now at the Friends' office in Tanglewood, or by telephone.

Mr. Goldovsky has announced that the program for July 30 will consist of the fourth act from Hector Berlioz' massive "The Trojans," which his New England Opera company premiered in this country in March of 1955 in Boston; Puccini's "La Rondine" (The Swallow), Act 1, never done at Tanglewood; an act from Verdi's "Don Carlo" which Tanglewood students performed during the 1940 session of the school; Act 1, Scene 2 from Verdi's last masterpiece, "Falstaff"; also, scenes from "Aida" by the same composer.

The operas will have scenery designed by Robert O'Hearn ("The Trojans"), the department's new designer; by technical director Thomas DeGaetani ("Falstaff") and by Mr. O'Hearn's assistant, Edward Flesh ("La Rondine" and "Don Carlo"). Costumes will be by Leo Van Witsen. Boris Goldovsky will provide piano accompaniment.

Other projects of the opera department this summer, open to the public through membership in the Friends are: an evening (July 24) composed of excerpts from 14 Mozart operas, including selections from four totally unknown in the United States; a number of informal recitals of opera scenes done in workshop style on Saturday afternoons, commencing July 14; and a special production for "Tanglewood on Parade" (Aug. 9), enlisting both active singers in the department and students in the associate, or amateur division.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Italian News
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 12,414
JUL 1[illegible]

Boston group to play in 13 European nations

Symphony leav s out Italy

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will not play in Italy during its tour of Europe in August and September.

The Orchestra will play 37 concerts in 13 countries during its five-and-a-half week tour, manager Thomas D. Perry announced this week.

The Orchestra will play in Ireland, Scotland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Russia, Czechoslovakia, Austria, Germany Switzerland, France and England.

But not in Italy.

An official of the Orchestra told The Italian News that lack of time in Europe — especially with the Russian visit — was one reason for not including Italy on the itinerary.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, Music Director for the past seven years, the 106 players of the Boston Symphony will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival on Aug. 12.

[illegible] of two concerts in Ireland, will be played in Cork on Friday evening, August 24, followed by a matinee in Dublin the next day. Five concerts will be given at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, August 26-30, then the symphony will visit Scandinavia for four days.

A highlight of the tour is the invitation, recently issued by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow and immediately accepted by the Board of Trustees of the orchestra for the Boston Symphony to be the first American orchestra to perform in the USSR. During the six days, September 5-10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, a pair of concerts will be given each in Leningrad and Moscow.

The USSR will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour, including transportation by air and train, and will also pay a stipend for the four concerts. It is expected the Russian government will fly the members of the orchestra, its staff and equipment from Helsinki to Leningrad, and from Moscow to its next date in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia.

Concerts subsequently will be performed in Vienna, Stuttgart, Manich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres, where the orchestra has been invited to play in the famous Cathedral, Leeds and London.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Italian News
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 12,414

Petrassi – from music shop worker to composer

Italian at Tanglewood

Goffredo Petrassi, celebrated modern Italian composer, is guest teacher of composition this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjuction with its Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Petrassi's Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for its 75th anniversary, was first performed during Boston's Salute to Rome last December.

The work will receive its Tanglewood premiere at a Berkshire Festival concert on Friday evening, July 27, Charles Munch conducting. In addition, his opera "Morte dell'Aria", composed in 1949-1950, will be performed by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center on Saturday afternoon, July 28.

GOFFREDO PETRASSI

TO CONDUCT

Petrassi himself will conduct his 1948 composition, "Sonata da Camera", at the concert of contemporary music under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation on July 23, and Tanglewood's choral department will present his 1940-1941 work, "Coro di Morti", a dramatic madrigal for male chorus, three pianos, brass, double basses and percussion at the July 19 concert by the student symphony orchestra.

Petrassi was born at Zagarolo near Rome on July 16, 1904.

He had experience in music before he sytematically studied it, for he worked in a music shop. Not until 1925 at the age of twenty-one did he take his first lessons in composition. He studied with Di Donato and in the class of Alessandro Bustini in the Santa Cecilia Conservatory in Rome and also took organ practice with Rienzi and Germani.

NAMED PROFESSOR

In 1939 he became a professor of composition at the Santa Cecilia Academy and has remained in that position ever since. He recently completed a term as president of the International Society of Contemporary Music.

Although Petrassi's works were at first basically diatonic, he has arrived at using the twelve-tone technique in a manner that is not radical and is wholly personal in expression. His critics have noted the influence of Hindemith and Stravinsky in his work, an influence needless to say almost inescapable in contemporary composition.

COMMENT

John Weissmann, describing the composer in the magazine "The Score" of June, 1950, wrote: "The early critics of Petrassi's music hardly ever mentioned his name without bringing in those of Hindemith and Stravinsky as well. But although Petrassi uses the same grammatical premises as those stated in Hindemith's "Craft of Musical Composition," they serve an entirely different musical imagination; and although he may have acquired some of his orchestral virtuosity from a thorough study of Stravinsky's scores, his revelry in orchestral consonance and his use of bizarre color combinations are worlds apart from Stravinsky's. Hindemith's instrumental style, is rooted in an unbroken instrumental tradition and his development has consisted in a gradual simplification and humanization of this style. Of course he has the last two centuries while opera prevailed, with its vocal emphasis and eventually with its strength of verismo in Puccini, Mascagni and their fellows. Pioneers such as Sgambati (born 1841), Martucci (1856), Bossi (1861), and Sinigaglia (1868), whose instrumental works were a complement to their theatrical efforts, were in most cases more notable for what they started in others than for what they themselves composed. They were followed by a generation of conscous zealots in whom the theotre was kept incidental to the purely instrumental field: Respighi (born 1879), Pizzetti (1880), Malipiero (1882), Casella (1883), Rieti (1898). Petrassi acknowledges a considerable debt to Casella who, like Malipiero, dedicated himself to the cause of pure neo-classicism. Since Petrassi's earliest compositions, he has nevertheless abandoned the neo-classical forms to seek a more liberal mode of expression, adhering to contemporary realism."

WAS IN HUB

Petrassi, who began composing upon his graduation from Santa Cecilia Conservtaory in 1932, has composed many works for orchestra, choir, chamber orchestra, opera and ballet.

In recent years he has been artistic director of the Accademia Filarmonica Romana and superintendent of the Teatro La Fenice in Venice.

Petrassi was in Boston during the Salute to Rome and he attended the premiere of his Fifth Concerto for Orchestra.

written many stage works and choral compositions, but they are just as instrumental in conception as Bach's B Minor Mass compared with one of Palestrina's. Petrassi's instrumental writing, on the other hand, contains vocal elements; his outlines are more melodic than Hindemith's.

ITALIAN INTEREST

John N. Burk, program annotator for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has written: "It could be said that the existence of the artist Petrassi has been made possible by the lively interest in instrumental, even in non-deli-neative, music in his own country today. The present 'symphonic Italy' intensively revives and nurtures the rich store of their own 17th century music, the works of Vivaldi, Corelli and a host of others. The popularity of purely instrumental music all but disappeared in Italy through

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Italian News
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 12,414
JUL 1 9 1956

Boston group to play in 13 European nations

Symphony leav s out Italy

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will not play in Italy during its tour of Europe in August and September.

The Orchestra will play 27 concerts in 13 countries during its five-and-a-half week tour, manager Thomas D. Perry announced this week.

The Orchestra will play in Ireland, Scotland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Russia, Czechoslovakia, Austria, Germany Switzerland, France and England.

But not in Italy.

An official of the Orchestra told The Italian News that lack of time in Europe — especially with the Russian visit — was one reason for not including Italy on the itinerary.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, Music Director for the past seven years, the 106 players of the Boston Symphony will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival on Aug. 12.

The first of two concerts in Ireland, will be played in Cork on Friday evening, August 24, followed by a matinee in Dublin the next day. Five concerts will be given at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, August 26-30, then the symphony will visit Scandinavia for four days.

A highlight of the tour is the invitation, recently issued by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow and immediately accepted by the Board of Trustees of the orchestra for the Boston Symphony to be the first American orchestra to perform in the USSR. During the six days, September 5-10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, a pair of concerts will be given each in Leningrad and Moscow.

The USSR will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour, including transportation by air and train, and will also pay a stipend for the four concerts. It is expected the Russian government will fly the members of the orchestra, its staff and equipment from Helsinki to Leningrad, and from Moscow to its next date in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia.

Concerts subsequently will be performed in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres, where the orchestra has been invited to play in the famous Cathedral, Leeds and London.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928
JUL 13 1956

Tanglewood Operas Open On July 30

An evening comprising acts from five 19th Century operas will be given by students of the opera department of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, on Monday, July 30. At 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, in Lenox, under the direction of the opera department's head, Boris Goldovsky, 30 students who comprise the active division —those studying for professional careers—will perform works by Berlioz, Puccini and Verdi.

Admission is through membership in the Friends, the organization through which contributions are made to assist the Berkshire Music Center. As will be the case when the Tanglewood opera department presents its major production of the season a week later—Lukas Foss' three-act opera, "Griffelkin," on Aug. 5 and 7—all seats are reserved, and special tickets are required, available now at the Friends' office in Tanglewood, or by telephone to Lenox 600.

Mr. Goldovsky announces that the program for July 30 will consist of the fourth act from Hector Berlioz' massive "The Trojans," which his New England Opera Company premiered in this country in March of 1955 in Boston; Puccini's "La Rondine" (The Swallow), Act 1, never done at Tanglewood; an act from Verdi's "Don Carlo," which Tanglewood students performed during the 1940 session of the school; Act 1, Scene 2 from Verdi't last masterpiece, "Falstaff"; also, scenes from "Aida" by the same composer.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 13 1956

Students to Give Acts From Operas Of 19th Century

An evening comprising acts from five 19th century operas will be given by students of the opera department of the Boston Symphony orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music center, on Monday, July 30. At 8.30 in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood; in Lenox, under the direction of the opera department's head, Boris Goldovsky, 30 students who comprise the active division—those studying for professional careers—will perform works by Berlioz, Puccini and Verdi.

Admission is through membership in the Friends, the organization through which contributions are made to assist the Berkshire Music center. As will be the case when the Tanglewood opera department presents its major production of the season a week later—Lukas Foss' three-act opera, "Griffelkin," on Aug. 6 and 7—all seats are reserved, and special tickets are required, available now at the Friends' office in Tanglewood, or by telephone.

Mr. Goldovsky has announced that the program for July 30 will consist of the fourth act from Hector Berlioz' massive "The Trojans," which his New England Opera company premiered in this country in March of 1955 in Boston; Puccini's "La Rondine" (The Swallow), Act 1, never done at Tanglewood; an act from Verdi's "Don Carlo" which Tanglewood students performed during the 1940 session of the school; Act 1, Scene 2 from Verdi's last masterpiece, "Falstaff"; also, scenes from "Aida" by the same composer.

The operas will have scenery designed by Robert O'Hearn ("The Trojans"), the department's new designer; by technical director Thomas DeGaetani ("Falstaff") and by Mr. O'Hearn's assistant, Edward Flesh ("La Rondine" and "Don Carlo"). Costumes will be by Leo Van Witsen. Boris Goldovsky will provide piano accompaniment.

Other projects of the opera department this summer, open to the public through membership in the Friends are: an evening (July 24) composed of excerpts from 14 Mozart operas, including selections from four totally unknown in the United States; a number of informal recitals of opera scenes done in workshop style on Saturday afternoons, commencing July 14; and a special production for "Tanglewood on Parade" (Aug. 9), enlisting both active singers in the department and students in the associate, or amateur division.

Pastoral

IT was Benny Goodman on the phone, asking us if we'd like to drive out to Commack, Long Island, and pay a call on an old friend of his named Gustave Langenus. "Gus is seventy-two and knows more about the clarinet than any other man alive," Goodman said. "A terrific teacher, and he's written all the best books on the subject. Every so often, I like to go and play duets and talk clarinet with him. I'd rather listen to Gus play than to most of the other people I know." The invitation was far too pleasant to refuse, and in no time we were tooling out to the Island. "I always feel at home with Gus," Goodman told us. "Met him twenty-six years ago, when I came East from Chicago. I was broke at the time and got a job playing second clarinet on the 'Voice of Firestone,' one of the big radio shows of the day. Gus was first clarinet. He gave me a mouthpiece he'd designed, and he was helpful to me in a lot of other ways. Been buddies ever since! Last time I was with Gus, he coached me on the Mozart Clarinet Concerto. Made me realize that the only way to deal with that music is to sing it with the clarinet, as if it were an aria in a Mozart opera. I never see Gus that I don't learn something new about the clarinet."

As we slipped through Queens, Mr. Goodman mentioned that his plans for the summer include a short vacation at his house in Stamford and a stay at Tanglewood, where he will play and record Mozart's Clarinet Quintet as well as the Concerto. He said he had made a recording of the Quintet in [illegible] and of the Concerto in 1947. [illegible] was never [illegible] these days, [illegible] and [illegible] ment, the continuous [illegible] I made some [illegible] mutual [illegible] were inexperienced [illegible] terest [illegible] phrasing [illegible] sort [illegible] clear [illegible] and [illegible] know [illegible] but Mozart, [illegible] a lot harder to play. The [illegible] jazz [illegible] I wanted to [illegible] do the things I did at twenty. In music, it happens sometimes that the less you know, the better off you are. Still, you've got to keep moving." He shrugged his shoulders and laughed. "Gus seems to know what life is all about," he said. "He likes what he's done and he likes what he's doing. He must feel good about the whole damn thing."

Turning off the main highway, we drove along a dirt road that wound through heavy woods to a clearing, in the middle of which stood a trim white cottage. Mrs. Langenus was sitting in the yard under a hickory tree and got up to welcome us. A good-looking man in blue slacks, a cream-colored corduroy shirt, and crêpe-soled shoes, he showed us about the yard in leisurely fashion—we counted half a dozen bird-houses fixed on trees and posts, and noticed that one of them was decorated with a clef and notes in black wire—and then suggested going inside for a little clarinet playing. "After all, we're in the country, and the clarinet is the pastoral instrument," he said. We [illegible] changed greetings with Mrs. Langenus, and then our host ushered us into the study, which contained a piano, a desk, a tape recorder, and a number of open cabinets along the walls, bearing such labels as "G. L.'s Arrangements for Woodwind Quintets" and "Clarinet Ensembles—Mostly G. L.'s Arrangements." Over the desk were several old photographs, including one of John Philip Sousa. Langenus told us that he was born in Belgium, went to London as a young man, played in Sousa's band there and on the Continent for a couple of seasons, and came to this country in 1910. Goodman took off his jacket, loosened his collar and tie, and put his clarinet to his lips. Langenus decided that they should start off with some Bach duets. "Been playing these duets with myself, Benny," he said. "I record one part, play along with it, record the other part, then play along with that. But the machine is a tyrant; I'd rather play with you."

"Then let's go, Gus," Goodman said. "I'll play the first part."

Langenus gave him an indulgent smile. "No hurry," he said. "These Bach duets are like a walk through the woods. With every measure it's as if a new view came up. The clarinet is the most beautiful instrument that has ever been made, because it comes closest to the human voice, which is the most beautiful instrument of all."

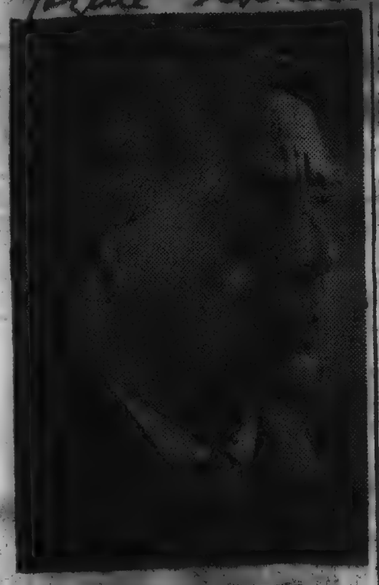
"Come on, Gus!" Goodman pleaded, and they started to play. Both men looked happy and intent, and we wondered as we listened what there was left for them to learn.

THE NEW YORKER

JUL 12 1956

List Plans for Symphony Group's European Tours

Jarrett Schneiday NY



CHARLES MUNCH
To Conduct Abroad

Detailed plans for the Boston Symphony Orchestra's five and a half week tour of Europe in August and September have been announced by Manager Thomas D. Perry Jr.

* * *

THE 100 MEMBERS of the orchestra will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the current Berkshire Festival on Aug. 12 and will return in late September in time for the opening of the 76th season in Boston's Symphony Hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra for the past seven years, will conduct most of the 27 scheduled concerts abroad. Pierre Monteux, music director of the orchestra from 1919 to 1924, has been invited to conduct some 10 of the concerts.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's tour of Europe is to be made in co-operation with the international exchange program of the American National Theatre and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the State Department to assist American performing artists to tour abroad.

* * *

A HIGHLIGHT of the tour is the invitation, recently issued by the ministry of culture in Moscow and accepted by the board of trustees of the orchestra, to be the first American orchestra to perform in the USSR. The orchestra will be in Soviet territory from Sept. 5 through 10 and will present a pair of concerts each in Leningrad and Moscow. The USSR will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour, including transportation by air and train, and will also pay a stipend for the four concerts.

TRAVEL PLANS include the transportation on Aug. 14 of 79 persons from Logan airport, Boston, to Shannon airport, Ireland, on a KLM Royal Dutch Airlines chartered Super-Constellation. Some 40 persons will sail the same date, along with the orchestra's 16,000 pounds of instruments and scores and baggage aboard the Nieuw Amsterdam from Boston to Cobh, Ireland. A 59-passenger KLM Constellation will bring the rear guard of the orchestra to Ireland on Aug. 22.

The first of two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on the evening of Aug. 24 with a matinee in Dublin the following day. Five concerts will be given at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, Aug. 26 through 30, and then the symphony will visit Scandinavia for four days.

Other concerts have been scheduled from Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres, Leeds and London.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Natick Bulletin
NATICK, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,809
JUL 12 1956

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Yancichi of Rutledge road are enjoying a few days at the Tanglewood Music Festival. Mr. Yancichi is a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

[illegible] and Mrs. H. R. Shaw of

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Cape Codder
ORLEANS, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,788
JUL 12 1956

Famed Beaux Arts Trio To Give Wellfleet Concert Friday July 20

The Town of Wellfleet presents the Beaux Arts Trio in a concert of chamber music and solos on Friday July 20, at 8:30 pm in the Congregational Church, for the benefit of the Wellfleet Scholarship Fund. The famous trio consists of Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Manahem Pressler, piano. Their background ranges the globe France, Germany, Israel, North and South America, and their instrumental efforts compress a world of music into one evening.

The famous conductor, Arturo Toscanini, hailed their concert "as an inspiring Experience."

At the Berkshire Festival Dr. Charles Munch, Conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, appraised their concert as follows: "The marvelous musicality of these three artists has been unknown in trio playing for many years. They are worthy successors to the last great trio — Thibaud, Casals and Cortot."

Zino Francescatti, the famous violinist, wrote: "A great ensemble with great artists."

As for individual artists, Mr. Greenhouse is a mature musician and an impeccable executant. He studied with the great master of the cello, Pablo Casals, for two years. Wrote Casals: "Bernard Greenhouse is not only a remarkable cellist, but, what I esteem more, a dignified artist." Since then Mr. Greenhouse has won an enviable reputation as one of the major interpreters on his instrument, with appearances in most of the major cities of both Europe and America. He plays the famous "Visconti" Stradivarius cello, dated 1684.

Daniel Guilet, violinist, is equally famed in Europe and America as soloist and as a chamber musician, having worked with Jacques Thibaud and Georges Enesco. He was concert master of the N.B.C. Symphony when this orchestra was created for Toscanini, and still holds this position. He plays the beautiful "Earl of Darnley" Stradivarius dated 1712.

Manahem Pressler, the brilliant young Israeli pianist was born in Germany, but fled with his family when Hitler came into power. He has been soloist with the leading symphony orchestras of this country, having appeared fifteen times with the Philadelphia Orchestra. He is well known to European audiences in Scandinavia, Israel, Turkey, Greece and France.

Trio To Give Concert Friday July 20

It will be a great musical experience and pleasure to attend this concert. Tickets are $1.50 and will be obtained now at [illegible] and at the door [illegible] night of the performance.

6 Juillet 1956 — France-Amérique

LENOX

Charles Münch à Tanglewood

Le 4 juillet s'est ouvert, dans les Berkshires, le 19[illegible] Festival annuel de musique de l'Orchestre symphonique de Boston, sous la direction de M. Charles Münch. Pendant six semaines, jusqu'au 12 août, des concerts seront offerts dans le cadre de la vaste propriété boisée où, il y a un siècle, Nathaniel Hawthorne raconta ses "Tanglewood Tales". Un hommage spécial sera rendu, cette année, à Mozart, à l'occasion de son bicentenaire.

Numerous inquiries are made at The Citizen office from time to time in regard to the concerts at Tanglewood during the summer months each year. The Citizen has the full schedule of these and will be pleased to furnish information to persons who call.

EVENING CITIZEN, WINSTED, CONN., TUESDAY, JULY [illegible] 1956

[63]

Pastoral

IT was Benny Goodman on the phone, asking us if we'd like to drive out to Commack, Long Island, with him and pay a call on an old friend of his named Gustave Langenus. "Gus is seventy-two and knows more about the clarinet than any other man alive," Goodman said. "A terrific teacher, and he's written all the best books on the subject. Every so often, I like to go and play duets and talk clarinet with him. I'd rather listen to Gus play than to most of the other people I know." The invitation was far too pleasant to refuse, and in no time we were tooling out to the Island. "I always feel at home with Gus," Goodman told us. "Met him twenty-six years ago, when I came East from Chicago. I was broke at the time and got a job playing second clarinet on the 'Voice of Firestone,' one of the big radio shows of the day. Gus was first clarinet. He gave me a mouthpiece he'd designed, and he was helpful to me in a lot of other ways. Been buddies ever since. Last time I was with Gus, he coached me in the Mozart Clarinet Concerto. Made me realize that the only way to deal with that music is to sing it with the clarinet, as if it were an aria in a Mozart opera. I never see Gus that I don't learn something new about the clarinet."

July 7, 1956

THE NEW YORKER

As we slipped through Queens, Mr. Goodman mentioned that his plans for the summer include a short vacation at his house in Stamford and a stay at Tanglewood, where he will play and record Mozart's Clarinet Quintet, as well as the Concerto. He said he had made a recording of the Quintet in 1938 and of the Concerto in 1940. The latter was never released. "In those days, I just went ahead and did them," he continued. "I made some mistakes, but they were interesting mistakes. The playing was innocent, and sort of [illegible] Mozart music, strong and clear and pure. Now I know a lot more about Mozart, which makes him a lot harder to play. The same with jazz. Even if I wanted to, I couldn't do the things I did at twenty. In music, it happens sometimes that the less you know, the better off you are. Still, you've got to keep moving." He shrugged his shoulders and laughed. "Gus seems to know what life is all about," he said. "He likes what he's done and he likes what he's doing. He must feel good about the whole damn thing."

Turning off the main highway, we drove along a dirt road that wound through heavy woods to a clearing, in the middle of which stood a trim white cottage. Mr. Langenus was sitting in the yard under a hickory tree and got up to welcome us. A good-looking man in blue slacks, a cream-colored corduroy shirt, and crêpe-soled shoes, he showed us about the yard in leisurely fashion—we counted half a dozen birdhouses fixed on trees and posts, and noticed that one of them was decorated with a clef and notes in black wire—and then suggested going inside for a little clarinet playing. "After all, we're in the country, and the clarinet is the pastoral instrument," he said. We exchanged greetings with Mrs. Langenus, and then our host ushered us into the study, which contained a piano, a desk, a tape recorder, and a number of open cabinets along the walls, bearing such labels as "G. L.'s Arrangements—Woodwind Quintets" and "Clarinet Ensembles—Mostly G. L.'s Arrangements." Over the desk were several old photographs, including one of John Philip Sousa. Langenus told us that he was born in Belgium, went to London as a young man, played in Sousa's band there and on the Continent for a couple of seasons, and came to this country in 1910. Goodman took off his jacket, loosened his collar and tie, and put his clarinet to his lips. Langenus decided that they should start off with some Bach duets. "Been playing these duets with myself, Benny," he said. "I record one part, play along with it, record the other part, then play along with that. But the machine is a tyrant; I'd rather play with you."

"Then let's go, Gus," Goodman said. "I'll play the first part."

Langenus gave him an indulgent smile. "No hurry," he said. "These Bach duets are like a walk through the woods. With every measure it's as if a new view came up. The clarinet is the most beautiful instrument that has ever been made, because it comes closest to the human voice, which is the most beautiful instrument of all."

"Come on, Gus!" Goodman pleaded, and they started to play. Both men looked happy and intent, and we wondered as we listened what there was left for them to learn.

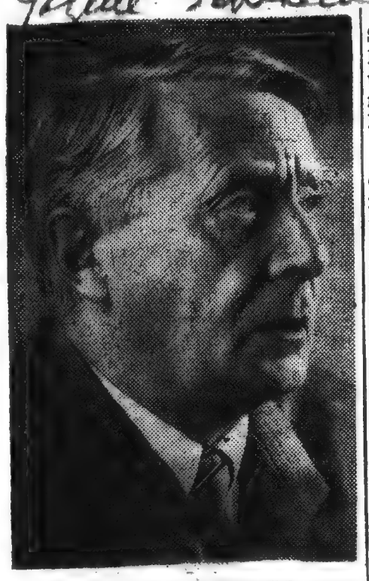
List Plans for Symphony Group's European Tours

Gazette Schenectady NY



CHARLES MUNCH
To Conduct Abroad

Detailed plans for the Boston Symphony Orchestra's five and a half week tour of Europe in August and September have been announced by Manager Thomas D. Perry Jr.

* * *

THE 106 MEMBERS of the orchestra will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the current Berkshire Festival on Aug. 12 and will return in late September in time for the opening of the 76th season in Boston's Symphony Hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra for the past seven years, will conduct most of the 27 scheduled concerts abroad. Pierre Monteux, music director of the orchestra from 1919 to 1924, has been invited to conduct some 10 of the concerts.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's tour of Europe is to be made in co-operation with the international exchange program of the American National Theatre and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the State Department to assist American performing artists to tour abroad.

* * *

A HIGHLIGHT of the tour is the invitation, recently issued by the ministry of culture in Moscow and accepted by the board of trustees of the orchestra, to be the first American orchestra to perform in the USSR. The orchestra will be in Soviet territory from Sept. 5 through 10 and will present a pair of concerts each in Leningrad and Moscow. The USSR will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour, including transportation by air and train, and will also pay a stipend for the four concerts.

TRAVEL PLANS include the transportation on Aug. 14 of 79 persons from Logan airport, Boston, to Shannon airport, Ireland, on a KLM Royal Dutch Airlines chartered Super - Constellation. Some 40 persons will sail the same date, along with the orchestra's 16,000 pounds of instruments and scores and baggage aboard the Nieuw Amsterdam from Boston to Cobh, Ireland. A 59-passenged KLM Constellation will bring the rear guard of the orchestra to Ireland on Aug. 22.

The first of two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on the evening of Aug. 24 with a matinee in Dublin the following day. Five concerts will be given at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, Aug. 26 through 30, and then the symphony will visit Scandinavia for four days.

Other concerts have been scheduled from Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres, Leeds and London.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Natick Bulletin
NATICK, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,809
JUL 12 1956

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Yancichi of Rutledge road are enjoying a few days at the Tanglewood Music Festival. Mr. Yancichi is a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Shaw of

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Cape Codder
ORLEANS, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,788
JUL 12 1956

Famed Beaux Arts Trio To Give Wellfleet Concert Friday July 20

The Town of Wellfleet presents the Beaux Arts Trio in a concert of chamber music and solos on Friday July 20, at 8:30 pm in the Congregational Church, for the benefit of the Wellfleet Scholarship Fund. The famous trio consists of Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Manahem Pressler, piano. Their background ranges the globe - - France, Germany, Israel, North and South America, and their instrumental efforts compress a world of music into one evening.

The famous conductor, Arturo Toscanini, hailed their concert "as an Inspiring Experience."

At the Berkshire Festival Dr. Charles Munch, Conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, appraised their concert as follows: "The marvelous musicality of these three artists has been unknown in trio playing for many years. They are worthy successors to the last great trio - - Thibaud, Casals and Cortot."

Zino Francescatti, the famous violinist, wrote: "A great ensemble with great artists."

As for individual artists, Mr. Greenhouse is a mature musician and an impeccable executant. He studied with the great master of the cello, Pablo Casals, for two years. Wrote Casals: "Bernard Greenhouse is not only a remarkable cellist, but, what I esteem more, a dignified artist." Since then Mr. Greenhouse has won an enviable reputation as one of the major interpreters on his instrument, with appearances in most of the major cities of both Europe and America. He plays the famous "Visconti" Stradivarius cello, dated 1684.

Daniel Guilet, violinist, is equally famed in Europe and America as soloist and as a chamber musician, having worked with Jacques Thibaud and Georges Enesco. He was concert master of the N.B.C. Symphony when this orchestra was created for Toscanini, and still holds this position. He plays the beautiful "Earl of Darnley" Stradivarius dated 1712.

Manahem Pressler, the brilliant young Israeli pianist was born in Germany, but fled with his family when Hitler came into power. He has been soloist with the leading symphony orchestras of this country, having appeared fifteen times with the Philadelphia Orchestra. He is well known to European audiences in Scandinavia, Israel, Turkey, Greece and France.

It will be a great musical experience and pleasure to attend this concert. Tickets are $1.50 and may be obtained now at Wellfleet Town Hall, and at the door of the [illegible] on the night of the performance.

8 Juillet 1956 — France-Amér[illegible]

LENOX

Charles Münch à Tanglewood

Le 4 juillet s'est ouvert, dans les Berkshires, le 19[illegible] Festival tion de son chef, annuel de musique de l'Orchestre symphonique de Boston, sous la direc- M. Charles Münch

Pendant six semaines, jusqu'au 12 août, des concerts seront offerts dans le cadre de la vaste propriété boisée où, il y a un siècle, Nathaniel Hawthorne raconta ses "Tanglewood Tales". Un hommage spécial sera rendu, cette année, à Mozart, à l'occasion de son bicentenaire.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Friday, July 6, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra in an all-Mozart program with Benny Goodman, clarinet. ... ¶ Saturday, July [illegible] at 8:30: Charles Munch directing the [illegible] orchestra, with the Yale Glee Club [illegible] day, July 8, at 2:30: Lukas Foss conducting the chamber orchestra and acting as pianist [illegible] July [illegible] at 8:30: Goodman, clarinet; [illegible] Boston Symphony String Quartet. ... [illegible] July 13, at 8:30: The chamber orchestra conducted by Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz, who, along with Genia Nemenoff, will play Mozart concertos for one, two, and three pianos. ... ¶ Saturday, July 14, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the chamber orchestra in an all-Bach program, with William Kroll, violin, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute. ... ¶ Sunday, July 15, at 2:30: Charles Munch directing the chamber orchestra and the Festival Chorus in a performance of Bach's "St. John Passion," with Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. (Tanglewood, Lenox [illegible] Through Sunday, Aug. 12.)

Numerous inquiries are made at The Citizen office from time to time in regard to the concerts at Tanglewood during the summer months each year. The Citizen has the full schedule of these and will be pleased to furnish information to persons who call.

EVENING CITIZEN, WINSTED, CONN., TUESDAY, JULY 10, 1956

[63]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,408

JUL 12 1956

Boston Symphony Opens Concert Series July 20

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Lenox, Mass., move into high gear next week when the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra of 106 pieces assembles at Tanglewood under the baton of Charles Munch, Music Director. When they complete their two weeks of free Espanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston under the leadership of Arthur Fiedler, 76 players of the Boston Symphony move to the Berkshire Hills of Western Massachusetts.

The entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate on Friday evening (July 20) the annual series of 12 week-end concerts in the huge 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, which is open on three sides so the music may spill out on the spacious lawns where additional thousands of music-lovers assemble, under the stars and tall pines, or picnic in Sunday sunshine. In 1955 the Shed concerts attracted an audience of 108,336, or an average attendance of 9,028 persons.

A feature of the Shed series will be first Tanglewood performances of four symphonic works commissioned by the Boston Symphony during this, its 75th Anniversary season from Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi, who is guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, from Aaron Copland, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston. Charles Munch will also devote two of the Shed concerts to concert versions of Wagner operas. During the Shed season his podium will be shared by Pierre Monteux, who was conductor of the orchestra from 1919-1924 and who has been invited by Dr. Munch to share the conducting during the forthcoming European tour; by Richard Burgin, concertmaster since 1920; by Leonard Bernstein, who has headed the Berkshire Music Center's department of orchestra and conducting since 1946; and by Eleazor de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times
NEW MILFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,786

JUL 12 1956

Men Give Concert At Voorhis Bowl

Under the sponsorship of the Merryall Community Center music lovers from far and wide enjoyed two fine programs by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Eric Simon on the evenings of July 4 and 5.

July 4th's concert was held in the open air at the Van Voorhis Bowl on Paper Mill Road, and several hundred devotees gathered with folding chairs and blankets to lounge and relish the selections, as well as savor the picturesque suroundings. Selections by Mozart, Milhaud, Poulenc and Spohr were played by thirteen members of the wind section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Due to rain the second concert was held in the auditorium of the John Pettibone School. but was nevertheless well attended/ Presented were a Hindemith cantata for soprano and a Stravinsky for soprano and wind instruments, a Suite by Richard Strauss and a Dvorak Serenade for 10 wind instruments, cello and bass. Margaret Willauer sang the solo parts, and Mr. Samuel Mayes, solo cellist, of the Boston Symphony assisted. Mr. Simon conducted.

New Milford is indeed fortunate to have had Tanglewood brought to its door this way, and these annual concerts are a welcome addition to our expanding development physically and culturally.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Gazette (e)
HAVERHILL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 19,039

JUL 12 1956

EUROPE BOUND—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will highlight a six-week tour of Europe with two concerts to be given in Russia. The organization has been invited to play in Leningrad and Moscow, marking the first time an American orchestra has played in the U.S.S.R. Manager Thomas Perry, right, and Assistant Manager Gail Rector sign agreement with KLM Airlines Official Delph Bulterman, left, to fly the 106 man orchestra and staff to and from Europe. Map of tour is in background. (Unifax K)

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Ridgefield Press
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 1,758

JUL 12

Tanglewood

The second week of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct the all-Bach program on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

Boris Goldovsky, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will conduct the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in the Mozart overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo pianists Pierre Luboshutz and Denis Nesterenko. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is piano soloist.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet and Dorjot Academy Dwyer, flute of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all-Bach concert Saturday evening.

On Sunday Mr. Munch will devote the entire concert to Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by choral [illegible] head Hugh Ross.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Granite State Free Press
LEBANON, N. H.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,412

JUL 12 1956

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL PLACE OF CULTURE

Lenox, Mass. — Learn how the magic of music can bring relaxation you never dreamed of by visiting the famius Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood this week end, July 13-14-15.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the Berkshire Music Festival has been described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time," and every visit to the scenic and enchanting Tanglewood estate in Lenox is a memorable one.

On Friday, July 13, at 8:30 p.m., the Festival Chamber Orchestra will play a selection of Mozart's works, while the following evening a night of Bach is scheduled. On Sunday at 2:30, the Chamber Orchestra will perform Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" with chorus and soloists.

Tanglewood in Lenox is located in the heart of the beautiful Berkshires, one of Massachusetts' most scenic playgrounds. Plan to spend the entire week end touring this natural wonderland and using the many facilities for swimming, boating, hiking and picnicking.

Lenox is located on Route 7, just south of Pittsfield. Main east-west routes 2, 9 and 20 all connect with Route 7.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

JUL 12 1956

Boston Symphony Going Overseas

Lenox, Mass. —(UP)— The Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced its itinerary for a Fall European tour which will mark the first appearance of an American symphony orchestra in Russia.

The orchestra will leave the U. S. Aug. 14, with 27 concerts in 13 countries scheduled, Manager Thomas D. Perry Jr. said. On that day, 79 members will fly from Logan International Airport and 40 more will sail with the orchestra's 16,000 pounds of instruments and baggage.

They will head for Shannon, Ireland.

The appearance behind the Iron Curtain followed an invitation by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Shopping News
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Bi-Weekly
Circ. 99,870 Free

JUL 12 1956

YWCA SPONSORS ANNUAL TRIP TO TANGLEWOOD

The Springfield YWCA will be sponsoring its annual trip to Tanglewood on Sunday, July 22. This Sunday afternoon program, presented by the Boston Symphony orchestra, conducted by Pierre Monteux, will include Rossini's "Overture to L'Italiana in Algeri," Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra" and Schubert's "Symphony No. 7 in C Major."

A bus will leave the YWCA at 20 Howard street at 11.00 a. m. Sunday, and it will arrive in Tanglewood in plenty of time for lunch and a tour of Tanglewood. The afternoon concert begins at 2.00 p.m. and the bus will make its return trip at the close of the afternoon program.

The cost of this trip, $5.00, includes transportation and admission charges. For information and reservations for the trip, call the YWCA RE 2-3121.

[64]

MUSIC

ALFRED W. BURKE

LOW[illegible] Franco-American [illegible] under the capable direction of George A. Ayotte presented a splendid program of French folk songs last Sunday evening. The occasion marked the observance of the feast day of St. John the Baptist. Mrs. George A. Ayotte served as accompanist.

It seems that over the years the chorus continues its activity in whatever field the occasion demands. This is as it should be. There is something about a group of people whose initial idea is to advance culture and art in the community.

From top to bottom the chorus has fine singers. Added to this has been the excellent coaching and directing by the leader.

The Arundel Opera theater of Kennebunkport, Me., will present Verdi's 'Rigoletto" as next week's production. It will run from Thursday evening through Saturday evening. As in past years, a cast of experienced singers make up the company's talent list for the season.

Co-directors Wesley Boynton and Morse Haithwaite will stage the production. Mr. Boynton is stage director and Mr. Haithwaite directs the music.

Music Center Opens

The Berkshire Music center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival, opens its 14th session, a six-week course of music studies for advanced students and professionals, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Sunday afternoon.

Aaron Copeland, the distinguished American composer who has been assistant director of the school since its founding in 1940, will address students and guests at opening exercises, at 3:30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert hall.

William Cox, of the Phillips academy, Exeter, N. H., in his capacity as chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music center, the society whose contributions help to support the school, will preside. Dean Ralph Berkowitz will introduce the faculty.

As at every opening of the school since its founding under the direction of the Boston Symphony's former conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, Hugh Ross, head of the choral department, will lead the students in "Alleluia," composed for the school's opening by Randall Thompson.

Tea will be served in the Tanglewood formal gardens following the exercises, and an informal student party will be held Sunday evening at Wheatleigh, residence of male students.

The first of some 25 concerts by students of the Berkshire Music center, which the public may attend through membership in the Friends' society, will be given Thursday evening, July 5, in the Music Shed, at 8:30 p. m., when, for the first time, the symphony orchestra of 100 scholarship students of Department I will play together. The program will include Beethoven's "Egmont" Overture, Samuel Barber's "Essay No. 1", and Brahm's "Variations on a Theme of Haydn", [illegible] student conductors; and will include with a symphony conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, who heads the department this year while its regular head, Leonard Bernstein, is on leave of absence. Mr. de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony orchestra of Rio de Janeiro, was a conducting student at Tanglewood in 1946, and a member of the conducting faculty of the Berkshire Music center from 1947-1951.

The first of six weekly chamber music concerts will be given by students of Department I in the Chamber Music hall, Sunday morning, July 8, at 10 a. m.

MUSIC

ALFRED W. BURKE

LOWELL — With the opening of the Organ Institute at Andover this month, it brings to the Merrimack Valley one of the most rapidly growing music festivals in the country. In the space of a few years the Organ Institute has gained a place in music so important that it is world-wide in interest and participation.

Possibly this has been the result of tremendous work on the part of those interested in the formation and growth of such an experiment in music. It could also be that organ music is for the first time in its history gaining the recognition it snould have received centuries ago.

Arthur Howes, the distinguished organist-conductor, has been director of the institute throughout its brief history. Through his musical knowledge and inspiration the festival idea for the organ has grown in the music world.

Organ Concerto

Aside from the factor of fine guidance and a selection of fine artists to play at the weekly programs, the instiute has brought back a lost element, namely, the organ concerto. Before the advent of the Organ Institute, people here never nad the opportunity of hearing this magnificent form of artistic expression.

Concerti as played by an organist of repute and supported by a selected group of instrumentalists made the Methuen hall somewhat of a shrine for music.

Works by Handel and other composers given over to this form of writing made up the list. It definitely would be a highlight of the present regular series if the organ concerto again became a part of the season's program.

The first program of the current season at the Berkshire festival provided a most pleasant and artistic evening of music. The event featuring the famous Kroll String quartet was not only appropriate, but something that could set the fine pattern which will outline the entire series.

Despite the pressure of playing the opening selection of the season, the final movements of the Mozart "Quartet in C Major" moved with smoothness and a flowing style. A definite vigor and beat marked the second movement of Profofieff's "Quartet No. 1."

It has been several seasons since one has heard such authority and delicacy of understanding as that unfolded by the ensemble in the Beethoven "Quartet in C Major". This work popularly known as the third Rasomkowsky Quartet is one of a series of three such compositions dedicated to the Russian count who commissioned Beethoven to write them.

The entire ensemble played with consumate skill and an ingenious medium of interpretation. However, Mr. Kroll gained the evening's honors. Highlight of the much demanded encore list was a delightful little march by him.

Bach Program

This week-end's final Bach-Mozart chamber orchestra concerts by members of the Boston Symphony orchestra in Tanglewood's theater-concert hall, will feature on Saturday evening an all-Bach program, conducted by Charles Munch. The Brandenburg Concerto No. 2, in F major, the Violin Concerto in E major with William Kroll as solosist will open the program .

Also to be heard will be the Suite No. 2 in B minor, for flute and strings with Doriot Anthony Dwyer as soloist, and the Suite No. 3 in D major.

Sunday afternoon Charles Munch will conduct Bach's "The Passion According to St. John." The festival chorus of Berkshire students trained by Hugh Ross, and soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor and Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses, will make up the vocal list of artists to appear.

Puccini's dramatic masterpiece "Tosca" will be the featured attraction next week at the Arundel Opera theater in Kennebunkport, Me. The production will feature such well known artists as Donna Clair, Douglas Bredt, Shirley Mendonsa, James Fudge and Judith Ann Moore.

Wesley Boynton will be stage director and Morse Haithwaite is in charge of music. Both Lowell men have been most instrumental in advancing the cause of grand and light opera along the summer theater trail. Through their work the Arundel theater has become one of the centers of summer entertainment.

MUSIC

ALFRED W. BURKE

LOWELL — The musical appreciation radio series being conducted by Dr. Edward F. Gilday, chairman of the department of music at Lowell State Teachers college, on Sunday afternoon from Boston, has opened a new field in educational development. Actually, such a series is not new, but in the method employed and the manner of presentation being used, it is practically revolutionary.

All too long the educational centers of the country have interested themselves partially in musical appreciation. However, whatever efforts were extended hardly sufficed.

With the coming of the current series the Teachers college system of Massachusetts has definitely taken the leadership in this field of informal education. Possibly the field will gain a wider following in the coming years.

Dr Gilday has proven himself most competent in his new position. He has carefully selected the field to be covered, and the method and pace to establish the pattern.

Records Unique

One element is concerned with records for children. The records are unique in the style of presentation, and almost priceless in the teaching approach.

Last Sunday Dr. Gilday had his little daughter as guest panalist. Though it would be natural to expect that a child under such guidance would find in music an interesting art, it was a revelation to hear and understand the insight she possessed.

A path into various phases of music could do the same thing for people of any age. The series will undoubtedly follow this pattern. It should be interesting to follow the experiment into art that the world of formal education, has opened.

The eminent jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman, who makes his debut with the Boston Symphony and at its Berkshire festival concerts tomorrow evening, is donating his services in next Wednesday's concert to the Boston Symphony's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire music center, which benefits from the six Wednesday chamber music programs scheduled during the summer. Mr. Goodman will perform Mozart's clarinet quintet, K. 581, with the following principals of the Boston Symphony who comprise the B. S. O. string quartet: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Samuel Mayes, cello.

Boris Goldovsky, the eminent opera commentator and producer of the New England Opera theatre, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will make his debut as conductor and piano soloist on a Berkshire festival program on July 13. He will conduct the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo pianists Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is piano soloist. Luboshutz and Nemenoff have not appeared at a festival concert since 1950.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll string quartet, and Doriot Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all-Bach concert July 14 Both teach chamber music at the Berkshire music center.

Dr. Munch on July 15 will devote the entire concert to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the festival chorus of students of the Berkshire music center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross. Soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. All are former students of the Berkshire music center.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Wilton Bulletin
WILTON, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Cir. 1,634
JUL 11 1956

Tanglewood

The second week of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct the all-Bach program on July 14 and 15. The all-Mozart concert of July 13 will enlist the podium services of Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

Boris Goldovsky, who heads Tanglewood's opera department, will conduct the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in an instrumental overture and in two piano concertos, in one of which he will participate with duo pianists Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff. Mr. Luboshutz conducts the orchestra in a third Mozart concerto in which Mr. Goldovsky is piano soloist.

William Kroll, head of the Kroll String Quartet, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are soloists on Charles Munch's all-Bach concert Saturday evening.

On Sunday Mr. Munch will devote the entire concert to Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," in which the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross.

Pope Cancels

[65]

MUSIC

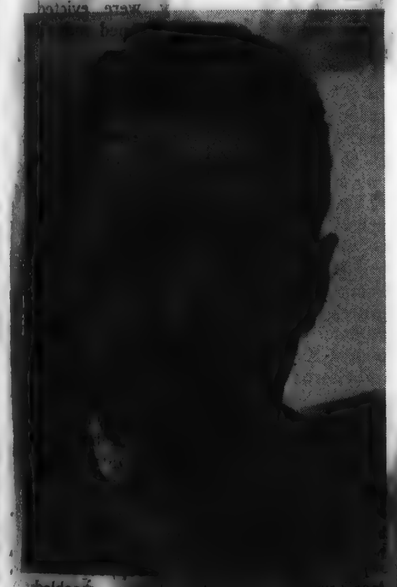
Rescuer of Neglected Composers

Although U.S. foundations have poured out millions in support of the nation's composers, the big names, for many a talented newcomer, a music substitute is still virtually impossible to find. In the audience at Tanglewood last week sat a man who has committed much of his time and most of his fortune to changing all that. He is 40-year-old Chicago Wine Importer Paul Fromm, and he was at Tanglewood to hear the works of two of his protégés, Ben Weber's Serenade, for Strings and Alvin Epstein's Sabrina Fair, premièred by members of the Boston Symphony.

Forced to Flee. When he set up his Fromm Music Foundation four years ago, Paul Fromm was nourishing an ambition as old as his student days in Germany. The son of a prosperous wine grower, he early became an enthusiastic supporter of contemporary German music, was on the point of establishing a music foundation in his homeland when he was forced to flee the country during Hitler's pogroms of 1938. In the U.S. he prospered quickly, set up his own wine-importing firm and bought into several other businesses. By 1952 he was ready to turn his attention to U.S. music.

Fromm's plan was simple. Computing the profits from his various enterprises, he set aside enough to finance expansion and to support himself and his family in an unpretentious seven-room apartment ("We live well, but we are not country club") and gave all the rest (roughly $50,000 a year) to the Fromm Foundation. To help him select worthy recipients of his charities, Founder Fromm hired a [illegible] four-man reviewing staff of professional musicians* (supplemented by occasional guest experts), gave them complete autonomy to award grants to composers who might, or might not be to his personal taste. Of the more than 600 young composers whose works the staff has reviewed, only 56 have received grants. "There is a lot of [illegible] we are looking for art," explains Fromm. Though the initial awards are [illegible] to $1,000), the foundation [illegible] to "commit" itself to a composer for [illegible] years, i.e., to stay with him [illegible] achieved the reputation that [illegible] him to go on to bigger stipends from bigger foundations or stand alone. Beyond providing cash awards, the foundation arranges public performances of its composers' works, has them printed, recorded and released through regular channels.

Saved from Grubbing. Paul Fromm's reward for his good works is the knowledge that he has saved many a first-rate composer from musical grubbing. (On the theory that too much money can be as destructive as too little, he has also vowed never to expose his daughter to the temptations of a large inheritance.) He regards as one of his major triumphs the liberation of Composer Benjamin Lees (TIME, May 7) from the mines of film music writing. "If Ben kept it up, he would go to pieces musically," says Fromm. Last week, Tanglewood concert helped to get Composer [illegible] teaching job. "We need the young composers far more than they need us," says Fromm. "All the foundations care about is that they don't [illegible]



Too much is as bad as too little.

TIME, JULY 23, 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 13 1956

Around Berkshire

Tanglewood Traffic Problem

LENOX—If anybody makes a survey of traffic problems on West street, leading to Tanglewood, the state apparently will have to do it.

The Boston Symphony orchestra, now conducting its annual Berkshire festival at Tanglewood which causes traffic snarls on the narrow road before and after each concert, has declined a suggestion that it study the problem, holding that this is not within its province.

The town had asked the state to rebuild the road but its answer was that it would put up only $35,000 of the needed $50,000, leaving the town and county to pay the balance. They probably will put the job on their 1957 Chapter 90 program but, meantime officials here hope for a survey to show just what will be the best solution.

Petrassi's work [illegible] performed at Tanglewood [illegible] on July 27

A performance of the symphony by Goffredo Petrassi, written for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be given its first performance at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this summer.

Petrassi's Fifth Concerto for Orchestra will be performed at a shed concert on Friday, July 27.

This work will be played in Europe when the Symphony goes abroad following the Tanglewood concerts.

The Festival concerts for 1956, as planned by Charles Munch, will pay homage to Mozart's bicentennial in the chamber orchestra concerts, and will feature during the Shed series two all-Wagner programs in which concert versions of "Die Walkure" Act 1, and the opening and final scene of Act III of "Die Meistersinger" will be given, with the assistance of Metropolitan Opera stars, other soloists and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students.

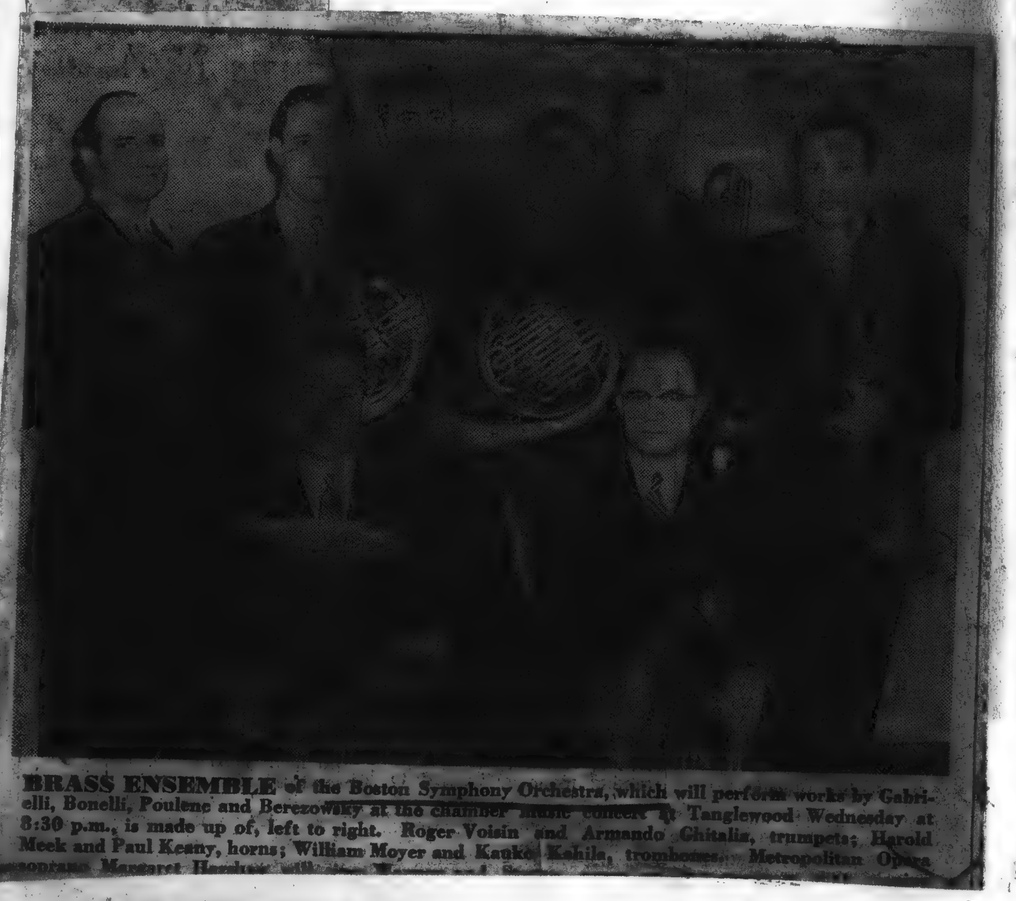
The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts began on Wednesday evening with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. Tonight, Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist.

The Saturday evening concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon [illegible] concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11, 13, 14, 15, will all be given in the intimate 1,2000 seat Tentre Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 P.M., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 P.M.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
JUL 13 1956



BRASS ENSEMBLE of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will perform works by Gabrielli, Bonelli, Poulenc and Berezowsky at the chamber music concert at Tanglewood Wednesday at 8:30 p.m., is made up of, left to right. Roger Voisin and Armando Chitalia, trumpets; Harold Meek and Paul Keany, horns; William Moyer and Kauko Kahila, trombones. Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw [illegible]

[66]

MUSIC

Rescuer of Necktie Salesmen

Although U.S. foundations have poured out millions in support of the nation's composers, the big money has usually gone to the big names. For many a talented newcomer, a musical grubstake is still virtually impossible to find. In the audience at Tanglewood last week sat a man who has committed much of his time and most of his fortune to changing all that. He is 49-year-old Chicago Wine Importer Paul Fromm, and he was at Tanglewood to hear the works of two of his protégés, Ben Weber's Serenade for Strings and Alvin Epstein's Sabrina Fair, performed by members of the Boston Symphony.

Forced to Flee. When he set up his Fromm Music Foundation four years ago, Paul Fromm was nourishing an ambition as old as his student days in Germany. The son of a prosperous wine grower, he early became an enthusiastic supporter of contemporary German music, was on the point of establishing a music foundation in his homeland when he was forced to flee the country during Hitler's pogroms of 1938. In the U.S. he prospered quickly, set up his own wine-importing firm and bought into several other businesses. By 1952 he was ready to turn his attention to U.S. music.

Fromm's plan was simple. Computing the profits from his various enterprises, he set aside enough to finance expansion and to support himself and his family in an unpretentious seven-room apartment ("We live well, but we are not country club"), gave all the rest (roughly $50,000 a year) to the Fromm Foundation. To help him select worthy recipients of his charities, Founder Fromm hired a permanent four-man reviewing staff of professional musicians* (supplemented by occasional guest experts), gave them complete autonomy to award grants to composers who might or might not be to his personal taste. Of the more than 600 young composers whose works the staff has reviewed, only 56 have received grants. "There is a lot of just good stuff; we are looking for art," explains Fromm. Although the initial awards are modest ($350 to $1,000), the foundation is prepared to "commit" itself to a composer for several years, i.e., to stay with him until he has achieved the reputation that will enable him to go on to bigger stipends from bigger foundations or stand alone. Beyond providing cash awards, the foundation arranges public performances of its composers' works, has them printed, recorded and released through regular channels.

PHILANTHROPIST FROMM
Too much is as bad as too little.

Saved from Grubbing. Paul Fromm's reward for his good works is the knowledge that he has saved many a first-rate composer from money grubbing. (On the theory that too much money can be as destructive as too little, he has also vowed never to expose his daughter to the temptations of a large inheritance.) He regards as one of his major triumphs the liberation of Composer Benjamin Lees (TIME, May 7) from the stress of film music writing. "If Ben kept it up, he would go to pieces musically," says Fromm. Last week Tanglewood's [illegible] helped to get Composer Lees a [illegible] teaching job. "We need the young composers far more than they need us," says Fromm. "All the foundations combined [illegible] that they don't have to help individuals."

* Visiting musicians include Brooklyn College's Sidney Finkelstein, St. Paul's Alexander Tcherepnin and the American Conservatory of Music's Max Sinsheimer.

TIME, JULY 23, 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 13 1956

Around Berkshire

Tanglewood Traffic Problem

LENOX—If anybody makes a survey of traffic problems on West street, leading to Tanglewood, the state apparently will have to do it.

The Boston Symphony orchestra, now conducting its annual Berkshire festival at Tanglewood which causes traffic snarls on the narrow road before and after each concert, has declined a suggestion that it study the problem, holding that this is not within its province.

The town had asked the state to rebuild the road but its answer was that it would put up only $35,000 of the needed $50,000, leaving the town and county to pay the balance. They probably will put the job on their 1957 Chapter 90 program but meantime officials here hope for a survey to show just what will be the best solution.

* * *

Petrassi's work to be performed at Tanglewood Festival on July 27

A performance of the symphony by Goffredo Petrassi, written for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be given its first performance at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this summer.

Petrassi's Fifth Concerto for Orchestra will be performed at a shed concert on Friday, July 27.

This work will be played in Europe when the Symphony goes abroad following the Tanglewood concerts.

The Festival concerts for 1956, as planned by Charles Munch, will pay homage to Mozart's bicentennial in the chamber orchestra concerts, and will feature during the Shed series two all-Wagner programs in which concert versions of "Die Walkure", Act I, and the opening and final scene of Act III of "Die Meistersinger" will be given, with the assistance of Metropolitan Opera stars, other soloists and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students.

The 1956 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts began on Wednesday evening with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. Tonight, Charles Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist.

The Saturday evening concert will have Dr. Munch conducting two Mozart works, and Hugh Ross will lead pieces by Martinu and Henry Cowell with the assistance of the Yale Glee Club. On Sunday afternoon a concert of Haydn and Bach, including also three contemporary works by Irving Fine, Alexei Haieff and Charles Ives will be led by Lukas Foss, a member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood. Foss will be piano soloist.

The above concerts, and those of the following week, July 11, 13, 14, 15, will all be given in the intimate 1,2000 seat Teatre Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 P.M., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 P.M.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
JUL 13 1956

BRASS ENSEMBLE of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will perform works by Gabrielli, Bonelli, Poulenc and Berezowsky at the chamber music concert at Tanglewood Wednesday at 8:30 p.m., is made up of, left to right. Roger Voisin and Armando Ghitalia, trumpets; Harold Meek and Paul Keany, horns; William Moyer and Kauko Kahila, trombones. Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw will sing Wagner and Strauss songs on the program that evening.

[66]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Press-Herald (m)
PORTLAND, Me.
Independent Republican
Circ. 49,758

1 3 1956

Busiest Musician In Maine Has Won The Applause Of World's Great Pianists

By OTIS C. WILLIAMS JR.
(Staff Writer)

The man who is probably the busiest musician in the State of Maine has never given a concert or a lesson in his life.

Year after year he has more bookings than any three concert artists could handle, and he could work seven days a week if he liked.

Yet Frank I. Collins of South Portland is better known in an cert or a lesson in his life.
clusive circle of the world's the public

HE'S THE PIANO TUNER who has serviced the concert grands in City Hall for many years and a sheaf of press notices from the keyboard giants of two generations attest to the brilliance of his career.

An old acquaintance of Artur Rubinstein, the middle-aged Collins recalls with pride the words of the man who is probably the most renowned concert pianist of our time.

"Mr. Collins," said Rubinstein, "it is a pleasure to play a piano you have tuned."

This came from the artist who confided to Collins during one of his appearances in Portland:

"I love to play the piano. Even if they didn't give me any money for it, I would still play."

The few pianists of Rubinstein's stature can command between $1,500 and $3,000 for about an hour's performance. Collins can charge up to $10 for an hour's work tuning a concert grand, less for an upright piano.

But with more pianos being sold today than ever before and piano tuners growing scarcer by the year, the artist's performance would be impossible without the man behind the tuning fork and the wrench.

NAMES OF THE PIANISTS with whom Collins has concertized — in unseen collaboration — read like a roster of music's brightest stars.

Serkin, Casadesus, Rubenstein, Arrau, Curzon, Iturbi, Percy Grainger, Vronsky and Babbin and many, many more.

It is with piano soloists such as these that Collins' work shows to its great advantage, but singers, violinists or any other musicians requiring piano accompaniment for an appearance here all profit from his skill.

From the brilliant violinist Zino Francescatti to the leading Metropolitan Opera mezzo Rise Stevens, all have praised Collins' work.

Short, wiry and independent, the Portland-born Collins says:

"I'd never ask any of them for an autograph for years. You know how it is. But then I started asking most of them to write their name on a program for me. I think I started with Clifford Curzon. Boy, you should see what they write. Pretty nice."

That sheaf of concert programs inscribed in the artists' own handwriting constitutes Collins' press clippings.

They tell the story, too, of why he can't keep up with the calls for his services from as far away as the Bowdoin College Music Department and the summer home of the Efrem Zimbalists at Rockport.

SO HIGHLY do some of the great artists regard the work of a good piano tuner, that at least two appearing here have referred to Collins as a "collaborator" in the concert.

In notes scribbled on a program the great French pianist Robert Casadesus has written "To Frank Collins with my best regards and many thanks for his precious collaboration."

Another reads "To Frank Collins with many thanks for his beautiful tuning and kind collaboration," signed, Rudolph Serkin.

Mutual admiration going back many years exists between Collins and the pianist Artur Rubinstein for whom Collins has tuned the City Hall grand at least three times.

Of Rubinstein, the Portland craftsman says, "He's the greatest artist living today."

And on two concert programs the brilliant Rubinstein has written:

"To Mr. Frank Collins, thanking him for the wonderful work he did with my piano."

And, again "To Frank Collins with my warm thanks for his splendid work."

The fine English pianist Curzon wrote of Collins "in gratitude for his excellent service on the Steinway."

TUNING TWO or more pianos so that each matches the other perfectly is an even further extension of the fine art. In this field, Collins' testimonials build rapidly to what can only be described as a crashing crescendo.

Duo-pianists Vronsky and Babin wrote "many thanks for a magnificent job."

Doubling that, all four members of the First Piano Quartet, signed a message reading "Thank you for a wonderful job!"

The climax was reached in a piano festival conducted in City Hall three years ago when Collins was praised for tuning up an entire ensemble consisting of no less than 15 pianos.

Prof. Frederic Tillotson, head of the Music Department at Bowdoin College, and a pianist himself, has called Collins "one of the best tuners in New England."

But admiration for the overly-modest South Portlander is not confined to those who play his chosen instrument.

The gifted young soprano Adele Addison, well-known in Portland, who most recently sang the leading role in a nationally-televised opera presentation, wrote:

"I'm happy you came — thank you for the fine piano," and signed it simply "Adele."

Richard Tucker, a leading Metropolitan Opera tenor, said "Thanks for a wonderful piano tuning."

On a night when she signed no autographs here, Jeanette McDonald took the time to pen "Thank you" to Collins.

After a concert by the Longines Symphonette, a note from Conductor Mishel Piastro said "Thanks for your fine cooperation."

YET, THE WORDS which Collins prizes most highly did not come from one of the towering giants of the concert stage but from a hard-working perfectionist named Richard Burgin who Collins calls "one of the finest musicians in America."

Burgin, conductor of the Portland Symphony Orchestra, is also assistant conductor and concertmaster of the world-renowned Boston Symphony.

On a night this March when the young pianist Miss Tung Kwong-Kwong had performed Beethoven's ringing Fourth Concerto with the Portland Symphony, Burgin strode across the room backstage and took Collins' program.

On it the man who tirelessly demands the best wrote "Thanks for the perfect tuning of the piano" and signed it "Burgin."

These are only a handful of the notes of praise Collins has received and it was only in recent years that he started keeping the programs.

Collins, himself, is quick to point out that there are several other fine piano tuners in Portland and all appear to have all the business they can handle. He is not the only one.

But Collins' handling of the City Hall Auditorium grands has kept his name preeminent in musical circles and the word continues to get around year after year.

"I never in my life solicited a job either. I never had even a business card printed and I never took an advertisement," he says.

Younger men are not entering the piano-tuning profession as they once did and the ranks of the older craftsmen have thinned out. Collins agrees that any tuner today is in demand.

There are other tuners and all are busy, but the facts that Collins is both very good and very busy are undeniable.

Since musicians and dealers agree there are probably more pianos in the Greater Portland area than there are in any other area of the state, and since Collins' work carries him far beyond the confines of this concentrated ivory mine, being the busiest man in Maine in his line comes easy.

HIS LIFETIME on the concert stage spans almost an era—he tuned pianos for John Rogers Chapman, father of the glittering Maine Music Festivals of yesteryear.

As a youth he heard some of the piano greats of an earlier generation — men like Camille Saint-Saens, the great Busoni, Gabrillevicz, Rachmaninov, De Pachmann and Paderewski.

Collins is a determined workman with his tools. His playing consists entirely of sounding one note monotonously against another until the middle octave of the keyboard is in tune and every other octave in accord with that.

There are 11 octaves and 88 notes on a piano keyboard and a recital by Collins can be pretty deadly listening.

Yet, when he tries a few bars to test his work, his sure and graceful touch shows the mark of a true musician.

Grinning, he stands not much higher than a grand piano and rests his surprisingly muscular forearms on the lid.

"You might not know it," he begins, "but I once played the violin. I don't play the piano. Can't play it; never tried. But I studied the violin.

"My sister was a good piano player and my twin brother was a good cellist. We used to play Beethoven trios together in Boston and a lot of people thought we should go on to play professionally.

"But I knew I didn't want to play professionally, and then I got into this."

Both Collins' father and his uncle were widely-known musicians in Boston where the family lived for many years.

Collins has been working with pianos for 35 years, a good part of that time divided between his own business in Portland, and Boston where he was associated with the Ivers & Pond Mfgr. Co., piano makers, for 25 years.

HIS LAST 12 YEARS with Ivers & Pond, he was head tuner and voice adjuster for the factory—the man who put the master finishing touches on the fine "edge" of each new instrument before it was declared completed.

Today, as he has for many years, Collins heads the piano tuning department of Cressey & Allen as a five-day a week job. The firm is Steinway's agent here and it is through Steinway that a big concert grand is kept "stationed" in City Hall.

On his own time, Collins continues to conduct his own piano tuning business on the side with the agreement of his employers.

He lives in his own home at 15 Victory Ave., South Portland, and has two married daughters and three grandsons.

His daughters are Mrs. Ernest A. Marcoux of Salmon Falls, and Mrs. Bennett Norton of Shelburne, N.H.

As to Collins' hobbies, when he does have an evening at home to himself he says, "I like to listen to good music on the radio or on records."

He doesn't own a piano.

[67]

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS-REPUBLICAN
Circ. W. 3,617

JUN 21 1956

Music Center Announces Summer Events Open To Friends

Numerous performances by students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given during the course of this summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

This Orchestra's music school in the Berkshire hills is now preparing for its 14th year, which will commence with the arrival of some 400 students from all parts of the U.S.A., Canada and foreign countries on Sunday, July 1. The Berkshire Music Center has Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as Director; Aaron Copland as Assistant Director; Ralph Berkowitz as Dean; and such eminent musicians on its faculty as Eleazar de Carvalho, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Goffredo Petrassi, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, William Kroll, Ingolf Dahl and first-chair members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Young musicians of high skill - instrumentalists, conductors, singers, many on the threshold of distinguished careers, will have at Tanglewood the invaluable experience of group performance. As in the past their concerts are open to those who enroll in the society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage donations to the work of the Orchestra's summer music school. A voluntary contribution constitutes membership in the Friends, who at the end of the summer of 1955 totalled 4,715 individuals contributing $46,094.00. Last summer was the first time that the Berkshire Music Center also benefitted from the Rockefeller Foundation's five-year matching grant for all money raised over $15,000 from outside sources.

A complete calendar of events, listing all student activities of the Berkshire Music Center as well as all the programs of the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is now available and may be had by writing to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood. Lenox, Mass.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Italian News
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 42,414

JUL 1 3 1956

Symphony Should Play in Italy

According to the latest announcement the Boston Symphony Orchestra will not perform in Italy during its tour of Europe in August and September.

An extensive itinerary has been set up for the orchestra's five-and-a-half week tour. The orchestra will play in 13 countries. These include Ireland, Scotland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Russia, Czechoslovakia, Austria, Germany, Switzerland, France and England.

It is very difficult to understand why no provision was made for the orchestra to appear in Italy.

Of all nations of the world, one would think that Italy — where classical music as we know it was born — would be first on the list of any American orchestra touring Europe.

Besides the obvious cultural value of the orchestra's appearing in Italy, there is a most important political value. The United States government is particularly supporting the tour. Surely, our officials in Washington realize the value of showing the Italians that America is capable of producing more than boogie-woogie and rock and roll. America is criticized regularly in Italy, especially by the very vocal left wing press there, for lacking appreciation of great culture. We are pictured as an imature nation of wealthy playboys.

Several performances of the great Boston Symphony Orchestra in Italy would do much to dispell this propaganda. And the value in welding the bonds of friendship between Italy and the United States would be inestimable.

We hope that the Boston Symphony will make provision in its itinerary to perform in Italy. Although plans for appearances seem to be already scheduled, we are sure that the extra effort made to appear in Italy will be well worth it.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Press (e)
BRISTOL, Conn.
Independent Republican
Circ. 12,670

Hub Symphony Lists Itinerary European Tour

Plan 27 Concerts In 13 Countries August And Sept.

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass., July 13 — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play twenty-seven concerts in thirteen countries during its five-and-a-half week tour of Europe in August and September, manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., announced today.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, its Music Director for the past seven years, the 106 players of the Boston Symphony will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival here on August 12.

The first of two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on Friday evening, August 24, followed by a matinee in Dublin the next day. Five concerts will be given at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, August 26-30, then the symphony will visit Scandinavia for four days.

Going To Russia

A highlight of the tour is the invitation, recently issued by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow and immediately accepted by the Board of Trustees of the orchestra, for the Boston Symphony to be the first American orchestra to perform in the U.S.S.R. During the six days, September 5-10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, a pair of concerts will be given each in Leningrad and Moscow. The U.S.S.R. will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour including transportation by air and train, and will also pay a stipend for the four concerts. It is expected the Russian government will fly the members of the orchestra, its staff and equipment from Helsinki to Leningrad, and from Moscow to its next date in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia.

Concerts subsequently will be performed in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres — the orchestra has been invited to play in the famous Cathedral — Leeds and London.

The itinerary follows:

Cork, Ireland, August 24; Dublin Ireland, August 25 (matinee) Edinburgh, Scotland, August 26 through 30; Copenhagen, Denmark, August 31; Oslo, Norway, September 1; Stockholm, Sweden, September 3; Helsinki, Finland, September 4; Leningrad, U. S. S. R., September 5 and 6; Moscow U. S. S. R., September 8 and 9; Prague, Czechoslovakia, September 11; Vienna, Austria, September 12; Stuttgart, Germany, September 13; Munich, Germany, September 14; Zurich, Switzerland, September 16; Berne, Switzerland, September 17; Paris, France, September 19 and 20; Chartres, France, September 21; Leeds, England, September 23; London, England, September 24 and 25.

Pierre Monteux, once regular music director of the Boston Symphony (1919-1924), has been invited by his friend and colleague, Dr. Munch, to conduct some ten of the orchestra's twenty-seven concerts abroad.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's tour of Europe is to be made in cooperation with the International Exchange Program of The American National Theatre and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the State Department to assist American performing artists to tour aboard, to help cover the cost of trans-Atlantic transportation by air, and to help defray deficits to the orchestra from concerts abroad.

The six-week twenty-four concert schedule of the Berkshire Festival which opened last week terminates on Sunday afternoon, August 12. On Tuesday afternoon, August 14, a K.L.M. Royal Dutch Airlines chartered Super-Constellation will bring the rear guard of the Logan Airport, Boston, to Shannon Airport, Ireland. Some 40 persons will sail simultaneously along with the orchestra's 16,000 pounds of instruments and scores and baggage, abroad the Nieuw Amsterdam, of the Holland American Line, from Boston to Cobh, Ireland. A 59-passenger K.L.M. Constellation will bring the rearguard of the orchestra to Ireland on August 22. Included in total party will be a staff of ten, some wives of members of the orchestra, and newspaper critics.

At the conclusion of the second London concert in Festival Hall on September 25, two chartered planes again will fly the Boston Symphony's tour personnel across the Atlantic, and a special air freighter will return their equipment simultaneously for the opening of the orchestra's 76th season in Boston's Symphony Hall on Friday, October 5.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

JUL 13 1956

...Copland and Strauss songs on the program that evening

Tanglewood Tales

Aaron Copland has six composition students at Tanglewood this summer: Hector Campos-Parsi, of Puerto Rico; Carlos Farinas, of Havana, Cuba; Thomas R. Putsche Jr., of Hartford, Conn.; Eino J. Rautavaara, of Helsinki, Finland; Michael D. Sahl, of New York City, and Ramon Zupko, of Youngstown, Ohio. Mr. Copland arranges the programs which these student composers, and students of his associates, Goffredo, Petrassi, Lukas Foss and Irving Fine air before Tanglewood festival audiences during the four forums of the summer season.

* * *

The first composers' forum, scheduled for Sunday evening in Tanglewood's Chamber Music Hall at 8:30 will offer compositions by Putsche and Zupko, and works by Robert Lombardo, of Hartford, Conn., William J. Sydeman, of Sarnia, Ont., Canada, and Joseph S. Lukewitz, of Chicago. Mr. Sydeman, 27, a second year student at Tanglewood, studied here last year with Roger Sessions. He prepared at Duke University and the Mannes College of Music in New York, where he received a B.S. degree in 1955. He is attending the Berkshire Music Center with his wife, a piano student.

The two Hartford composers represented on the Sunday forum both prepared at the Hartt School of Music. Mr. Lombardo, aged 24, received his B. Mus. and M. Mus. degrees there in 1955 and now teaches piano and theory in the Connecticut capital. Mr. Putsche, aged 27, got his B.A. from the University of Chicago, and his two musical degrees in Hartford. He is on a Crofts Scholarship at Tanglewood, and currently studies in the winters at the Juilliard School of Music in New York. Ramon Zupko, 23, attended Boardman High and Youngstown University, and got his B. Sc. degree from Juilliard last June. Joseph Lukewitz, 31, studies composition at the American Conservatory of Music in Chicago, and previously attended the Illinois Institute of Technology and Roosevelt College there.

* * *

Each summer large groups of music lovers visit Tanglewood, and pleasant arrangements for the groups are made through Tanglewood staffer Stoddard G. Spader for the visitors to enjoy the Tanglewood waterfront on Stockbridge Bowl for boating and swimming, and to picnic on the Boston Symphony's summer estate. Such groups this year include: July 20-22, 45 foreign students of M.I.T., Cambridge; 50 members of the United Nations Secretariat from New York, who are housed by Pittsfield hostesses, this year marking the seventh summer such a group has attended the Berkshire Festival concerts; and the YWCA of Springfield. July 27-29: An additional 45 foreign students from M.I.T.; 45 from the Committee on Friendly Relations Among Foreign Students, and summer students from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. July 28 brings 70 girls from the Northampton (Mass.) School for Girls and visitors from the Summer Music Center in West Hartford, Conn. August 3-5 brings the Harvard University Summer School of Arts and Sciences, about 40 in the group. August 9 witnesses the arrival, for "Tanglewood on Parade" of 30 secretaries from all over the U.S., who are assembling that week at the Vassar Institute for Women in Business.

* * *

For the first time in two years, the Tanglewood Study Group, under the direction of Ingolf Dahl, will give concerts during the Berkshire Festival season which will be open to the public through membership in the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. These will be on Saturday afternoon, July 21, and at "Tanglewood on Parade" on August 9. Two piano recitals by the 30-odd Study Group pupils of Ludwig Bergmann of the Study Group will also be held on Saturday afternoons.

* * *

The Tanglewood Berkshire Festival program of Aug. 4 will be a memorial to the Boston Symphony's former conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, who died five years ago. Leonard Bernstein, one of Dr. Koussevitzky's most illustrious pupils, will take time off from the two new musicals he has in the works for Broadway production next season, to travel from his summer home in Vineyard Haven, Martha's Vineyard, to conduct the performance, and Mrs. Bernstein, stage and television actress Felicia Montealegre, now appearing in the Harvard summer theater production of Shakespeare's "Henry V," will come to the Berkshires with him.

The program has dropped the opening Variations for Orchestra by Moevs, and now consists of the first Tanglewood performance of Mozart's Mass in C minor, K. 427, with soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum, and the Festival Choir of Berkshire Music Center students; and Prokofieff's Symphony No. 5, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States and which he performed far and wide with the orchestra.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD
Circ. D. 10,258

JUN 25 1956

Berkshire Music Center Applicants Far Exceed Limit

LENOX, Mass. — Applications for study at the Berkshire Music Center, the six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival concerts this year totaled over 600, while enrollment is limited to some 400, it was announced today. Among these are 28 foreign students.

The music center, founded in 1940, will open its 14th session on Sunday afternoon, July 1, when students will be welcomed by Dr. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in his capacity as director of the summer music school. Composer Aaron Copland is assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz is dean; and Gail W. Rector, assistant manager of the orchestra, is executive secretary.

The students will work on ensemble playing and conducting under Eleazar de Charvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro, while department head Leonard Bernstein is on leave of absence. Classes will also be held in choral singing and conducting under Hugh Ross; composition under Mr. Copland and Italian modern composer Goffredo Petrassi; and opera under Boris Goldovsky.

Students may also enter the Tanglewood Study Group under Ingolf Dahl. Since enrollment in the latter may be for either the full six weeks or for periods of four weeks or two weeks, applications for this department are still being accepted. Study Group students, professional and amateur, have an opportunity to spend their vacations in extensive chamber orchestra reading and to sing in the Festival Chorus with the Boston Symphony in Berkshire Festival concerts. There are to date 65 students registered for this course.

BOSTON, MASS.
GLOBE (Morn.)
Circ. D. 126,015

JUN 15 1956

R.I. Music Official Named Secretary of Harvard Alumni

Peter D. Shultz, business manager of the Rhode Island Philharmonic Orchestra, yesterday became secretaary ofthe Harvard Alumni Association.

His appointment was announced at alumni exercises by Francis W. Hatch, associated president. Shultz will work with Dr. Daniel S. Cheever, new director of alumni affairs, and will succeed Peter E. Pratt '40, who is resigning to enter business.

A native of Des Moines, Shultz graduated from Phillips Exeter Academy and, in 1951, from Harvard, where he was Glee Club manager. He spent two Summers on the management staff of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, and served as enlisted man and officer in the Air Force in 1952-3.

BOSTON, MASS.
AMERICAN
Circ. D. 181,639

JUN 16 1956

Munch Gets Three Degrees in 5 Days

Three degrees in five days is the record rung up by Dr. Charles Munch, who became one of the most honored men in musical and academic circles in the past five days since his return here from his Paris home.

On Sunday Tufts University made the music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra a Doctor of Human Letters; Wednesday Boston College granted him the degree of Doctor of Music and at Harvard's impressive commencement exercises Thursday the degree of Doctor of Music was again conferred upon him. In 1955 Boston University also awarded him with the degree of Doctor of Music.

Dr. Munch returned to Paris last night but he will return within two weeks to open the 14th season of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood in Lenox, of which he is the director, on Sunday afternoon, July 1.

Immediately after the conclusion of the Symphony Orchestra's six-week Berkshire Festival, Dr. Munch will go back to Europe, this time accompanied by all 104 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

STATEN ISLAND, N. Y.
ADVANCE
Circ. D. 43,537

JUN 25 1956

GLORIA FREEMAN, shodoll, sporting Tiffany trinket from Ben Platt, rich furrier. Sixteen-karat sapphire and diamond sparkler big enough to light a room. . .NBC paid $2 million for 50% interest in Figaro, Inc., Joseph Mankiewicz's independent film firm headquartered in Gotham. . . Eydile Gorme, Steve Allen songstress, and David Haft, solvent and eligible, encoring at Chateau Madrid. . .Murray Hamilton, actor, and mate, Terri De Marco, of singing sisters, cleffed "I Never Meant To Get Serious," about to be published.

PETER HOLMES, yeast heir, and Sally Andrews, his intended, a starry-eyed duo at Voyager Room. . .Richard Widmarks bought a farm in North Barrington, Mass. If nothing else, they're near Berkshire Music Festival!. . .George Jessel offered producing berth with Hecht-Lancaster. . .Tin Pan Alley's Ivan Mogul rushing Kay Starr. . .And Ron Ronald, artist, courtin' diana Rufere, writer.

BALTIMORE, MD.
NEWS-POST
Circ. D. 227,679
JUN 25 1956

Boston Symphony Abroad

By HELEN A. F. PENNIMAN

That long-famed organization, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is celebrating this year's seventy-fifth anniversary season, one form of commemoration being a tour of Europe.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, the orchestra will appear in Edinburgh as part of the Scottish Music Festival in August and September, preceding visits to some 25 cities in the British Isles, Scandinavia, Poland, Austria, Switzerland, France and possibly Italy.

It has just accepted an invitation of the Soviet Government to appear in Moscow and Leningrad, and will be the first American Symphony Orchestra to perform in Russia.

MR. MUNCH has invited his old friend, Pierre Monteux, to conduct some of the European concerts, the tour being sponsored by ANTA, plus numerous private and government contributions.

This expedition will immediately follow the Berkshire Festival, promoted at Tanglewood each summer, and running this year from July 4 to August 12. The orchestra will play 12 concerts during this period, with Mrs. Monteux, Lukas Foss, Eleazar de Carvalho, Leonard Bernstein and Richard Burgin assisting Mr. Munch as guest conductors.

There will also be six Mozart-Bach programs featuring distinguished musicians, as well as six programs of chamber music, by noted quartets, trios, duo-pianists and soloists. A feast of music indeed!

THE FOURTEENTH session of the orchestra's Music Centre, as the associated school is called, will open on July 2, with an increased number of scholarships and awards available, outstanding among the latter being the Jascha Heifetz violin prize; the Koussevitsky Prize, for conducting, and the Piatigorsky Cello Prize.

Five awards are available for students of composition, and exceptional opportunities are presented to put what is learned into immediate use, by means of Boris Goldowsky's Opera Department; the Choral department headed by Hugh Ross, and many other general and particular activities.

CHATHAM, N. Y.
COURIER
Circ. W. 3,500
JUN 21 1956

Brisk Advance Sale Of Tanglewood Seats

A brisk demand for seats for the 1956 Tanglewood Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, is reported by Manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., with the opening this week of the box-office at the main gate at Tanglewood. The six-week season of 24 concerts, from July 4 to August 12, anticipates a banner season, on the basis of good subscription sales. The 1955 Berkshire Festival saw an all-time attendance record of 136,087 persons.

BOSTON, MASS.
GLOBE (Sunday)
Circ. S. 369,241
JUN 17 1956

Chicago's Fromm Foundation Donates Chamber Music Concerts to Berkshires

Two concerts of modern chamber music, a bonus for visitors to the Berkshire Festival, will be given in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on July 9 and 23 under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago. The performers will be members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and noted guest artists, to be announced. Each program will include two compositions commissioned by the Fromm Foundation.

★ ★ ★

The brace of concerts, generously donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music at Tanglewood maintained by the Boston Symphony, which commences its 14th season July 2, will each display a work by a former student of the school's composition department. The Fromm Foundation concerts, to be given in addition to the Berkshire Festival's regular schedule of 24 concerts, July 4-August 12, and also extra to the 40-odd concerts and demonstrations by students of the Berkshire Music Center given during the same period, are open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose contributions help support the music school, and to the general public.

Former Students

Music by Benjamin Britten, Igor Stravinsky and Aaron Copland will be performed on Monday evening, July 9, with Mr. Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, as pianist in his own trio, "Vitebsk." The commissioned works are "Serenade for String Quintet" by Ben Weber of New York city; and "Sabrina Fair," a suite of songs for tenor, strings and piano by Alvin Epstein of Hartford, Conn., a Crofts Scholarship student of Mr. Copland at Tanglewood in 1953, and a faculty member of The Hartford College of Music.

The program for the second concert on Monday evening, July 23, will include music by Samuel Barber, Manuel De Falla, Darius Milhaud and Goffredo Petrassi. Mr. Petrassi, noted modern Italian composer, is guest teacher at composition in the Berkshires this Summer. The commissioned work are "Quintet for Bassoon and Strings" by Leland Smith of The University of Chicago's Music Department; and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments by Cuban composer Julian Orbon of Havana, a 1948 Tanglewood composition student.

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES UNION
Circ. D. 60,449 - S. 116,052
JUN 26 1956

TANGLEWOOD SEES TOP ATTENDANCE

The box office at the main gate of Tanglewood is now open for the season and a brisk demand for tickets for the 1956 Berkshire Music Festival has been reported by Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The six-week season of 24 concerts from July 4 to Aug. 12 may top all previous attendance records if subscription sales continue at the present pace. Last year the festival drew an all-time record audience of 126,087 persons.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office which is open Mondays through Saturdays from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. The box office will be open Sundays commencing July 1 with the start of the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the Festival concerts. The telephone for the box office is Lenox, Mass., 600.

12 MAJOR CONCERTS

The 1956 pattern of 12 concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Charles Munch as conductor, have as guest conductors this Summer, Pierre Monteux, Eleazar de Carvalho, Leonard Bernstein and Richard Burgin. The 12 major concerts will be given over four week-ends, July 20 to Aug. 12.

Charles Munch

Features of the large shed season will be first performances at Tanglewood of four symphonic works commissioned during the current season to commorate the 75th anniversary of the orchestra, to include works by Howard Hanson, Walter Piston, Goffredo Petrassi and Aaron Copland.

Two all-Wagner programs with Metropolitan Opera stars, Margaret Harshaw and Albert DaCosta, Amsterdam, N. Y.-born tenor, and other soloists and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Center students are listed. The program will include Act I of "Die Walkure" and the opening and final scene of Act III of "Die Meistersinger." Other noted soloists during the Shed season are Rudolf Serkin, and Jocy de Oliviera, pianists; Zino Francescatti and Ruth Posselt, violinist; and Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts, Margaret Willauer, James Pease and David Lloyd, vocalists.

The Berkshire festival Shed series is preceded by two week-ends of concerts by the chamber section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the popular "Bach-Mozart" concerts given in the 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall, under the direction of Charles Munch, with Lukas Foss, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Lubosutz as guest conductors.

Six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts are also presented during the festival, proceeds to be devoted to the Berkshire Festival's Revolving Scholarship Fund. Benny Goodman, Rudolf Serkin, Zino Francescatti (accompanied by Artur Balsam;) Margaret Harshaw, the Kroll String Quartet, the Boston Symphony String Quartet, the brass ensemble of the orchestra under the direction of BSO trumpeter, Roger Voisin; the Beaux Arts Trio and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet, are the scheduled performers.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429
JUN 2[illegible] 1956

Music Notes

By D. E. RITZ

The 60th anniversary convention of the American Guild of Organists opened yesterday in New York city and will continue through Friday with special programs in the larger churches and auditoriums.

PRE-CONVENTION activities included a West Point recital and tour Sunday afternoon with a recital by Jack A. Davis, organist-choirmaster of the Cadet Chapel and a choral program at St. Paul's Chapel Sunday evening. Ruth Diel, soprano; Beatrice Krebs, contralto; and Chester Watson, baritone, all Octavo Singer soloists, were featured in "The Green Blade Riseth" with the Oratorio Society of New Jersey and M. Searle Wright, composer, conducting Sunday evening.

GUEST ORGANISTS featured in programs during the week include Pierre Cochereau of the Cathedral of Notre Dame, Paris; David R. Fuller, organist of Dartmouth College; Alexander Schreiner, organist of the Tabernacle at Salt Lake City Utah; Claire Coci; George Thalben-Ball, official organist of the BBC Orchestra of London; E. Power Biggs; and Clarence Mader, organist at Immanuel Presbyterian Church of Los Angeles.

Then there will be a high mass Friday marking the observance of the Feast of Saints Peter and Paul at the Church of St. Paul the Apostle, a Sabbath evening service at Temple Emanu-El directed by Lazars Saminsky; a Lewisohn Stadium concert tomorrow evening featuring the New York Philharmonic and the Oratorio Society of New York. A Guild Festival Choral Service was held last evening at St. Bartholomew's Church with choirs from Calvary Church, St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie and St. Bartholomew's Church participating.

Two multiple programs will be held. One this afternoon will include Gustav Holst's "The Coming of Christ;" a lecture and demonstration of "Recent Developments in Tape Music" with Dr. Vladimir Ussachevsky of Columbia University as speaker and a chamber music program by the Guilet Quartet.

A multiple program Friday morning will include a lecture on "Trends in European Organ-Building" by D. A. Flentrop, organ-builder from Holland; a lecture on "Worship, Architecture and Acoustics" by Ray Berry, of the national committee on architecture and acoustics.

THE TRI-CITY SYMPHONY Orchestra, conducted by Edgar Curtis and with Edward A. Rice as concertmaster will present a benefit concert for the Rensselaerville library Saturday at 8:30 p.m. at the Greenville, NY, high school auditorium.

Betty Haines of this city will be featured on the viola with Joseph Malfitano, first violinist of the Metropolitan Opera orchestra, in the Mozart "Symphonie Konzertante for violin and viola."

The program is the first of three scheduled to benefit the Rensselaerville library.

Other numbers scheduled for Saturday are the Schubert "Symphony number 5 in B flat major"; the Wagner "Siegfried Idyll" and the Rossini "Overture to the Barber of Seville."

MIA SLAVENSKA, famed ballerina, will dance with Robert Morrow in the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival programs Friday and Saturday in the Ted Shawn Theater near Lee, Mass. Matinees will be at 4 and evening programs at 9 o'clock.

Other participants in the programs will include a group of 12 dancers in the Texas State College for Women's Modern Dance Group of Denton, Texas; and Sahomi Tachibana, a leading exponent of the classical dance art of Japan.

STUDENTS from 37 states, Canada and 13 foreign countries are among the 325 who have registered so far for the Berkshire Music Center, the six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., The school will open July 1 and conclude with the Berkshire Festival concerts on Aug. 12.

Miss Edith A. Bossler, registrar, reports that additional applications are being processed daily and the full enrollment will be about 400 students.

Dr. Charles Munch, who serves as director of the school, will welcome the students on July 1 to the 14th annual session of the school.

Aaron Copeland is serving as assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz, dean; and Gail W. Rector, assistant manager of the Boston Symphony, as executive secretary.

Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro, is in charge of the department of orchestra playing and conducting. Hugh Ross heads choral singing and conducting. Mr. Copland and Goffredo Petrassi, the Italian modern composer, will head the composition department and Boris Goldovsky the opera workshops.

The Tanglewood Study Group will be directed by Ingolf Dahl. Enrollment in this group is either for the full six weeks or for periods of four weeks and two weeks, and applications for this department still are being accepted. Study group students, professional and amateur, have an opportunity for extensive chamber orchestra reading and to sing in the Festival Chorus with the Boston Symphony in the Berkshire Festival concerts.

So far, the study group registration has accounted for 65 students, 29 of whom are registered for the six-week term, five for four weeks and 27 for two weeks.

The 325 students have been chosen from 600 applicants, resulting from some 1,500 inquiries of which 680 were new this year. Berkshire Music Center scholarship grants have been awarded to 175 students, including 100 who make up the student symphony orchestra.

The 28 foreign students come from: Canada, six; England, four; the Argentine, three; Cuba, Japan, Puerto Rico, two each; and one each from Australia, Egypt, Peru, Germany, Colombia, Brazil, Finland, Uruguay and West Germany.

[69]

BALTIMORE, MD.
NEWS-POST
Circ. D. 227,679
JUN 25 1956

Boston Symphony Abroad

By HELEN A. F. PENNIMAN

That long-famed organization, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is celebrating this years its seventy-fifth anniversary season, one form of commemoration being a tour of Europe.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, the orchestra will appear in Edinburgh as part of the Scottish Music Festival in August and September, preceding visits to some 25 cities in the British Isles, Scandinavia, Poland, Austria, Switzerland, France and possibly Italy.

It has just accepted an invitation of the Soviet Government to appear in Moscow and Leningrad, and will be the first American Symphony Orchestra to perform in Russia.

MR. MUNCH has invited his old friend, Pierre Monteux, to conduct some of the European concerts, the tour being sponsored by ANTA, plus numerous private and government contributions.

This expedition will immediately follow the Berkshire Festival, promoted at Tanglewood each summer, and running this year from July 4 to August 12. The orchestra will play 12 concerts during this period, with Mr. Monteux, Lukas Voss, Eleazar de Carvalho, Leonard Bernstein, and Richard Burgin assisting Mr. Munch as guest conductors.

There will also be six Mozart-Bach programs featuring distinguished musicians, as well as six programs of chamber music, by noted quartets, trios, duo-pianists and soloists. A feast of music indeed!

THE FOURTEENTH session of the orchestra's Music Centre, as the associated school is called, will open on July 2, with an increased number of scholarships and awards available, outstanding among the latter being the Jascha Heifetz violin prize; the Koussevitsky Prize, for conducting, and the Piatigorsky Cello Prize.

Five awards are available for students of composition, and exceptional opportunities are presented to put what is learned into immediate use, by means of Boris Goldowsky's Opera Department; the Choral department headed by Hugh Ross, and many other general and particular activities.

CHATHAM, N. Y.
COURIER
Circ. W. 3,500
JUN 21 1956

Brisk Advance Sale Of Tanglewood Seats

A brisk demand for seats for the 1956 Tanglewood Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, is reported by Manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., with the opening this week of the box-office at the main gate at Tanglewood. The six-week season of 24 concerts, from July 4 to August 12, anticipates a banner season, on the basis of good subscription sales. The 1955 Berkshire Festival saw an all-time attendance record of 136,087 persons.

BOSTON, MASS.
GLOBE (Sunday)
Circ. S. 369,241
JUN 17 1956

Chicago's Fromm Foundation Donates Chamber Music Concerts to Berkshires

Two concerts of modern chamber music, a bonus for visitors to the Berkshire Festival, will be given in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on July 9 and 23 under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago. The performers will be members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and noted guest artists, to be announced. Each program will include two compositions commissioned by the Fromm Foundation.

★ ★ ★

The brace of concerts, generously donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music at Tanglewood maintained by the Boston Symphony, which commences its 14th season July 2, will each display a work by a former student of the school's composition department. The Fromm Foundation concerts, to be given in addition to the Berkshire Festival's regular schedule of 24 concerts, July 4-August 12, and also extra to the 40-odd concerts and demonstrations by students of the Berkshire Music Center given during the same period, are open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose contributions help support the music school, and to the general public.

Former Students

Music by Benjamin Britten, Igor Stravinsky and Aaron Copland will be performed on Monday evening, July 9, with Mr. Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, as pianist in his own trio, "Vitebsk." The commissioned works are "Serenade for String Quintet" by Ben Weber of New York city; and "Sabrina Fair," a suite of songs for tenor, strings and piano by Alvin Epstein of Hartford, Conn., a Crofts Scholarship student of Mr. Copland at Tanglewood in 1953, and a faculty member of The Hartford College of Music.

The program for the second concert on Monday evening, July 23, will include music by Samuel Barber, Manuel De Falla, Darius Milhaud and Goffredo Petrassi. Mr. Petrassi, noted modern Italian composer, is guest teacher of composition in the Berkshires this Summer. The commissioned work are "Quintet for Bassoon and Strings" by Leland Smith of The University of Chicago's Music Department; and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments by Cuban composer Julian Orbon of Havana, a 1946 Tanglewood composition student.

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES UNION
Circ. D. 60,449 - S. 116,052
JUN 26 1956

TANGLEWOOD SEES TOP ATTENDANCE

The box office at the main gate of Tanglewood is now open for the season and a brisk demand for tickets for the 1956 Berkshire Music Festival has been reported by Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The six-week season of 24 concerts from July 4 to Aug. 12 may top all previous attendance records if subscription sales continue at the present pace. Last year the festival drew an all-time record audience of 126,087 persons.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office which is open Mondays through Saturdays from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. The box office will be open Sundays commencing July 1 with the start of the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the Festival concerts. The telephone for the box office is Lenox, Mass., 600.

Charles Munch

12 MAJOR CONCERTS

The 1956 pattern of 12 concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Charles Munch as conductor, have as guest conductors this Summer, Pierre Monteux, Eleazar de Carvalhe, Leonard Bernstein and Richard Burgin. The 12 major concerts will be given over four week-ends, July 20 to Aug. 12.

Features of the large shed season will be first performances at Tanglewood of four symphonic works commissioned during the current season to commorate the 75th anniversary of the orchestra, to include works by Howard Hanson, Walter Piston, Goffredo Petrassi and Aaron Copland.

Two all-Wagner programs with Metropolitan Opera stars, Margaret Harshaw and Albert DaCosta, Amsterdam, N. Y.-born tenor, and other soloists and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Center students are listed. The program will include Act 1 of "Die Walkure" and the opening and final scene of Act III of "Die Meistersinger." Other noted soloists during the Shed season are Rudolf Serkin, and Jocy de Oliviera, pianists; Zino Francescatti and Ruth Posselt, violinist; and Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts, Margaret Willauer, James Pease and David Lloyd, vocalists.

The Berkshire festival Shed series is preceded by two week-ends of concerts by the chamber section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the popular "Bach-Mozart" concerts given in the 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall, under the direction of Charles Munch, with Lukas Foss, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Lubosutz as guest conductors.

Six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts are also presented during the festival, proceeds to be devoted to the Berkshire Festival's Revolving Scholarship Fund. Benny Goodman, Rudolf Serkin, Zino Francescatti (accompanied by Artur Balsam;) Margaret Harshaw, the Kroll String Quartet, the Boston Symphony String Quartet, the brass ensemble of the orchestra under the direction of BSO trumpeter, Roger Voisin; the Beaux Arts Trio and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet are the scheduled performers.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429
JUN 26 1956

Music Notes

By D. E. RITZ

The 60th anniversary convention of the American Guild of Organists opened yesterday in New York city and will continue through Friday with special programs in the larger churches and auditoriums.

PRE-CONVENTION activities included a West Point recital and tour Sunday afternoon with a recital by Jack A. Davis, organist-choirmaster of the Cadet Chapel and a choral program at St. Paul's Chapel Sunday evening. Ruth Diel, soprano; Beatrice Krebs, contralto; and Chester Watson, baritone, all Octavo Singer soloists, were featured in "The Green Blade Riseth" with the Oratorio Society of New Jersey and M. Searle Wright, composer, conducting Sunday evening.

GUEST ORGANISTS featured in programs during the week include Pierre Cochereau of the Cathedral of Notre Dame, Paris; David R. Fuller, organist of Dartmouth College; Alexander Schreiner, organist of the Tabernacle at Salt Lake City Utah; Claire Coci; George Thalben-Ball, official organist of the BBC Orchestra of London; E. Power Biggs; and Clarence Mader, organist at Immanuel Presbyterian Church of Los Angeles.

Then there will be a high mass Friday marking the observance of the Feast of Saints Peter and Paul at the Church of St. Paul the Apostle, a Sabbath evening service at Temple Emanu-El directed by Lazare Saminsky; a Lewisohn Stadium concert tomorrow evening featuring the New York Philharmonic and the Oratorio Society of New York. A Guild Festival Choral Service was held last evening at St. Bartholomew's Church with choirs from Calvary Church, St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie and St. Bartholomew's Church participating.

Two multiple programs will be held. One this afternoon will include Gustav Holst's "The Coming of Christ;" a lecture and demonstration of "Recent Developments in Tape Music" with Dr. Vladimir Ussachevsky of Columbia University as speaker and a chamber music program by the Guilet Quartet.

A multiple program Friday morning will include a lecture on "Trends in European Organ-Building" by D. A. Flentrop, organ-builder from Holland; a lecture on "Worship, Architecture and Acoustics" by Ray Berry, of the national committee on architecture and acoustics.

THE TRI-CITY SYMPHONY Orchestra, conducted by Edgar Curtis and with Edward A. Rice as concertmaster will present a benefit concert for the Rensselaerville library Saturday at 8:30 p.m. at the Greenville, NY, high school auditorium.

Betty Haines of this city will be featured on the viola with Joseph Malfitano, first violinist of the Metropolitan Opera orchestra, in the Mozart "Symphonie Konzertante for violin and viola."

The program is the first of three scheduled to benefit the Rensselaerville library.

Other numbers scheduled for Saturday are the Schubert "Symphony number 5 in B flat major"; the Wagner "Siegfried Idyll" and the Rossini "Overture to the Barber of Seville."

MIA SLAVENSKA, famed ballerina, will dance with Robert Morrow in the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival programs Friday and Saturday in the Ted Shawn Theater near Lee, Mass. Matinees will be at 4 and evening programs at 9 o'clock.

Other participants in the programs will include a group of 12 dancers in the Texas State College for Women's Modern Dance Group of Denton, Texas; and Sahomi Tachibana, a leading exponent of the classical dance art of Japan.

STUDENTS from 37 states, Canada and 13 foreign countries are among the 325 who have registered so far for the Berkshire Music Center, the six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.. The school will open July 1 and conclude with the Berkshire Festival concerts on Aug. 12.

Miss Edith A. Bossler, registrar, reports that additional applications are being processed daily and the full enrollment will be about 400 students.

Dr. Charles Munch, who serves as director of the school, will welcome the students on July 1 to the 14th annual session of the school.

Aaron Copeland is serving as assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz, dean; and Gail W. Rector, assistant manager of the Boston Symphony, as executive secretary.

Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro, is in charge of the department of orchestra playing and conducting. Hugh Ross heads choral singing and conducting. Mr. Copland and Goffredo Petrassi, the Italian modern composer, will head the composition department and Boris Goldovsky the opera workshops.

The Tanglewood Study Group will be directed by Ingolf Dahl. Enrollment in this group is either for the full six weeks or for periods of four weeks and two weeks, and applications for this department still are being accepted. Study group students, professional and amateur, have an opportunity for extensive chamber orchestra reading and to sing in the Festival Chorus with the Boston Symphony in the Berkshire Festival concerts.

So far, the study group registration has accounted for 65 students, 29 of whom are registered for the six-week term, five for four weeks and 27 for two weeks.

The 325 students have been chosen from 600 applicants, resulting from some 1,500 inquiries of which 680 were new this year. Berkshire Music Center scholarship grants have been awarded to 175 students, including 100 who make up the student symphony orchestra.

The 28 foreign students come from: Canada, six; England, four; the Argentine, three; Cuba, Japan, Puerto Rico, two each; and one each from Australia, Egypt, Peru, Germany, Colombia, Brazil, Finland, Uruguay and West Germany.

[69]

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
Circ. D. 133,704
JUN 2 0 1956

TALKING IT OVER

Onondaga Women Honor Leader To Attend G.O.P. Convention

By Emma Van Wormer

Vice chairmen of Republican organizations of towns and wards, Republican Women's Club presidents and the executive committee of the county Women's G. O. P. Club, some 60 women, honored by Mrs. Norma W. Stone, county vice chairman and state committee member, at luncheon in the Yates Hotel North Room yesterday.

The event, a surprise to Mrs. Stone, was arranged by Mrs. Harold Cox of Marcellus. Mrs. Cox, active for years in the Republican organization, is music chairman of the County Club. Mrs. Cox introduced guests at the speakers' table and called on Mrs. Marion Harrison Greene, County Club president, to be mistress of ceremonies. In behalf of the company, Mrs. Greene presented Mrs. Stone with a Travel Book, for special use on her trip to San Francisco in August when she is a delegate to the National convention. Mrs. Stone's white orchird corsage also was a gift.

Mrs. Greene, with Mrs. Cox at the piano, led singing of a Republican campaign song, written especially for women at the State Federation of GOP Clubs Conference in Cooperstown last week. Others who sang, having rehearsed the number in Cooperstown: Mrs. Stone, Mrs. George C. Wortley and Mrs. William J. McNerney, Onondaga County Club vice presidents and Mrs. Ethel Carpenter Benz, Sixth Ward Club president. Also in the group were Mrs. Frank Terry past president of the County Club, and past fifth district director and past recording secretary of the Federation of G.O.P. Clubs, and Mrs. Clair Strickland, state committee member.

The song tune is an oldie, "Come Josephine in My Flying Machine." The new words advise women to "come to the voting machine and . . . pull, pull, yes, pull for the eagle." Among the several women introduced at the luncheon was Mrs. Leon M. Bristol, in charge of the "Thank You Mr. President" campaign in Onondaga County, a solicitation of small monies for the fall election campaign expenses.

* * *

$1,000 Award for Composition by Young American

Irving Brown, president of the George Gershwin Memorial Foundation of B'nai B'rith Victory Lodge Inc., announces that the 12th annual George Gershwin Memorial composition contest, open to young American composers, will close Aug. 31.

This year's winner will receive a $1,000 cash award, the winning composition to have its world premiere performed by the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, Dimitri Mitropoulos is conducting in Carnegie Hall, New York City. Entries, original unpublished compositions, must be no longer than 15 minutes playing time and suitable for orchestra performance.

LUKAS FOSS

AT 'TANGLEWOOD'. Lukas Foss, member of the faculty of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school since 1946, and now a permanent member of the Berkshire Music Center composition department, will conduct a Berkshire Festival Chamber Music concert Sunday, July 8, in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Mr. Mitropoulos again will serve as honorary chairman of the Judges' Committee and Dr. Carleton Sprague Smith, chief of the music division, New York Public Library, will continue on as chairman. Others serving on the Judges' Committee are: Robert Russell Bennett, Aaron Copland, Morton Gould, Howard Hanson, Peter Mennin (a Gershwin Award winner), Vincent Persechetti and Walter Piston.

Winner of the 11th Annual Contest was 29-year-old Reginald H. Hall of Ann Arbor, Mich., an engineer turned composer. He is the son of Episcopal clergyman the Rev. Reginald Hall of Laurel, Md. Carl Korte, 27, of Englewood, N. J., was awarded an honorable mention with a $100 cash prize. Entry blanks, which must accompany each composition, may be obtained by writing to the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundations, 165 W. 46 St., New York City.

* * *

CINCINNATI, OHIO
POST
Circ. D. 167,260
JUN 3 0 1956

Festivals, U. S. A.

If you're longing for a musical vacation but can't afford passage to the celebrated European festivals, America and Canada can provide a solution to your frustration.

It is now possible to embark on a grand musical tour and encounter top talent within easy driving distance. The festivals within this radius are:

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, Tanglewood, Mass.: Small concerts begin July 6, major shed concerts begin July 20, end Aug. 12.

CHAUTAUQUA, N. Y.: Season of music and drama opens July 1, ends Aug. 26.

CINCINNATI ZOO OPERA: Downbeat is June 30, finale July 28.

EMPIRE STATE MUSIC FESTIVAL, Ellenville, N. Y.: From July 4 through 29.

RAVINIA FESTIVAL, Highland Park, Ill.: Concerts, ballet and art shows through Aug. 11.

STRATFORD, ONTARIO: Music and drama fete. Shakespeare season opens Monday for two months. Music is from July 7 through Aug. 11.

Here is a brief briefing on each center:

* * *

BERKSHIRE: Lenox, Mass., is 755 miles from Cincinnati via the New York Thruway.

Main events are on week ends. Bach-Mozart concerts are the week ends of July 6 and 13. Three shed concerts each week end are scheduled by the Boston Symphony from July 20 through Aug. 12.

Conductors include Charles Munch, Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein. Soloists include Soprano Margaret Harshaw, Clarinet Benny Goodman and Pianist Rudolf Serkin. Several Wagner opera acts will be featured.

Monteux

Harshaw

Goodman

The Berkshire area has excellent feeding and housing facilities, but they're not cheap. Write the Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield, Mass., for data on everything, including other artistic events.

CHAUTAUQUA is 385 miles from here in New York state. The oldest summer culture camp, it stages concerts, operas and plays in abundance, although it does not draw on big-name talent. It is an all-round vacation land as well as a summer school.

Operawise, Chautauqua begins July 13 with "Fledermaus," "Rigoletto," "Cosi Fan Tutti," "Barber of Seville," among others. For information, write Chautauqua Institute, Chatauqua, N. Y.

EMPIRE STATE: In its second year, this music fete is 85 miles north of New York in the Catskills—and not far from Tanglewood.

This year the Symphony of the Air will perform under Igor Markevitch, Leopold Stokowski and Heitor Villa-Lobos. For complete data (including housing), write Empire State Music Festival, 46 W. 44th street, New York 36.

RAVINIA FESTIVAL is 300 miles from Cincinnati in Highland Park, a suburb of Chicago. The Chicago Symphony will play 23 times under Eugene Ormandy, George Solti, William Steinberg, Arthur Fiedler, Bernstein, Markevitch and Monteux.

The Ballet Russe dances Aug. 6-11. Other stars include Singers Marian Anderson, Martial Singher, Jan Peerce and Inge Borkh, Pianists Leon Fleisher, Walter Gieseking and Serkin, Violinists Tossy Spivakovsky and Zino Francescatti; Jazzmen Dave Brubeck and Louis Armstrong.

For data, write Ravinia Festival, 11 S. LaSalle street, Chicago 3, Illinois.

STRATFORD: Via Buffalo (by car) it is 414 miles. Via air it is much closer. Shakespeare productions are "Henry V" and "Merry Wives of Windsor." Opera is Benjamin Britten's "Rape of Lucretia." A movie festival is scheduled also.

Guest stars include Pianists Claudio Arrau, Glenn Gould and Serkin, Singers Jennie Tourel, Singher and Miss Borkh, Jazzmen Art Tatum and Brubeck.

Stratford housing is rough, but it is a peaceful place. For details, write 109 Erie street, Stratford.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

LOUISVILLE, KY.
TIMES
Circ. D. 170,669
JUN 28 1956

THE LYONS DEN — By Leonard Lyons

Lollobrigida: Contraband of War

NEW YORK — Movie exhibitors near U. S. Army bases in Germany have special 11 a.m. film showings which are sell-outs. They show movies and stars barred by the Army censors. No GI, for instance, has ever seen Sofia Loren or Gina Lollobrigida in a movie at an Army post in Germany. . . . Within 48 hours after they had sent her telegrams about the President's illness, Mrs. Eisenhower's friends received thank-you letters from her, in longhand. . . . Cole Porter intends to spend the summer writing his next movie, "Les Girls."

Leonard Lyons

THE LATIN 'YES': Ex-Mayor Bill O'Dwyer was asked if he's willing to discuss the coming elections. "Of course," he said, and discussed the Mexican elections. . . . The Stork Club got three telegrams addressed to Ambassador Charles "U." asking why he hadn't been in lately. Ambassador Bed- [illegible] winter. . . . Abe Attell, the ex-fight champ, sold his Broadway restaurant and has gone into retirement. . . . Tax experts doubt the Government can collect its huge claim against Charles Chaplin. They say he can't be deemed a resident alien since the U. S. wouldn't let him reside here.

CLIMBER: After his 10-day river ride, Justice William O. Douglas will climb the Brooks Range in Alaska. . . . Benny Goodman will do a week of Mozart with the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood in July. . . . Gary Davis, World Citizen, is studying with Dr. Natarajan, the Jagat Guro, at his hill retreat in India. The Indian Government is the first to recognize Davis' World Citizen passport. . . . Ex-Senator Bill Benton said of the home construction industry: "It's a conspiracy against every boy and girl in the country who are in love."

WASHINGTON, D. C.
STAR
Circ. D. 245,642 - S. 273,244
JUN 26 1956

NEWS OF MUSIC

Fine Reading Given In Cello Recital

By IRVING LOWENS

Gordon Epperson, cello; Anne Koscielny, piano. At Phillips Gallery. Program: Sonata, Opus 6, Barber; Sonata for cello solo, Opus 8, Kodaly; Sonata No. 2, Martinu.

Heard last night at the Phillips Gallery in a program drawn entirely from the modern repertory were cellist Gordon Epperson and pianist Anne Koscielny.

Mr. Epperson, a Floridian by birth, is a graduate of the Cincinnati Conservatory, who did further study at the Eastman School of Music and at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood. At present he is teaching at Louisiana State University and is on the staff of the Transylvania Music Camp at Brevard, N. C.

The evening opened with a fine reading of Samuel Barber's early cello sonata, an amazingly mature and powerful work for a young man of 22, and now established as a contemporary classic. It is unabashedly romantic in cast, reminiscent in its passionate first movement of Brahms and in its exalted adagio of late Beethoven, but it is nevertheless indubitably Barber. To this reviewer's mind, few of his later works (with the possible exception of those written within the past few years) have excelled it.

As the centerpiece, Mr. Epperson offered Kodaly's fiercely difficult solo cello sonata, a work perhaps more familiar to Washington audiences than to those in other cities because of several spectacular performances of it here by Paul Olefsky. Mr. Epperson's reading, while virile and finely turned, suffered somewhat from his intonation trouble in the higher reaches of the range and from occasional coarse tone. Nevertheless the Kodaly piece once again made a strong impression, particularly in its lyrical slow movement and its barbaric finale.

Both Mr. Epperson and Miss Koscielny were at their best in the Martinu sonata, which closed the concert.

During her part in the proceedings, Miss Koscielny, also a Floridian and a product of the Eastman School, demonstrated that she was a worthy partner for Mr. Epperson and a more than usually competent and sensitive artist.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628
JUL 14 1956

T. D. Perry, seated, right, Boston Symphony Orchestra manager; Asst. Mgr. G. W. Rector, standing, arrange orchestra's overseas travel with Hub. Mgr. D. C. Bulterman for KLM, Royal Dutch Airlines. Musicians fly over Aug. 14 and 22, returning Sept. 27.

Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, July 14, 1956

Music

All-Mozart Program

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FAMED two-piano team of Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff, with their pianist colleague Boris Goldovsky, gave an all-Mozart program in the great Shed at Tanglewood last night as the first event in the second weekend of the Berkshire Festival.

It was doubly appropriate that these particular artists should be invited to perform on such an anniversary occasion as they have long been identified with the music of the Salzburg boy. Indeed, the E flat two-piano concerto has been played twice before at Tanglewood, in 1942 and in 1944, by the same Luboshutz-Nemenoff duo. Goldovsky has been identified, at Tanglewood, at least, as producer, conductor and pianist of the Mozart operas. Last night he came out of the pit with effervescence to spice a program which was unique in its organization and extremely enjoyable to the huge audience which had braved the uncertainties of the weather.

* * *

LUBOSHUTZ and Goldovsky, in addition, alternated as conductors, the former presiding while Goldovsky played the A major concerto, the latter occupying the podium for the rest of the concert except when he participated in the three-piano concerto, and then he conducted from the keyboard. And let it be said at once that he not only did so competently, but with appreciation of the maturity of the men of the small ensemble from the Boston Symphony Orchestra who assisted, giving them all necessary indications but not more.

The concert, originally planned for the Theater-Concert Hall, ... moved over to the Shed when ... became apparent that the th... and overflow audience ... normally would have chose... their lairs around and about ... hall would not find shelter in ... rain and storm. A surprisin... ly large audience braved ... elements nevertheless and found ... not only comfort but a musical ... treat awaiting them.

* * *

THE SHED proved to be an excellent locale for an orchestra of the small personnel used in these concerts. The absence of the blatant brass in that particular situation was no detriment to the evening, and while the highly polished performance of the two-piano concerto might have been as well if not better accommodated in the intimacy of the original and smaller hall, nevertheless the conditions were happy all around.

Goldovsky took the orchestra along with bounce in the three movements of the D major "Serenade" with which the program began, and his leadership gave the duo-pianists splendid support in their concerto. To turn about, Luboshutz was thoroughly at ease and at home on the podium for Goldovsky's solo, in which conductor and soloist were in complete agreement in both vim and aplomb.

* * *

STRANGE as it may seem, Goldovsky's devil-may-care ... anism was a perfectly sol... ingredient with the greater ... immaculate refinement of his ... confreres and the result was ... pleasure for the audience, ... recalled all the artists ... times.

Wednesday, Friday and Saturday Evenings at 8:30; Sunday Afternoon at 2:30
July 4 Through August 12

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL AT
Tanglewood
IN LENOX, BY THE
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Charles Munch, MUSIC DIRECTOR

Guest Conductors

Leonard Bernstein, Richard Burgin, Eleazar de Carvalho, Lukas Foss, Pierre Monteux.

Soloists

CLARINET: Benny Goodman.
FLUTE: Doriot Anthony Dwyer.
PIANO: Boris Goldovsky, Lukas Foss, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff, Jocy de Oliveira, Rudolf Serkin.
VIOLIN: Zino Francescatti, William Kroll, Ruth Posselt.

Choruses

Festival Chorus, Yale Glee Club.

Singers

Adele Addison, Margaret Harshaw Mac Morgan, John McCollum, James Joyce, Florence Kopleff, Eunice Alberts, Phyllis Curtin, James Pease, Albert Da Costa, Marguerite Willauer.

Chamber Series (Wednesday Evening)

The Kroll String Quartet, Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet, The Brass Ensemble, Margaret Harshaw, The Beaux Arts Trio, Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet, Zino Francescatti and Arthur Balsam.

The Calendar of performances for the week to come, including those of the Berkshire Music Center, is listed on Pages 6A and 7A.

For ticket reservations telephone the box office at Tanglewood: Lenox 600

[7]

Profs Go to College in Williams Math

By A. D. Horne

A SURVEY published in 1951 showed that of 211 prospective teachers in elementary schools nearly 150 hated arithmetic.

Other recent studies make it clear that many elementary school teachers have a hard time keeping ahead of their pupils. They must rely on memorized answers to hide their confusion, and have no understanding of the mathematical bases of arithmetic.

Most states license elementary-school arithmetic teachers without requiring a single course in high school or college math. In nearly a third of the states, high school math teachers can qualify for a license with no studies in college math.

96 Studying

An answer to this national problem is being prepared this summer in Williamstown, where 96 teachers of mathematics have gathered for a summer of advanced studies at Williams College under sponsorship of the National Science Foundation.

They are learning current mathematics in a six-week course at advanced levels so they may cope with the alarming decline in the nation's mathematical training.

Last fall, an engineering school reported that 72 per cent of its freshmen were so weak in mathematics that they were required to take a review course in high school math.

Science and industry have a crying need for mathematically trained men, and are offering starting salaries like $11,000 in a field once thought too abstract to be lucrative.

A study of Soviet manpower and education made last year by Harvard's Nicholas DeWitt found that science and mathematics in the Soviet Union are outstripping ours under active government encouragement.

U. S. leaders have often complained that our growing needs for mathematicians are not being met. But government support comes more hesitantly on this side of the Iron Curtain.

Instead, philanthropies are turning their attention to the problem. The Carnegie Corp. of New York has financed a study group, which last month published a convincingly gloomy booklet called "Problems in Mathematical Education."

First in 1953

The National Science Foundation has tackled the problem by supporting a series of summer institutes for teachers of mathematics. The first was held at the University of Colorado in 1953. The current one at Williams is for secondary school and college math teachers.

Donald E. Richmond, chairman of the Williams College math department, is director of the institute. Its staff includes professors from seven other colleges and universities as well as mathematicians in business and industry.

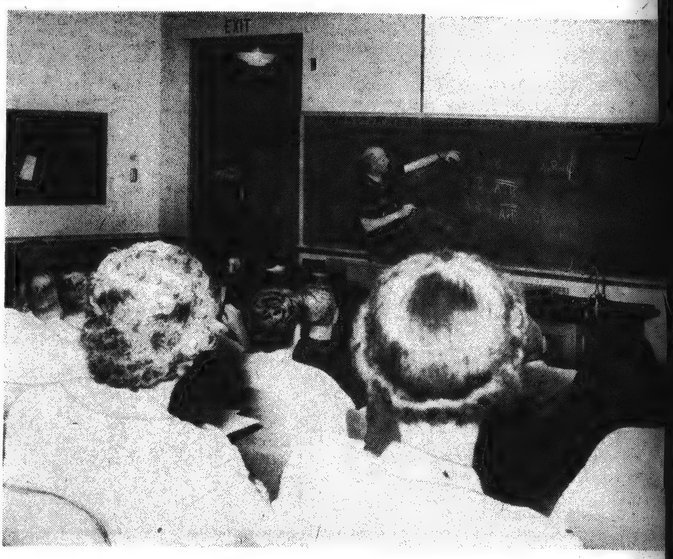
From 21 States

Teachers of mathematics from 21 states, the District of Columbia and Canada are attending lectures and taking part in discussions during a six-week program.

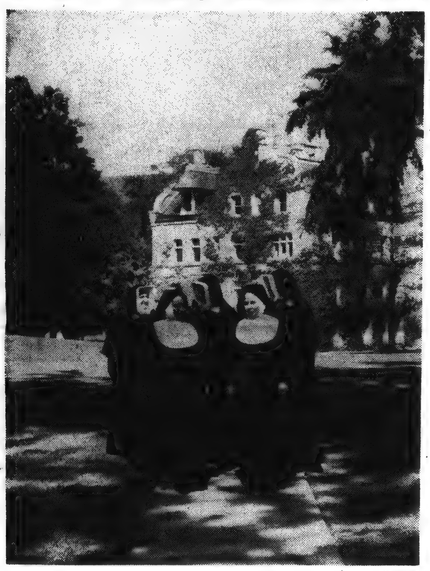
Only one teaches in an elementary school, and none are among the unfortunates who teach math while dreading it.

But the institute staff hopes even these will be reached by the revival of math interest they are helping to spark. Their summer students are all capable teachers, many of them math department chairmen like Pittsfield High School's Carmen C. Massimiano. What they learn in Williamstown may influence math studies all over the nation.

They are learning little about classroom methods. The institute's aim is rather to broaden their knowledge of mathematics and acquaint them with current research. A competent teacher, Mr. Richmond believes, should know at least six times as much about his subject as he imparts to his students.



Prof. S. C. Kleene of Wisconsin University lectures on mathematical logic



Carman

Five nuns are among math students

Creative Field

The institute director believes math is an exciting field, as creative as the arts. He finds in the nation some 400 theoreticians who compose mathematics as others compose music, using it as a language to express complex ideas. To most persons, math is only a tool.

But modern demands on the tool are growing, and the tool itself is changing through the work of creative mathematicians like those on the institute's staff. In spite of this, the basic high school curriculum has not changed for 50 years.

Those who learned their math in the old ways, from teachers who had little gusto for it, know little of these changes. They think math began and ended with the Greeks.

Money in It

Those who will learn from the Williams group's students should know better. Their teachers will have studied such new fields as topology (which deals with properties of continuous surfaces), vector analysis and business computers. From them they will learn of math as an expanding field, and as a good way to make money.

The last point is important, Mr. Richmond feels. Interest enough practical-minded people in aiming for well-paid math jobs, and enough mathematicians will return to the schools to pass on their knowledge.

Wisconsin's Prof. R. H. Bing (right) talks topology

Library Specialties

Chapin Library

In Williamstown, off Route 2, at Williams College's Stetson Hall. Open 9-12, 1-4 Monday through Friday until September. Early printed books, Americana and rare books. Current exhibition: "The Haystack Soil: Missionaries in Colonial America."

Lenox Library

On Route 7 in center of town, next to Curtis Hotel. Open 10-9 daily except Sunday. Art and music literature, scores for circulation. Music room 2-5. Current exhibits: Lacquer on wood and canvas by Stanley Bate; fine bindings and illumination.

Berkshire Athenaeum

At Park Square, center of Pittsfield. Summer hours: 9-9, Monday, Wednesday, Friday; 9-6, Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday. Phonograph records for circulation, local history, children's books. Herman Melville Memorial Room includes letters, first editions, personal items owned by the author.

Stockbridge Library

On Route 7 at Elm Street, center of Stockbridge. Open 10-5:30 daily except Sundays, 7-9 p.m. Mondays through Fridays. Theater literature and history. Historical museum open 10-5 includes items connected with Jonathan Edwards, Cyrus Field and Daniel Chester French, early books and genealogical records. Tourist information center.

History and Science

Berkshire Museum

On South Street, center of Pittsfield. Hours: Tuesday through Saturday, 10-5; Sunday, 2-5; closed Mondays. Free of charge except where noted. Permanent displays: Rooms on biology, minerals, birds and Berkshire County animals. "Animals of World in Miniature" room contains dioramas by Louis Paul Jonas. In "Hall of Man" is one of Robert E. Peary's North Pole sledges. Berkshire Room features large relief model of county. Historical Room (small charge to individuals, free to schools and camps) includes original "One Hoss Shay," made famous in poem by Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Crane Museum

Off Main Street (Route 9), Dalton, near Crane & Company office. Exhibits, housed in old stone mill, trace history of fine-paper making from Revolutionary times with emphasis on the manufacture of American currency paper and foreign bank notes. Open free of charge 2-5, Monday through Friday.

Mission House

On Main Street in center of Stockbridge. Built in 1739 for John Sergeant, first missionary to the Stockbridge Indians. Moved and restored by Miss Mabel Choate as a memorial to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Choate. Open Mondays through Saturdays from 10 to 12:30 and from 2 to 6; Sundays, from 2 to 6. Owned by Trustees of Reservations. Small admission charge.

Art on Exhibit

Berkshire Museum

On South Street, center of Pittsfield. Hours, Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m.; Sundays, 2-5 p.m.; closed Mondays. Exhibitions, through August: Paintings by Albert Sterner, prints lent by Abraham Kamberg. July only: Stage designs by Oskar Kokoschka, photographs by Sydney R. Kanter, paintings by Ralph Berkowitz. August only: Photographs by Charles H. Vickery. September: Pittsfield Art League, photographs lent by the Photographic Society of America. Open free.

Little Cinema: Art films. Nightly at 8:15, Saturdays continuous from 7.

Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute

On South Street, Williamstown. Summer exhibition of old masters and French painters of the 19th century, including Degas, Hals, Turner, Cassatt, Homer, Innes, Sargent, Goya, Renoir, Corot, Courbet, Monet, Manet, Millet. Also exhibit of sculpture and pre-Revolutionary silver. Open free of charge Tuesday through Sunday from 10 to 5. Closed Monday.

Tyringham Galleries

In the town of Tyringham, reached by road off Route 102 between East Lee and Stockbridge. Open 10 to 8 daily and by appointment. Small admission charge. Painting and graphic art, sculpture, ceramics, by Berkshire-area artists and others.

Daniel Chester French Studio

Half-mile off Route 183 at Glendale. Casts and bronzes including models of the seated Lincoln of the Lincoln Memorial in Washington and of the Concord Minute Man. Now owned by Trustees of Reservations. Open daily from 11 to 6. Small admission charge.

Announcing

HERBITS DINNER and THEATER PARTY

Friday, July 20th

You are invited to dine at the WILLIAMS INN

MENU
- Choice of before-dinner drink or juice.
- Country Fried Chicken or Cape Scallops with fresh vegetables.
- Assorted relishes and their own specially baked bread and rolls.
- Williams Inn famous deep-dish apple pie a la mode.
- Choice of beverage.

Attend the performance of George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan" at the air-conditioned WILLIAMSTOWN SUMMER THEATER. A $2.20 seat is reserved especially for you.

Travel round trip from Pittsfield to Williamstown in a reserved seat on the comfortable "Party Coach."

You get a beverage and dinner, reserved seat at the theater and travel in comfort. All for the low price of

5.75 All Tips and Taxes Included Nothing Extra To Pay

Reservations now being taken at the Herbits Travel Service, 10 Bank Row, Pittsfield, Mass. Phone 6766—6706.

Join your friends for a pleasant evening of dining and entertainment.

Leave Pittsfield at 6:00 PM

Berkshire Summer Calendar

Music, From Classic to Jazz, Summer Theaters and the Dance

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday
July 15 anglewood :00—Chamber Music, Dept. 1. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends) 30—Bach-Mozart Series. Boston Symphony small orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Theater-Concert Hall. BACH The Passion According to St. John Chorus and Soloists, including Adele Addison, Soprano — John McCollum, Tenor Florence Kopleff, Contralto — Mac Morgan, Bass James Joyce, Bass 30—Composers' Forum, Dept. 3. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends) lusic Mountain 00—Berkshire Quartet. Assisting artist, Janna Arschanska Dawson Quartet in D major, K.449 — Mozart Piano Quartet in G minor, Op. 25 — Brahms Quartet in F minor, Op. 95 — Beethoven erkshire Music Barn 40—Duke Ellington and his band ontinuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00. Final performance, "The Desperate Hours."	July 16 Tanglewood 8:30—Tanglewood Choir, Dept. 2 Chorus. Theater - Concert Hall. (Friends) Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—"The Wayward Saint," with William Roerick, Eleanor Wilson.	July 17 Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"St. Joan" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"The Solid Gold Cadillac" Sharon Playhouse 8:40—"Shadow and Substance" Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Melissa Hayden and Francisco Moncion. Myra Kinch & Company, with Ted Shawn. Geoffrey Holder & Company of Trinidad, with Carmen de Lavallade Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45	July 18 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. The Brass Ensemble under Roger Voisin. Theater-Concert Hall. Music by Gabrieli, Bonelli, Poulenc, Berezowski Wesendonck Song Cycle — Wagner Songs — Strauss Margaret Harshaw, assisted by Ralph Berkowitz Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 9:00.
July 22 anglewood :00—Chamber Music, Dept. 1. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends) 30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Pierre Monteux. Music Shed. Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri" — Rossini Concerto for Orchestra — Bartok Symphony No. 7 in C major — Schubert 30—Composers' Forum, Dept. 3. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends) erkshire Music Barn 40—Wilbur de Paris and New Orleans Jazz with Sidney de Paris and Omer Simeon Music Mountain 00—Berkshire Quartet ontinuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00	July 23 Tanglewood 8:30—Modern Chamber Music. Members of Boston Symphony and guest artists. Auspices, Fromm Music Foundation. (Friends) Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—"Heartbreak House," with Carmen Mathews, Larry Gates	July 24 Tanglewood 8:30—Dep. 4 Opera. Scenes from Mozart operas. Theater-Concert Hall. (Friends) Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"Mrs. McThing" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"The Solid Gold Cadillac" (second week) Sharon Playhouse 8:40—"Heartbreak House" Jacob's Pillow 9:00—San Francisco Ballet. "Concerto Barocco"; world premiere of "The Dryad"; "Con Amore" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45	July 25 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber music. The Beaux Arts Trio. Theater-Concert Hall. Trio in D minor — Mendelssohn Trio in A minor — Ravel Trio in C minor — Brahms Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 9:00
July 29 Tanglewood 0:00—Chamber Music, Dept. 1. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends) :30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Richard Burgin. Music Shed. "Romeo and Juliet," Suite No. 2 — Prokofieff Violin Concerto — Hindemith Soloist: Ruth Posselt Symphony No. 1 in D major — Mahler :30—Composers' Forum, Dept. 3. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends) Music Mountain :00—Berkshire Quartet Berkshire Music Barn :40—Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey and band, with Louis Belsen and Charlie Shavers Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00	July 30 Tanglewood 8:30—Dept. 4 Opera. Four complete acts from 19th century operas. (Friends—special tickets required) Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—"The Happy Time," with Paul Lipson	July 31 Tanglewood 8:30—Dept. 2 Chorus, Tanglewood Choir. Theater-Concert Hall. (Friends) Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—Premiere of new play Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Tea and Sympathy" Sharon Playhouse 8:40—"Anastasia" Jacob's Pillow 9:00—San Francisco Ballet. "The Tarot"; "Jinx"; "A Masque of Beauty and the Shepherd" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45	August 1 Tanglewood 3:30—Chamber Music. Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet. Theater-Concert Hall. Symphonic Etudes — Schumann Quintet for Piano and Woodwinds, K.452 — Mozart "Carnaval" — Schumann Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 9:00
August 5 Tanglewood 10:00—Chamber Music, Dept. 1. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends) 2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed. Symphonic Ode — Copland Violin Concerto — Tchaikovsky Soloist: Zino Francescatti Symphony No. 2 in C major — Schumann Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Berkshire Music Barn 8:40—Sarah Vaughan and Trio Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00	August 6 Tanglewood 8:30—Dept. 4 Opera. "Griffelkin," by Lukas Foss. First stage performance. (Friends — special tickets required) Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—"The Good Fairy," with Deirdre Owens	August 7 Tanglewood 8:30—Department 4 Opera. "Griffelkin," by Lukas Foss. (Friends—special tickets required) Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"Point of No Return" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"The Seven-Year Itch" Sharon Playhouse 8:40—"The Importance of Being Earnest" Jacob's Pillow 9:00—San Francisco Ballet. "Le Gourmand"; "Apollo"; "Con Amore" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45	August 8 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. Zino Francescatti, violin; Arthur Balsam, piano. Theater-Concert Hall. Violin Sonata No. 1 — Faure Violin Sonata — Ravel Violin Sonata — Franck Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 9:00
August 12 Tanglewood 10:00—Dept. 1 Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. (Friends) 2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed. Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica") — Beethoven "Die Meistersinger," Act 3 — Wagner (opening and final scene) Chorus and Soloists: James Pease, Albert da Costa, Marguerite Willauer New York Pro Musica Antiqua 3:30—Tudor and Elizabethan music At South Mountain Temple of Chamber Music, Pittsfield. Berkshire Music Barn 8:40—Modern Jazz Quartet and Chris Connors Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00	August 13 Berkshire Playhouse 8:45 — "A Roomful of Roses," with Francesca Bruning	August 14 Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"The Flowering Peach" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Bus Stop" Sharon Playhouse 8:40—"The Rainmaker" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45	August 15 Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Brindge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40
August 19 New York Pro Musica Antiqua 3:30—Claudio Monteverdi, sacred and secular works (At South Mountain Temple of Chamber Music, Pittsfield) Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet Berkshire Music Barn 8:40—Errol Garner Trio Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00	August 20 Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—"Made in Heaven," with Richard Arlen	August 21 Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"The Glass Menagerie" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Bus Stop" (second week) Sharon Playhouse 8:40—"Love Is a Two-Way Street," with Albert Dekker, Edith Atwater (new play) Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45	August 22 Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40

NOTE: For an event listed under "Continuing," follow the week's schedule back to the nearest complete program, which will be under a head printed in This Type.

HOW TO GET THERE: TANGLEWOOD, on Route 183 between Stockbridge (via Routes 102 and 183) and Lenox (via Route 183 from center of town); SOUTH MOUNTAIN on Route 7 just south of Pittsfield; MUSIC MOUNTAIN, off Route 7 in Falls Village, Conn.; BERKSHIRE PLAYHOUSE, off Route 7 on Route 102 near center of Stockbridge; MALDEN BRIDGE PLAYHOUSE, on Route 66 between Chatham and Pittsfield-Albany Road (Route 20); WILLIAMSTOWN SUMMER THEATER, on Main Street in Williamstown; BERKSHIRE MUSIC BARN, southeast of Tanglewood between Routes 7 and 183; SHARON PLAYHOUSE, just off Main Street in Sharon, Conn., on Route 4 toward Amenia. JACOB'S PILLOW, off Jacob's Ladder section of Route 20 in the village of West Becket.

Thursday

July 19

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 1 Orchestra. Music Shed (Friends)

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs"

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40.

July 26

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 1 Orchestra. Music Shed. (Friends)

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs." Chico Hamilton Quintet

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 2

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 1 Orchestra. Music Shed. (Friends)

Berkshire Playhouse

3:00—Anna Russell, concert.

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs"

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 9

Tanglewood

Tanglewood on Parade. (Program to be announced)

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 16

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs" Evening of Calypso, West Indian and Cuban music.

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 23

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs"

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

Friday

July 20

South Mountain

10:00—Young Audiences Concert. Dulcimore Quartet

Tanglewood

8:30 — Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

Overture, "The Roman Carnival"	Berlioz
Prelude, "The Afternoon of a Faun"	Debussy
"Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2	Ravel
Symphony No. 2 in D major	Brahms

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40.

July 27

Tanglewood

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

Overture, "Leonore" No. 2	Beethoven
Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5	Petrassi
Symphony No. 4 in F minor	Tchaikovsky

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 3

Tanglewood

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho. Music Shed.

"La Kermesse"	Barraud
"The Three-Cornered Hat"	Falla
Piano Concerto	Ravel
Soloist: Jocy de Oliveira
Ballet, "Petrouchka" (complete)	Stravinsky

Berkshire Playhouse

3:00—Anna Russell, concert.

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 10

Tanglewood

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

Symphony No. 102 in B-flat major	Haydn
Symphony No. 6	Piston
"Don Juan"	Strauss
"L'Apprenti Sorcier"	Dukas

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40.

August 17

Jacob's Pillow

4:00 and 9:00—Irina Borowska, Alan Howard, Emy St. Just & Company. Tommy Marlowe. Rebecca Harris

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 24

Jacob's Pillow

4:00 and 9:00—Nina Novak and Leon Danielian, Anna Sokolov's Theater Dance Company. Gina, dances of India.

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

Saturday

July 21

Tanglewood

10:00—Boston Symphony Orchestra, open rehearsal. Music Shed. Benefit orchestra pension fund.

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

"Adagio for Strings"	Barber
"Fantasies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6)	Martinu
"Die Walkure," Act 1	Wagner
Soloists: Margaret Harshaw, Soprano; Albert Da Costa, Tenor; James Pease, Bass.

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Folk Music Festival. Clarence Cooper and Cynthia Gooding

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

July 28

Tanglewood

10:00—Boston Symphony Orchestra, open rehearsal. Music Shed. Benefit orchestra pension fund.

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky	Hanson
Piano Concerto in A minor	Schumann
Soloist: Rudolf Serkin
Symphony No. 5	Honegger
"La Mer"	Debussy

South Mountain

3:30—Claremont String Quartet

Quartet, Op. 74 No. 1	Haydn
Quartet, Op. 92 No. 5	Shostakovich
Quartet, Op. 95	Beethoven

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Folk Music Festival. Marais and Miranda

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

August 4

Tanglewood

10:00—Boston Symphony Orchestra, open rehearsal. Music Shed. Benefit orchestra pension fund.

3:00—Dept. 3 Composers' Forum. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Leonard Bernstein. Music Shed. (Concert in memory of Serge Koussevitsky).

Mass in C minor (K.427) Kyrie and Gloria	Mozart
Chorus and Soloists: Phyllis Curtin, Soprano; Eunice Alberts, Contralto; John McCollum, Tenor
Symphony No. 5	Prokofieff

South Mountain

3:30—Beaux Arts Trio

Trio in B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke")	Beethoven
Trio in D minor, Op. 120	Faure
Trio in B flat, Op. 99	Schubert

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

August 11

Tanglewood

10:00—Boston Symphony Orchestra, open rehearsal. Music Shed. Benefit orchestra pension fund.

3:00—Dept. 1 Orchestra. Music Shed. (Friends)

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Pierre Monteux. Music Shed.

Festival Overture	Freed
Symphony No. 3 in F major	Brahms
Suite for Orchestra, Op. 9	Enesco
Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier"	Strauss

South Mountain

3:30—John Corigliano, New York Philharmonic Quartet

Sonata for Violin and Piano	Strauss
Serenade for Violin, Viola and Cello	Beethoven
Piano Quartet in G minor, Op. 36	Brahms

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

August 18

South Mountain

3:30—Claremont String Quartet

Quartet, Op. 39, No. 1	Boccherini
Quartet Op. 70	Ernest Toch
Quartet, Op. 51, No. 1	Brahms

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

August 25

South Mountain

3:30—Robert Goldsand, piano.

Partita in C minor	Bach
Sonata in G minor, Op. 22	Schumann
"Gaspard de la Nuit"	Ravel

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Courier-Gazette
ROCKLAND, Maine
Tri-Wkly. Ind. Rep.
Circ. 6,547
JUL 14 1956

The Boston Symphony has accepted an invitation from the Soviet Union to include that country in its European tour of next August and September. With Charles Munch as conductor, the orchestra will be the first American symphonic ensemble to perform in Russia. The European tour was announced last January and will be made in co-operation with the International Exchange Program of the American National Theatre and Academy. The orchestra will spend six days in Russia, with concerts planned for Moscow and Leningrad. The Soviet Union will assume transportation expenses during that period, and will pay a stipend for the concerts on its territory. Concerts in Helsinki on Sept. 4 and Prague on Sept. 11 bracket the Russian appearances.

Two planes chartered from KLM Royal Dutch Airlines will transport most of the Boston Symphony's personnel to Europe on Aug. 22. A part of the orchestra and the instruments will sail on the Nieuw Amsterdam on Aug. 14.

Mr. Munch has invited his friend and colleague, Pierre Monteux, once regular conductor of the Boston Symphony, to share the concerts abroad.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928
JUL 14 1956

All-Bach Concerts Tonight, Sunday

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and director of the Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., returns to the podium of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this evening and tomorrow afternoon to conduct two all-Bach concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Beginning next weekend the Festival concerts will move into the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood for four weekends of concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Tonight's concert at 8:30 will present a program of orchestral music by Bach, beginning with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major and continuing with the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E Major. The concertino soloists in the Brandenburg Concerto will be the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Roger Voisin, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; and Richard Burgin, violin. Violin soloist in the E Major Concerto will be William Kroll, founder of the string quartet which bears his name and co-head (with Richard Burgin) of the Berkshire Music Center's chamber music department. After the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's Second and Third Suites for Orchestra, with Mrs. Dwyer as flute soloist in the second suite.

Petrovec

SOLOISTS TOMORROW, all former students at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, discuss the Sunday afternoon concert with Dr. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Singing in the first performance at Tanglewood of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," with the Festival chorus of the Music Center, will be Adele Addison, soprano, at left; and, on the left of Dr. Munch, Mac Morgan, bass; Florence Kopleff, contralto; James Joyce, bass, and John McCollum, tenor.

Many Soloists, Festival Chorus On Programs at Tanglewood

Dr. Munch Returns to Podium for Bach Concerts Tonight, Tomorrow— Crowd of 2,208 Hear Piano Trio in Shed

TANGLEWOOD — Dr. Charles Munch will return to the podium in the Theatre-Concert Hall tonight at 8:30 and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 to conduct the all-Bach concerts by the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra.

Tonight's concert, the first half of which will feature William Kroll as violin soloist and Doriot Anthony Dwyer as flute soloist, has been sold out. Tanglewood officials said the concert has had the biggest advance sale of all of the Bach-Mozart series.

Last night's concert, highlighted by a piano trio made up of Boris Goldovsky, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, was shifted from the Theatre-Concert Hall to the Music Shed because of a heavy downpour of rain late in the afternoon and during the evening. The concert drew a crowd of 2,208, all of whom were seated in the huge auditorium.

Two Soloists Tonight

Tonight's program of orchestral music by Bach, will begin with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major and continue with the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E Major. The concertino soloists in the Brandenburg Concerto will be the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Roger Voisin, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Richard Burgin, violin. The violin soloist in the E Major Concerto, Mr. Kroll, is the founder of the string quartet which bears his name and co-head (with Richard Burgin) of the Berkshire Music Center's chamber music department. After the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's Second and Third Suites for Orchestra, with Mrs. Dwyer as flute soloist in the second suite.

William Kroll, who was born in New York City, studied at the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin with Henri Marteau and at the Institute of Music in New York with Franz Kneisel. In a career devoted largely to chamber music, he has been active in the founding of the Musicians' Guild in New York, and was first violinist in the Coolidge Quartet prior to his organization of the Kroll String Quartet in 1944. His most recent appearance as a soloist in the Berkshire Festival was in 1951, when he performed the A Major Concerto, K. 219, by Mozart.

Mrs. Dwyer, who joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra as solo flutist in the autumn of 1952, was born in Streator, Ill. Her first teacher was her mother, a professional flutist. Her training continued at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N.Y., where she studied with Joseph Mariano and later with William Kincaid. She played in the National Symphony Orchestra in Washington, D.C., for two years before joining the Los Angeles Philharmonic. She also played first flute in the Hollywood Bowl Orchestra. While in California, she devoted much of her time to chamber music, participating in many first performances of contemporary works. Her performance in Bach's B Minor Suite during last summer's Berkshire Festival was a high light of the season.

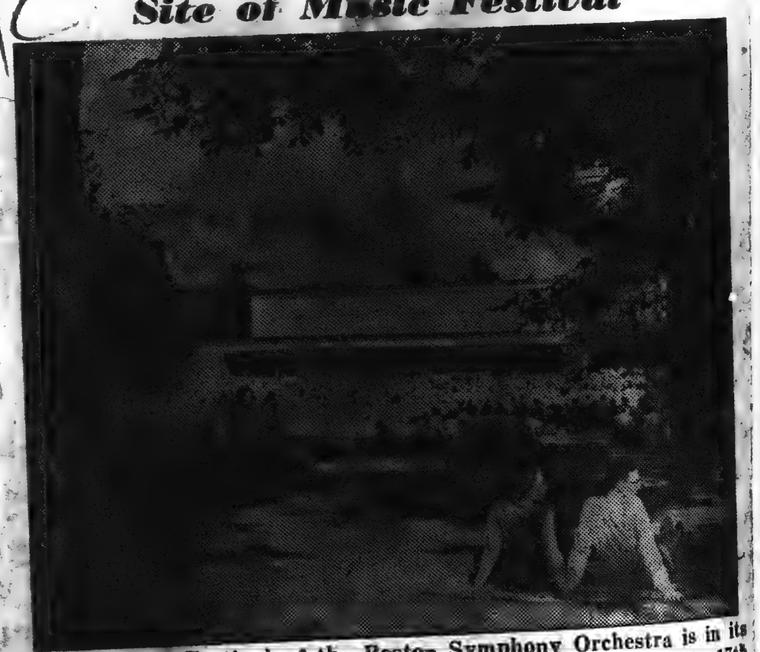
Chorus and Soloists

Tomorrow afternoon Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" in its first Tanglewood performance. Assisting will be the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, and a quintet of vocal soloists, all of whom are former students at the Berkshire Music Center, who have since gone on to concert and operatic careers. Adele Addison, the soprano soloist, studied in the opera department during the summers of 1947, 1948 and 1950; Florence Kopleff, the contralto, studied in the choral department in 1946 and in the opera department in 1947; John McCollum, the tenor, was a member of the opera department in 1952 and 1953; Mac Morgan and James Joyce are the basses. Mr. Morgan, a Stockbridge resident, studied in the opera department in 1950 and 1953; Mr. Joyce in 1951 and 1952.

All reserved seats for tonight's concert have been sold, and only a few $5 seats remain for tomorrow's concert. General admission tickets will be on sale at $2 for both concerts all day today and tomorrow at the Tanglewood box office, along with tickets for all 12 Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Telephone reservations are accepted. In case of rain, the concerts will be held in the Music Shed, which will also seat the overflow lawn audience.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Democrat
Circ. 7,100
JUL 14 1956

Site of Music Festival



The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in its 19th summer of music in the hills of western Massachusetts, the 17th in which the orchestra has participated under the direction of Charles Munch. The season continues until August 12.

Berkshire Music Festival Lists Weekend Concerts

There's how the magic of music can bring relaxation you never dreamed of by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood this weekend, July 13-14-15.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the Berkshire Music Festival has been described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time" and every visit to the scenic and enchanting Tanglewood estate in Lenox is a memorable one.

On Friday, July 13, at 8:30 p.m., the Festival Chamber Orchestra will play a selection of Mozart's works, while the following evening a night of Bach is scheduled. On Sunday at 2:30, the Chamber Orchestra will perform Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" with chorus and soloists.

Tanglewood in Lenox, is located in the heart of the beautiful Berkshires, one of Massachusetts' most scenic playgrounds. Plan to spend the entire weekend touring this natural wonderland and enjoy the many facilities for swimming, boating, hiking and picnicking.

Lenox is located on Route 7, just south of Pittsfield, Main east-west routes 2 [illegible] and 20 all connect with Route 7.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUL 14 1956

Opera Acts To Be Staged At Lenox

An evening comprising acts from five 19th Century operas will be given by students of the opera department of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, on Monday, July 30, in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, in Lenox.

Under the direction of the opera department's head, Boris Goldovsky, 30 students who comprise the active division—those studying for professional careers—will performe works by Berlioz, Puccini and Verdi.

Admission is thru membership in the Friends, the organization thru which contributions are made to assist the Berkshire Music Center. As will be the case when the Tanglewood opera department presents its major production of the season a week later — Lukas Foss' three-act opera, "Griffelkin," on Aug. 6 and 7—all seats are reserved, and special tickets are required, available now at the Friends' office in Tanglewood, or by telephone to Lenox 600.

The program for July 30 will consist of the fourth act from Hector Berloiz' massive "The Trojans"; Puccini's "La Rondine" (The Swallow), Act I; an act from Verdi's "Don Carlo"; Act I, Scene 2 from Verdi's last masterpiece, "Falstaff"; also, scenes from "Aida" by the same composer.

[73]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Courier-Gazette
ROCKLAND, Maine
Tri-Wkly. Ind. Rep.
Circ. 6,547

JUL 14 1956

The Boston Symphony has accepted an invitation from the Soviet Union to include that country in its European tour of next August and September. With Charles Munch as conductor, the orchestra will be the first American symphonic ensemble to perform in Russia. The European tour was announced last January and will be made in co-operation with the International Exchange Program of the American National Theatre and Academy. The orchestra will spend six days in Russia, with concerts planned for Moscow and Leningrad. The Soviet Union will assume transportation expenses during that period, and will pay a stipend for the concerts on its territory. Concerts in Helsinki on Sept. 4 and Prague on Sept. 11 bracket the Russian appearances.

Two planes chartered from KLM Royal Dutch Airlines will transport most of the Boston Symphony's personnel to Europe on Aug. 22. A part of the orchestra and the instruments will sail on the Nieuw Amsterdam on Aug. 14.

Mr. Munch has invited his friend and colleague, Pierre Monteux, once regular conductor of the Boston Symphony, to share the concerts abroad.

* * *

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

JUL 14 1956

All-Bach Concerts Tonight, Sunday

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and director of the Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., returns to the podium of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this evening and tomorrow afternoon to conduct two all-Bach concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Beginning next weekend the Festival concerts will move into the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood for four weekends of concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Tonight's concert at 8:30 will present a program of orchestral music by Bach, beginning with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major and continuing with the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E Major. The concertino soloists in the Brandenburg Concerto will be the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Roger Voisin, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; and Richard Burgin, violin. Violin soloist in the E Major Concerto will be William Kroll, founder of the string quartet which bears his name and co-head (with Richard Burgin) of the Berkshire Music Center's chamber music department. After the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's Second and Third Suites for Orchestra, with Mrs. Dwyer as flute soloist in the second suite.

The Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, July 14, 1956

Petrovec

SOLOISTS TOMORROW, all former students at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, discuss the Sunday afternoon concert with Dr. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Singing in the first performance at Tanglewood of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John," with the Festival chorus of the Music Center, will be Adele Addison, soprano, at left; and, on the left of Dr. Munch, Mac Morgan, bass; Florence Kopleff, contralto; James Joyce, bass, and John McCollum, tenor.

Many Soloists, Festival Chorus On Programs at Tanglewood

Dr. Munch Returns to Podium for Bach Concerts Tonight, Tomorrow— Crowd of 2,208 Hear Piano Trio in Shed

TANGLEWOOD — Dr. Charles Munch will return to the podium in the Theatre-Concert Hall tonight at 8:30 and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 to conduct the all-Bach concerts by the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra.

Tonight's concert, the first half of which will feature William Kroll as violin soloist and Doriot Anthony Dwyer as flute soloist, has been sold out. Tanglewood officials said the concert has had the biggest advance sale of all of the Bach-Mozart series.

Last night's concert, highlighted by a piano trio made up of Boris Goldovsky, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, was shifted from the Theatre-Concert Hall to the Music Shed because of a heavy downpour of rain late in the afternoon and during the evening. The concert drew a crowd of 2,208, all of whom were seated in the huge auditorium.

Two Soloists Tonight

Tonight's program of orchestral music by Bach, will begin with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major and continue with the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E Major. The concertino soloists in the Brandenburg Concerto will be the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Roger Voisin, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Richard Burgin, violin. The violin soloist in the E Major Concerto, Mr. Kroll, is the founder of the string quartet which bears his name and co-head (with Richard Burgin) of the Berkshire Music Center's chamber music department. After the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's Second and Third Suites for Orchestra, with Mrs. Dwyer as flute soloist in the second suite.

William Kroll, who was born in New York City, studied at the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin with Henri Marteau and at the Institute of Music in New York with Franz Kneisel. In a career devoted largely to chamber music, he has been active in the founding of the Musicians' Guild in New York, and was first violinist in the Coolidge Quartet prior to his organization of the Kroll String Quartet in 1944. His most recent appearance as a soloist in the Berkshire Festival was in 1951, when he performed the A Major Concerto, K. 219, by Mozart.

Mrs. Dwyer, who joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra as solo flutist in the autumn of 1952, was born in Streator, Ill. Her first teacher was her mother, a professional flutist. Her training continued at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N.Y., where she studied with Joseph Mariano and later with William Kincaid. She played in the National Symphony Orchestra in Washington, D.C., for two years before joining the Los Angeles Philharmonic. She also played first flute in the Hollywood Bowl Orchestra. While in California, she devoted much of her time to chamber music, participating in many first performances of contemporary works. Her performance in Bach's B Minor Suite during last summer's Berkshire Festival was a high light of the season.

Chorus and Soloists

Tomorrow afternoon Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" in its first Tanglewood performance. Assisting will be the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, and a quintet of vocal soloists, all of whom are former students at the Berkshire Music Center, who have since gone on to concert and operatic careers. Adele Addison, the soprano soloist, studied in the opera department during the summers of 1947, 1948 and 1950; Florence Kopleff, the contralto, studied in the choral department in 1946 and in the opera department in 1947; John McCollum, the tenor, was a member of the opera department in 1952 and 1953; Mac Morgan and James Joyce are the basses. Mr. Morgan, a Stockbridge resident, studied in the opera department in 1950 and 1953; Mr. Joyce in 1951 and 1952.

All reserved seats for tonight's concert have been sold, and only a few $5 seats remain for tomorrow's concert. General admission tickets will be on sale at $2 for both concerts all day today and tomorrow at the Tanglewood box office, along with tickets for all 12 Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Telephone reservations are accepted. In case of rain, the concerts will be held in the Music Shed, which will also seat the overflow lawn audience.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Democrat
Circ. 7,100
JUL 14 1956

Site of Music Festival

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in its 19th summer of music in the hills of western Massachusetts, the 17th in which the orchestra has participated under the direction of Charles Munch. The season continues until August 12.

Berkshire Music Festival Lists Weekend Concerts

Learn how the magic of music can bring relaxation you never dreamed of by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood this weekend, July 13-14-15.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the Berkshire Music Festival has been described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time", and every visit to the scenic and enchanting Tanglewood estate in Lenox is a memorable one.

On Friday, July 13, at 8:30 p.m., the Festival Chamber Orchestra will play a selection of Mozart's works, while the following evening a night of Bach is scheduled. On Sunday at 2:30, the Chamber Orchestra will perform Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" with chorus and soloists.

Tanglewood in Lenox, is located in the heart of the beautiful Berkshires, one of Massachusetts' most scenic playgrounds. Plan to spend the entire weekend touring this natural wonderland and enjoy the many facilities for swimming, boating, hiking and picnicking.

Lenox is located on Route 7, just south of Pittsfield. Main east-west routes 2-0, and 20 all connect with Route 7.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

JUL 14 1956

Opera Acts To Be Staged At Lenox

An evening comprising acts from five 19th Century operas will be given by students of the opera department of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, on Monday, July 30, in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, in Lenox.

Under the direction of the opera department's head, Boris Goldovsky, 30 students who comprise the active division—those studying for professional careers—will performe works by Berlioz, Puccini and Verdi.

Admission is thru membership in the Friends, the organization thru which contributions are made to assist the Berkshire Music Center. As will be the case when the Tanglewood opera department presents its major production of the season a week later — Lukas Foss' three-act opera, "Griffelkin," on Aug. 6 and 7—all seats are reserved, and special tickets are required, available now at the Friends' office in Tanglewood, or by telephone to Lenox 600.

The program for July 30 will consist of the fourth act from Hector Berloiz' massive "The Trojans"; Puccini's "La Rondine" (The Swallow), Act I; an act from Verdi's "Don Carlo"; Act I, Scene 2 from Verdi's last masterpiece, "Falstaff"; also, scenes from "Aida" by the same composer.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 1 1956

3 Pianists of Same Family Heard by 2,208 at Festival

Three pianists of the same family were featured last night at Tanglewood as the second of two weekends of Bach-Mozart concerts got underway. There were 2,208 persons on hand for the program, which was moved from the theater-concert hall to the big shed because of rain.

Mozart Concerto

The audience heard Mozart concertos for one, two and three pianos, with duo pianists Luboshutz and Nemenoff as soloists, along with their nephew, opera producer and commentator, Boris Goldovsky, who is head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music center. Miss Nemenoff is the wife of Mr. Luboshutz.

Mr. Goldovsky and the Boston Symphony's Chamber orchestra began the program with a performance of the march, andante and finale of Mozart's "Serenade in D Major." The three pianists were heard in the Concerto in F Major. Also played were the Concerto in A Major for piano, with Mr. Goldovsky as soloist, and the Concerto in E Flat Major for two pianos, featuring Miss Nemenoff and Mr. Luboshutz. Mr. Goldovsky and Mr. Luboshutz did the conducting during the program.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, returns to the podium this evening and tomorrow afternoon to conduct two all-Bach concerts in the theater-concert hall.

Tonight's Program

Tonight's program will begin with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major and will continue with the Violin Concerto in E Major. The soloists in the Brandenburg Concerto will be the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony, Roger Voisin, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Richard Burgin, violin. Violin soloist in the E Major concerto will be William Krol, founder of the string quartet which bears his name.

After the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's Second and Third Suites for Orchestra, with Mrs. Dwyer as flute soloist.

Tomorrow afternoon Dr. Much will conduct Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" in its first Tanglewood performance. Assisting will be the Festival chorus and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Davis Lloyd, tenor, and Mac Morgan and James Joyce, bass.

Next week the Festival will move into high gear, when the entire 106 piece Boston Symphony will begin a series of four week-end concerts in the big shed. The weekly Chamber music concerts will continue on Wednesday.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUL 14 1956

Munch Directs Bach Concerts This Weekend

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, returns to the podium of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this evening and tomorrow afternoon to conduct two all-Bach concerts in the Theatre-Concert hall. Beginning next weekend, the Festival concerts will move into the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood for four weekends of concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Tonight's concert will present a program of orchestral music by Bach, beginning with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major and continuig with the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E Major. The concertino soloists in the Brandenburg Concerto will be the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Roger Voisin, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; and Richard Burgin, violin. Violin soloist in the E Major Concerto will be William Kroll, founder of the string quartet which bears his name and co-head (with Richard Burgin) of the Berkshire Music Center's chamber music department. After the intermission, Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's Second and Third Suites for Orchestra, with Mrs. Dwyer as flute soloist in the secon dsuite.

Sunday afternoon Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" in its first Tanglewood performance. Assisting will be the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, and a quintet of vocal soloists, all of whom are former students at the Berkshire Music Center, and who have since gone on to concert and operatic careers: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Advocate
PROVINCETOWN, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,015
JUL 12 1956

Trio Coming To Wellfleet

Wellfleet is presenting the Beaux Arts Trio in a concert of chamber music and solos on Friday, July 20, at 8:30 p.m. in the Congregational Church, for the benefit of the Wellfleet Scholarship Fund. The famous trio consists of Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Manahem Pressler, piano. Their background ranges the globe — France, Germany, Israel, North and South America, and their international efforts compress a world of music into one evening.

The famous conductor, Arturo Toscanini, hailed their concert "as an inspiring experience."

At the Berkshire Festival Dr. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, appraised their concert as follows: "The marvelous musicality of these three artists has been unknown in trio playing for many years. They are worthy successors to the last great trio—Thibaud, Casals and Cortot."

Zino Francescatti, the famous violinist, wrote: "A great ensemble with great artists."

As for the individual artists, Mr. Greenhouse is a mature musician and an impeccable executant. He studied with the great master of the cello, Pablo Casals, for two years. Wrote Casals: "Bernard Greenhouse is not only a remarkable cellist, but, what I esteem more, a dignified artist." Since then Mr. Greenhouse has won an enviable reputation as one of the major interpreters on his instrument, with appearances in most of the major cities of both Europe and America. He plays the famous "Visconti" Stradivarius cello, dated 1684.

Daneil Guilet, violinist, is equally famed in Europe and America as a soloist and as a chamber musician, having worked with Jacques Thibaud and Georges Enesco. He was concert master of the N.B.C. Symphony when this orchestra was created for Toscanini, and still holds this position. He plays the beautiful "Earl of Darnley" Stradivarius dated 1712.

Manahem Pressler, the brilliant young Israeli pianist was born in Germany, but fled with his family when Hitler came into power. He has been soloist with the leading symphony orchestras of this country, having appeared fifteen times with the Philadelphia Orchestra. He is well known to European audiences in Scandinavia, Israel, Turkey, Greece and France.

Tickets may be obtained now at Wellfleet Town Hall, and at the door of the church on the night of the performance.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081
JUL 14 1956

Club Will Hear Tanglewood Music

Tanglewood music in the Berkshire Hills awaits Adult Club members of the Hartford Jewish Community Center, August 5.

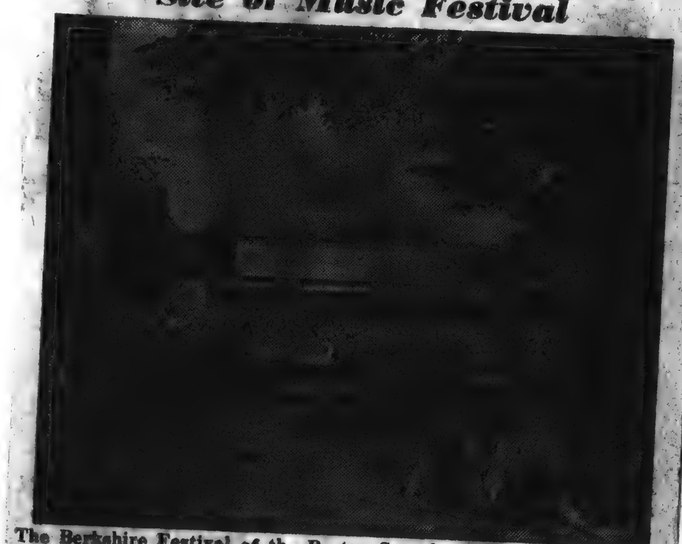
Members are asked to call Miss Nedra Cramer, club secretary, the evenings of July 16, 17 or 18, at the Center, JA 7-9239.

Members will form a car caravan for the round trip. All are advised to bring box lunches, according to Al Kutzik, staff adviser.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra program for the day will be a Copland Symphonic Ode, a Tschaikowsky Violin Concerto with Zino Francescatti as soloist, and the Schumann Symphony No. 2 in C Major, directed by Charles Munch.

SPRINGFIELD FREE PRESS—SATURDAY, JULY 14, 1956

Site of Music Festival



The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in its 19th summer of music in the hills of western Massachusetts, the 17th in which the orchestra has participated under the direction of Charles Munch. The season continues until August 12.

Berkshire Music Festival Lists Weekend Concerts

Learn how the magic of music can bring relaxation you never dreamed of by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood this weekend, July 13-14-15.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the Berkshire Music Festival has been described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time", and every visit to the scenic and enchanting Tanglewood estate in Lenox is a memorable one.

On Friday, July 13, at 8:30 p.m., the Festival Chamber Orchestra will play a selection of Mozart's works, while the following evening a night of Bach is scheduled. On Sunday at 2:30, the Chamber Orchestra will perform Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" with chorus and soloists.

Tanglewood in Lenox, is located in the heart of the beautiful Berkshires, one of Massachusetts' most scenic playgrounds. Plan to spend the entire weekend touring this natural wonderland and enjoy the many facilities for swimming, boating, hiking and picnicking.

Lenox is located on Route 7, just south of Pittsfield, Main east-west routes 2-9, and 20 all connect with Route 7.

BOSTON HERALD, SATURDAY, JULY 14, 1956

Lenox Weekend To Feature Munch

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Director of The Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood in Lenox, returns to lead the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this evening, and tomorrow afternoon's two all-Bach concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Beginning next week-end, the Festival concerts will move into the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood for four week-ends of concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Tonight's concert at 8:30 p.m. will present a program of orchestral music by Bach, beginning with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major and continuing with the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E Major. The concertino soloists in the Brandenburg Concerto will be the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Roger Voisin, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; and Richard Burgin, violin. Violin soloist in the E Major Concerto will be William Kroll, founder of the string quartet which bears his name and co-head (with Richard Burgin) of the Berkshire Music Center's chamber music department. After the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's Second and Third Suites for Orchestra, with Mrs. Dwyer as flute soloist in the second suite.

The Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, July 14, 1956

What's Going On?

TONIGHT:

8:30—Tanglewood. Bach-Mozart Series. Boston Symphony small orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Theater-Concert Hall.

8:40—Williamstown Summer Theater. Final performance, "The Philadelphia Story."

8:40—Sharon (Conn.) Playhouse. Final performance, "Oh Men, Oh, Women."

8:45—Berkshire Playhouse. Final performance, "The Solid Gold Cadillac."

8:45—Malden Bridge Playhouse. "The Desperate Hours."

9:00—Jacob's Pillow. Sonia Arova and Job Sanders. Merce Cunningham & Company. Carola Goya and Matteo.

For complete schedule of outstanding cultural events in Berkshire for the next six weeks, see the Berkshire Summer Calendar in the second section of today's Eagle.

Berkshire Week

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

3 Pianists of Same Family Heard by 2,208 at Festival

Three pianists of the same family were featured last night at Tanglewood as the second of two weekends of Bach-Mozart concerts got underway. There were 2,208 persons on hand for the program, which was moved from the theater-concert hall to the big shed because of rain.

Mozart Concerto

The audience heard Mozart concertos for one, two and three pianos, with duo pianists Luboshutz and Nemenoff as soloists, along with their nephew, opera producer and commentator, Boris Goldovsky, who is head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music center. Miss Nemenoff is the wife of Mr. Luboshutz.

Mr. Goldovsky and the Boston Symphony's Chamber orchestra began the program with a performance of the march, andante and finale of Mozart's "Serenade in D Major." The three pianists were heard in the Concerto in F Major. Also played were the Concerto in A Major for piano, with Mr. Goldovsky as soloist, and the Concerto in E Flat Major for two pianos, featuring Miss Nemenoff and Mr. Luboshutz. Mr. Goldovsky and Mr. Luboshutz did the conducting during the program.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, returns to the podium this evening and tomorrow afternoon to conduct two all-Bach concerts in the theater-concert hall.

Tonight's Program

Tonight's program will begin with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major and will continue with the Violin Concerto in E Major. The soloists in the Brandenburg Concerto will be the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony, Roger Voisin, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Richard Burgin, violin. Violin soloist in the E Major concerto will be William Krol, founder of the string quartet which bears his name.

After the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's Second and Third Suites for Orchestra, with Mrs. Dwyer as flute soloist.

Tomorrow afternoon Dr. Much will conduct Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" in its first Tanglewood performance. Assisting will be the Festival chorus and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Davis Lloyd, tenor, and Mac Morgan and James Joyce, bass.

Next week the Festival will move into high gear, when the entire 106 piece Boston Symphony will begin a series of four week-end concerts in the big shed. The weekly Chamber music concerts will continue on Wednesday.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUL 14 1956

Munch Directs Bach Concerts This Weekend

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, returns to the podium of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this evening and tomorrow afternoon to conduct two all-Bach concerts in the Theatre-Concert hall. Beginning next weekend, the Festival concerts will move into the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood for four weekends of concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Tonight's concert will present a program of orchestral music by Bach, beginning with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major and continuig with the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E Major. The concertino soloists in the Brandenburg Concerto will be the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Roger Voisin, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; and Richard Burgin, violin. Violin soloist in the E Major Concerto will be William Kroll, founder of the string quartet which bears his name and co-head (with Richard Burgin) of the Berkshire Music Center's chamber music department. After the intermission, Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's Second and Third Suites for Orchestra, with Mrs. Dwyer as flute soloist in the secon dsuite.

Sunday afternoon Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's "The Pasion According to St. John" in its first Tanglewood performance. Assisting will be the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Ross, and a quintet of vocal soloCenter students trained by Hugh ists, all of whom are former students at the Berkshire Music Center, and who have since gone on to concert and operatic careers: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Advocate
PROVINCETOWN, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,015
JUL 12 1956

Trio Coming To Wellfleet

Wellfleet is presenting the Beaux Arts Trio in a concert of chamber music and solos on Friday, July 20, at 8:30 p.m. in the Congregational Church, for the benefit of the Wellfleet Scholarship Fund. The famous trio consists of Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Mandhem Pressler, piano. Their background ranges the globe — France, Germany, Israel, North and South America, and their international efforts compress a world of music into one evening.

The famous conductor, Arturo Toscanini, hailed their concert "as an inspiring experience."

At the Berkshire Festival Dr. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, appraised their concert as follows: "The marvelous musicality of these three artists has been unknown in trio playing for many years. They are worthy successors to the last great trio—Thibaud, Casals and Cortot."

Zino Francescatti, the famous violinist, wrote: "A great ensemble with great artists."

As for the individual artists, Mr. Greenhouse is a mature musician and an impeccable executant. He studied with the great master of the cello, Pablo Casals, for two years. Wrote Casals: "Bernard Greenhouse is not only a remarkable cellist, but, what I esteem more, a dignified artist." Since then Mr. Greenhouse has won an enviable reputation as one of the major interpreters on his instrument, with appearances in most of the major cities of both Europe and America. He plays the famous "Visconti" Stradivarius cello, dated 1684.

Daneil Guilet, violinist, is equally famed in Europe and America as a soloist and as a chamber musician, having worked with Jacques Thibaud and Georges Enesco. He was concert master of the N.B.C. Symphony when this orchestra was created for Toscanini, and still holds this position. He plays the beautiful "Earl of Darnley" Stradivarius dated 1712.

Manahem Pressler, the brilliant young Israeli pianist was born in Germany, but fled with his family when Hitler came into power. He has been soloist with the leading symphony orchestras of this country, having appeared fifteen times with the Philadelphia Orchestra. He is well known to European audiences in Scandinavia, Israel, Turkey, Greece and France.

Tickets may be obtained now at Wellfleet Town Hall, and at the door of the church on the night of the performance.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081
JUL 14 1956

Club Will Hear Tanglewood Music

Tanglewood music in the Berkshire Hills awaits Adult Club members of the Hartford Jewish Community Center, August 5.

Members are asked to call Miss Nedra Cramer, club secretary, the evenings of July 16, 17 or 18, at the Center, JA 7-9239.

Members will form a car caravan for the round trip. All are advised to bring box lunches, according to Al Kutzik, staff adviser.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra program for the day will be a Copland Symphonic Ode, a Tschaikowsky Violin Concerto with Zino Francescatti as soloist, and the Schumann Symphony No. 2 in C Major, directed by Charles Munch.

-The Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, July 14, 1956

What's Going On?

TONIGHT:

8:30—Tanglewood. Bach-Mozart Series. Boston Symphony small orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Theater-Concert Hall.

8:40—Williamstown Summer Theater. Final performance, "The Philadelphia Story."

8:40—Sharon (Conn.) Playhouse. Final performance, "Oh Men, Oh, Women."

8:45—Berkshire Playhouse. Final performance, "The Solid Gold Cadillac."

8:45—Malden Bridge Playhouse. "The Desperate Hours."

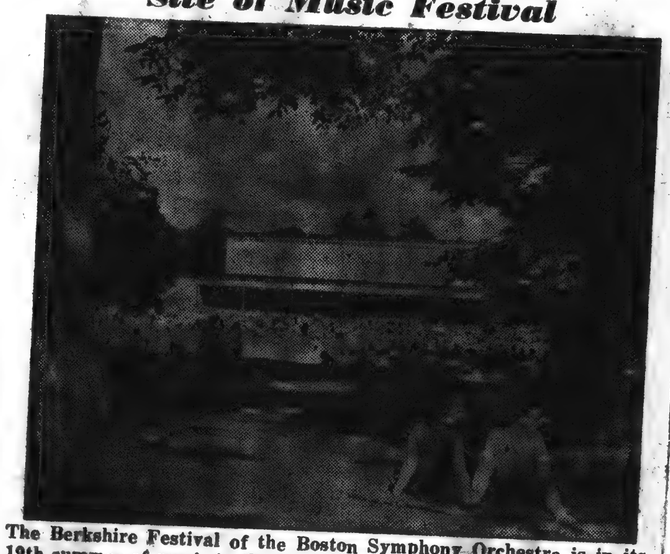
9:00—Jacob's Pillow. Sonia Arova and Job Sanders. Merce Cunningham & Company. Carola Goya and Matteo.

For complete schedule of outstanding cultural events in Berkshire for the next six weeks, see the Berkshire Summer Calendar in the second section of today's Eagle.

Berkshire Week

SPRINGFIELD FREE PRESS—SATURDAY, JULY 14, 1596

Site of Music Festival



The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in its 19th summer of music in the hills of western Massachusetts, the 17th in which the orchestra has participated under the direction of Charles Munch. The season continues until August 12.

Berkshire Music Festival Lists Weekend Concerts

Learn how the magic of music can bring relaxation you never dreamed of by visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at beautiful Tanglewood this weekend, July 13-14-15.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the Berkshire Music Festival has been described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time", and every visit to the scenic and enchanting Tanglewood estate in Lenox is a memorable one.

On Friday, July 13, at 8:30 p.m., the Festival Chamber Orchestra will play a selection of Mozart's works, while the following evening a night of Bach is scheduled. On Sunday at 2:30, the Chamber Orchestra will perform Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" with chorus and soloists.

Tanglewood in Lenox, is located in the heart of the beautiful Berkshires, one of Massachusetts' most scenic playgrounds. Plan to spend the entire weekend touring this natural wonderland and enjoy the many facilities for swimming, boating, hiking and picnicking.

Lenox is located on Route 7, just south of Pittsfield, Main east-west routes 2-9, and 20 all connect with Route 7.

BOSTON HERALD, SATURDAY, JULY 14, 1956

Lenox Weekend To Feature Munch

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Director of The Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood in Lenox, returns to lead the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this evening, and tomorrow afternoon's two all-Bach concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Beginning next week-end, the Festival concerts will move into the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood for four week-ends of concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Tonight's concert at 8:30 p.m. will present a program of orchestral music by Bach, beginning with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major and continuing with the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E Major. The concertino soloists in the Brandenburg Concerto will be the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Roger Voisin, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; and Richard Burgin, violin. Violin soloist in the E Major Concerto will be William Kroll, founder of the string quartet which bears his name and co-head (with Richard Burgin) of the Berkshire Music Center's chamber music department. After the intermission Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's Second and Third Suites for Orchestra, with Mrs. Dwyer as flute soloist in the second suite.

Great Barrington

ANTHONY G. RUD, STEPHEN S. ROSENFELD

Tanglewood Tenor To Sing Tomorrow At First Church

GREAT BARRINGTON—Tenor soloist at the 10 o'clock services at the First Congregational Church tomorrow will be Tanglewood faculty member Arthur Schoep.

Mr. Schoep's experience includes the role of Aeneas in the American premiere of Berlioz's "The Trojans," and last year's engagement in Brussels as Pelleas in "Pelleas and Melisande" under the direction of Pierre Monteux.

Mr. Schoep is an assistant to Boris Goldovsky in the opera department at the Berkshire Music Center.

[illegible] To Sing At St. Stephen's

Miss Adele Addison, soprano, one of the featured soloists for the "Passion According to St. John," by Bach at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon, will be soloist at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church at the 10 a.m. service tomorrow morning.

Miss Addison will arrive in the Berkshires by airplane from Aspen, Colo., where she is attending the Aspen Music Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 3078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
JUL 14 1956

Bernstein On Jazz Program In N.Y. Tonight

Leonard Bernstein, who will appear at Tanglewood as guest conductor with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday evening, Aug. 4, will conduct the Stadium Symphony Orchestra at the Lewisohn Stadium of City College in New York tonight, as part of an all-jazz program.

Mr. Bernstein will conduct the symphony in an arrangement of W. C. Handy's "St. Louis Blues" for filming as a sequence in "The Saga of Satchmo."

Louis Armstrong and his All Stars and Dave Brubeck and his Quartet, who have appeared this season at Music Barn in Lenox, will be heard at the Stadium tonight in the first all-jazz program to be held there.

Next Thursday evening, Zino Francescatti, summer resident of Monterey, will play Beethoven's Violin Concrto at the Lewisohn Stadium. He will be heard as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in concerts Aug. 3 and Aug. 4.

Public Events

Tonight

7:30—Mount Carmel benefit lawn party, Mount Carmel School grounds.

8:30—Bach-Mozart series. Boston Symphony small orchestra, Theater-Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox.

8:40—"The Philadelphia Story." Williamstown Summer Theater.

8:45—"The Solid Gold Cadillac." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"The Desperate Hours." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

9:00—Merce Cunningham & Company, Carola Gova and Matteo. Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, Becket.

Tomorrow

2:30 p.m.—Bach-Mozart series. Charles Munch, conductor. Theater-Concert Hall, Tanglewood.

7:00 p.m.—"The Desperate Hours." Malden Bridge Playhouse.

8:30 p.m.—Duke Ellington and his band. Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.

Social Briefs

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Wyman of Cincinnati, Ohio, entertained last night at the Curtis Hotel, Lenox, in honor of Pierre Luboshutz and his wife, Genia Nemenoff, and Boris Goldovsky—all soloists at last night's concert at Tanglewood—and Mr. Luboshutz' mother, Mrs. Leah Luboshutz. The Luboshutzes are here from their summer home in Camden, Maine. Mr. Wyman, president of the Baldwin Piano Co., and Mrs. Wyman are staying at the Curtis for this week's Berkshire Festival programs.

Music Center Dean To Address Rotary

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, will speak at the Rotary Club luncheon meeting at 12:15 Thursday afternoon at the Wendell-Sherwood Hotel. Mr. Berkowitz is a pianist and an artist. He will be introduced by Jay C. Rosenfeld.

NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, JULY 15, 1956.

MASSACHUSETTS
LENOX
Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood

TODAY, 3:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall, Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra assisted by Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center. Conductor, Charles Munch; Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan, James Joyce, basses. Bach's Passion According to St. John.

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall, program of chamber music. Participants: Brass Ensemble of the Boston Symphony Orchestra directed by Roger Voisin; Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Ralph Berkowitz, pianist.
Canzon Septimi Toni No. 1 for Double Quartet of Brass.....Gabrieli
Toccata from Ricercari a Canzoni.....Bonalli
Sonata for horn, trumpet and trombone.....Poulenc
Brass Suite for seven instruments.....Berezowsky
Five Wesendonck Songs.....Wagner
Four Songs.....R. Strauss

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.
Roman Carnival Overture.....Berlioz
Afternoon of a Faun.....Debussy
Daphnis and Chloe Suite No. 2.....Ravel
Symphony No. 2.....Brahms

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; James Pease, bass.
Adagio for Strings (first Tanglewood performance).....Barber
Fantaisies Symphoniques (first Tanglewood performance).....Milhaud
Act I of Die Walkuere (concert version).....Wagner

NEXT SUNDAY, July 22, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Pierre Monteux.
Overture to L'Italiana in Algeri.....Rossini
Concerto for Orchestra.....Bartok
Symphony No. 9.....Schubert

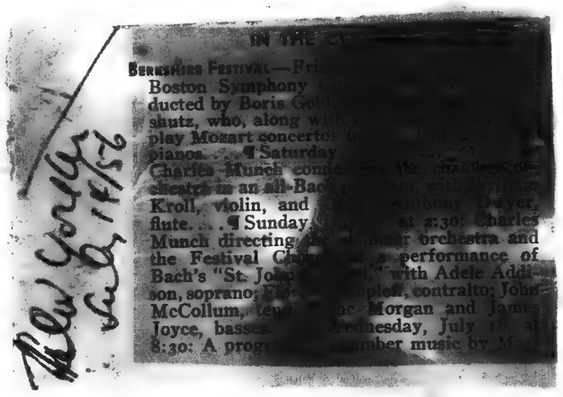
TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through AUG. 12
Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
THEATRE—TODAY at 2:30
NEXT WED. July 18 - 8:30—MARGARET HARSHAW; THE BRASS ENSEMBLE
Shed Concerts Open Next Friday
FRI. July 20, at 8:30—BERLIOZ—DEBUSSY—RAVEL—BRAHMS (MUNCH)
SAT. July 21, at 8:30—BARBER—MARTINU—WAGNER (MUNCH)
SUN. July 22, at 2:30—ROSSINI—BARTOK—SCHUBERT. (MONTEUX)
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $1.50, $2, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Admission $2)
TICKET OFFICE: TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 608
Baldwin Piano — RCA Victor Records

[75]

Boston Symphony for Dublin

Mr. M. T. Kelleher, Trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, receives a cheque from Mr. W. B. Carolan, President of Boston's Clover Club, to help defray the expenses of the Orchestra's visit to Ireland in August. Mr. R. Burgin, associate conductor and concert master of the orchestra, is in centre. The Boston Orchestra will give a concert at the Theatre Royal, Dublin, in aid of the Clonliffe College Rebuilding Fund.

EVENING SUN, HANOVER, PA., SATURDAY, JULY 14, 1956



IN THE CO...
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Fri... Boston Symphony ... ducted by Boris Gol... shutz, who, along wi... play Mozart concertos ... pianos. ¶ Saturday ... Charles Munch cond... the Festival Ch... a performance of ... Bach's "St. Jo... with Adele Addi... son, soprano; ... Kroll, violin, and ... flute. ¶ Sunday ... at 2:30; Charles Munch directing ... orchestra and the Festival Ch... a performance of Bach's "St. Jo... with Adele Addison, soprano; ... Kroll, violin, and ... flute. ¶ Sunday ... at 2:30; Charles Munch directing ... orchestra and the Festival Ch... a performance of Bach's "St. John" with Adele Addison, soprano; ... Kroll, contralto; John McCollum, ten... ac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. ... Wednesday, July ... at 8:30: A prog... ber music by M...

* * *

For the final four week ends of the Berkshire Festival, which has annually attracted crowds from all over the Eastern United States and Canada, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to Tanglewood for 12 week-end concerts, July 20-August 12, in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, open on three sides so the thousands extra who attend may hear the orchestra on the extensive Tanglewood lawns, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine. In 1955, an average attendance of 9,028, more than one-third again the capacity of the Music Shed, was noted at these programs.

The festival concerts for 1956, as planned by Charles Munch, will pay homage to Mozart's bi-centennial in the chamber orchestra concerts, and will feature during the Shed series two Wagner programs in which concert versions of "Die Walkure," Act I, and the opening and final scene of Act III of "Die Meistersinger" will be given, with the assistance of Metropolitan Opera stars, other soloists and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students. The Shed series will also feature Tanglewood first performances of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for this, its Seventy-Fifth Anniversary year, symphonic pieces by Goffredo Petrassi, Howard Hanson, Aaron Copland and Walter Piston. These symphonies will be brought by the Boston Symphony to Europe immediately following the close of the Tanglewood season, when the orchestra makes a five-and-one-half week tour of thirteen countries in Europe, including a week at the Edinburgh Festival and a six-day concert tour of the Soviet Union.

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., SATURDAY, JULY 14, 1956

Old Friendship Renewed

An old friendship was renewed as Benny Goodman attracted music lovers to Tanglewood, Wednesday night. John Rice, left of Pittsfield, is shown greeting the old [illegible]um, Joseph De Pasquale of Boston, a member of the quartet that played with Goodman. The violinist is the grandson of the founder of Tanglewood.

Great Barrington

ANTHONY G. RUD, STEPHEN S. ROSENFELD

Tanglewood Tenor To Sing Tomorrow At First Church

GREAT BARRINGTON — Tenor soloist at the 10 o'clock services at the First Congregational Church tomorrow will be Tanglewood faculty member Arthur Schoep.

Mr. Schoep's experience includes the role of Aeneas in the American premiere of Berlioz's "The Trojans," and a last year's engagement in Brussels as Pelleas in "Pelleas and Melisande" under the direction of Pierre Monteux.

Mr. Schoep is an assistant to Boris Goldovsky in the opera department at the Berkshire Music Center.

Adele Addison To Sing At St. Stephen's

Miss Adele Addison, soprano, one of the featured soloists for the "Passion According to St. John," by Bach at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon, will be soloist at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church at the 9 a.m. service tomorrow morning.

Miss Addison will arrive in the Berkshires by airplane from Aspen, Colo., where she is attending the Aspen Music Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

JUL 14 1956

Bernstein On Jazz Program In N.Y. Tonight

Leonard Bernstein, who will appear at Tanglewood as guest conductor with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday evening, Aug. 4, will conduct the Stadium Symphony Orchestra at the Lewisohn Stadium of City College in New York tonight, as part of an all-jazz program.

Mr. Bernstein will conduct the symphony in an arrangement of W. C. Handy's "St. Louis Blues" for filming as a sequence in "The Saga of Satchmo."

Louis Armstrong and his All Stars and Dave Brubeck and his Quartet, who have appeared this season at Music Barn in Lenox, will be heard at the Stadium tonight in the first all-jazz program to be held there.

Next Thursday evening, Zino Francescatti, summer resident of Monterey, will play Beethoven's Violin Concrto at the Lewisohn Stadium. He will be heard as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in concerts Aug. 5 and Aug. 8.

Public Events

Tonight

7:30—Mount Carmel benefit lawn party, Mount Carmel School grounds.

8:30—Bach-Mozart series. Boston Symphony small orchestra. Theater-Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox.

8:40—"The Philadelphia Story." Williamstown Summer Theater.

8:45—"The Solid Gold Cadillac." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"The Desperate Hours." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

9:00—Merce Cunningham & Company. Carola Gova and Matteo. Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, Becket.

Tomorrow

2:30 p.m.—Bach-Mozart series. Charles Munch, conductor. Theater-Concert Hall, Tanglewood.

7:00 p.m.—"The Desperate Hours." Malden Bridge Playhouse.

8:40 p.m.—Duke Ellington and his band. Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.

Social Briefs

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Wyman of Cincinnati, Ohio, entertained last night at the Curtis Hotel, Lenox, in honor of Pierre Luboshutz and his wife, Genia Nemenoff, and Boris Goldovsky—all soloists at last night's concert at Tanglewood—and Mr. Luboshutz' mother, Mrs. Leah Luboshutz. The Luboshutzes are here from their summer home in Camden, Maine. Mr. Wyman, president of the Baldwin Piano Co., and Mrs. Wyman are staying at the Curtis for this week's Berkshire Festival programs.

Music Center Dean To Address Rotary

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, will speak at the Rotary Club luncheon meeting at 12:15 Thursday afternoon at the Wendell-Sherwood Hotel. Mr. Berkowitz is a pianist and an artist. He will be introduced by Jay C. Rosenfeld.

Boston Symphony for Dublin

Mr. M. T. Kelleher, Trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, receives a cheque from Mr. W. B. Carolan, President of Boston's Clover Club, to help defray the expenses of the Orchestra's visit to Ireland in August. Mr. R. Burgin, associate conductor and concert master of the orchestra, is in centre. The Boston Orchestra will give a concert at the Theatre Royal, Dublin, in aid of the Clonliffe College Rebuilding Fund.

IN THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Friday, Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra conducted by Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz, who, along with Genia Nemenoff, will play Mozart concertos for two- and three pianos. . . . ¶ Saturday, Charles Munch conducting the chamber orchestra in an all-Bach program, with William Kroll, violin, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 15, at 2:30: Charles Munch directing the chamber orchestra and the Festival Chorus in a performance of Bach's "St. John Passion," with Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses. . . . ¶ Wednesday, July 18, at 8:30: A program of chamber music by Mar-

For the final four week ends of the Berkshire Festival, which has annually attracted crowds from all over the Eastern United States and Canada, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to Tanglewood for 12 week-end concerts, July 20-August 12, in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, open on three sides so the thousands extra who attend may hear the orchestra on the extensive Tanglewood lawns, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine. In 1955, an average attendance of 9,028, more than one-third again the capacity of the Music Shed, was noted at these programs.

The festival concerts for 1956, as planned by Charles Munch, will pay homage to Mozart's bi-centennial in the chamber orchestra concerts, and will feature during the Shed series two Wagner programs in which concert versions of "Die Walkure," Act I, and the opening and final scene of Act III of "Die Meistersinger" will be given, with the assistance of Metropolitan Opera stars, other soloists and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students. The Shed series will also feature Tanglewood first performances of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for this, its Seventy-Fifth Anniversary year, symphonic pieces by Goffredo Petrassi, Howard Hanson, Aaron Copland and Walter Piston. These symphonies will be brought by the Boston Symphony to Europe immediately following the close of the Tanglewood season, when the orchestra makes a five-and-one-half week tour of thirteen countries in Europe, including a week at the Edinburgh Festival and a six-day concert tour of the Soviet Union.

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., SATURDAY, JULY 14, 1956

Old Friendship Renewed

An old friendship was renewed as Benny Goodman attracted music lovers to Tanglewood, Wednesday night. John Rice, left of Pittsfield, is shown greeting an old school chum, Joseph De Pasquale of Boston, a member of the quartet that played with Goodman. The violinist is the grandson of the founder of Tanglewood.

NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, JULY 15, 1956.

MASSACHUSETTS
LENOX

Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall. Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, assisted by Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center. Conductor, Charles Munch; Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan, James Joyce, basses. Bach's Passion According to St. John.

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall, program of chamber music. Participants: Brass Ensemble of the Boston Symphony Orchestra directed by Roger Voisin; Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Ralph Berkowitz, pianist.
Canzon Septimi Toni No. 1 for Double Quartet of Brass.....Gabrieli
Toccata from Ricercari e Canzoni.....Bonelli
Sonata for horn, trumpet and trombone.....Poulenc
Brass Suite for seven instruments.....Berezowsky
Five Wesendonck Songs.....Wagner
Four Songs.....R. Strauss

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.
Roman Carnival Overture.....Berlioz
Afternoon of a Faun.....Debussy
Daphnis and Chloe Suite No. 2.....Ravel
Symphony No. 2.....Brahms

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; James Pease, bass.
Adagio for Strings (first Tanglewood performance).....Barber
Fantaisies Symphoniques (first Tanglewood performance).....Martinu
Act I of Die Walkuere (concert version).....Wagner

NEXT SUNDAY, July 22, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Pierre Monteux.
Overture to L'Italiana in Algeri.....Rossini
Concerto for Orchestra.....Bartok
Symphony No. 4.....Schubert

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through AUG. 12
Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
THEATRE—TODAY at 2:30
NEXT WED. July 18 - 8:30—MARGARET HARSHAW; THE BRASS ENSEMBLE
Shed Concerts Open Next Friday
FRI. July 20, at 8:30—BERLIOZ—DEBUSSY—RAVEL—BRAHMS (MUNCH)
SAT. July 21, at 8:30—BARBER—MARTINU—WAGNER (MUNCH)
SUN. July 22, at 2:30—ROSSINI—BARTOK—SCHUBERT. (MONTEUX)
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Admission $2)
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano — RCA Victor Records

[75]

Springfield Union
July 14, 1956

MOZART'S MUSIC PLAYED IN SHED AT TANGLEWOOD

2208 Hear Piano Trio, Orchestra; Goldovsky Is Applauded

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 13 — There were 2208 people in the big shed tonight to hear the program of music by Mozart and every one of them seemed to be having a wonderful time. The concert had been moved from the Theater-Concert Hall because of inclement weather, but no amount of rain could dampen the spirits of this audience nor did it seem to have any effect upon the performers.

As far as the soloists were concerned, this was a sort of "family affair." Genia Nemenoff is the wife of Pierre Luboschutz and Doris Goldovsky is his nephew. The trio has been touring the country during his Mozart bi-centennial year playing the works heard tonight and the result was a series of finely prepared performances.

Past master at engendering excitement, Boris Goldovsky started things off with an enthusiastic performance of the march, andantino and finale of Mozart's "Serenade in D Major, K. 320." It was a finely proportioned performance with plenty of brio when desired and a lovely flowing treatment to the andantino.

The three pianists came on to play the "Concerto in F Major" for three pianos and orchestra, K. 242." Mr. Goldovsky's piano was raised above those of his colleagues and from the instrument he conducted, looking very much like an animated and very happy cherub. He was obviously enjoying himself. The concerto was handsomely played. There was a perfect sense of unity and agreement. Luboschutz and Nemenoff have been playing together for years and have attained a nice balance and color and Mr. Goldovsky fitted in perfectly. The orchestra joined in the ovation which followed this performance.

Once again Mr. Goldovsky trotted on the stage, this time to play the Mozart's "Piano Concerto in A Major, K. 488." Pierre Luboschutz conducted. The collaboration between soloist and orchestra was exceptionally close and the pianist was in top form, playing infinitely better than he did when he appeared with the Springfield Symphony Orchestra a few years ago. There was vitality aplenty and a fine treatment of the andante, one of Mozart's finest. The concluding rondo was executed in brilliant fashion. There were bravos aplenty at the conclusion and the pianist was recalled a half dozen times. Up here, Goldovsky can do no wrong.

The final number brought Luboschutz and Nemenoff on to play Mozart's "Concerto in E-Flat Major for Two Pianos and Orchestra." Their thorough understanding of the work and the beauty of tone, delicacy and excitement which they brought to it resulted in a performance to be remembered.

Tomorrow night, Charles Munch will conduct an all-Bach program featuring William Kroll in the "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra No. 2 in F Major" and Dorothy Anthony Dwyer in the "Suite No. 2 in B Minor for Flute and Strings." Other works on the program include the second Brandenburg Concerto and "Suite No. 3 in D Major for Orchestra."

Sunday afternoon Mr. Munch will conduct a performance of "The Passion According to St. John." The Festival Chorus will be heard and the soloists will be John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan, baritone; Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto, and James Joyce, bass.

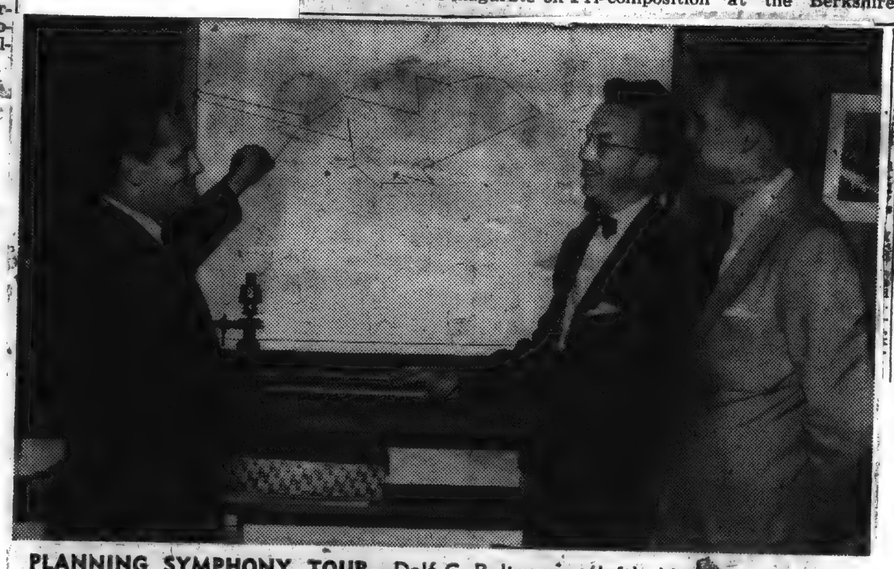
BOSTON SUNDAY HERALD, JULY 15, 1956

Berkshire Festival Programs Starting 3rd Week Thursday

The Berkshire Festival con- day evening the annual series of certs at Lenox, Mass., move into twelve week-end concerts in the high gear next week when the huge 6,000-seat Music Shed at entire Boston Symphony Orches- Tanglewood, which is open on tra of 106 pieces assembles at three sides so the music may Tanglewood under the baton of spill out on the spacious lawns, Charles Munch, Music Director. where additional thousands of When they complete their two music-lovers assemble under the weeks of free Esplanade concerts stars and tall pines, or picnic in on the Charles River in Boston Sunday sunshine. In 1955 the under the leadership of Arthur Shed concerts attracted an audi- Fiedler, 70 players of the Bos- ence of 108,336, or an average ton Symphony move to the Berk- attendance of 9,028 persons. shire Hills of Western Massachu- A feature of the Shed series setts to join the 36 principals will be first Tanglewood perform- who have been teaching chamber ances of four symphonic works music to students of the orches- commissioned by the Boston Sym- tra in the fortnight of "Bach- phony Orchestra during this, its Mozart" concerts that tradition- 75th Anniversary season from ally opens the Festival. Italian composer Goffredo Pe- The entire Boston Symphony trassi, who is guest teacher of Orchestra will inagurate on Fri- composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, from Aaron Copland, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston. The American compositions will be played in Europe this fall when the Boston Symphony undertakes a five-and-a-half week tour of 13 countries, including a week in the U.S.S.R. Charles Munch will also devote two of the Shed concerts to concert versions of Wagner operas.

During the Shed season his conductor stand will be shared by Pierre Monteux, who was conductor of the orchestra from 1919-1924 and who has been invited by Dr. Munch to share the conducting during the forthcoming European tour; by Richard Burgin, concert-master of the orchestra since 1920; by Leonard Bernstein, who has headed the Berkshire Music Center's department of orchestra and conducting since 1946; and by Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro, who is filling Mr. Bernstein's post on the music school's faculty during the latter's sabbatical this summer.

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts comprises a joint recital by the Boston Symphony's Brass Ensemble and by Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw and pianist Ralph Berkowitz, on Wednesday evening in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall.



PLANNING SYMPHONY TOUR—Dolf C. Bulterman (left), New England manager of KLM Royal Dutch Airlines, discusses European tour route of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Thomas D. Perry, manager, and G. W. Rector, right, assistant manager. The orchestra will fly by KLM in two groups in August.

day Journal, July 15, 1956 for the orchestra's 75th anniversary season from Goffredo Petrassi, guest teacher at the Music Center; Aaron Copland, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston. The American works will be played during the orchestra's forthcoming European tour.

The Shed programs will also feature two concert versions of Wagner operas. Charles Munch will share the direction with Pierre Monteux, Richard Burgin, Leonard Bernstein and Eleazar de Carvalho.

SYRACUSE HERALD AMERICAN, Sunday, July 15, 1956

Boston Symphony to Perform in Russia

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Charles Munch, music director, now is in its summer home in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., where the annual Berkshire Festival is in progress. Dr. Munch has made changes in two programs to be performed in the Music Shed by the orchestra. Instead of all-Wagner concerts last Saturday night, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, Dr. Munch has made substitutions in the first half of each program.

On July 21, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" will open the program, followed by Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantasies Symphoniques" which Dr. Munch commissioned for The Boston's 75th anniversary season and which was named by the New York Music Critics Circle as the best new orchestral work presented in 1955. Both the Barber and Martinu works are to have first performances in "Tanglewood." They replace previously announced excerpts from "Siegfried" and "Tristan and Isolde."

On Aug. 12, Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica," will be substituted for the previously scheduled Overture numbers from "Tannhauser" and "Siegfried." On both concert programs, Dr. Munch will retain concert versions of Wagner operas "Die Walkure" and "Die Meistersinger" with Margaret Harshaw, Marguerite Willauer, Albert De Costa and James Pease as soloists. Meantime, [illegible] and Chamber Music concerts [illegible] the "Theater Concert Hall."

The Boston Symphony will play 27 concerts in 13 countries during its five and a half weeks' tour, including Russia, in August and September, according to orchestra Manager Thomas D. Perry. Jr. Dr. Munch and the 106 players will fly to Europe immediately following the final "Tanglewood" program on Aug. 12. The first two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on Aug. 24, followed by a matinee the next day in Dublin. Five concerts will be given in Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival; the Boston Symphony Orchestra then will visit Scandinavia for four days.

The Ministry of Culture in Moscow invited The Boston to perform in the USSR during six days, Sept. 5-10, the invitation immediately accepted. Other concerts on the tour include those in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres, Leeds and London. Pierre Monteux, once regular music director of the Boston Symphony, has been invited by Dr. Munch to conduct several of the orchestra's concerts abroad.

The Boston Symphony will play in Syracuse in October under local management of Famous Artists. Murray Bernthal, executive. Famous Artists has presented The Boston, under Dr. Munch, on previous occasions of musical note.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, JULY 15, 1956

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through AUG. 12

Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
THEATRE—TODAY at 2:30
NEXT WED. July 18 - 8:30—MARGARET HARSHAW; THE BRASS ENSEMBLE
Shed Concerts Open Next Friday
FRI. July 20, at 8:30—BERLIOZ—DEBUSSY—RAVEL—BRAHMS (MUNCH)
SAT. July 21, at 8:30—BARBER—MARTINU—WAGNER (MUNCH)
SUN. July 22, at 2:30—ROSSINI—BARTOK—SCHUBERT (MONTEUX)
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Admission $2)
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone Lenox 600
Baldwin Piano — RCA Victor Records

Berkshire Festival

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, 2:30. Conductor, Charles Munch; soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses, and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center. Bach's "The Passion According to St. John."

Wednesday, 8:30. Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Ralph Berkowitz, piano. Cannon Septimi Toni, No. 1 for Double Quartet of Brass; Toccata from "Ricercari e Canzoni," Bonelli; Sonata for Horn, Trumpet and Trombone, Poulenc; Brass Suite for Seven Instruments, Berezowsky; Five Songs, Wagner; Four Songs, Strauss.

Friday, 8:30. Conductor, Charles Munch. Overture, the Roman Carnival, Berlioz; Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun, Debussy; "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2, Ravel; Symphony No. 2 in D major, Brahms.

Saturday, 8:30. Conductor, Charles Munch; soloists, Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; James Pease, bass. "Adagio for Strings," Samuel Barber; "Fantaisies Symphoniques (Symphony No. 6), Martinu; "Die Walkure," Act I, Wagner.

Sunday, July 22, 2:30. Pierre Monteux, conducting. Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri," Rossini; Concerto for Orchestra, Bartok; Symphony No. 7 in C major, [illegible]

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 181,704

JUL 15 1956

The Providence Sun

Concert Series At Tanglewood Opens Friday

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will inaugurate its annual series of 12 weekend concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed Friday night. On that occasion the 70 players who have been giving the Esplanade concerts in Boston will join the 36 teaching and concertizing principals at Tanglewood to bring the orchestra to its full complement.

Featuring the Shed series will be the first Tanglewood performances of four symphonic works commissioned

[76]

Springfield Union
July 14, 1956

MOZART'S MUSIC PLAYED IN SHED AT TANGLEWOOD

2208 Hear Piano Trio, Orchestra; Goldovsky Is Applauded

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 13 — There were 2208 people in the big shed tonight to hear the program of music by Mozart and every one of them seemed to be having a wonderful time. The concert had been moved from the Theater-Concert Hall because of inclement weather, but no amount of rain could dampen the spirits of this audience nor did it seem to have any effect upon the performers.

As far as the soloists were concerned, this was a sort of "family affair." Genia Nemenoff is the wife of Pierre Luboschutz and Doris Goldovsky is his nephew. The trio has been touring the country during his Mozart bi-centennial year playing the works heard tonight and the result was a series of finely prepared performances.

Past master at engendering excitement, Boris Goldovsky started things off with an enthusiastic performance of the march, andantino and finale of Mozart's "Serenade in D Major, K. 320." It was a finely proportioned performance with plenty of brio when desired and a lovely flowing treatment to the andantino.

The three pianists came on to play the "Concerto in F Major" for three pianos and orchestra, K. 242." Mr. Goldovsky's piano was raised above those of his colleagues and from the instrument he conducted, looking very much like an animated and very happy cherub. He was obviously enjoying himself. The concerto was handsomely played. There was a perfect sense of unity and agreement. Luboschutz and Nemenoff have been playing together for years and have attained a nice balance and color and Mr. Goldovsky fitted in perfectly. The orchestra joined in the ovation which followed this performance.

Once again Mr. Goldovsky trotted on the stage, this time to play the Mozart's "Piano Concerto in A Major, K. 488." Pierre Luboschutz conducted. The collaboration between soloist and orchestra was exceptionally close and the pianist was in top form, playing infinitely better than he did when he appeared with the Springfield Symphony Orchestra a few years ago. There was vitality aplenty and a fine treatment of the andante, one of Mozart's finest. The concluding rondo was executed in brilliant fashion. There were bravos aplenty at the conclusion and the pianist was recalled a half dozen times. Up here, Goldovsky can do no wrong.

The final number brought Luboschutz and Nemenoff on to play Mozart's "Concerto in E-Flat Major for Two Pianos and Orchestra." Their thorough understanding of the work and the beauty of tone, delicacy and excitement which they brought to it resulted in a performance to be remembered.

Tomorrow night, Charles Munch will conduct an all-Bach program featuring William Kroll in the "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra No. 2 in F Major" and Doriot Anthony Dwyer in the "Suite No. 2 in B Minor for Flute and Strings." Other works on the program include the second Brandenburg Concerto and "Suite No. 3 in D Major for Orchestra."

Sunday afternoon Mr. Munch will conduct a performance of "The Passion According to St. John." The Festival Chorus will be heard and the soloists will be John McCullam, tenor; Mac Morgan, baritone; Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto, and James Joyce, bass.

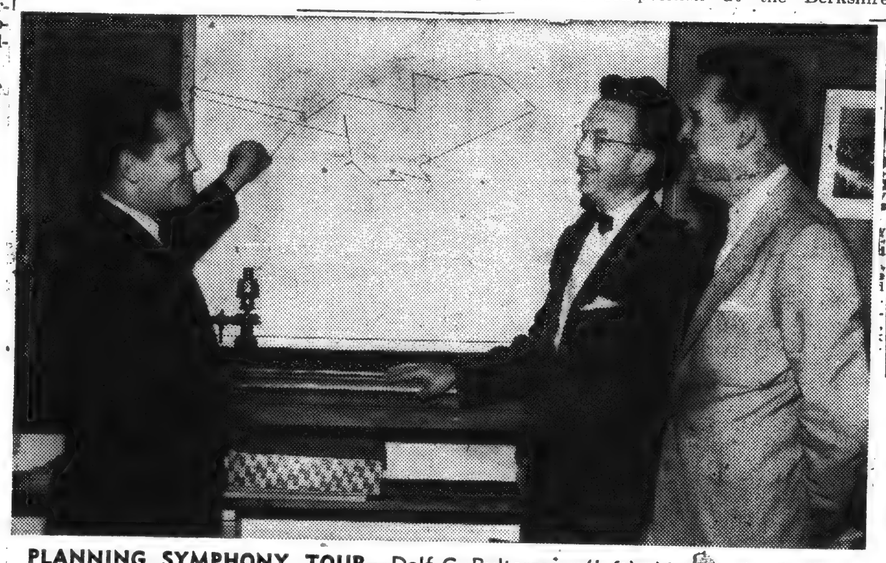
BOSTON SUNDAY HERALD, JULY 15, 1956

Berkshire Festival Programs Starting 3rd Week Thursday

The Berkshire Festival con- day evening the annual series of certs at Lenox, Mass., move into twelve week-end concerts in the high gear next week when the huge 6,000-seat Music Shed at entire Boston Symphony Orches- Tanglewood, which is open on tra of 106 pieces assembles at three sides so the music may Tanglewood under the baton of spill out on the spacious lawns, Charles Munch, Music Director. where additional thousands of When they complete their two music-lovers assemble under the weeks of free Esplanade concerts stars and tall pines, or picnic in on the Charles River in Boston Sunday sunshine. In 1955 the under the leadership of Arthur Shed concerts attracted an audi- Fiedler, 70 players of the Bos- ence of 108,336, or an average ton Symphony move to the Berk- attendance of 9,028 persons. shire Hills of Western Massachu- A feature of the Shed series setts to join the 36 principals will be first Tanglewood perform- who have been teaching chamber ances of four symphonic works music to students of the orches- commissioned by the Boston Sym- tra in the fortnight of "Bach- phony Orchestra during this, its Mozart" concerts that tradition- 75th Anniversary season from ally opens the Festival. Italian composer Goffredo Pe- The entire Boston Symphony trassi, who is guest teacher of Orchestra will inagurate on Fri- composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, from Aaron Copland, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston. The American compositions will be played in Europe this fall when the Boston Symphony undertakes a five-and-a-half week tour of 13 countries, including a week in the U.S.S.R. Charles Munch will also devote two of the Shed concerts to concert versions of Wagner operas.

During the Shed season his conductor stand will be shared by Pierre Monteux, who was conductor of the orchestra from 1919-1924 and who has been invited by Dr. Munch to share the conducting during the forthcoming European tour; by Richard Burgin, concert-master of the orchestra since 1920; by Leonard Bernstein, who has headed the Berkshire Music Center's department of orchestra and conducting since 1946; and by Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro, who is filling Mr. Bernstein's post on the muisc school's faculty during the latter's sabbatical this summer.

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts comprises a joint recital by the Boston Symphony's Brass Ensemble and by Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw and pianist Ralph Berkowitz, on Wednesday evening in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall.



PLANNING SYMPHONY TOUR—Dolf C. Bulterman (left), New England manager of KLM Royal Dutch Airlines, discusses European tour route of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Thomas D. Perry, manager, and G. W. Rector, right, assistant manager. The orchestra will fly by KLM in two groups in August.

yday Journal, July 15, 1956 for the orchestra's 75th anniversary season from Goffredo Petrassi, a guest teacher at the Music Center; Aaron Copland, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston. The American works will be played during the orchestra's forthcoming European tour.

The Shed programs will also feature two concert versions of Wagner operas. Charles Munch will share the direction with Pierre Monteux, Richard Burgin, Leonard Bernstein and Eleazar de Carvalho.

SYRACUSE HERALD-AMERICAN, Sunday, July 15, 1956

Boston Symphony to Perform in Russia

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Charles Munch, music director, now is in its summer home in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., where the annual Berkshire Festival is in progress. Dr. Munch has made changes in two programs to be performed in the Music Shed by the orchestra. Instead of all-Wagner concerts next Saturday night, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, Dr. Munch has made substitutions in the first half of each program.

On July 21, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" will open the program, followed by Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantasies Symphoniques" which Dr. Munch commissioned for The Boston's 75th anniversary season and which was named by the New York Music Critics Circle as the best new orchestral work presented in 1955. Both the Barber and Martinu works are to have first performances in "Tanglewood." They replace previously announced excerpts from "Siegfried" and "Tristam and Isolde."

On Aug. 12, Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica," will be substituted for the previously scheduled Overture numbers from "Tannhauser" and "Siegfried." On both concert programs, Dr. Munch will retain concert versions of Wagner operas "Die Walkure" and "Die Meistersinger" with Margaret Harshaw, Marguerite Willauer, Albert De Costa and James Pease as soloists. Meantime, [illegible] Chamber Music concerts in the Theater Concert Hall.

The Boston Symphony will play 27 concerts in 13 countries during its five and a half weeks' tour, including Russia, in August and September, according to orchestra manager Thomas D. Perry Jr. Dr. Munch and the 106 players will fly to Europe immediately following the final "Tanglewood" program on Aug. 12. The first two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on Aug. 24, followed by a matinee the next day in Dublin. Five concerts will be given in Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival; the Boston Symphony Orchestra then will visit Scandinavia for four days.

The Ministry of Culture in Moscow invited The Boston to perform in the USSR during six days, Sept. 5-10, the invitation immediately accepted. Other concerts on the tour include those in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres, Leeds and London. Pierre Monteux, once regular music director of the Boston Symphony, has been invited by Dr. Munch to conduct several of the orchestra's concerts abroad.

The Boston Symphony will play in Syracuse in October under local management of Famous Artists, Murray Bernthal, executive. Famous Artists has presented The Boston, under Dr. Munch, on previous occasions of musical note.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, JULY 15, 1956

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through AUG. 12

Berkshire Festival

BY THE

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

THEATRE—TODAY at 2:30

NEXT WED. July 18 - 8:30—MARGARET HARSHAW; THE BRASS ENSEMBLE

Shed Concerts Open Next Friday

FRI. July 20, at 8:30—BERLIOZ—DEBUSSY—RAVEL—BRAHMS (MUNCH)

SAT. July 21, at 8:30—BARBER—MARTINU—WAGNER (MUNCH)

SUN. July 22, at 2:30—ROSSINI—BARTOK—SCHUBERT (MONTEUX)

Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Admission $2)

TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600

Baldwin Piano — RCA Victor Records

Berkshire Festival

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, 2:30. Conductor, Charles Munch; soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses, and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center. Bach's "The Passion According to St. John."

Wednesday, 8:30. Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Ralph Berkowitz, piano. Canzon Septimi Toni, No. 1 for Double Quartet of Brass; Toccata from "Ricercari e Canzoni," Bonelli; Sonata for Horn, Trumpet and Trombone, Poulenc; Brass Suite for Seven Instruments, Berezowsky; Five Songs, Wagner; Four Songs, Strauss.

Friday, 8:30. Conductor, Charles Munch. Overture, the Roman Carnival, Berlioz; Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun, Debussy; "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2, Ravel; Symphony No. 2 in D major, Brahms.

Saturday, 8:30. Conductor, Charles Munch; soloists, Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; James Pease, bass. "Adagio for Strings," Samuel Barber; "Fantaisies Symphoniques (Symphony No. 6), Martinu; "Die Walkure," Act I, Wagner.

Sunday, July 22, 2:30. Pierre Monteux, conducting. Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri," Rossini; Concerto for Orchestra, Bartok; Symphony No. 7 in C major, Schubert.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 181,704

JUL 15 1956

VI—4 The Providence Sun

Concert Series At Tanglewood Opens Friday

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will inaugurate its annual series of 12 weekend concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed Friday night. On that occasion the 70 players who have been giving the Esplanade concerts in Boston will join the 36 teaching and concertizing principals at Tanglewood to bring the orchestra to its full complement.

Featuring the Shed series will be the first Tanglewood performances of four symphonic works commissioned

[76]

Tanglewood Crowd Hears Bach Works

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 14 — One of the largest audiences we have ever witnessed at a chamber orchestra program was on hand tonight, 4531 strong, to hear a superb program made up of the works of Johann Sebastian Bach. Featured soloists were flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer and violinist William Kroll.

Ovation Accorded

As usual, there was a wonderful ovation after Mrs. Dwyer concluded the "Suite No. 2 in B Minor for Flute and Strings." She was recalled a half dozen times and finally played the finale badinerie over again. This happened last season if our memory serves us. Charles Munch and his players provided meticulous collaboration with Mrs. Dwyer and the result was a notable performance. The work itself is full of charm and melodic laughter.

(Continued On Page 10A)

TANGLEWOOD

(Continued From Page 1A)

William Kroll is one of this country's distinguished violinists and tonight he gave a superb performance of the "Concerto No. 2 in E Major for Violin and Orchestra." This is one of the two violin concerti of Bach which remain in original form. Others have been transposed for various instruments. It seemed tonight that Mr. Kroll's large and individual tone was better suited to works with orchestra than in a string quartet ensemble where it is liable to over balance the others.

He played with a magnificent sense of line and into the adagio he put a deal of color and feel-

U. S. Doesn't Know Its Own Gifted Composers—Copland

By AARON COPLAND
(Assistant Director, Berkshire Music Center)

Nothing in past musical history can match the speed with which the United States has taken its place as one of the principal music centers of the world.

Our symphony orchestras are acknowledged as the finest anywhere, our schools are bursting with individual talent and overflowing with performing groups of all kinds; more and more people are listening to serious music each year, and spending more money on it too.

Music Little Known

Our music-lovers are familiar with these developments, but there is one thing they have to be reminded about repeatedly: In the past 30 years we have also developed a vital school of native composers. Strange though it may seem, America doesn't know its own composers.

Of all creative arts practiced in our country—theater, dance, painting, literature—serious music composed here is the least talked about because it is the least well known.

You would undoubtedly embarrass any typical group of intelligent people if you asked them to name three native-born symphonic writers living and composing in present - day America. They would have no trouble at all in naming novelists, playwrights, painters of a similar category.

Years ago, when classical music was rated an esoteric art, this situation might have seemed natural enough. But nowadays you run the risk of being greeted by Mozart or Tchaikovsky every time you walk into your bank or your barber-shop. Everyone, willy-nilly, is a potential music-lover.

It is clearly ironic that in such a time America's serious composers should remain so relatively obscure.

Top Composers

Best known of all these is George Gershwin, whose untimely death in his 39th year cut off a brilliant talent in mid-career. At the top of today's list of Americans are names first heard of in the 20's, Charles Ives, Roy Harris, Roger Sessions, Virgil Tomson, Walter Piston, Howard Hanson.

These composers were barely launched when a revolution altered the very conditions of music-making. Almost overnight millons of new listeners were gained for serious music through the new media of radio, phonograph, and sound film.

It was quickly assumed that unfamiliar music in the contemporary idiom was too much for these musical newcomers; 'understanding music' was taken to mean understanding a symphony by Brahms or Dvorak. This narrow outlook was abetted by all those who had a financial stake in serious music.

By concentrating their major selling drive on a restricted list of famous composers of the past, they have transformed music into the most conservative of all the arts.

Such a policy is short-sighted, for it builds toward no future. It narrows the field of musical enjoyment unnecessarily, and obscures the considerable activity of the contemporary composer, both American and Foreign.

Many Symphonies

Despite these handicaps, America's composers have accomplished a great deal. Not many non-professionals realize that hundreds of symphonies have been written in this country in the past quarter of a century. Eight composers, taken alone, have written more than 50 symphonies.

I refer to Henry Cowell (11), Roy Harris (7), William Schuman (6), Walter Piston (6), David Diamond (6), Peter Mennin (6), George Antheil (5), and Paul Creston (5).

Characteristically, their music is vigorous, bouncy, optimistic, noisy; at other times it may be intricate or brooding, or even plainly sentimental and direct as a hymn tune.

Alongside these big-scaled works are many hundreds of shorter orchestral pieces composed in America. No one has ever troubled to take a complete census of what is available. My guess would be that between 300 and 500 composers are creating works in that form each year in the United States.

To Conduct Opera

London—A break in the harmonious relations of Herbert von Karajan and the Philharmonic Orchestra of London has finally occurred. In order to take up the offer made some months ago by the Vienna Opera that he be-

OPERA DEPARTMENT ACTIVE THESE DAYS

Lenox, July 14—The Berkshire Music Center's opera department at Tanglewood is an active center these days, as the Boris Goldovsky forces of (24) train young singers for professional careers.

On the teaching faculty with Mr. Goldovsky as stage directors are Robert Gay, James Pease, Arthur Schoep and James Lucas. Emanuel Balaban, Paul Ulanowsky and Felix Wolfes do coaching in standard repertory; Ludwig and Laura Zirner direct the associate division, composed of not yet fully experienced singers.

Backstage, the opera department is designing and executing secenery and costumes for some seven productions which the public will see at Tanglewood during the next month, through membership in the Friends' organization—an evening of excerpts from 14 Mozart operas (July 24) employing a uni-decorative setting; five acts of 19th Century operas (July 30); and Lukas Foss' three-act opera "Griffelkin" (Aug. 6 and 7). Robert O'Hearn, of New York, is the department's new scene designer. Thomas DeGaetani, in his fourth year as member of the faculty and staff of the Juilliard School of Music, N. Y., is at Tanglewood for his third summer as technical director. Leo Van Witsen, now designer for the New York City Opera Co. under Erich Leinsdorf, has costumed all major Tanglewood operas since 1947.

MUSIC CENTER SHOWS INCREASE IN STUDENTS

Thirty-seven students from 18 foreign lands are studying at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, now in its 14th six-week session to August 12. The students from abroad comprise close to 10 per cent of the student body of 400 who annually come to study in the hills of Western Massachusetts. The figure indicates a considerable increase over last year, when 29 students from other lands came to Tanglewood, including nine from Canada.

A notable increase in students from Central and South America has been observed this summer, with 16 students from Uruguay, Argentina, Cuba, Puerto Rico, Brazil and Colombia. Six have come to Tanglewood from Canada, four from England, two from Japan, one each from Israel, Lebanon, Germany, Egypt, Austria, Hungary, Finland, The Philippines, Australia.

ST. JOHN PASSION AT TANGLEWOOD

Lenox, July 14 Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and director of The Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood, returns to the podium of the Berkshire Festival tomorrow afternoon to conduct two all-Bach concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall. Beginning next week end the Festival concerts will move into the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood for four week ends of concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Tomorrow afternoon Dr. Munch will conduct Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" in its first Tanglewood performance. Assisting will be the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, and a quintet of vocal soloists, all of whom are former students at the Berkshire Music Center, and who have since gone on to concert and operatic careers. Adele Addison, the soprano soloist, studied in the opera department during the summers of 1947, 1948 and 1950; Florence Kopleff, the contralto, studied in the choral department in 1946 and in the opera department in 1947; John McCollum, the tenor, was a member of the opera department in 1952 and 1953; Mac Morgan and James Joyce are the basses. Mr. Morgan studied in the opera department in 1950 and 1953; Mr. Joyce in 1951 and 1952.

Brass Ensemble of the Boston Symphony

The brass ensemble (Roger Voisin and Armando Ghitalla, trumpets; Harold Meek and Paul Keaney, horns; William Moyer and Kauko Kahila, trombones; Kilton V. Smith, tuba) of Boston Symphony Orchestra players will perform works by Gabrielli, Bonelli, Poulenc and Berezowsky at the Berkshire Festival chamber music concert of Wednesday, July 18 (8:30 p. m., Theater-Concert Hall). Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw will sing Wagner and Strauss songs on the same program.

At Tanglewood Today

ADELE ADDISON JOHN M'COLLUM

Bach's "Passion According to St. John" will be heard in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood this afternoon at 2.30. Among the soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano, and John McCollum, tenor. Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students will also be heard.

[77]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078 Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372
JUL 15 19

In Concert Versions of Wagner Operas Saturday

JAMES PEASE

MARGARET HARSHAW

ALBERT DA COSTA

Tanglewood Topics

By WALTER ALFORD

Lenox, July 14—Albert Da Costa, the 29-year-old Heldentenor of the Metropolitan Opera Co., who will be making his Tanglewood debut in the role of Sigmund in the concert version of Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkure," with Charles Munch conducting the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed on Saturday evening, July 21, is a near-neighbor, a native of Amsterdam, N. Y., about 70 miles away. His father is Russian-Jewish of British ancestry, and he took his stage name from his Spanish mother's maiden name. From 1943-6 he served in the entertainment corps of the U. S. Navy, and while stationed in Corpus Christi, met and married his wife, Jean, who was a Navy Wave aviation machinist's mate and a member of a Navy choir. The couple now have five children, including twins, and make their home on Long Island.

* * *

After his war service, Da Costa sang in several opera companies and also on tour. Originally a baritone, he won the Metropolitan Opera Auditions of the Air in 1954 as a tenor. The young tenor, who is 6 feet, 3 inches tall, tips the scales at 260 pounds. New York Times music critic Howard Taubman described his Metropolitan Opera debut, as Walther in "Die Meistersinger"—a role he will repeat at Tanglewood in the Berkshire Festival final concert of August 12—thus: "In his first effort at a big part, he proved that he has the makings of that rarest of birds, a fine Holdentenor . . . His voice is clear, well-focused and lyrical in quality." The role he sings in "Die Walkure" at Tanglewood on the 21st he is expected to sing for the first time at the Met next season, when Rudolf Bing has scheduled to complete Wagner Ring cycle for the first time in a number of years.

* * *

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has now on sale at its Tanglewood music store a handsome souvenir book, compiled by John N. Burk, which has illustrations of the orchestra in all its manifold year-round activities, and which will be sold to music lovers at a nominal charge during the orchestra's tour of Europe in the fall. The 28-page booklet contains 50-word biographies of all 106 members of the Boston Symphony and photographs of them, taken by BSO violist George Humphrey. The booklet was printed in England, since the great bulk of its distribution will be on the continent.

* * *

Goffredo Petrassi, the Italian composer who is guest teacher of composition at Tanglewood, observes his 52d birthday next Monday (July 16). Classes as usual.

* * *

The Tanglewood Berkshire Festival program of Aug. 4 will be a memorial to the Boston Symphony's former conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, who died five years ago. Leonard Bernstein, one of Dr. Koussevitzky's most illustrious pupils, will take time off from the two new musicals he has in the works for Broadway production next season, to travel from his summer home in Vineyard Haven, Martha's Vineyard, to conduct the performance, and Mrs. Bernstein, stage and television actress Felicia Monteleagre, now appearing in the Harvard summer theater production of Shakespeare's "Henry V," will come to the Berkshires with him. The program has dropped the opening Variations for Orchestra by Moevs, and now consists of the first Tanglewood performance of Mozart's Mass in C minor, K. 427, with soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum, and the Festival Choir of Berkshire Music Center students, and Prokofieff's Symphony No. 5, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States and which he performed far and wide with the orchestra.

* * *

For the first time since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has been under the musical direction of Charles Munch, the orchestra cut a record at Tanglewood this week. A crew of engineers from the RCA-Victor laboratories in New York supervised the recording, made Monday morning (July 9) in the Theater-Concert Hall, and all musical practice in the area was put off for the morning. Benny Goodman recorded with Dr. Munch and the chamber orchestra of the symphony the Mozart Concerto for Clarinet, K. 622, which he performed at Tanglewood last week, and with the Boston Symphony String Quartet the Mozart Clarinet Quintet, in A major, K. 581, which he performed at Tanglewood Wednesday evening (July 11). The celebrated jazz clarinetist has recorded the concerto previously, with other orchestras, but never the quintet.

* * *

One of the busiest men on the Berkshire Music Center campus is composer Aaron Copland, its assistant director and head of its composition classes. Besides providing the piano accompaniment for his "Vitebsk" trio at the first of the two Fromm Foundation concerts of contemporary chamber music on July 9, and leading the student symphony orchestra in his own Symphony No. 1 on July 12, Mr. Copland is shortly to be honored with a performance by the Boston Symphony in the Festival concert of August 5 of his Symphonic Ode which he composed for the 50th anniversary of the orchestra and revised for its current 75th anniversary.

Southern Berkshire Has One of Busiest Week Ends

Horse Show, Golf Tourney, Music Festival and Jazz Concert Attract Many Visitors

(Special to The Republican)

Berkshire Hills, July 14—Southern Berkshire is experiencing one of the busiest week ends of the season as the result of three major events taking part in the South end of the county. Responsible for the influx of visitors to the area is the fifth annual Great Barrington horse show, currently underway at Great Barrington fairgrounds, the annual men's invitation golf tournament at Wyantenuck Country Club, Great Barrington, and of course the large pilgrimage of travelers to the area because of the Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, and the jazz concerts, also in Lenox.

The horse show is the main attraction in the south end of the county. The large number of horses entered makes it the largest outdoor show of its kind in New England, Thomas C. Armstrong, vice-president of the Great Barrington Horse Show Inc., announced.

Many connected with the show arrived early this week and took up accommodations at various hotels and inns for the week end event. Also, many are planning to stay through until the following week end, when they will have their horses compete in the annual Lakeville horse show in Salisbury, Conn.

Benefit Dance Aug. 4

The seventh annual benefit dance for Berkshire Industrial Farm, Canaan, N. Y., will be held Saturday, Aug. 4, and many residents of Berkshire County are serving on the general committee. Tickets may be obtained in the area from Mrs. Robert Crane, or at the Mary Zell book shop, Pittsfield; Miss Alice Riggs, Stockbridge, or Mrs. Martha Pelton, Lenox.

Others on the ticket committee are Mrs. George Kenk, Jr., of Chatham, Miss Doran Oldenburg, Lebanon, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Weldon Tuttle and Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Cummings, East Chatham; Mrs. Anna Palladino, Chatham Center; Dr. and Mrs. Charles Mesick, Spencertown; Mrs. William Rogers, Hillsdale, and Mr. and Mrs. James Fuller, Copake.

The Berkshire Industrial Farm has for years been the home of many boys from broken homes. The entire program at the center is supported practically throughout by contributions.

Art Exhibit

About $400 in prizes will be awarded at the annual art exhibit sponsored by the Thursday Morning Club of Great Barrington from July 25 through Aug. 9 at Berkshire Inn. Prizes will include $100 for the best oil painting in modern style; $50 for the best water color; $25 given by Southern Berkshire Chamber of Commerce, for a water color of merit.

Mrs. Thomas H. Blodgett of Great Pine Farm, Great Barrington, is giving a $25 prize for the best picture of an animal or animals done in any medium, traditional. There is also a $25 prize to be given to the best work by a Southern Berkshire resident. This is being given by a group of businessmen from Great Barrington. Dr. and Mrs. Isaac M. Altaraz of Brookside School are offering $25 for the best sculpture in the show; Cornwall Academy is giving $25 for the most popular painting in the show, and there will also be a $15 prize for the best in graphic art.

Entry blanks may be obtained from either one of the cochairmen, Mrs. Altaraz or Mrs. William B. Nisbet, both of Great Barrington. The coming show is the 12th annual, and ranks as one of the top shows of its kind in the county during the year.

Mr. Forni Resigns.

Anthony F. Forni, for the past two years president of Laurel Hill Association, the more than a century old civic improvement association in Stockbridge, has tendered his resignation as head of the group owing to the fact of his being transferred by General Electric Co., to Bridgeport, Conn. His term will conclude at the annual meeting to be held next month. His resignation was accepted with regret by the board of trustees, and he too expressed regret that he had to leave the Berkshires.

During the interim between his resignation and the annual election of officers in January, a special committee of four trustees will govern the association. They are Mrs. David Dunbar, Miss Rosamont Sherwood,

(Continued on Page 30)

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ., 52,155
JUL 15 1956

Shed Series Begins Friday At Tanglewood

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, July 14—The entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin the annual series of 12 weekend concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood next Friday.

A feature of the Shed series will be the first Tanglewood performance of four symphonic works commissioned by the orchestra during this, its 75th anniversary season, from Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi, Aaron Coplon, Howard Hanson, and Walter Piston.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, the orchestra will also devote two of the Shed concerts to concert versions of Wagner operas. Dr. Munch will share the podium for the series with Pierre Monteux, Richard Burgih, Leonard Bernstein and Eleazar de Carvalho.

Other events in the third week of the Berkshire Festival include a joint recital by the symphony's Brass Ensemble, Wednesday through Friday, and by Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Henshaw and pianist Ralph Berkowitz on Wednesday evening; an evening of Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel and Brahms played by the Symphony Orchestra led by Dr. Munch on Friday; and an all-Wagner program Saturday with Miss Harshaw and the orchestra.

An evening comprising acts from five 19th Century operas will be given by students of the opera department of the symphony's Summer music school on Monday, July 30, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky.

SOUTHERN BERKSHIRE

(Continued From Page 1C)

Edward H. Acton, and Dr. Joseph O. Chassell.

One Man Exhibit

Ralph Berkowitz, of Boston Symphony orchestra, which is presenting concerts at Tanglewood, has a one-man exhibit of 35 paintings at Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield. The exhibit will continue until July 31. Mr. Barkowitz, a pianist, was appointed by the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky executive assistant at Berkshire Music Center, Lenox. He has played often with Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, and the two will tour the Orient at the conclusion of the Tanglewood season.

The exhibits at the museum this month are photographs by Sydney R. Kanter, commercial photographer of Pittsfield; also photographs by Charles Vickerey, amateur photographer of Pittsfield. His works will be shown during the entire month of August. The Pittsfield Art League's annual exhibition will be from Sept. 1 to Sept. 23. The Photographic Society of America will loan the Museum pictures in the "Tops in Photography" program of the Society.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372
JUL 15 1956

Concerts in Music Shed Get Underway This Week

Full Boston Symphony Orchestra to Be Heard Friday and Saturday Nights at Tanglewood; Joint Recital Wednesday Night

Lenox, July 14—The Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood move into high gear next week when the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra of 106 pieces assembles under the baton of Charles Munch, music director. When they complete their two weeks of free Esplanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston under the leadership of Arthur Fielder, 70 players of the Boston Symphony move to the Berkshire Hills of Western Massachusetts to join the 36 principal who have been teaching chamber music to students of the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, and performing as a chamber orchestra in the fortnight of "Bach-Mozart" concerts that traditionally opens the Festival.

Music Shed Opening

The entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate on Friday evening the annual series of 12 week-end concerts in the huge 6000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, which is open on three sides so the music may spill out on the spacious lawns where additional thousands of music-lovers assemble under the stars and tall pines, or picnic in Sunday sunshine. In 1955 the Shed concerts attracted an audience of 108,336, or an average attendance of 9028 persons.

A feature of the Shed series will be first Tanglewood performances of four symphonic works commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during this 75th anniversary season from Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi, who is guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, from Aaron Copland, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston. The American compositions will be played in Europe this fall when the Boston Symphony undertakes a 5½-week tour of 13 countries, including a week in the U. S. S. R.

Wagner Operas

Charles Munch will also devote two of the Shed concerts to concert versions of Wagner operas. During the Shed season his podium will be shared by Pierre Monteux, who was conductor of the orchestra from 1919-1924 and who has been invited by Dr. Munch to share the conducting during the forthcoming European tour; by Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra since 1920; by Leonard Bernstein, who has headed the Berkshire Music Center's department of orchestra and conducting since 1946, and by Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro, who is filling Mr. Bernstein's post on the music school's faculty during the latter's sabbatical this summer.

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts (July 18-22) comprises a joint recital by the Boston Symphony's Brass Ensemble and by Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw and pianist Ralph Berkowitz, on Wednesday evening in the intimate Theater-Concert Hall; and a program of Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel and Brahms by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Dr. Munch (July 20).

On Saturday night Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" will open the program Dr. Munch conducting, followed by Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantasies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6), which the conductor commissioned for the Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary season, and which was named by the New York Music Critics' Circle the best new orchestral work presented in New York in the year [illegible]

The Brass Ensemble of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Roger Voisin.

Roger Voisin and Armando Ghitalla, trumpets; Harold Meek and Paul Keaney, French horns; Josef Orosz and Kauko Kahila, trombones; K. Vinal Smith, tuba; William Gibson, trombone, assisting.

Wagner ..... Five Songs (Texts by Mathilde Wesendonck)
Richard Strauss ..... Four Songs
Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

Friday, July 20, 8.30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra

Berlioz .. Overture, The Roman Carnival
Debussy ..... Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun
Ravel ..... "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2
Brahms .. Symphony No. 2, in D major
Charles Munch, Conductor.

Saturday, July 21, 8.30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra

Barber ..... Adagio for Strings
Martinu .... Fantaisies Symphoniques
Wagner ..... "Die Walkure," Act I
Soloists: Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; James Pease, bass.

Charles Munch, Conductor.

Sunday, July 22, 2.30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra

Rossini ..... Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri"
Bartok ..... Concerto for Orchestra
Schubert .. Symphony No. 7, in C major
Pierre Monteux, Conductor

Tomorrow afternoon, Charles Munch will conduct Bachs "The Passion According to St. John," assisted by the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Festival students trained by Hugh Ross, and soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

First Performance

Both the Barber and Martinu works will be receiving first performances at Tanglewood. They will replace the previously announced "A Faust Overture," "Forest Murmurs" from "Siegfried," and Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde." Dr. Munch will also present the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure," sung in concert version by Miss Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa, and bass James Pease (July 21), and a program of Rossini, Bartok and Schubert led by Mr. Monteux, a regular guest on the Tanglewood podium since 1951 (Sunday afternoon, July 22).

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8.30 p. m.; the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2.30 p. m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

A bonus for festival patrons will be the first of four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a. m. (July 21), for which the nominal charge is made of $1, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund. The complete programs:

Wednesday, July 18, 8.30 P. M., Theater-Concert Hall, Chamber Music

Gabrieli .... Canzon Septimi Toni, No. 1, for Double Quartet of Brass
Bonelli ..... Toccata from "Ricercari a Canzoni"
Poulenc ..... Sonata for Horn, Trumpet and Trombone
Stravinsky ..... Brass Suite for Seven Instruments

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 99,506
JUL 15 1956

CHARLOTTE, N. C. NEWS
JUN 16 1956

Main Symphonic Concert Scheduled At Tanglewood

By GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

The Berkshire Music Festival really goes into high gear this week when the main series of Shed concerts get under way on Friday evening. The first two weeks of Festival programs were devoted, as customary, to chamber music programs given in the Theater-Concert Hall by a limited number of musicians from the Boston Symphony. Some 70 of the orchestra's personnel, who have been playing the Esplanade concerts in Boston, will join the group now at Tanglewood for the opening of the main concerts this week. This will give the Boston Orchestra its full strength of 106 musicians for the Shed series which is to extend through the next four weeks.

Three American works are to have their first Tanglewood hearings in the Shed concerts. The works by Aaron Copland, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston were commissioned by the Boston Orchestra for its 75th anniversary this season. The new works are to have their European premieres this fall when the Hub musicians are scheduled to go abroad for a five-and-a-half week tour of 13 countries, including the U. S. S. R. Another commissioned work by the Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi will have its festival premiere also in the coming series. Incidentally, Petrassi is now in residence at Tanglewood where he is acting as guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center.

Pierre Monteux, who conducted the Boston Orchestra from 1919-1924, is to be one of the guest conductors in the Shed concerts and he will also direct some of the concerts to be given on the coming European tour. Other guest conductors at the Festival will include concert master Richard Burgin and the young Brazilian conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho. The latter is filling the Berkshire Music Center post usually occupied by another Koussevitzky protege, Leonard Bernstein, who is on a sabbatical this summer. The regular conductor of the Boston Orchestra, Charles Munch, will, of course, direct a majority of the Shed programs.

There will be the usual chamber music concert in the Theater-Concert Hall on Wednesday evening. The artists are to be the Boston Orchestra's Brass Ensemble, "Met" soprano Margaret Harshaw, and pianist Ralph Berkowitz in a program of music of the past and present.

Here are the Shed programs for the week:

Friday, July 20—8:30 p. m.

Overture, The Roman Carnival ..... Berlioz
Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun ..... Debussy
"Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2 ..... Ravel
Symphony No. 2, in D major ..... Brahms
Charles Munch, Conductor

Saturday, July 21—8:30 p. m.

Adagio for Strings ..... Barber
Symphony No. 6 ..... Martinu
"Die Walkure," Act I ..... Wagner
Soloists: Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; James Pease, bass.
Charles Munch, Conductor

Sunday, July 22—2:30 p. m.

Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri" ..... Rossini
Concerto for Orchestra ..... Bartok
Symphony No. 7, in C major ..... Schubert
Pierre Monteux, Conductor

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 130,826
JUL 15 1956

Adult Club To Hear Tanglewood Program

Tanglewood music in the Berkshire Hills awaits Adult Club members of the Hartford Jewish Community Center Aug. 5.

Members are asked to call Miss Nedra Cramer, club secretary, the evenings of July 16-18 at JA 7-9239. Final arrangements will be made the final evening.

Members will form a car caravan for the round trip. All are advised to bring box lunches.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra program for the day will be a Copland Symphonic Ode, a Tschaikowsky Violin Concerto with Zino Francescatti as soloist, and the Schumann Symphony No 2 in C Major, directed by Charles Munch.

Geraldine Riggs, a volatile blonde, is a cellist. Her father is Carl C. Riggs, professor of education at the Junior college in El Dorado. She came to the cello when her father taught in Liberal, Kas., and the school orchestra was short of that instrument. She was only 10 then and shorter than the big fiddle, but it was a union of love immediately. Her four sisters are pianists, but marriage appeared to have halted any urge for professionalism. Miss Riggs, how-

SYRACUSE HERALD-AMERICAN, Sunday, July 15, 1956

Boston Symphony to Perform in Russia

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Charles Munch, music director, now is in its summer home in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., where the annual Berkshire Festival is in progress. Dr. Munch has made changes in two programs to be performed in the Music Shed by the orchestra. Instead of all-Wagner concerts next Saturday night, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, Dr. Munch has made substitutions in the first half of each program.

On July 21, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" will open the program, followed by Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantasies Symphoniques" which Dr. Munch commissioned for The Boston's 75th anniversary season and which was named by the New York Music Critics Circle as the best new orchestral work presented in 1955. Both the Barber and Martinu works are to have first performances in "Tanglewood." They replace previously announced excerpts from "Siegfried" and "Tristam and Isolde."

On Aug. 12, Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica," will be substituted for the previously scheduled Overture numbers from "Tannhauser" and "Siegfried." On both concert programs, Dr. Munch will retain concert versions of Wagner operas "Die Walkure" and "Die Meistersinger" with Margaret Harshaw, Marguerite Willauer, Albert De Costa and James Pease as soloists. Meantime, there are Chamber Music concerts in the Theater Concert Hall.

The Boston Symphony will play 27 concerts in 13 countries during its five and a half weeks' tour, including Russia, in August and September, according to orchestra manager Thomas D. Perry Jr. Dr. Munch and the 106 players will fly to Europe immediately following the final "Tanglewood" program on Aug. 12. The first two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on Aug. 24, followed by a matinee the next day in Dublin. Five concerts will be given in Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival; the Boston Symphony Orchestra then will visit Scandinavia for four days.

The Ministry of Culture in Moscow invited The Boston to perform in the USSR during six days, Sept. 5-10, the invitation immediately accepted. Other concerts on the tour include those in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres, Leeds and London. Pierre Monteux, once regular music director of the Boston Symphony, has been invited by Dr. Munch to conduct several of the orchestra's concerts abroad.

The Boston Symphony will play in Syracuse in October under local management of Famous Artists, Murray Bernthal, executive. Famous Artists has presented The Boston, under Dr. Munch, on previous occasions of musical note.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544
JUL 15 1956

COMPLETING PLANS for the Boston Symphony Orchestra airlift to Europe via KLM Royal Dutch Airlines: Left to right, Dolph C. Bulterman, New England manager for KLM; Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager and G. W. Rector, assistant manager, Boston Symphony Orchestra. Seventy-nine members of the orchestra, some of them with their wives, leave Boston, Aug. 14, aboard a KLM Super G Constellation for Shannon, Ireland, with 59 others leaving Aug. 22. One hundred fifty-eight members will return from London via KLM on Sept. 27 and Oct. 1. All instruments will be flown back Sept. 27 aboard a special KLM freighter.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544
JUL 15 1956

Cameraman to Go to Moscow

When the world-famed Boston Symphony Orchestra makes an unprecedented journey behind the Iron Curtain to give concerts in Moscow and Leningrad this Summer, a United Press cameraman will accompany it.

Ed Fitzgerald, manager of the Boston United Press Newspictures Bureau, has been selected as official photographer for the 104-piece orchestra during its six-week European tour. He was chosen from a field of several candidates.

Fitzgerald will accompany the orchestra when it flies from the United States to Shannon, Ireland, Aug. 22.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372
JUL 15 1956

Concerts in Music Shed Get Underway This Week

Full Boston Symphony Orchestra to Be Heard Friday and Saturday Nights at Tanglewood; Joint Recital Wednesday Night

Lenox, July 14—The Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood move into high gear next week when the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra of 106 pieces assembles under the baton of Charles Munch, music director. When they complete their two weeks of free Espianade concerts on the Charles River in Boston under the leadership of Arthur Fielder, 70 players of the Boston Symphony move to the Berkshire Hills of Western Massachusetts to join the 36 principals who have been teaching chamber music to students of the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, and performing as a chamber orchestra in the fortnight of "Bach-Mozart" concerts that traditionally opens the Festival.

Music Shed Opening

The entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate on Friday evening the annual series of 12 week-end concerts in the huge 6000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood which is open on three sides so the music may spill out on the spacious lawns where additional thousands of music-lovers assemble under the stars and tall pines, or picnic in Sunday sunshine. In 1955 the Shed concerts attracted an audience of 108,336, or an average attendance of 9028 persons.

A feature of the Shed series will be first Tanglewood performances of four symphonic works commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during this 75th anniversary season from Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi, who is guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, from Aaron Copland, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston. The American compositions will be played in Europe this fall when the Boston Symphony undertakes a 5½-week tour of 13 countries, including a week in the U. S. S. R.

Wagner Operas

Charles Munch will also devote two of the Shed concerts to concert versions of Wagner operas. During the Shed season his podium will be shared by Pierre Monteux, who was conductor of the orchestra from 1919-1924 and who has been invited by Dr. Munch to share the conducting during the forthcoming European tour; by Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra since 1920; by Leonard Bernstein, who has headed the Berkshire Music Center's department of orchestra and conducting since 1946, and by Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro, who is filling Mr. Bernstein's post on the music school's faculty during the latter's sabbatical this summer.

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts (July 18-22) comprises a joint recital by the Boston Symphony's Brass Ensemble and by Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw and pianist Ralph Berkowitz, on Wednesday evening in the intimate Theater-Concert Hall; and a program of Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel and Brahms by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Dr. Munch (July 20).

On Saturday night Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" will open the program Dr. Munch conducting, followed by Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6), which the conductor commissioned for the Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary season, and which was named by the New York Music Critics' Circle the best new orchestral work presented in New York in the year 1955.

The Brass Ensemble of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Roger Voisin.

Roger Voisin and Armando Ghitalla, trumpets; Harold Meek and Paul Keaney, French horns; Josef Orosz and Kauko Kahila, trombones; K. Vinal Smith, tuba; William Gibson, trombone, assisting.

Wagner ..... Five Songs (Texts by Mathilde Wesendonck)
Richard Strauss ..... Four Songs
Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

Friday, July 20, 8.30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra

Berlioz .. Overture, The Roman Carnival
Debussy ..... Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun
Ravel ..... "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2
Brahms .. Symphony No. 2, in D major
Charles Munch, Conductor.

Saturday, July 21, 8.30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra

Barber ..... Adagio for Strings
Martinu .... Fantaisies Symphoniques
Wagner ..... "Die Walkure," Act I
Soloists: Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; James Pease, bass.
Charles Munch, Conductor.

Sunday, July 22, 2.30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra

Rossini ..... Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri"
Bartok ..... Concerto for Orchestra
Schubert ... Symphony No. 7, in C major
Pierre Monteux, Conductor

Tomorrow afternoon, Charles Munch will conduct Bachs "The Passion According to St. John," assisted by the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Festival students trained by Hugh Ross, and soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

First Performance

Both the Barber and Martinu works will be receiving first performances at Tanglewood. They will replace the previously announced "A Faust Overture," "Forest Murmurs" from 'Siegfried," and Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde." Dr. Munch will also present the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure," sung in concert version by Miss Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa, and basso James Pease (July 21), and a program of Rossini, Bartok and Schubert led by Mr. Monteux, a regular guest on the Tanglewood podium since 1951 (Sunday afternoon, July 22).

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8.30 p. m.; the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2.30 p. m. General admission to the grounds enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

A bonus for festival patrons will be the first of four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a. m. (July 21), for which the nominal charge is made of $1, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund. The complete programs:

Wednesday, July 18, 8.30 P. M., Theater-Concert Hall, Chamber Music

Gabrieli .... Canzon Septimi Toni, No. 1, for Double Quartet of Brass
Bonelli ..... Toccata from "Ricercari e Canzoni"
Poulenc ..... Sonata for Horn, Trumpet and Trombone
Berezowsky ..... Brass Suite for Seven Instruments

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544
JUL 15 1956

Cameraman to Go to Moscow

When the world-famed Boston Symphony Orchestra makes an unprecedented journey behind the Iron Curtain to give concerts in Moscow and Leningrad this Summer, a United Press cameraman will accompany it.

Ed Fitzgerald, manager of the Boston United Press Newspictures Bureau, has been selected as official photographer for the 104-piece orchestra during its six-week European tour. He was chosen from a field of several candidates.

Fitzgerald will accompany the orchestra when it flies from the United States to Shannon, Ireland, Aug. 22.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 99,506
JUL 15 1956

Main Symphonic Concert Scheduled At Tanglewood

By GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

The Berkshire Music Festival really goes into high gear this week when the main series of Shed concerts get under way on Friday evening. The first two weeks of Festival programs were devoted, as customary, to chamber music programs given in the Theater-Concert Hall by a limited number of musicians from the Boston Symphony. Some 70 of the orchestra's personnel, who have been playing the Esplanade concerts in Boston, will join the group now at Tanglewood for the opening of the main concerts this week. This will give the Boston Orchestra its full strength of 106 musicians for the Shed series which is to extend through the next four weeks.

Three American works are to have their first Tanglewood hearings in the Shed concerts. The works by Aaron Copland, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston were commissioned by the Boston Orchestra for its 75th anniversary this season. The new works are to have their European premieres this fall when the Hub musicians are scheduled to go abroad for a five-and-a-half week tour of 13 countries, including the U. S. S. R. Another commissioned work by the Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi will have its festival premiere also in the coming series. Incidentally, Petrassi is now in residence at Tanglewood where he is acting as guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center.

Pierre Monteux, who conducted the Boston Orchestra from 1919-1924, is to be one of the guest conductors in the Shed concerts and he will also direct some of the concerts to be given on the coming European tour. Other guest conductors at the Festival will include concertmaster Richard Burgin and the young Brazilian conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho. The latter is filling the Berkshire Music Center post usually occupied by another Koussevitzky protege, Leonard Bernstein, who is on a sabbatical this summer. The regular conductor of the Boston Orchestra, Charles Munch, will, of course, direct a majority of the Shed programs.

There will be the usual chamber music concert in the Theater-Concert Hall on Wednesday evening. The artists are to be the Boston Orchestra's Brass Ensemble, "Met" soprano Margaret Harshaw, and pianist Ralph Berkowitz in a program of music of the past and present.

Here are the Shed programs for the week:

Friday, July 20—8:30 p. m.

Overture, The Roman Carnival ..... Berlioz
Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun ..... Debussy
"Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2 ..... Ravel
Symphony No. 2, in D major ..... Brahms
Charles Munch, Conductor

Saturday, July 21—8:30 p. m.

Adagio for Strings ..... Barber
Symphony No. 6 ..... Martinu
"Die Walkure," Act I ..... Wagner
Soloists: Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; James Pease, bass.
Charles Munch, Conductor

Sunday, July 22—2:30 p. m.

Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri" ..... Rossini
Concerto for Orchestra ..... Bartok
Symphony No. 7, in C major ..... Schubert
Pierre Monteux, Conductor

CHARLOTTE, N. C. NEWS
JUN 16 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 130,826
JUL 15 1956

Adult Club To Hear Tanglewood Program

Tanglewood music in the Berkshire Hills awaits Adult Club members of the Hartford Jewish Community Center Aug. 5.

Members are asked to call Miss Nedra Cramer, club secretary, the evenings of July 16-18 at JA 7-9239. Final arrangements will be made the final evening.

Members will form a car caravan for the round trip. All are advised to bring box lunches.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra program for the day will be a Copland Symphonic Ode, a Tschaikowsky Violin Concerto with Zino Francescatti as soloist, and the Schumann Symphony No 2 in C Major, directed by Charles Munch.

Geraldine Riggs, a volatile blonde, is a cellist. Her father is Carl C. Riggs, professor of education at the Junior college in El Dorado. She came to the cello when her father taught in Liberal, Kas., and the school orchestra was short of that instrument. She was only 10 then and shorter than the big fiddle, but it was a union of love immediately. Her four sisters are pianists, but marriage appeared to have halted any urge for professionalism. Miss Riggs, how-

SYRACUSE HERALD-AMERICAN, Sunday, July 15, 1956

Boston Symphony to Perform in Russia

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Charles Munch, music director, now is in its summer home in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., where the annual Berkshire Festival is in progress. Dr. Munch has made changes in two programs to be performed in the Music Shed by the orchestra. Instead of all-Wagner concerts next Saturday night, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, Dr. Munch has made substitutions in the first half of each program.

On July 21, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" will open the program, followed by Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantasies Symphoniques" which Dr. Munch commissioned for The Boston's 75th anniversary season and which was named by the New York Music Critics Circle as the best new orchestral work presented in 1955. Both the Barber and Martinu works are to have first performances in "Tanglewood." They replace previously announced excerpts from "Siegfried" and "Tristam and Isolde."

On Aug. 12, Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica," will be substituted for the previously scheduled Overture numbers from "Tannhauser" and "Siegfried." On both concert programs, Dr. Munch will retain concert versions of Wagner operas "Die Walkure" and "Die Meistersinger" with Margaret Harshaw, Marguerite Willauer, Albert De Costa and James Pease as soloists. Meantime, there are Chamber Music concerts in the Theater Concert Hall.

The Boston Symphony will play 27 concerts in 13 countries during its five and a half weeks' tour, including Russia, in August and September, according to orchestra manager Thomas D. Perry Jr. Dr. Munch and the 106 players will fly to Europe immediately following the final "Tanglewood" program on Aug. 12. The first two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on Aug. 24, followed by a matinee the next day in Dublin. Five concerts will be given in Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival; the Boston Symphony Orchestra then will visit Scandinavia for four days.

The Ministry of Culture in Moscow invited The Boston to perform in the USSR during six days, Sept. 5-10, the invitation immediately accepted. Other concerts on the tour include those in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres, Leeds and London. Pierre Monteux, once regular music director of the Boston Symphony, has been invited by Dr. Munch to conduct several of the orchestra's concerts abroad.

The Boston Symphony will play in Syracuse in October under local management of Famous Artists, Murray Bernthal, executive. Famous Artists has presented The Boston, under Dr. Munch, on previous occasions of musical note.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544
JUL 15

COMPLETING PLANS for the Boston Symphony Orchestra airlift to Europe via KLM Royal Dutch Airlines: Left to right, Dolph C. Bulterman, New England manager for KLM; Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager and G. W. Rector, assistant manager, Boston Symphony Orchestra. Seventy-nine members of the orchestra, some of them with their wives, leave Boston, Aug. 14, aboard a KLM Super G Constellation for Shannon, Ireland, with 59 others leaving Aug. 22. One hundred fifty-eight members will return from London via KLM on Sept. 27 and Oct. 1. All instruments will be flown back Sept. 27 aboard a special KLM freighter.*

THE KANSAS-MISSOURI SECTOR is represented at the Berkshire Music center at Lenox, Mass., by five aspiring young scholarship students. Four of them are shown here with Ralph Berkowitz (standing, left), dean of the music center. Kneeling or seated are Barbara Utt (left), Warrensburg, Mo.; Jack Bayes (center), Wichita, Kas., and Geraldine Riggs (right), El Dorado, Kas. Standing with Dean Berkowitz is Wayne Harrell, Wichita. The fifth student, not in the photograph, is James Seubert, St. Louis.

TANGLEWOOD LURE TO 5

KANSAS AND MISSOURI STUDENTS THERE FOR SUMMER.

Berkshire Music Center Provides Inspirational Schooling for Young Musicians Who Win Scholarship Honors.

BY JOSEPH KAYE.

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., July 14.—Under the same great pines where this correspondent has been interviewing Missouri-Kansas students here for the past several years, a new crop of these enthusiastic aspirants to musical distinction was gathered. There were five of them, two girls and three young men, all attractive, as though the search for the highest in music had enhanced them physically. They were Barbara Utt of Warrensburg, Mo., Jack Bayes of Wichita, Kas., Geraldine Riggs of El Dorado, Kas., Wayne Harrell of Wichita, Kas., and James Seubert of St. Louis.

They are enrolled in the celebrated Berkshire Music center, which is part of the annual summer festival of music conducted by the Boston symphony orchestra in Tanglewood, set amid the Berkshire hills. All are scholarship students, which indicates their exceptional talents.

Barbara Utt, a blond young woman with the provoking faculty of flashing from the gay to the serious, is studying choral conducting. Hugh Ross, head of the choral department, has assigned her to conduct (for student recitals) three choral songs by a fellow-Missourian, Virgil Thomson, formerly of Kansas City.

Miss Utt a Soprano.

Miss Utt is the daughter of Prof. Paul R. Utt, retired director of the music division of the Central Missouri State college. She is a lyric soprano who has had teaching experience, and this fall will begin teaching teachers at Wisconsin State college in Platteville, Wis. While there she will commute to Northwestern university in Evanston, Ill., where she recently received her master's degree, to continue her music studies. With a devotional seriousness, she said she hoped to be a choral conductor. In Warrensburg she lives with her family at 616 South Maguire street.

ever, intends to be a concert cellist. Her home is at 1310 North Topeka road, El Dorado.

In Family Tradition.

Carrying on a family tradition is Jack Bayes. His father, the late John Bayes, was an amateur trombonist and his uncle, Harold Bayes, is the retired trombone soloist of the U. S. Marine band. So Jack took to the trombone naturally and is now a member of the Wichita Symphony orchestra while studying at Wichita university. When he was with the Springfield high school band he played several times in Kansas City at the new music conferences held by the Jenkins Music company. Bayes lives at 1619 Fairmount street, Wichita.

The other man from Wichita, Wayne Harrell, plays French horn and is the son of Arthur L. Harrell, director of music education in the Wichita public schools. A twin brother, Wynne, who plays the trumpet, will be teaching music in the Kansas City, Kansas, public schools this fall. Another brother, Hugh, is a trombonist and a third brother, Ray, is a clarinetist. The senior Harrell taught music in Jefferson City and Independence, Mo., and it was in his father's bands that Wayne began studying his instrument.

One Married Student.

Harrell is the only married student in the group. His wife is Patsy, a secretary with the Claude Neon Light company in Wichita. They live at 445 Matthewson court, Wichita.

James Seubert, a violinist, is something of a phenomenon here—he does not aspire to be a professional musician. His ambition is to be a good physicist, and he is studying for his future profession at Washington university in St. Louis. Seubert is thus an amateur in the exact and most respected meaning of the word—lover of music. He is fine enough a musician to have won a scholarship offered by the women's association of the St. Louis Symphony, and to have been accepted at the Berkshire Music center. He has devoted 10 years of his life to the violin and intends to devote the rest of his leisure life to it. His father is professor of education at Washington university.

When these five students leave Tanglewood this country will be the richer by five excellent musicians, a happy result envisioned for the Berkshire Music center by its founder, Sergei Koussevitzky.

Music Shed Concerts Begin This Week

The annual series of 12 concerts in the huge 6000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood begins Friday night when Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of works by Berlioz, Brahms, Debussy and Ravel. A concert version of Wagner operas is listed for Saturday night. One week from today, Pierre Monteux conducts an afternoon program of music by Bartok, Rossini and Schubert. The Shed, pictured here, is open on three sides so the music may spill out on the spacious lawns where additional thousands assemble under the stars and tall pines, or picnic in Sunday sunshine.

LOCAL YWCA GROUP TO VISIT TANGLEWOOD

Lenox, July 14—Each summer large groups of music lovers visit Tanglewood, and pleasant arrangements for the groups are made through Tanglewood starter Stoddard G. Spader for the visitors to enjoy the Tanglewood waterfront on Stockbridge Bowl for boating and swimming, and to picnic on the Boston Symphony's summer estate. Such groups this year include: July 20-22, forty-five foreign students of M. I. T., Cambridge; 50 members of the United Nation Secretariat from New York, who are housed by Pittsfield hostesses, this year marking the seventh summer such a group has attended the Berkshire Festival concerts and the YWCA of Springfield, Mass.

July 27-29: An additional 45 foreign students from M. I. T.; 45 from the Committee on Friendly Relations Among Foreign Students; and summer students from the U of Mass. at Amherst. July 28 brings 70 girls from the Northampton Mass. School for Girls and visitors from the Summer Music Center in West Hartford, Conn. August 3-5 brings the Harvard University Summer School of Arts and Sciences, about 40 in the group. August 9 witnesses the arrival, for "Tanglewood on Parade" of 30 secretaries from all over the U. S., who are assembling that week at the Vassar Institute for Women in Business.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

JUL 7 1956

The Symphony Abroad

THE Boston Symphony Orchestra ought to be able to do the United States a lot of good during its visit to Soviet Russia.

On its last trip to Europe, the famous musical organization was acclaimed in a dozen capitals—in fact, everywhere it played.

It would be surprising if the people of Leningrad and Moscow did not display the same enthusiasm.

There is magic in music, and power beyond comprehension. It speaks to every mind and heart. It vaults the barriers of politics, suspicion and bitterness. It is fundamental, elemental and everlasting.

We're betting on our Symphony to be a truly forceful ambassador of good will behind the Iron Curtain.

Diplomacy: The Missiles Are Musical

MUSIC'S charm hath recognized beast-soothing potency but what about its effect on the Bear-That-Walks Like-A-Man? Can it win the Russian to our side?

The answer, of course, is no. Not exactly.

But the performance of American music by American musicians in the Soviet Union can indeed promote better people-to-people understanding.

It is for this reason that we applaud plans to send America's superb Boston Symphony Orchestra to the U.S.S.R. for a series of engagements. Charlotteans who heard the orchestra in Ovens Auditorium during the past concert season can appreciate fully what it can do for the nation's cultural reputation.

Music provides a means of interchange among peoples that is both unique and powerful. Isaac Stern, the violinist, brought this fact home to us the other day when he returned to the United States after giving 21 concerts to capacity audiences in the Soviet Union. Music and the arts, he said, constitute a language that "cannot be perverted to either side" and that shows "the validity of a human being's existence which may not jibe with what either they read about us or what we read about them."

Cultural exchange, said Mr. Stern, "will be far more effective than several thousand diplomatic notes" in promoting international understanding.

He is right. Music rises above mere words, which can lie, to penetrate a higher realm of feeling. The more communication in this way the better for all of us.

Boston
KLM Royal Du
C. Bulterman, N
omas D. Perry,
ssistant manag
Seventy-nine m
f them with th
board a KLM S n, Ireland, with hundred fifty-si
ndon via KLM
ments will be flo
al KLM freighte

[80]

THE KANSAS-MISSOURI SECTOR is represented at the Berkshire Music center at Lenox, Mass., by five aspiring young scholarship students. Four of them are shown here with Ralph Berkowitz (standing, left), dean of the music center. Kneeling or seated are Barbara Utt (left), Warrensburg, Mo.; Jack Bayes (center), Wichita, Kas., and Geraldine Riggs (right), El Dorado, Kas. Standing with Dean Berkowitz is Wayne Harrell, Wichita. The fifth student, not in the photograph, is James Seubert, St. Louis.

TANGLEWOOD LURE TO 5

KANSAS AND MISSOURI STUDENTS THERE FOR SUMMER.

Berkshire Music Center Provides Inspirational Schooling for Young Musicians Who Win Scholarship Honors.

BY JOSEPH KAYE.

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., July 14.—Under the same great pines where this correspondent has been interviewing Missouri-Kansas students here for the past several years, a new crop of these enthusiastic aspirants to musical distinction was gathered. There were five of them, two girls and three young men, all attractive, as though the search for the highest in music had enhanced them physically. They were Barbara Utt of Warrensburg, Mo., Jack Bayes of Wichita, Kas., Geraldine Riggs of El Dorado, Kas., Wayne Harrell of Wichita, Kas., and James Seubert of St. Louis.

They are enrolled in the celebrated Berkshire Music center, which is part of the annual summer festival of music conducted by the Boston symphony orchestra in Tanglewood, set amid the Berkshire hills. All are scholarship students, which indicates their exceptional talents.

Barbara Utt, a blond young woman with the provoking faculty of flashing from the gay to the serious, is studying choral conducting. Hugh Ross, head of the choral department, has assigned her to conduct (for student recitals) three choral songs by a fellow-Missourian, Virgil Thomson, formerly of Kansas City.

Miss Utt a Soprano.

Miss Utt is the daughter of Prof. Paul R. Utt, retired director of the music division of the Central Missouri State college. She is a lyric soprano who has had teaching experience, and this fall will begin teaching teachers at Wisconsin State college in Platteville, Wis. While there she will commute to Northwestern university in Evanston, Ill., where she recently received her master's degree, to continue her music studies. With a devotional seriousness, she said she hoped to be a choral conductor. In Warrensburg she lives with her family at 616 South Maguire street.

ever, intends to be a concert cellist. Her home is at 1310 North Topeka road, El Dorado.

In Family Tradition.

Carrying on a family tradition is Jack Bayes. His father, the late John Bayes, was an amateur trombonist and his uncle, Harold Bayes, is the retired trombone soloist of the U. S. Marine band. So Jack took to the trombone naturally and is now a member of the Wichita Symphony orchestra while studying at Wichita university. When he was with the Springfield high school band he played several times in Kansas City at the new music conferences held by the Jenkins Music company. Bayes lives at 1619 Fairmount street, Wichita.

The other man from Wichita, Wayne Harrell, plays French horn and is the son of Arthur L. Harrell, director of music education in the Wichita public schools. A twin brother, Wynne, who plays the trumpet, will be teaching music in the Kansas City, Kansas, public schools this fall. Another brother, Hugh, is a trombonist and a third brother, Ray, is a clarinetist. The senior Harrell taught music in Jefferson City and Independence, Mo., and it was in his father's bands that Wayne began studying his instrument.

One Married Student.

Harrell is the only married student in the group. His wife is Patsy, a secretary with the Claude Neon Light company in Wichita. They live at 445 Matthewson court, Wichita.

James Seubert, a violinist, is something of a phenomenon here—he does not aspire to be a professional musician. His ambition is to be a good physicist, and he is studying for his future profession at Washington university in St. Louis. Seubert is thus an amateur in the exact and most respected meaning of the word—lover of music. He is fine enough a musician to have won a scholarship offered by the women's association of the St. Louis Symphony, and to have been accepted at the Berkshire Music center. He has devoted 10 years of his life to the violin and intends to devote the rest of his leisure life to it. His father is professor of education at Washington university.

When these five students leave Tanglewood this country will be the richer by five excellent musicians, a happy result envisioned for the Berkshire Music center by its founder, Sergei Koussevitzky.

THE SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., JULY 15, 1956

Music Shed Concerts Begin This Week

The annual series of 12 concerts in the huge 6000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood begins Friday night when Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of works by Berlioz, Brahms, Debussy and Ravel. A concert version of Wagner operas is listed for Saturday night. One week from today, Pierre Monteux conducts an afternoon program of music by Bartok, Rossini and Schubert. The Shed, pictured here, is open on three sides so the music may spill out on the spacious lawns where additional thousands assemble under the stars and tall pines, or picnic in Sunday sunshine.

LOCAL YWCA GROUP TO VISIT TANGLEWOOD

Lenox, July 14—Each summer large groups of music lovers visit Tanglewood, and pleasant arrangements for the groups are made through Tanglewood staffer Stoddard G. Spader for the visitors to enjoy the Tanglewood waterfront on Stockbridge Bowl for boating and swimming, and to picnic on the Boston Symphony's summer estate. Such groups this year include: July 20-22, forty-five foreign students of M. I. T., Cambridge; 50 members of the United Nation Secretariat from New York, who are housed by Pittsfield hostesses, this year marking the seventh summer such a group has attended the Berkshire Festival concerts and the YWCA of Springfield, Mass.

July 27-29: An additional 45 foreign students from M. I. T.; 45 from the Committee on Friendly Relations Among Foreign Students; and summer students from the U of Mass. at Amherst. July 28 brings 70 girls from the Northampton Mass. School for Girls and visitors from the Summer Music Center in West Hartford, Conn. August 3-5 brings the Harvard University Summer School of Arts and Sciences, about 40 in the group. August 9 witnesses the arrival, for "Tanglewood on Parade" of 30 secretaries from all over the U. S., who are assembling that week at the Vassar Institute for Women in Business.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 405,628

JUL 7 1956

The Symphony Abroad

THE Boston Symphony Orchestra ought to be able to do the United States a lot of good during its visit to Soviet Russia.

On its last trip to Europe, the famous musical organization was acclaimed in a dozen capitals—in fact, everywhere it played.

It would be surprising if the people of Leningrad and Moscow did not display the same enthusiasm.

There is magic in music, and power beyond comprehension. It speaks to every mind and heart. It vaults the barriers of politics, suspicion and bitterness. It is fundamental, elemental and everlasting.

We're betting on our Symphony to be a truly forceful ambassador of good will behind the Iron Curtain.

Diplomacy: The Missiles Are Musical

MUSIC'S charm hath recognized beast-soothing potency but what about its effect on the Bear-That-Walks-Like-A-Man? Can it win the Russian to our side?

The answer, of course, is no. Not exactly.

But the performance of American music by American musicians in the Soviet Union can indeed promote better people-to-people understanding.

It is for this reason that we applaud plans to send America's superb Boston Symphony Orchestra to the U.S.S.R. for a series of engagements. Charlotteans who heard the orchestra in Ovens Auditorium during the past concert season can appreciate fully what it can do for the nation's cultural reputation.

Music provides a means of interchange among peoples that is both unique and powerful. Isaac Stern, the violinist, brought this fact home to us the other day when he returned to the United States after giving 21 concerts to capacity audiences in the Soviet Union. Music and the arts, he said, constitute a language that "cannot be perverted to either side" and that shows "the validity of a human being's existence which may not jibe with what either they read about us or what we read about them."

Cultural exchange, said Mr. Stern, "will be far more effective than several thousand diplomatic notes" in promoting international understanding.

He is right. Music rises above mere words, which can lie, to penetrate a higher realm of feeling. The more communication in this way the better for all of us.

Boston
KLM Royal Du
C. Bulterman, N
omas D. Perry,
ssistant manag
Seventy-nine m
f them with th
board a KLM S n, Ireland, with hundred fifty-ei
ondon via KLM
ments will be flo
al KLM freight

[80]

SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., JULY 15, 1956

ELMIRA, N. Y.
STAR-GAZETTE
Circ. D. 38,453

JUN 16 1956

Second Thoughts on Music

Berkshire Festival's First Week Sets High Standard

Concerts Draw Very Fine Audiences and Provide Exceptional Performances

By WILLARD M. CLARK

The first week of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood set a high standard and there is every indication that the standard will be upheld during the entire Festival. The weekend chamber music concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall drew very fine audiences and provided some exceptional performances.

Finest Reading

There was for example, the finest reading of the Mozart "Symphony in G minor, K. 550" we have heard for many a year. Charles Munch is in top form this season and he has at his command an orchestra of 37 picked musicians.

The magic of Benny Goodman's name drew a record audience to hear him play the Mozart "Concerto for Clarinet in A major, K. 622." Artistically, Goodman had plenty to offer. He provided a musical performance, However, his tone in the lower register is inclined to roughness and at the top, tone is often shrill. It just didn't seem to blend with the orchestra.

Mr. Munch and his players gave a rewarding performance of Mozart's "Symphony in D Major, K. 504 during this concert. Saturday night Mozart shared the program with Buhuslav Martinu and Henry Cowell, along with the Yale Glee Club. Honors went to Mozart for Mr. Munch provided a reading of sheer beauty for the "Sinfonia Concertante in E-flat for Ovoe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon," with orchestra. The first desk men played in distinguished fashion and Mr. Munch conducted with a delicacy and musical insight that captivated the audience He also offered a vigorous, finely detailed performance of Mozart's "Symphony in D major" (Haffner) K. 185.

Hugh Ross took over for the choral works. The first was Martinu's "Military Mass," written during the occupation of France and designed to be performed out of doors. However, the disabandonment of the French army made this project no longer of value so the composer completed the work for concert performance, adding piano and organ. The text opens with the Lord's Prayer and closes with the first line of that prayer. The young men from Yale sang gently, or was the lack of volume due to the often furious accompaniment. Solo portions were sung by Mac Morgan, and very well sung they were. Mr. Martinu has written expertly for his orchestra and chorus and much of the melody is appealing. However, it seems doubtful it will be heard often.

First Performance

Henry Cowell, the American composer has been a controversial figure more than once. Tanglewood provided the first Thanksgiving Psalm from "The Dead Sea Scrolls" for men's chorus and orchestra. The text was translated into English by Millar Burrows, Winkley professor of biblical theology at Yale from the Aramic. Again the words were barely audible and the orchestration anything but sympathetic. Mr. Ross led both works with his accustomed vigor. The Martinu work was much to be preferred.

The Sunday afternoon concert brought four first performances to Tanglewood. Starting out sedately enough with Haydn's "Symphony in D major, No. 96", Lukas Foss led the orchestra through some exciting performances of a "Serious Song for String Orchestra" by Irving Fine and a "Divertimento" by Alexei Haieff. Our special interest centered on "The Unanswered Question" by Charles Ives for we have found all the works we have heard by this composer of great significance. So it was with the present one. Ives uses a chamber orchestra, an off stage string quartet and a woodwind quartet. Written in 1906, it was not published until 1953. What an experimenter this American has proven to be anticipating, among others Schoenbergs and Stravinsky. Mr. Foss is a very gifted young man. He is at present teaching composition at the Berkshire Center. He conducts easily but with great emphasis on rhythm and with an inclination to sentimentalism. The final number on this program brought him out in two capacities, those of pianist and conductor. He was heard in the Bach "Piano Concerto in D minor." Foss is a first rate pianist. In fact, I know few can equal as an interpreter of the Mozart piano literature. His Bach was clean cut and fluent and wonderfully vital. It was unfortunate he chose to conduct from the piano for the artists of the chamber orchestra didn't need his direction.

Last Monday night the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago offered the first of two free concerts devoted to contemporary chamber music. Performers were the first deck men of the orchestra, along with violinist Ruth Posselt and pianists Seymour Lipkin, William Masselos, Ralph Berkowitz and Irving Fine.

Involved Composition

For the most part the compositions were unrewarding. Miss Posselt and Irving Fine breathed new vitality into Stravinsky's "Duo Concertante" providing a brillant technical performance. Ben Weber's "Serenade for Strings, Op. 46" was so involved that even such players as Burgin, Krips, DePasqual, Mayes and Moleux could barely untangle it, yet an audience was supposed to get something out of the work.

William Masselos brought his fine technique and scholarly approach to the "Klavierstucke" by Schoenberg and considerable imagination to "Variations" by Anton Webern. That he could not make the music communicative was not his fault.

There was interest for us in Alvin Epstein's suite of songs, "Sabrina Fair." Epstein has studied at the Hartt School of Music in Hartford and now teaches composition at the Hartt College of Music. He has set four texts by Milton, John Sucking, Herrick and Shakespeare for tenor, violin, viola, cello and piano. The tenor was Arthur Schoep, who distinguished himself here last year and was very fine in this suite of songs which demanded both knowledge of Parlando and Singing.

Benjamin Britten can be relied upon for melody most of the time and in his Canticle 11 "Abraham and Isaac" he provided some fine material for Mr. Schoep and Florence Kopleff a fine contralto. Seymour Lipin was the skilled collaborator at the piano.

The final work on this program was by Aaron Copland, surely one of the most significant American composers. His "Vitebsk, Study on a Jewish Theme" is for piano, violin and cello. With the composer at the piano, Messers Burgin and Mayes provided a superlative performance of a richly colored work, one of the composer's most effective.

London Visitors

London—Among recent visitors to London have been those two staunch musical collaborators, composer Gian-Carlo Menotti and conductor Thomas Schippers. Their immediate purpose was to audition singers and otherwise help in the preparations for the first English presentation of "The Saint of Bleecker Street" on the BBC in early autumn.

BACH 'PASSION' CLOSES SERIES AT TANGLEWOOD

Adele Addison, Other Soloists, Chorus in Admirable Performance

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 15—The Bach-Mozart concert series by the Chamber Orchestra concluded today with a reverent and compelling performance of "The Passion According to Saint John," directed by Charles Munch. The participants were the admirable festival chorus and soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCullum, tenor; Mac Morgan, baritone, and James Joyce, bass.

Placid Performance

An audience of 3741 people listened intently to this performance, but how much those on the outside could hear was a question for the performance was signally placid and subdued. Emphasis seems to have been on perfection rather than drama and perfection, in large measure, was what Mr. Munch got from his instrumentalists, chorus and soloists.

It was a pleasure to hear John McCullum, surely one of the best young tenors in the country. The voice has become warmer, richer, since we last heard him and he is a master of the recitative style. His German was excellent. A good deal of the recitative work he must carry and he sang in distinguished manner. Mac Morgan displayed beautiful tonal quality and interpretive sensitivity in everything he sang. Mr. Joyce provided good solid bass in the small roles of Peter and Pilate.

In her two solos, Adele Addison sang with the freedom of tone, perfection of technique and clarity of enunciation one has learned to expect. Her musicianship was never more in evidence.

Florence Kopleff was particularly effective in the beautiful solo with viola de gamba, finely played by Alfred Zighera.

The chorus is far better than last year's and it had been admirably trained by Hugh Ross. Particularly beautiful were the various chorales, each a gem in its own right. It is quite possible that this performance may be one of the finest of the season. Certainly it was a fitting conclusion for the series of concerts which has been devoted to the music of Bach and Mozart.

The chamber music recital Wednesday night is going to be quite unusual as to program. The brass ensemble of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be heard in music by Gabrieli, Bonelli, Poulec, and Berezowski. The distinguished Wagnerian soprano, Margaret Harshaw, will sing the five songs by Wagner known as the Wesendonck songs, for Mathilde Wesendonck wrote the texts. Ralph Berkowitz will be at the piano.

Musical Ambassadors

ARRANGEMENTS HAVE been completed to take the Boston Symphony Orchestra to the Soviet Union for a brief series of engagements as part of the orchestra's tour of Europe.

The Russians made the visit possible and they are to be congratulated. The Boston Orchestra will be the first to appear in the Soviet Union. Let it be hoped that it won't be the last.

The musicians will be excellent spokesmen for America, since theirs is a language all can understand. The Russians won't need an interpreter and there will be no doubt as to what the Americans are saying with their instruments.

We welcome this new contact with the people behind the Iron Curtain. People, as President Eisenhower said in a recent speech, "are what count." The orchestra will reach people.

Post - JULY 16

8,000 Hear Bach at Lenox

By HARRIETT JOHNSON

Lenox, Mass., July 16—The combine of all-Bach and clear cool weather drew big crowds for Saturday night and yesterday afternoon's concerts at the Berkshire Festival here.

Tanglewood's lawn was so covered with humanity, on and off blankets that it was like circulating throngh a maze to get to the 1,200-seat Theater-Concert Hall for the Bach instrumental program Saturday; and the "St. John Passion, yesterday. More than 8,000 people attended the two conducted events, played by the Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch.

Saturday's program began with a performance of the Brandenburg Concert No. 2 in F Major which turned out to be a warming up for the ensemble and particularly so for the trumpeter saddled with the problem of playing a high range sample of his instrument. Bach must have felt especially adventurous when he wrote this piece or else he was mad at his trumpet player. By the third movement, Roger Voisin, the soloist, had come into his own and came through brilliantly. An admirable performance of the Concerto for Violin and Orchestra No. 2 in E Major with William Kroll as soloist followed.

Flue Solo Repeated

It was after the intermission, however, that the biggest excitement arrived. Doriot Anthony Dwyer, the ensemble's superb distaff first flutist, was the soloist in the Suite No. 2 in B Minor for Flute and Strings. She played so brilliantly that she was compelled to repeat the final gay movement in order to satisfy her listeners. Mrs. Dwyer had performed the work last season at these Bach-Mozart concerts with the same result.

After the joyousness of the suite it was inspiring to hear the grandeur of the opening "Overture" to the Suite No. 3 in D Major. Munch and ensemble were in top technical form and the conductor was at his best in communicating his wishes to the ensemble. In the famous "Air" there was suavity and smoothness in tonal blend and a breathtaking verve in the final bourree and gigue.

St. John Passion

Yesterday's "St. John Passion" was particularly distinguished by the work of the Festival Chorus which had been trained by Hugh Ross. These young people sang the chorales and difficult choruses with vitality and intensity of emotional expression and impressive musicianship. The soloists were all creditable. Adele Addison, soprano, as usual, sang with beauty and with deep feeling. John McCollum, tenor, performed with a satisfying understanding of the style. When his voice was free it was lovely in quality. Munch conducted the great work with penetration, communicating to the audience it spiritualty born of its musical greatness and its inherent subject matter.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • CONCERTS through AUG. 12
Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
THEATRE—TODAY at 2:30
NEXT WED. July 18 - 8:30 - MARGARET HARSHAW, Soprano; THE BRASS ENSEMBLE
Shed Concerts Open Next Friday
FRI. July 20, at 8:30—BERLIOZ—DEBUSSY—RAVEL—BRAHMS (MUNCH)
SAT. July 21, at 8:30—BARBER—MARTINU—WAGNER (MUNCH)
SUN. July 22, at 2:30—ROSSINI—BARTOK—SCHUBERT (MONTEUX)
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Admission $2)
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

[81]

Bach Concerts at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

TWO ALL-BACH concerts conducted by Charles Munch in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood Saturday night and yesterday afternoon completed the second and final weekend of the Bach-Mozart programs of the Berkshire Festival with the small-sized ensemble from the Boston Symphony orchestra.

Yesterday afternoon "The Passion According to St. John," as sung with the Festival Chorus, of which Hugh Ross is conductor, and with a distinguished roster of vocal and instrumental soloists including John McCollum as the Evangelist, Mac Morgan as Jesus, James Joyce as Peter and Pilate, Adele Addison, soprano, and Florence Kopleff, contralto. The solo harpsichordist was Daniel Pinkham, oboe d'amore, Louis Speyer, viola da gamba, Alfred Zighera, and organ, Edouard Nies-Berger.

* * *

MUNCH WAS in secure command of his forces in both programs and showed a restraint and discipline that was a new and different approach for him to the classics from the previous readings he has given of several of the works he played this past weekend. He was not the Bach Suite driver of other seasons, but he advanced to the controls of the front seat where he applied the brakes as often as he used the accelerator. This was good and enjoyable Bach when it did not come too close to lassitude.

Bach's music stays fresh because it has some of the attributes of civilization which we can live with over the generations. It does not have the gaudy and flamboyant dress of savages who attract by the paint and feather of their customs nor does it have the ascetic retirement of erudite scholars. But one cannot interpret Bach unless, as Dryden said, "he is a master of the author's language and of his own." A performer must have X-ray perception of Bach and be a master of his own vehicle.

* * *

THE INTERPRETATION of Bach thus becomes the measure of a musician's good taste, a subject, admittedly, about which there are as many opinions as there are disputants.

"The St. John" Passion is not as colorful and varied as the "St. Matthew" and judicious cuts elided repetitious sections. Yet it was a long afternoon. After a muddy introduction, the chorus settled to clear and incisive responses to Munch's easy baton and gave excellent account of itself from there on.

One of the most striking effects of the afternoon was the contrast achieved between the roles of the Evangelist and of Jesus, sung respectively by McCollum and Morgan. McCollum sang with the dramatic, vivid aggressiveness that the role demanded; Morgan made a deep impression with the dignity and warm intensity with which he invested his assigned role. The sacred answers to the profane statements of the Evangelist were clearly defined and admirably conceived.

* * *

SATURDAY NIGHT Munch, assisted by a constellation of brilliant solosists, gave the record-sized audience tremendous enjoyment. More than 3,000 people draped themselves on the benches and lawns around the packed hall, exceeding in numbers yesterday afternoon's audience by only a few hundred. The official attendance figures were over 4,500 for Saturday night and 3,700 yesterday afternoon.

William Kroll

Except for the E major violin concerto in which William Kroll was soloist, it was all familiar and beloved Tanglewood fare: the second Brandenburg concerto, in F major, the B minor flute suite and the D major suite for orchestra.

In the concerto Kroll applied his mastery of the instrument to an austere classicism through which the intense warmth of his playing was always discernible. It was a broad and grand perspective on which he played and his tone was remarkably full and expressive. The use and injection of violinistic conceits of a later century were tints less perfectly in unison with the spirit of the music than we expected, no matter how expertly and beautifully done. These were all the more noticeable because in the main this was lofty Bach and superb violin-playing, avoiding "effects" for their own sake and self-effacing in the reiterated figures of the first movement to a degree an artist less nobly inspired would not have dared.

* * *

THE OPENING statement of this concerto has in it the simple and elemental greatness on which other immortal works draw. The three notes of the ascending E major triad have something of the character of Virgil's "I sing of arms and men," or Whitman's "One's-self I sing." There are no tricks to a simple and abiding faith.

The Badinerie of the flute suite as played by Doriot Anthony Dwyer has become the most explosive single movement, bar none, of Tanglewood traditions. Munch muted the strings throughout this suite to give the soloist greater opportunity to be heard and to employ nuances she had not been able to show before in this particular piece. She did it beautifully.

* * *

MUNCH'S NEW and slower tempo adds immeasurably to the spice of the teasing, and Bach's sense of humor never grows old or jejune. We found fully as much distinction in the soloist's playing in the other and preceding movements, but with inordinate indiscrimination, the audience went wild with spontaneous enthusiasm for the delightful young artist's performances. Munch was finally forced, as in previous performances, to repeat the movement in question and then she ran off-stage, seeming to fear the audience would carry her on their shoulders after they had torn down the goal-posts.

Roger Voisin distinguished himself in the Brandenburg concerto playing the high trumpet in F, once his initial hazards were overcome. Munch's moderation gave this and the closing Suite distinctive character. The orchestra has rarely exceeded their performance for tonal splendor.

In Brief . . .

A salute to West Stockbridge's newly organized West Center Civic Group, which has undertaken the thoroughly commendable task of preserving one of the county's finest samples of Colonial church architecture. The group's forthcoming benefit supper at the Alford Brook Club deserves all-out support from the Berkshires' small, but hardy band of preservationists . . . The death of William L. Preston, former GE traffic manager and municipal worker, came as a shock to many who will remember him as a quiet and kindly person with a warm personality and a host of friends . . . It is hard to recall any Tanglewood artist who has stirred an audience reaction more enthusiastic than that bestowed on flautist Doriot Anthony Dwyer following her performance in the Bach B Minor Suite Saturday night . . .

The attendance of 7,000 persons at the Onota regatta yesterday and 1,500 at the Mt. Carmel lawn party—not to mention the crowds at Tanglewood and the theaters—would seem to reaffirm the fact that TV hasn't made us all into stay-at-homes by a long shot . . . As far as the Berkshires are concerned, it seems to have taken only one day to disprove the venerable superstition that the weather on St. Swithen's Day will last for 40 days and nights . . .

Berkshire Eagle, Monday, July 16, 1956

Bach-Mozart Series Ends

Shed Concerts Open Friday At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD—The Bach-Mozart portion of the 1956 Berkshire Festival concluded yesterday afternoon with an attendance of 12,626 for the four paid concerts of the second week, which was nearly 4,000 more than the previous week.

Last week's puerformance, including the four events held for the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, drew a total of 16,391 persons, 6,000 more than the first week of the Festival.

The three weekend concerts by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony drew 10,579 to Tanglewood. Yesterday afternoon a crowd of 3,741 turned out; Saturday evening, 4,530 and Friday, 2,208. The Wednesday evening chamber concert attracted 2,147 music lovers.

The six chamber orchestra concerts this season brought 17,697 to the Theater-Concert Hall despite two evenings of rain which kept attendance down. Last year's attendance for the same period reached 18,190.

Wednesday evening, the third in a series of chamber music concerts will be held in the Theater-Concert Hall when Roger Voisin, principal trumpeter of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the Brass Ensemble of the BSO with Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera singer as soloist.

The major concerts of the Berkshire Festival will open Friday evening in the Music Shed when Dr. Charles Munch will conduct the BSO in a program of works by Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel and Brahms.

Lenox

Tel. Eagle Office Lee 683
or Lenox 775

Library Exhibits Signed Scores

LENOX — The Lenox Library's new exhibit, which opened there Saturday, consists of autographed scores from the music department's collection.

Among the scores on view are a "Sonata for Piano" by Paul Hindemith; a play-opera, 'The Second Hurricane," by Aaron Copland; "Happy Birthday Music" by Lukas Foss dedicated "To Our Doctor" (the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky) and dated July 25, 1945; and a score of "Peter Grimes" by Benjamin Britten.

A score of "L'Ascension" by Oliver Messiaen is dedicated, "To the Lenox Library in Memory of my stay in Lenox-Tanglewood, and with my thanks for the good piano, this copy of "L'Ascension" on which I have written one of its themes."

According to Miss Irene M. Poirier, librarian, the "Good Piano" refers to one Mr. Messiaen used at the library in 1950 when he conducted composition classes there.

A short composition written especially for the library by Boris Blacher is also on display.

[82]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-420(

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 40,485

JUL 16 1956

All-Mozart Program At Tanglewood

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., July 16—The second week end of concerts of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood brought to a close yesterday the series of concerts in the theater-concert hall with a program of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" with Charles Munch conducting the orchestra and Hugh Ross directing the festival chorus.

More than 11,000 persons heard the three concerts of the week end which began Friday evening with an all-Mozart program in which music for two and three pianos was featured. The Saturday night concert with an audience of 4,530 presented an all-Bach program with William Kroll as soloist.

Some 20,000 music lovers heard the concerts during the past two week ends in the series of theater-concert hall programs devoted to Bach and Mozart, a preliminary to the four week ends of concerts in the music shed which get under way Friday evening at 8:30 o'clock when Conductor Charles Munch will begin the 19th festival season with the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing the music of Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel and Brahms. The Saturday evening concert will present music of Samuel Barber, Martinu, and Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkure." Mr. Munch will conduct.

Pierre Monteux will conduct the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 o'clock with music of Rossini, Bartok, and Schubert. Later concerts will present three other conductors as well: Eleazar de Carvalho, Leonard Bernstein and Richard Burgin.

The Mozart program heard Friday night, despite a heavy downpour, was enjoyed by more than 2,200 and was moved to the large music shed. It was a rewarding experience to hear Boros Goldovsky, conductor, and Pierre Loboshutz and Genia Nemenoff in a three-piano performance of the Mozart 'Concerto in F major for Three Pianos and Orchestra." Goldovsky enjoyed his dual role, gave a brilliant performance as soloist in the "Piano Concerto in A Major," and then could not resist the temptation to join in for the closing measures of the "Concerto in E-Flat Major for Two Pianos and Orchestra" which he conducted as Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff played it. Luboshutz conducted the concerto for which Goldovsky was soloist.

The Bach program last evening brought out the largest concert attendance for one of the theater-concert hall programs in the past three years. Unfortunately the continued heavy rain and dampness took a toll of the brass section and the first part of the performance was not up to the usual high quality of performance heard here. In Bach's "Brandenburg Concerto No. 2, in F Major" there was more than one time when the trumpet gave forth disturbing sounds that marred the smooth performance. The "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra No. 2, in E Major" fared much better but it was really after the intermission that the audience was delighted with the performance. Flute soloist, Dorio Anthony Dwyer, was so fine in her performance in the "Suite No. 2, in B Minor, for Flute and Strings" that she was called upon to give an encore of the badinene movement. The audience was thrilled with her response to its warm applause. The program came to a close with the performance of "Suite No. 3, in D Major, for Orchestra." By the time the concert had come to an end the audience was almost ready to forgive the lapses of the first number of the program.

With the opening of the shed concerts but a few days away the annual move of thousands of music-lovers from every corner of this country and many others as well will be under way. The Berkshire Festival programs during July and the first half of August have become a "must" to more than 100,000 who plan and scheme each year to spend part or all of their vacations here in this pearl of the Berkshires, listening to some of the best music to beard in the United States.

S.M.

AT TANGLEWOOD:

Mon., July 16, 1956 ★ New York Journal-American

2 Bach Concerts Lure Thousands

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 16.—Bach's magnetic power became dramatically obvious with the large crowds that assembled for the two Bach concerts held in the theatre-concert hall this past weekend.

The instrumental concert on Saturday night drew 4,530; the performance of the St. John Passion yesterday afternoon, 3,741.

Since the hall holds only 1,200, the remainder enjoyed the music sitting on the lawn. The weather was ideal.

This was the first time the St. John Passion had been given at Tanglewood. That it was sung in German may have proved most disconcerting for many in the audience who had no text to follow.

The circumstance could not, however, detract too much from a singularly beautiful performance wherein the spirit of the music received such personal communication through the performers.

Fine Approach

The intimacy of the performance derived from Charles Munch's approach to the score. Except where he drove a bit for contrast, he fashioned it with such sensitivity that the audience was pulled into the humility and the reverence of his feeling. It followed with the utmost absorption.

As the evangelist, John McCollum gave a most distinguished account of the story, in style and in feeling he achieved a rare, devout mood and sang in excellent voice. Mac Morgan gave an intelligent, humble if somewhat self-conscious characterization of Jesus, well-sung throughout.

Adele Addison and Florence Kopleff sang the soprano and contralto arias with beauty of voice, and James Joyce gave more than usual stature to the other bass parts.

The festival chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, showed its fine calibre at once, and responded readily to Munch's demands, especially his insistence on singing softly. They conveyed the final pages of the work most persuasively.

Did Splendidly

The Boston Symphony Chamber group and the various instrumental soloists cooperated splendidly.

In the Saturday concert, Munch turned his attention to the second Brandenburg Concerto, the Second Violin Concerto with William Kross as soloist, the Suite No. 2 with Doriot Anthony Dwyer as the flute solist, and finally the Suite No. 3.

It was a generous, rich segment of Bach which evidently appealed to a great many people.

The Friday concert was devoted to Mozart. It repeated the program given at Lewisohn stadium a year ago (almost as a preview of the Mozart anniversary) with Pierre Luboshutz, Genia Nemenoff, and Boris Goldovsky. Because of rain it was given in the music shed in order to accommodate the 2,208 people present.

This Friday the Berkshire festival moves into the shed permanently with the Boston Symphony playing full strength.

When the Feature Film Begins

BROADWAY THEATRES

ASTOR—10:00, 12:01, 2:02, 4:03, 6:04, 8:05, 10:06, 12:07.
CAPITOL—10:52, 12:59, 3:08, 5:17, 7:26, 9:36, 11:45.
CRITERION—10:00, 12:00, 2:00, 4:00, 6:00, 8:00, 10:00, 12:00.
FINE ARTS—12:00, 2:00, 4:00, 6:05, 8:10, 10:15.
GLOBE—9:00, 10:56, 12:52, 2:48, 4:44, 6:40, 8:36, 10:32, 12:28.
MAYFAIR—9:05, 11:17, 1:29, 3:41, 5:53, 8:05, 10:17, 12:29.
NORMANDIE—12:00, 1:55, 3:55, 5:55, 7:55, 9:55.
N. Y. PARAMOUNT—10:29, 12:38, 2:47, 4:56, 7:05, 9:14, 11:23.
PLAZA—12:00, 1:50, 3:25, 5:05, 6:50, 8:35, 10:15.
R. C. MUSIC HALL—10:30, 1:24, 4:20, 7:18, 10:14. Stage: 12:38, 3:35, 6:33, 9:31.
RIVOLI—2:30, 8:40.
RKO PALACE—11:15, 2:15, 5:10, 8:15, 11:0. Stage: 1:00, 3:50, 6:55, 9:50.
ROXY—10:40, 1:45, 4:50, 8:00, 11:00. Stage: 1:10, 4:15, 7:20, 10:25.
STATE—10:25, 12:42, 2:59, 5:16, 7:33, 9:50, 12:07.
VICTORIA—10:21, 12:19, 2:17, 4:15, 6:13, 8:11, 10:09, 12:07.
WARNER—2:40, 8:40.
WORLD—12:33, 3:46, 6:59, 10:10.
55TH ST. PLAYHOUSE—12:30, 3:10, 3:55, 5:35, 7:20, 9:05, 10:45.

NEIGHBORHOOD THEATRES

ACADEMY OF MUSIC—11:00, 2:07, 5:44, 8:20, 11:23.
BEACON—1:35, 4:32, 7:30, 10:28.
BOULEVARD—2:05, 4:50, 7:40, 10:30.
BRANDT'S 86TH ST.—12:00, 3:15, 6:30, 9:55.
BURNSIDE—1:40, 4:35, 7:30, 10:20.
CASINO—12:10, 3:30, 7:00, 10:05.
CROTONA—12:00, 2:30, 5:05, 7:35, 10:15.
DALE—12:00, 3:15, 6:30, 9:55.
LACONIA—2:30, 5:05, 7:45, 10:25.
LANE—12:00, 3:20, 6:35, 10:00.
LOEW'S LEXINGTON—10:03, 2:00, 5:58, 9:58.
LOEW'S PARADISE—1:20, 4:18, 7:16, 10:22.
LUXOR—1:45, 4:30, 7:15, 10:05.
PARK PLAZA—1:51, 4:40, 7:29, 10:18.
MIDWAY—2:05, 4:40, 7:30, 10:15.
PELHAM—12:00, 2:39, 5:18, 7:54, 10:41.
RKO 58TH ST.—12:00, 2:35, 5:15, 7:50, 10:30.
RKO COLISEUM—12:00, 2:40, 5:20, 8:00, 10:40.
RKO PLUSHING—1:56, 4:35, 7:14, 9:53.
RKO FORDHAM—12:00, 2:30, 5:10, 7:50, 10:30.
SUNRISE DRIVE IN—8:45, 12:40.
TRANS LUX 52D ST.—12:25, 2:30, 4:35, 6:45, 8:55, 10:50.
WAKEFIELD—3:00, 6:30, 10:00.
WHITESTONE DRIVE IN—8:47, 12:26.

BROOKLYN THEATRES

ALBEE—12:20, 3:35, 6:55, 10:15.
FOX—12:52, 4:21, 7:50, 11:19.
METROPOLITAN—2:30, 3:50, 7:10, 10:30.
PARAMOUNT—12:45, 3:57, 7:09, 10:21.

LET'S GO TO THE MOVIES TONIGHT!

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUL 16 1956

Tanglewood Music Festival Moves to Big Shed This Week

The Berkshire Music festival at Tanglewood moves this week from the theater concert hall to the big shed, as the full 106-piece Boston Symphony orchestra makes its first appearance.

Bach-Mozart

The second and final weekend of Back-Mozart concerts, featuring the Boston Symphony's 36-member chamber orchestra, wound up yesterday afternoon with a performance of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John." The Festival chorus was heard in that, and vocal soloists were Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum, Mac Morgan and James Joyce.

There were 3,741 persons on hand for yesterday's program and another 4,531 at the Saturday evening concert. That was another all Bach program, featuring the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2, the Violin Concerto in E Major, with William Kroll as soloist; the Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings, with Doriot Anthony Dwyer as soloist, and the Suite No. 3 in D Major. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducted both programs.

The first of the shed concerts Friday evening will include "The Roman Carnival Overture," by Berlioz; "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun," by Debussy; "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2, by Ravel, and Brahms' Symphony No. 2 in D Major.

Program Next Saturday

Saturday's program will be devoted entirely to music by Wagner; "A Faust Overture," "Forest Murmurs" from Siegfried, Prelude and "Love-Death" from Tristan and Isolde and "Die Walkure," Act 1. Soloists will be Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert DaCosta, tenor, and James Pease, bass.

Sunday afternoon the orchestra will play Rossini's Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri," Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra and Schubert's Symphony No. 7 in C Major.

Mr. Munch will conduct on Friday and Saturday evenings and Pierre Monteux will be on the podium on Sunday.

The usual Wednesday evening chamber music program in the theater concert hall will be a joint recital by the Boston Symphony's Brass ensemble and by Metropolitan Opera Soprano Margaret Harshaw and pianist Ralph Berkowitz.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 264,020
JUL 16 1956

"St. John" Is Rendered at Tanglewood

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, July 15 — This afternoon Charles Munch brought the Bach Mozart series to a close with a deeply felt reading of Bach's "St. John Passion." Although this work is frequently programmed in Symphony Hall, today's performance was the best he has given yet.

In the past, the very nature of the often stormy, and frequently heart-rending, "Passion" with its turbulent choral outbursts has tempted the conductor to over dramatize the music; every passage squeezed for the last drop of emotional value. Today, however, there was virtually no melodrama and the feeling behind every note was genuine.

Technically, it was straightforward in matters of tempo and dynamics, allowing Bach himself to achieve the expressiveness through pitch and verbal terms. Orchestral virtuosity was confined to playing the notes cleanly and accurately. Bach sounds best this way.

Another commendable feature was the full-throated vigor of the chorales interspersed throughout the lengthy score; these wonderful old hymns rang forth in triumphant affirmation rather than sweetly crooned as they often are in Symphony Hall.

Quintet of Soloists

Mr. Munch was aided in no small measure by an excellent quintet of soloists, John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; James Joyce, bass; Adele Addison, soprano, and Florence Kopleff, contralto—all veteran performers in this work.

Each sang his part with devotion, understanding and style but John McCollum rates a special oscar for his role. The narrator, possibly the most difficult role ever written for the tenor, lies extremely high; McCollum never faltered. It was also amazing the way he changed color between the narrator and the tenor arias; in the former, bright and dispassionate, in the latter, warm and human.

The festival chorus, considering that it only had two weeks to learn the exacting score in German, did well enough, though the tone was frayed and the diction fuzzy.

Next week the Berkshire Festival shifts into high gear as the full orchestra moves into the shed for the remaining events. For all the excitement these shed concerts generate, it is difficult to imagine a more rewarding afternoon than today's "St. John."

NEW YORK TIMES, MONDAY, JULY 16, 1956

'ST. JOHN PASSION' OFFERED AT LENOX

John McCollum Sings Role of Evangelist for David Lloyd —Munch Is Conductor

By JOHN BRIGGS
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 15—The Berkshire Music Festival ended its week-end of concerts this afternoon with a fine performance of Bach's "St. John Passion," under the direction of Charles Munch.

John McCollum, substituting for the indisposed David Lloyd, sang with splendid effect the difficult tenor role of the Evangelist. Mr. McCollum's voice, of pleasant lyric quality, is well focused and evenly produced throughout its range. He negotiated the taxing florid passages without difficulty, and his pronunciation of the German text had admirable clarity.

Mac Morgan sang the part of Jesus with dignity and fine vocal suavity. Agreable singing also was offered by Adel Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto, and James Joyce, bass.

The fine singing of the chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, was a highlight of the performance. Mr. Munch's overall conception of the work had great power and grandeur. It was a stirring and memorable performance.

Another all-Bach program was presented last night by Mr. Munch and the chamber orchestra, made up of players from the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The violinist, William Kroll was heard as soloist in the E major Violin Concerto. Mr. Kroll is well known to New York listeners as first violinist of the Kroll Quartet. An excellent quartet leader, he is also an impressive soloist. His playing in the concerto sparkled with fire and energy.

Another personal triumph was scored by Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist of the Boston Symphony, in the Suite in B minor for Flute and Strings. The flutist's dexterous playing was so admired by last night's audience that the Badinerie, final movement of the suite, had to be repeated.

The concert opened with a lively performance of the "Brandenburg" Concerto in F, and closed with the Orchestral Suite No. 3 in D. The performance of Mr. Munch and the Bostonians was characterized by elegance, grace, refinement and accuracy in details.

They practice the curious and almost universal custom of ending each piece with a long-drawn retard and a big crescendo. Although this seems foreign to the style of the music, its efficiency as an applause-generator cannot be questioned.

Last night's audience numbered 4,580 persons, about four times the capacity of the small theatre-concert hall. (Overflow listeners sat on the lawn.) Today's attendance was 3,741. It was a triumphant week-end for Bach.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 101,564
JUL 7 1956

'King of Swing' Tanglewood Guest

LENOX, July 7 (AP)—Guest soloist last night in a Mozart Concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood was Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing."

Mr. Goodman was cheered lustily by the audience of 2,000, about half of them outside in the rain. His selection was Concerto for Clarinet in A-Major.

It was Mr. Goodman's first appearance with the Boston symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

The concerts by the symphony's chamber group, made up of 37 musicians, preceded the full Berkshire Symphonic Festival.

2 Bach Concerts Lure Thousands

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 16.—Bach's magnetic power became dramatically obvious with the large crowds that assembled for the two Bach concerts held in the theatre-concert hall this past weekend.

The instrumental concert on Saturday night drew 4,530; the performance of the St. John Passion yesterday afternoon, 3,741.

Since the hall holds only 1,200, the remainder enjoyed the music sitting on the lawn. The weather was ideal.

This was the first time the St. John Passion had been given at Tanglewood. That it was sung in German may have proved most disconcerting for many in the audience who had no text to follow.

The circumstance could not, however, detract too much from a singularly beautiful performance wherein the spirit of the music received such personal communication through the performers.

Fine Approach

The intimacy of the performance derived from Charles Munch's approach to the score. Except where he drove a bit for contrast, he fashioned it with such sensitivity that the audience was pulled into the humility and the reverence of his feeling. It followed with the utmost absorption.

As the evangelist, John McCollum gave a most distinguished account of the story, in style and in feeling he achieved a rare, devout mood and sang in excellent voice. Mac Morgan gave an intelligent, humble if somewhat self-conscious characterization of Jesus, well-sung throughout.

Adele Addison and Florence Kopleff sang the soprano and contralto arias with beauty of voice, and James Joyce gave more than usual stature to the other bass parts.

The festival chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, showed its fine calibre at once, and responded readily to Munch's demands, especially his insistence on singing softly. They conveyed the final pages of the work most persuasively.

Did Splendidly

The Boston Symphony Chamber group and the various instrumental soloists cooperated splendidly.

In the Saturday concert, Munch turned his attention to the second Brandenburg Concerto, the Second Violin Concerto with William Kross as soloist, the Suite No. 2 with Doriot Anthony Dwyer as the flute solist, and finally the Suite No. 3.

It was a generous, rich segment of Bach which evidently appealed to a great many people.

The Friday concert was devoted to Mozart. It repeated the program given at Lewisohn stadium a year ago (almost as a preview of the Mozart anniversary) with Pierre Luboshutz, Genia Nemenoff, and Boris Goldovsky. Because of rain it was given in the music shed in order to accommodate the 2,208 people present.

This Friday the Berkshire festival moves into the shed permanently with the Boston Symphony playing full strength.

When the Feature Film Begins

BROADWAY THEATRES

ASTOR—10:00, 12:01, 2:02, 4:03, 6:04, 8:05, 10:06, 12:07.
CAPITOL—10:52, 12:59, 3:08, 5:17, 7:26, 9:36, 11:45.
CRITERION—10:00, 12:00, 2:00, 4:00, 6:00, 8:00, 10:00, 12:00.
FINE ARTS—12:00, 2:00, 4:00, 6:05, 8:10, 10:15.
GLOBE—9:00, 10:56, 12:52, 2:48, 4:44, 6:40, 8:36, 10:32, 12:28.
MAYFAIR—9:05, 11:17, 1:29, 3:41, 5:53, 8:05, 10:17, 12:29.
NORMANDIE—12:00, 1:55, 3:55, 5:55, 7:55, 9:55.
N. Y. PARAMOUNT—10:29, 12:38, 2:47, 4:56, 7:05, 9:14, 11:23.
PLAZA—12:00, 1:40, 3:25, 5:05, 6:50, 8:35, 10:15.
R. C. MUSIC HALL—10:30, 1:24, 4:20, 7:18, 10:14. Stage: 12:38, 3:35, 6:33, 9:31.
RIVOLI—2:30, 8:40.
RKO PALACE—11:15, 2:15, 5:10, 8:15, 11:0. Stage: 1:00, 3:50, 6:55, 9:50.
ROXY—10:40, 1:45, 4:50, 8:00, 11:00. Stage: 1:10, 4:15, 7:20, 10:25.
STATE—10:25, 12:42, 2:59, 5:16, 7:33, 9:50, 12:07.
VICTORIA—10:21, 12:19, 2:17, 4:15, 6:13, 8:11, 10:09, 12:07.
WARNER—2:40, 8:40.
WORLD—12:33, 3:46, 6:59, 10:10.
55TH ST. PLAYHOUSE—12:30, 2:10, 3:55, 5:35, 7:20, 9:05, 10:45.

NEIGHBORHOOD THEATRES

ACADEMY OF MUSIC—11:00, 2:07, 5:44, 8:20, 11:28.
BEACON—1:35, 4:32, 7:30, 10:28.
BOULEVARD—2:05, 4:50, 7:40, 10:30.
BRANDT'S 86TH ST.—12:00, 3:15, 6:30, 9:55.
BURNSIDE—1:40, 4:35, 7:30, 10:20.
CASINO—12:10, 3:30, 7:00, 10:05.
CROTONA—12:00, 2:30, 5:05, 7:35, 10:15.
DALE—12:00, 3:15, 6:30, 9:55.
LACONIA—2:30, 5:05, 7:45, 10:25.
LANE—12:00, 3:20, 6:35, 10:00.
LOEW'S LEXINGTON—10:03, 2:00, 5:58, 9:58.
LOEW'S PARADISE—1:20, 4:18, 7:16, 10:22.
LUXOR—1:45, 4:30, 7:15, 10:05.
PARK PLAZA—1:51, 4:40, 7:29, 10:18.
MIDWAY—2:05, 4:40, 7:30, 10:15.
PELHAM—12:00, 2:39, 5:18, 7:54, 10:41.
RKO 58TH ST.—12:00, 2:35, 5:15, 7:50, 10:30.
RKO COLISEUM—12:00, 2:40, 5:20, 8:00, 10:40.
RKO FLUSHING—1:56, 4:35, 7:14, 9:53.
RKO FORDHAM—12:00, 2:30, 5:10, 7:50, 10:30.
SUNRISE DRIVE IN—8:45, 12:40.
TRANS LUX 52D ST.—12:25, 2:30, 4:35, 6:45, 8:55, 10:50.
WAKEFIELD—3:00, 6:30, 10:00.
WHITESTONE DRIVE IN—8:47, 12:26.

BROOKLYN THEATRES

ALBEE—12:20, 3:35, 6:55, 10:15.
FOX—12:52, 4:21, 7:50, 11:19.
METROPOLITAN—2:30, 3:50, 7:10, 10:30.
PARAMOUNT—12:45, 3:57, 7:09, 10:21.

LET'S GO TO THE MOVIES TONIGHT!

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

JUL 16 1956

Tanglewood Music Festival Moves to Big Shed This Week

The Berkshire Music festival at Tanglewood moves this week from the theater concert hall to the big shed, as the full 106-piece Boston Symphony orchestra makes its first appearance.

Bach-Mozart

The second and final week end of Back-Mozart concerts, featuring the Boston Symphony's 36-member chamber orchestra, wound up yesterday afternoon with a performance of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John." The Festival chorus was heard in that, and vocal soloists were Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum, Mac Morgan and James Joyce.

There were 3,741 persons on hand for yesterday's program and another 4,531 at the Saturday evening concert. That was another all Bach program, featuring the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2, the Violin Concerto in E Major, with William Kroll as soloist; the Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings, with Doriot Anthony Dwyer as soloist, and the Suite No. 3 in D Major. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducted both programs.

The first of the shed concerts Friday evening will include "The Roman Carnival Overture," by Berlioz; "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun," by Debussy; "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2, by Ravel, and Brahms' Symphony No. 2 in D Major.

Program Next Saturday

Saturday's program will be devoted entirely to music by Wagner; "A Faust Overture," "Forest Murmurs" from Siegfried, Prelude and "Love-Death" from Tristan and Isolde and "Die Walkure," Act 1. Soloists will be Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert DaCosta, tenor, and James Pease, bass.

Sunday afternoon the orchestra will play Rossini's Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri," Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra and Schubert's Symphony No. 7 in C Major.

Mr. Munch will conduct on Friday and Saturday evenings and Pierre Monteux will be on the podium on Sunday.

The usual Wednesday evening chamber music program in the theater concert hall will be a joint recital by the Boston Symphony's Brass ensemble and by Metropolitan Opera Soprano Margaret Harshaw and pianist Ralph Berkowitz.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 264,020
JUL 16 1956

"St. John" Is Rendered at Tanglewood

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, July 15 — This afternoon Charles Munch brought the Bach Mozart series to a close with a deeply felt reading of Bach's "St. John Passion." Although this work is frequently programmed in Symphony Hall, today's performance was the best he has given yet.

In the past, the very nature of the often stormy, and frequently heart-rending, "Passion" with its turbulent choral outbursts has tempted the conductor to over dramatize the music; every passage squeezed for the last drop of emotional value. Today, however, there was virtually no melodrama and the feeling behind every note was genuine.

Technically, it was straightforward in matters of tempo and dynamics, allowing Bach himself to achieve the expressiveness through pitch and verbal terms. Orchestral virtuosity was confined to playing the notes cleanly and accurately. Bach sounds best this way.

Another commendable feature was the full-throated vigor of the chorales interspersed throughout the lengthy score; these wonderful old hymns rang forth in triumphant affirmation rather than sweetly crooned as they often are in Symphony Hall.

Quintet of Soloists

Mr. Munch was aided in no small measure by an excellent quintet of soloists, John McCollum, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; James Joyce, bass; Adele Addison, soprano, and Florence Kopleff, contralto—all veteran performers in this work.

Each sang his part with devotion, understanding and style but John McCollum rates a special oscar for his role. The narrator, possibly the most difficult role ever written for the tenor, lies extremely high; McCollum never faltered. It was also amazing the way he changed color between the narrator and the tenor arias; in the former, bright and dispassionate, in the latter, warm and human.

The festival chorus, considering that it only had two weeks to learn the exacting score in German, did well enough, though the tone was frayed and the diction fuzzy.

Next week the Berkshire Festival shifts into high gear as the full orchestra moves into the shed for the remaining events. For all the excitement these shed concerts generate, it is difficult to imagine a more rewarding afternoon than today's "St. John."

'ST. JOHN PASSION' OFFERED AT LENOX

John McCollum Sings Role of Evangelist for David Lloyd —Munch Is Conductor

By JOHN BRIGGS
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 15—The Berkshire Music Festival ended its week-end of concerts this afternoon with a fine performance of Bach's "St. John Passion," under the direction of Charles Munch.

John McCollum, substituting for the indisposed David Lloyd, sang with splendid effect the difficult tenor role of the Evangelist. Mr. McCollum's voice, of pleasant lyric quality, is well focused and evenly produced throughout its range. He negotiated the taxing florid passages without difficulty, and his pronunciation of the German text had admirable clarity.

Mac Morgan sang the part of Jesus with dignity and fine vocal suavity. Agreable singing also was offered by Adel Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto, and James Joyce, bass.

The fine singing of the chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, was a highlight of the performance. Mr. Munch's overall conception of the work had great power and grandeur. It was a stirring and memorable performance.

Another all-Bach program was presented last night by Mr. Munch and the chamber orchestra, made up of players from the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The violinist William Kroll was heard as soloist in the E major Violin Concerto. Mr. Kroll is well known to New York listeners as first violinist of the Kroll Quartet. An excellent quartet leader, he is also an impressive soloist. His playing in the concerto sparkled with fire and energy.

Another personal triumph was scored by Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist of the Boston Symphony, in the Suite in B minor for Flute and Strings. The flutist's dexterous playing was so admired by last night's audience that the Badinerie, final movement of the suite, had to be repeated.

The concert opened with a lively performance of the "Brandenburg" Concerto in F, and closed with the Orchestral Suite No. 3 in D. The performance of Mr. Munch and the Bostonians was characterized by elegance, grace, refinement and accuracy in details.

They practice the curious and almost universal custom of ending each piece with a long-drawn retard and a big crescendo. Although this seems foreign to the style of the music, its efficiency as an applause-generator cannot be questioned.

Last night's audience numbered 4,580 persons, about four times the capacity of the small theatre-concert hall. (Overflow listeners sat on the lawn.) Today's attendance was 3,741. It was a triumphant week-end for Bach.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 101,564
JUL 7 1956

'King of Swing' Tanglewood Guest

LENOX, July 7 (AP)—Guest soloist last night in a Mozart Concerto played by a chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood was Benny Goodman, renowned as the "King of Swing."

Mr. Goodman was cheered lustily by the audience of 2,000, about half of them outside in the rain. His selection was Concerto for Clarinet in A-Major.

It was Mr. Goodman's first appearance with the Boston symphony. He is scheduled for a second on July 11.

The concerts by the symphony's chamber group, made up of 37 musicians, preceded the full Berkshire Symphonic Festival.

[83]

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE, MONDAY, JULY [illegible]

Tanglewood Provides Rare Musical Treat

By D. E. RITZ

"The Passion According to St. John" by J. S. Bach, sung in German, formed the majestic conclusion to the six program Bach-Mozart series at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., yesterday afternoon.

* * *

UNDER THE BATON of Charles Munch the work achieved the full nobility of its intricate score.

The chamber orchestra of first desk men of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was assisted by the Festival Chorus, which had been trained under Hugh Ross.

Assisting soloists were John McCollum in the role of the Evangelist and solo tenor; Mac Morgan singing the solo bass parts and the music of Jesus; Adele Addison, solo soprano; Florence Kopleff, solo contralto; and James Joyce, solo bass and the music of Peter and Pilate.

* * *

EDOUARD NIES-BERGER was at the organ; Daniel Pinkham played harpsichord; the viola da gamba was played by Alfred Zighera; and the oboe d'amore by Louis Speyer.

The Breitkopf and Hartel edition was used.

The music is in keeping with its subject and most reverent throughout. One felt as though one had been at a religious observance rather than at a concert and applause seemed sacrilegeous.

For the reviewer it was a first live hearing of the music and a revelation.

* * *

THE WEATHER was perfect and the audience not only filled the 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert hall but overflowed in volume on the famous Tanglewood lawns.

The Saturday evening program, also all-Bach and conducted by Dr. Munch, was also held in the intimate hall but a Friday deluge forced the concert of that evening to be presented in the Shed.

Shed concerts with the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be inaugurated this Friday and will continue on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon each weekend through Aug. 12.

TANGLEWOOD, within easy driving range of Schenectady, forms a source of inspiration for all who come under its magic spell.

The beauty of the grounds, the sincerity of the music making, the high caliber of the teaching, all contribute to the magic which all Tanglewood devotees know.

For many of us Tanglewood forms our chief summer music and we are more than grateful that one has such a marvelous choice of programming.

The Bach Passions were written for the Good Friday vesper services at St. Thomas Church in Leipzig and the St. John is believed to have had its first performance on Good Friday of 1723.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928
JUL 16 1956

Record Audience At Lenox Hears Bach Selections

A record crowd of 4,530 music lovers stormed Tanglewood Saturday evening for an all Bach program in the theatre-concert hall conducted by Charles Munch. More could have been accomodated had they arrived at 6, instead of at 8 o'clock when the greatest number of ticket holders converge on the main gate.

The opening Brandenberg concerto No. 2 in F major was directed by Mr. Munch with simplicity and robust dignity; it is scored for solo trumpet, flute, oboe, violin and orchestra, including harpsichord. The high tones of the special trumpet played by Roger Voisin were clear and exultant. Adaptation from the present day instrument is technically very difficult and not always certain in outcome, one understands that at rehearsal the performance was perfect. The andante was played with compassion and gentleness; and the fugue in the allegro was displayed with vigor and freedom by the skillful concertino foursome.

William Kroll, co-director of the Chamber Music Department and a favorite with Tanglewood audiences was recalled five times in recognition of his brilliant and adept playing of the second violin concerto in E major, Bach at his pedantic best.

After intermission the always exquisite and esthetically satisfying Suite No. 2 B minor was performed with pertinent appeal, Mr. Munch calling upon the string players, and receiving the utmost in tonal color. Mrs. Dwyer, the young and incomparable first flutist, was relaxed and exceptionally proficient throughout, her playing of the final Badinerie provoking a storm of applause, undiminished until Mr. Munch with gracious acceptance repeated this sprightly bit.

The dignified overture of the third Suite in D Major for orchestra put everyone back in proper mood for the full enjoyment of the final number. The familiar air for the G string was heard in the second movement scored for strings, and played with effective pathos. The stolid Gavottes, the bouncing brief Bourree and rollicking Gigue were all handled with spirited constraint by Mr. Munch and his orchestra, truly music that "sparkles like the sun." The audience applauded long and vociferously, and seemingly with no desire to leave after such an outstanding performance.—M. deB. B.

GOSSIPY MEMO ON TRAVEL

Music under New England stars

Late gaiety in Spain

An English hideaway

Taking the cure in France

The Tanglewood festival opens at Lenox, Massachusetts, in the Berkshire Hills on July 4. These Boston Symphony concerts—Koussevitsky's fabulous legacy to music in America—attract around ten thousand people a night. Other diversions are: pop jazz concerts at Music Inn; the Lenox Library, with a fine selection of records as well as books (a hall concert hall attached); the stately house Edith Wharton built from designs by Sir Christopher Wren; the Stockbridge Playhouse and the dance at Jacob's Pillow.
During this time it is hard to find good accommodations. Those in the know somehow who know members, try for the Edwardian comfort of the Lenox Club. And there is the sumptuous Gilded Hart, once the house of an old-guard summer resident—now the brocade-hung rooms have such guests as conductor Charles Munch.
Nearby, in the elm-lined village of Stockbridge, is the large wooden Red Lion Inn (well-run but noisy until the new truck route is finished), and Miss Buck's, a nice boarding house (but few baths).
Further away is the pretty village of South Egremont—the Egremont Tavern is a small New England inn, its annex an old gristmill by a mountain brook.

Food and drink in Madrid: The Samba has probably the best flamenco dancers in Madrid; they hit fever pitch at about three. No food here, and the prices are fairly high (Arturo Soria 175). There is quiet steak at Henry's (Villanueva 2), an American restaurant run by an American. An aged and simpatico zither player imparts a sufficient quota of non-U.S. atmosphere to erase one's guilt feelings about seeking out American food abroad.

In England's New Forest is a small village, Bucklers Hard, that runs down to the Hamble River (from which some of Nelson's ships were launched for the Battle of Trafalgar). A charming, quiet inn, the Master Builder's House, has only a few rooms, but heavenly views. Now owned by the son of the well-known cricketer Commander C. B. Fry, it has gained a high reputation for food and wine.

Just outside the cool city of Bogotá, Colombia, lies the Bogotá Country Club, its grounds ending at the foot of the Andes. Besides the tennis courts and golf links, there are artificial lakes, gardens overrun with delphiniums, closed terraces, a heated indoor swimming pool framed in tender green tropical ferns, Turkish baths, and an immense dining room where dances are held twice a week.
For the sporting set, the Club has a tavern where the drinks are served with banana chips and fried slivers of pork. The food is excellent and exceedingly expensive.

Vichy: This once fashionable spa has returned to its former glory, and a social life as busy as Newport's parallels the rigid water and diet regimens. (Many Europeans take a cure every year.) Parks are laid out with neat flower beds, bands play in pergolas, and down the central square, under a long, glassed-in pavilion, are fountains gushing the waters, where everyone brings his own cup, to drink. There are extravagant casinos with gambling, dancing, many excellent restaurants, good golf, good tennis, and lovely surrounding countryside. Hotels are run for the cures (which take at least three weeks), offering such attentions as being awakened with a glass of the water prescribed by a doctor on arrival; one's special diet served in the dining room (even a sliced tomato presented in the grand manner of a fine meal); beds always left turned down, ready for frequent naps. Among the many excellent hotels is the Pavillon Sévigné, once Madame de Sévigné's château.

Travellers know: To rent in London, for a month or a year, a flat, a house, a mews cottage, equipped with well-trained servants, theatre tickets bought, car hired, fire lighted upon arrival, write Jeanne Pelham Ltd., 22a Motcomb Street, London, S.W. 1. (Cable address for this luxury: Luxlon)....
A special European service that will get: for businessmen, anything from office space to a secretary; for families, a running house, a nurse, a school; for travellers, a guide, a car, reservations for anywhere—write Howarth Services, 226 East 70th Street, New York 21, N. Y....
For a quiet night's sleep, at London's Claridges Hotel, try for rooms overlooking the Mews. For a view all over Rome, at the Hassler Hotel, try for top-floor rooms with balconies.

[84]

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE, MONDAY, JULY

Tanglewood Provides Rare Musical Treat

By D. E. RITZ

"The Passion According to St. John" by J. S. Bach, sung in German, formed the majestic conclusion to the six program Bach-Mozart series at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., yesterday afternoon.

* * *

UNDER THE BATON of Charles Munch the work achieved the full nobility of its intricate score.

The chamber orchestra of first desk men of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was assisted by the Festival Chorus, which had been trained under Hugh Ross.

Assisting soloists were John McCollum in the role of the Evangelist and solo tenor; Mac Morgan singing the solo bass parts and the music of Jesus; Adele Addison, solo soprano; Florence Kopleff, solo contralto; and James Joyce, solo bass and the music of Peter and Pilate.

* * *

EDOUARD NIES-BERGER was at the organ; Daniel Pinkham played harpsichord; the viola da gamba was played by Alfred Zighera; and the oboe d'amore by Louis Speyer.

The Breitkopf and Hartel edition was used.

The music is in keeping with its subject and most reverent throughout. One felt as though one had been at a religious observance rather than at a concert and applause seemed sacriligeous.

For the reviewer it was a first live hearing of the music and a revelation.

* * *

THE WEATHER was perfect and the audience not only filled the 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert hall but overflowed in volume on the famous Tanglewood lawns.

The Saturday evening program, also all-Bach and conducted by Dr. Munch, was also held in the intimate hall but a Friday deluge forced the concert of that evening to be presented in the Shed.

Shed concerts with the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be inaugurated this Friday and will continue on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon each weekend through Aug. 12.

TANGLEWOOD, within easy driving range of Schenectady, forms a source of inspiration for all who come under its magic spell.

The beauty of the grounds, the sincerity of the music making, the high caliber of the teaching, all contribute to the magic which all Tanglewood devotees know.

For many of us Tanglewood forms our chief summer music and we are more than grateful that one has such a marvelous choice of programming.

The Bach Passions were written for the Good Friday vesper services at St. Thomas Church in Leipzig and the St. John is believed to have had its first performance on Good Friday of 1723.

VOGUE
NEW YORK CITY
JUN 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928
JUL 19 1956

Record Audience At Lenox Hears Bach Selections

A record crowd of 4,530 music lovers stormed Tanglewood Saturday evening for an all Bach program in the theatre-concert hall, conducted by Charles Munch. More could have been accomodated had they arrived at 6, instead of at 8 o'clock when the greatest number of ticket holders converge on the main gate.

The opening Brandenberg concerto No. 2 in F major was directed by Mr. Munch with simplicity and robust dignity; it is scored for solo trumpet, flute, oboe, violin and orchestra, including harpsichord. The high tones of the special trumpet played by Roger Voisin were clear and exultant. Adaptation from the present day instrument is technically very difficult and not always certain in outcome, one understands that at rehearsal the performance was perfect. The andante was played with compassion and gentleness; and the fugue in the allegro was displayed with vigor and freedom by the skillful concertino foursome.

William Kroll, co-director of the Chamber Music Department and a favorite with Tanglewood audiences was recalled five times in recognition of his brilliant and adept playing of the second violin concerto in E major, Bach at his pedantic best.

After intermission the always exquisite and esthetically satisfying Suite No. 2 B minor was performed with pertinent appeal, Mr. Munch calling upon the string players, and receiving the utmost in tonal color. Mrs. Dwyer, the young and incomparable first flutist, was relaxed and exceptionally proficient throughout, her playing of the final Badinerie provoking a storm of applause, undiminished until Mr. Munch with gracious acceptance repeated this sprightly bit.

The dignified overture of the third Suite in D Major for orchestra put everyone back in proper mood for the full enjoyment of the final number. The familiar air for the G string was heard in the second movement scored for strings, and played with effective pathos. The stolid Gavottes, the bouncing brief Bourree and rollicking Gigue were all handled with spirited constraint by Mr. Munch and his orchestra, truly music that "sparkles in the sun." The audience applauded long and vociferously, and seemingly with no desire to leave after such an outstanding performance.—M. deB. B.

GOSSIPY MEMO ON TRAVEL

Music under New England stars

Late gaiety in Spain

An English hideaway

Taking the cure in France

The Tanglewood festival opens at Lenox, Massachusetts, in the Berkshire Hills on July 4. These Boston Symphony concerts—Koussevitsky's fabulous legacy to music in America—attract around ten thousand people a night. Other diversions are: top jazz concerts at Music Inn; the Lenox Library with a fine selection of records as well as books (a small concert hall attached): the stately house Edith Wharton built from designs by Sir Christopher Wren; the Stockbridge Playhouse and the dance at Jacob's Pillow.
During this time it is hard to find good accommodations. Those in the know, and who know members, try for the Edwardian comfort of the Lenox Club. And there is the sumptuous Elm Court, once the house of an old-guard summer resident; now the brocade-hung rooms have such guests as conductor Charles Munch.
Nearby, in the elm-lined village of Stockbridge, is the large wooden Red Lion Inn (well-run but noisy until the new truck route is finished), and Miss Buck's, a nice boarding house (but few baths).
Further away is the pretty village of South Egremont—the Egremont Tavern is a small New England inn, its annex an old gristmill by a mountain brook.

Food and drink in Madrid: The Samba has probably the best flamenco dancers in Madrid; they hit fever pitch at about three. No food here, and the prices are fairly high (Arturo Soria 175). There is quiet steak at Henry's (Villanueva 2), an American restaurant run by an American. An aged and simpatico zither player imparts a sufficient quota of non-U.S. atmosphere to erase one's guilt feelings about seeking out American food abroad.

In England's New Forest is a small village, Bucklers Hard, that runs down to the Hamble River (from which some of Nelson's ships were launched for the Battle of Trafalgar). A charming, quiet inn, the Master Builder's House, has only a few rooms, but heavenly views. Now owned by the son of the well-known cricketer Commander C. B. Fry, it has gained a high reputation for food and wine.

Just outside the cool city of Bogotá, Colombia, lies the Bogotá Country Club, its grounds ending at the foot of the Andes. Besides the tennis courts and golf links, there are artificial lakes, gardens overrun with delphiniums, closed terraces, a heated indoor swimming pool framed in tender green tropical ferns. Turkish baths, and an immense dining room where dances are held twice a week. For the sporting set, the Club has a tavern where the drinks are served with banana chips and fried slivers of pork. The food is excellent and exceedingly expensive.

Vichy: This once fashionable spa has returned to its former glory, and a social life as busy as Newport's parallels the rigid water and diet regimens. (Many Europeans take a cure every year.) Parks are laid out with neat flower beds, bands play in pergolas, and down the central square, under a long, glassed-in pavilion, are fountains gushing the waters, where everyone brings his own cup, to drink. There are extravagant casinos with gambling, dancing, many excellent restaurants, good golf, good tennis, and lovely surrounding countryside. Hotels are run for the cures (which take at least three weeks), offering such attentions as being awakened with a glass of the water prescribed by a doctor on arrival; one's special diet served in the dining room (even a sliced tomato presented in the grand manner of a fine meal); beds always left turned down, ready for frequent naps. Among the many excellent hotels is the Pavillon Sévigné, once Madame de Sévigné's château.

Travellers know: To rent in London, for a month or a year, a flat, a house, a mews cottage, equipped with well-trained servants, theatre tickets bought, car hired, fire lighted upon arrival, write Jeanne Pelham Ltd., 22a Motcomb Street, London, S.W. 1. (Cable address for this luxury: Luxlon)....
A special European service that will get: for businessmen, anything from office space to a secretary; for families, a running house, a nurse, a school; for travellers, a guide, a car, reservations for anywhere—write Howarth Services, 226 East 70th Street, New York 21, N. Y....
For a quiet night's sleep, at London's Claridges Hotel, try for rooms overlooking the Mews. For a view all over Rome, at the Hassler Hotel, try for top-floor rooms with balconies.

[84]

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE, MONDAY, JUL[illegible]

Tanglewood Provides Rare Musical Treat

By D. E. RITZ

"The Passion According to St. John" by J. S. Bach, sung in German, formed the majestic conclusion to the six program Bach-Mozart series at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., yesterday afternoon.

* * *

UNDER THE BATON of Charles Munch the work achieved the full nobility of its intricate score.

The chamber orchestra of first desk men of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was assisted by the Festival Chorus, which had been trained under Hugh Ross.

Assisting soloists were John McCollum in the role of the Evangelist and solo tenor; Mac Morgan singing the solo bass parts and the music of Jesus; Adele Addison, solo soprano; Florence Kopleff, solo contralto; and James Joyce, solo bass and the music of Peter and Pilate.

* * *

EDOUARD NIES-BERGER was at the organ; Daniel Pinkham played harpsichord; the viola da gamba was played by Alfred Zighera; and the oboe d'amore by Louis Speyer.

The Breitkopf and Hartel edition was used.

The music is in keeping with its subject and most reverent throughout. One felt as though one had been at a religious observance rather than at a concert and applause seemed sacriligeous.

For the reviewer it was a first live hearing of the music and a revelation.

* * *

THE WEATHER was perfect and the audience not only filled the 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert hall but overflowed in volume on the famous Tanglewood lawns.

The Saturday evening program, also all-Bach and conducted by Dr. Munch, was also held in the intimate hall but a Friday deluge forced the concert of that evening to be presented in the Shed.

Shed concerts with the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be inaugurated this Friday and will continue on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon each weekend through Aug. 12.

TANGLEWOOD, within easy driving range of Schenectady, forms a source of inspiration for all who come under its magic spell.

The beauty of the grounds, the sincerity of the music making, the high caliber of the teaching, all contribute to the magic which all Tanglewood devotees know.

For many of us Tanglewood forms our chief summer music and we are more than grateful that one has such a marvelous choice of programming.

The Bach Passions were written for the Good Friday vesper services at St. Thomas Church in Leipzig and the St. John is believed to have had its first performance on Good Friday of 1723.

VOGUE
NEW YORK CITY
JUN 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928
JUL 18 1956

Record Audience At Lenox Hears Bach Selections

A record crowd of 4,530 music lovers stormed Tanglewood Saturday evening for an all Bach program in the theatre-concert hall, conducted by Charles Munch. More could have been accomodated had they arrived at 6, instead of at 8 o'clock when the greatest number of ticket holders converge on the main gate.

The opening Brandenberg concerto No. 2 in F major was directed by Mr. Munch with simplicity and robust dignity; it is scored for solo trumpet, flute, oboe, violin and orchestra, including harpsichord. The high tones of the special trumpet played by Roger Voisin were clear and exultant. Adaptation from the present day instrument is technically very difficult and not always certain in outcome, one understands that at rehearsal the performance was perfect. The andante was played with compassion and gentleness; and the fugue in the allegro was displayed with vigor and freedom by the skillful concertino foursome.

William Kroll, co-director of the Chamber Music Department and a favorite with Tanglewood audiences was recalled five times in recognition of his brilliant and adept playing of the second violin concerto in E major, Bach at his pedantic best.

After intermission the always exquisite and esthetically satisfying Suite No. 2 B minor was performed with pertinent appeal, Mr. Munch calling upon the string players and receiving the utmost in tonal color. Mrs. Dwyer, the young and incomparable first flutist, was relaxed and exceptionally proficient throughout, her playing of the final Badinerie provoking a storm of applause, undiminished until Mr. Munch with gracious acceptance repeated this sprightly bit.

The dignified overture of the third Suite in D Major for orchestra put everyone back in proper mood for the full enjoyment of the final number. The familiar air for the G string was heard in the second movement scored for strings, and played with effective pathos. The stolid Gavottes, the bouncing brief Bourree and rollicking Gigue were all handled with spirited constraint by Mr. Munch and his orchestra, truly music that "sparkles in the sun." The audience applauded long and vociferously, and seemingly with no desire to leave after such an outstanding performance.—M. deB. B.

GOSSIPY MEMO ON TRAVEL

Music under New England stars

Late gaiety in Spain

An English hideaway

Taking the cure in France

The Tanglewood festival opens at Lenox, Massachusetts, in the Berkshire Hills on July 4. These Boston Symphony concerts—Koussevitsky's fabulous legacy to music in America—attract around ten thousand people a night. Other diversions are: top jazz concerts at Music Inn; the Lenox Library with a fine selection of records as well as books (a small concert hall attached); the stately house Edith Wharton built from designs by Sir Christopher Wren; the Stockbridge Playhouse and the dance at Jacob's Pillow.
During this time it is hard to find good accommodations. Those in the know, and who know members, try for the Edwardian comfort of the Lenox Club. And there is the sumptuous Elm Court, once the house of an old-guard summer resident; now the brocade-hung rooms have such guests as conductor Charles Munch.
Nearby, in the elm-lined village of Stockbridge, is the large wooden Red Lion Inn (well-run but noisy until the new truck route is finished), and Miss Buck's, a nice boarding house (but few baths).
Further away is the pretty village of South Egremont—the Egremont Tavern is a small New England inn, its annex an old gristmill by a mountain brook.

Food and drink in Madrid: The Samba has probably the best flamenco dancers in Madrid; they hit fever pitch at about three. No food here, and the prices are fairly high (Arturo Soria 175). There is quiet steak at Henry's (Villanueva 2), an American restaurant run by an American. An aged and simpatico zither player imparts a sufficient quota of non-U.S. atmosphere to erase one's guilt feelings about seeking out American food abroad.

In England's New Forest is a small village, Bucklers Hard, that runs down to the Hamble River (from which some of Nelson's ships were launched for the Battle of Trafalgar). A charming, quiet inn, the Master Builder's House, has only a few rooms, but heavenly views. Now owned by the son of the well-known cricketer Commander C. B. Fry, it has gained a high reputation for food and wine.

Just outside the cool city of Bogotá, Colombia, lies the Bogotá Country Club, its grounds ending at the foot of the Andes. Besides the tennis courts and golf links, there are artificial lakes, gardens overrun with delphiniums, closed terraces, a heated indoor swimming pool framed in tender green tropical ferns, Turkish baths, and an immense dining room where dances are held twice a week. For the sporting set, the Club has a tavern where the drinks are served with banana chips and fried slivers of pork. The food is excellent and exceedingly expensive.

Vichy: This once fashionable spa has returned to its former glory, and a social life as busy as Newport's parallels the rigid water and diet regimens. (Many Europeans take a cure every year.) Parks are laid out with neat flower beds, bands play in pergolas, and down the central square, under a long, glassed-in pavilion, are fountains gushing the waters, where everyone brings his own cup, to drink. There are extravagant casinos with gambling, dancing, many excellent restaurants, good golf, good tennis, and lovely surrounding countryside. Hotels are run for the cures (which take at least three weeks), offering such attentions as being awakened with a glass of the water prescribed by a doctor on arrival; one's special diet served in the dining room (even a sliced tomato presented in the grand manner of a fine meal); beds always left turned down, ready for frequent naps. Among the many excellent hotels is the Pavillon Sévigné, once Madame de Sévigné's château.

Travellers know: To rent in London, for a month or a year, a flat, a house, a mews cottage, equipped with well-trained servants, theatre tickets bought, car hired, fire lighted upon arrival, write Jeanne Pelham Ltd., 22a Motcomb Street, London, S.W. 1. (Cable address for this luxury: Luxlon)....
A special European service that will get: for businessmen, anything from office space to a secretary; for families, a running house, a nurse, a school; for travellers, a guide, a car, reservations for anywhere—write Howarth Services, 226 East 70th Street, New York 21, N. Y....
For a quiet night's sleep, at London's Claridges Hotel, try for rooms overlooking the Mews. For a view all over Rome, at the Hassler Hotel, try for top-floor rooms with balconies.

[84]

Tanglewood Provides Rare Musical Treat

By D. E. RITZ

"The Passion According to St. John" by J. S. Bach, sung in German, formed the majestic conclusion to the six program Bach-Mozart series at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., yesterday afternoon.

* * *

UNDER THE BATON of Charles Munch the work achieved the full nobility of its intricate score.

The chamber orchestra of first desk men of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was assisted by the Festival Chorus, which had been trained under Hugh Ross.

Assisting soloists were John McCollum in the role of the Evangelist and solo tenor; Mac Morgan singing the solo bass parts and the music of Jesus; Adele Addison, solo soprano; Florence Kopleff, solo contralto; and James Joyce, solo bass and the music of Peter and Pilate.

* * *

EDOUARD NIES-BERGER was at the organ; Daniel Pinkham played harpsichord; the viola da gamba was played by Alfred Zighera; and the oboe d'amore by Louis Speyer.

The Breitkopf and Hartel edition was used.

The music is in keeping with its subject and most reverent throughout. One felt as though one had been at a religious observance rather than at a concert and applause seemed sacriligeous.

For the reviewer it was a first live hearing of the music and a revelation.

* * *

THE WEATHER was perfect and the audience not only filled the 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert hall but overflowed in volume on the famous Tanglewood lawns.

The Saturday evening program, also all-Bach and conducted by Dr. Munch, was also held in the intimate hall but a Friday deluge forced the concert of that evening to be presented in the Shed.

Shed concerts with the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be inaugurated this Friday and will continue on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon each weekend through Aug. 12.

TANGLEWOOD, within easy driving range of Schenectady, forms a source of inspiration for all who come under its magic spell.

The beauty of the grounds, the sincerity of the music making, the high caliber of the teaching, all contribute to the magic which all Tanglewood devotees know.

For many of us Tanglewood forms our chief summer music and we are more than grateful that one has such a marvelous choice of programming.

The Bach Passions were written for the Good Friday vesper services at St. Thomas Church in Leipzig and the St. John is believed to have had its first performance on Good Friday of 1723.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928
JUL 16 1956

Record Audience At Lenox Hears Bach Selections

A record crowd of 4,530 music lovers stormed Tanglewood Saturday evening for an all Bach program in the theatre-concert hall, conducted by Charles Munch. More could have been accomodated had they arrived at 6, instead of at 8 o'clock when the greatest number of ticket holders converge on the main gate.

The opening Brandenberg concerto No. 2 in F major was directed by Mr. Munch with simplicity and robust dignity; it is scored for solo trumpet, flute, oboe, violin and orchestra, including harpsichord. The high tones of the special trumpet played by Roger Voisin were clear and exultant. Adaptation from the present day instrument is technically very difficult and not always certain in outcome, one understands that at rehearsal the performance was perfect. The andante was played with compassion and gentleness; and the fugue in the allegro was displayed with vigor and freedom by the skillful concertino foursome.

William Kroll, co-director of the Chamber Music Department and a favorite with Tanglewood audiences was recalled five times in recognition of his brilliant and adept playing of the second violin concerto in E major, Bach at his pedantic best.

After intermission the always exquisite and esthetically satisfying Suite No. 2 B minor was performed with pertinent appeal, Mr. Munch calling upon the string players, and receiving the utmost in tonal color. Mrs. Dwyer, the young and incomparable first flutist, was relaxed and exceptionally proficient throughout, her playing of the final Badinerie provoking a storm of applause, undiminished until Mr. Munch with gracious acceptance repeated this sprightly bit.

The dignified overture of the third Suite in D Major for orchestra put everyone back in proper mood for the full enjoyment of the final number. The familiar air for the G string was heard in the second movement scored for strings, and played with effective pathos. The stolid Gavottes, the bouncing brief Bourree and rollicking Gigue were all handled with spirited constraint by Mr. Munch and his orchestra, truly music that "sparkles in the sun." The audience applauded long and vociferously, and seemingly with no desire to leave after such an outstanding performance.—M. deB. B.

VOGUE
NEW YORK CITY
JUN 1956

GOSSIPY MEMO ON TRAVEL

Music under New England stars

Late gaiety in Spain

An English hideaway

Taking the cure in France

The Tanglewood festival opens at Lenox, Massachusetts, in the Berkshire Hills on July 4. These Boston Symphony concerts—Koussevitsky's fabulous legacy to music in America—attract around ten thousand people a night. Other diversions are: top jazz concerts at Music Inn; the Lenox Library with a fine selection of records as well as books (a small concert hall attached); the stately house Edith Wharton built from designs by Sir Christopher Wren; the Stockbridge Playhouse and the dance at Jacob's Pillow.
During this time it is hard to find good accommodations. Those in the know, and who know members, try for the Edwardian comfort of the Lenox Club. And there is the sumptuous Elm Court, once the house of an old-guard summer resident; now the brocade-hung rooms have such guests as conductor Charles Munch.
Nearby, in the elm-lined village of Stockbridge, is the large wooden Red Lion Inn (well-run but noisy until the new truck route is finished), and Miss Buck's, a nice boarding house (but few baths).
Further away is the pretty village of South Egremont—the Egremont Tavern is a small New England inn, its annex an old gristmill by a mountain brook.

Food and drink in Madrid: The Samba has probably the best flamenco dancers in Madrid; they hit fever pitch at about three. No food here, and the prices are fairly high (Arturo Soria 175). There is quiet steak at Henry's (Villanueva 2), an American restaurant run by an American. An aged and simpatico zither player imparts a sufficient quota of non-U.S. atmosphere to erase one's guilt feelings about seeking out American food abroad.

In England's New Forest is a small village, Bucklers Hard, that runs down to the Hamble River (from which some of Nelson's ships were launched for the Battle of Trafalgar). A charming, quiet inn, the Master Builder's House, has only a few rooms, but heavenly views. Now owned by the son of the well-known cricketer Commander C. B. Fry, it has gained a high reputation for food and wine.

Just outside the cool city of Bogotá, Colombia, lies the Bogotá Country Club, its grounds ending at the foot of the Andes. Besides the tennis courts and golf links, there are artificial lakes, gardens overrun with delphiniums, closed terraces, a heated indoor swimming pool framed in tender green tropical ferns. Turkish baths, and an immense dining room where dances are held twice a week. For the sporting set, the Club has a tavern where the drinks are served with banana chips and fried slivers of pork. The food is excellent and exceedingly expensive.

Vichy: This once fashionable spa has returned to its former glory, and a social life as busy as Newport's parallels the rigid water and diet regimens. (Many Europeans take a cure every year.) Parks are laid out with neat flower beds, bands play in pergolas, and down the central square, under a long, glassed-in pavilion, are fountains gushing the waters, where everyone brings his own cup, to drink. There are extravagant casinos with gambling, dancing, many excellent restaurants, good golf, good tennis, and lovely surrounding countryside. Hotels are run for the cures (which take at least three weeks), offering such attentions as being awakened with a glass of the water prescribed by a doctor on arrival; one's special diet served in the dining room (even a sliced tomato presented in the grand manner of a fine meal); beds always left turned down, ready for frequent naps. Among the many excellent hotels is the Pavillon Sévigné, once Madame de Sévigné's château.

Travellers know: To rent in London, for a month or a year, a flat, a house, a mews cottage, equipped with well-trained servants, theatre tickets bought, car hired, fire lighted upon arrival, write Jeanne Pelham Ltd., 22a Motcomb Street, London, S.W. 1. (Cable address for this luxury: Luxlon)....
A special European service that will get: for businessmen, anything from office space to a secretary; for families, a running house, a nurse, a school; for travellers, a guide, a car, reservations for anywhere—write Howarth Services, 226 East 70th Street, New York 21, N. Y....
For a quiet night's sleep, at London's Claridges Hotel, try for rooms overlooking the Mews. For a view all over Rome, at the Hassler Hotel, try for top-floor rooms with balconies.

[84]

SHED CONCERTS AT TANGLEWOOD START FRIDAY

Week's Programs Begin Wednesday With Brass Ensemble Recital

Lenox, July 16—The entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate on Friday evening, July 20, the annual series of 12 weekend concerts of the Berkshire Festival in the 6000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood. In 1955 the Shed concerts attracted an audience of 108,336, or an average attendance of 9028 persons.

A feature of the Shed series will be first Tanglewood performances of four symphonic works commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during this, its 75th Anniversary season from Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi, who is guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer; from Aaron Copland, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston. The American compositions will be played in Europe this fall when the Boston Symphony undertakes a five-and-a-half week tour of 13 countries, including a week in the USSR.

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, July 18-22, comprises a joint recital by the Boston Symphony's Brass Ensemble and by Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw and pianist Ralph Berkowitz, on Wednesday evening, July 18, at 8.30, in the Theater-Concert Hall and in the Music Shed a program of Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel and Brahms by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Dr. Munch, July 20, at 8.30 p. m.; Dr. Munch conducting a program featuring the first act of "Die Walkure," sung in concert version by Miss Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa, and basso James Pease, July 21, at 8.30 p. m.; and a program of Rossini, Bartok and Schubert led by Pierre Monfeux, a regular guest on the Tanglewood podium since 1951, Sunday afternoon, July 22, at 2.30.

A bonus for Festival patrons will be the first of four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a. m., July 21, for which the nominal charge is made of $1, for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund. The complete programs are:

Wednesday, July 18, 8.30 p. m., Theater-Concert Hall:
Gabrieli...Canzon Septimi Toni, No. 1, for Double Quartet of Bass
Bonelli...Toccata from "Ricercari e Canzoni"
Poulenc...Sonata for Horn, Trumpet and Trombone
Berezowsky.....Brass Suite for Seven Instruments. The Brass Ensemble of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Roger Voisin.
Wagner...Five Songs (Texts by Mathilde Wesendonck)
Richard Strauss .....Four Songs
Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

Friday, July 20, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra:
Berlioz...Overture, The Roman Carnival
Debussy....Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun
Ravel.. "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2
Brahms...Symphony No. 2, in D major
Charles Munch, Conductor.

Saturday, July 21, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra:
Barber .....Adagio for Strings
Martinu.... "Fantasies Symphoniques"
Wagner..... "Die Walkure," Act 1
Soloists: Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; James Pease, bass. Charles Munch, Conductor.

Sunday, July 22, 2.30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra:
Rossini..."Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri"
Bartok .....Concerto for Orchestra
Schubert ..Symphony No. 7, in C major
Pierre Monteux, Conductor

Service Club Notes

Kiwanis Club—Wednesday, 12.15 p. m., Wendell-Sherwood Hotel; speaker, Capt. Raymond F. Coakley of the Pittsfield Police Department, who will conduct the members on an imaginary trip to the police station.

Lions Club — Wednesday 6.30 p. m., Lanesboro Camp.

Rotary Club — Thursday, 12.15 p. m., Wendell-Sherwood Hotel; speaker, Ralph Berkowitz, pianist, artist, and Dean of the Berkshire Music Center.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

COLUMBIA, S. C. STATE
JUN 17 1956

BPWC Sponsors Tanglewood Trip

Berkshire Playhouse Included in All-Day Outing

The Springfield Business and Professional Women's Club is planning a trip to Tanglewood and the Berkshire Playhouse on Saturday, July 28. The Boston Symphony Orchestra is featured in a Koussevitzky Memorial program under the direction of Charles Munch. Pianist Rudolf Serkin will be the guest soloist.

Seats have been reserved at the Playhouse for the matinee performance of "Heartbreak House" with Carmen Matthews. A chartered bus will leave the First Church at Court Square promptly at 7.45 a. m. Members are asked to take box lunch. Reservations should be made by Saturday, July 21, with Miss Eva Flagg or Miss Mary Kelley.

Guests will be welcome.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908
JUL 17 1956

SPBW Members Plan Trip to Tanglewood

Will Also Attend Matinee at Berkshire Playhouse

Members of the Springfield Business and Professional Women's Club are planning a trip to Tanglewood and Berkshire Playhouse Saturday, the 28th. Boston Symphony Orchestra will present a memorial program to the late Serge Koussevitzky, with Rudolf Serkin featured as guest pianist.

The group will attend the matinee performance at the Playhouse with Carmen Matthews appearing in "Heartbreak House."

A chartered bus will leave First Church, Court St., promptly at 7.45 a. m., and members are asked to provide their own box lunch. Reservations should be made by Saturday with Miss Eva Flagg or Miss Mary Kelley. Guests are invited.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Record (e)
CHELSEA, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 5,384
JUL 17 1956

Berkshire Music Festival Opens

Inspiring, relaxing music, amid the cool breezes of the beautiful Berkshire Hills is yours by simply visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival, at enchanting Tanglewood, this weekend, beginning ~~July~~ 20.

Friday evening s 8:30 performance, according to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, will feature works on Brahms, Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel. On Saturday, at the same time, a night of Wagner is in store for visitors to this music-lover's paradise. Sunday, the performance begins at 2:30 p.m. Works of Rossini, Bartok, as well as Schubert's Symphony No. 7 in C major, are scheduled.

Bring the entire family along for a memorable weekend in the Berkshires. Swimming, fishing, hiking, boating, picknicking and recreational facilities galore dot the natural playgrounds that make up the Hills.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and the Festival, is located on Route 7, south of Pittsfield.

[85]

VISITING MOSCOW

U. S. and Russia Cooperating In Tour by Boston Symphony

BOSTON, Mass., June 16—(Special)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra has received and immediately accepted a formal invitation from the U.S.S.R. to include Soviet Russia in the tour of Europe the symphony will make during August and September.

The orchestra is also receiving the help of both the governments of the United States and the Soviet Union in financing visits to Moscow and Leningrad.

The invitation from the Ministry of Culture in Moscow was transmitted by Yuri Gouk, Cultural Attache of the Soviet Embassy in Washington, to the Orchestra's manager, Thomas D. Perry, Jr.

The Boston Symphony under the direction of Charles Munch will be the first American symphony orchestra to perform in Russia. Last August during the Geneva Conference the Orchestra, through the President of its Board of Trustees, Henry B. Cabot, made known its willingness to include a visit to the Soviet Republic during its projected tour of Europe in the autumn of 1956.

The Russian invitation to the Boston Symphony Orchestra is to spend six days of its autumn tour within the Soviet border, and although details are not yet worked out, concerts are planned in Leningrad and Moscow. It is understood that the U.S.S.R., as it did in the case of "Porgy and Bess" when the Gershwin folk opera performed in Russia last January, will assume the expenses of transportation of the 104 members of the Orchestra, Music Director Charles Munch and the Orchestra's staff and equipment from Helsinki, where a concert is planned on September 4; and to its next date, in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia, on September 11. The U.S.S.R. will also pay a stipend for the concerts given within the Soviet territory.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's tour of Europe, announced last January, is to be made in cooperation with the International Exchange Program of the American National Theatre and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the State Department to assist American performing artists to tour abroad, to help cover the cost of trans-Atlantic transportation by air and to help defray deficits to the Orchestra from concerts abroad. Private contributions have also been secured to help with the costs of the tour.

Both Mr. Cabot and Mr. Perry expressed their gratification, when the Soviet invitation was announced, for the cooperation of both governments in making this important cultural visit possible.

In December, Soviet violinist, David Oistrakh, was guest soloist at a Boston Symphony Pension Fund Concert. He made a recording with Mr. Munch and the Orchestra for RCA Victor and is known to have brought back to Russia high praise for the American orchestra.

The European tour of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will take place under the direction of Charles Munch, its Music Director, at the conclusion of the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. whose dates are July 4 through August 12. Mr. Munch has invited his friend and colleague, Pierre Monteux, once regular conductor of the Boston Symphony, to share the concerts abroad.

The Lively Arts

By Milton R. Bass

AUDIENCES sometimes steal the show from the performers. The verb steal is used advisedly because many of these people deserve jail sentences for the way they ruin the enjoyment of others. It only takes one jerk to pull the happiness out of a situation, and two jerks can cause a riot.

American audiences, as a whole, are too polite. They sit through the worst drivel imaginable most of the time without raising one scream of protest and usually wait for an intermission before running for their lives. Europeans are not so placid in their reactions. They whistle loudly at poor performances and are liable to tear up the joint if things get too dull for their taste. On the other hand, they are apt to be much more rapturous in their appreciation of good work than are the Americans.

* * *

I MUCH PREFER the good old U.S. approach in these matters because booing upsets me and cheering embarrasses me. A light, polite applause can be even more devastating than shouted abuse, and a solid burst of handclaps informs any artist that you love him.

Rote applause to me is just as annoying as the canned applause and laughter they use on radio and television. Why is it necessary to clap your hands when a well-known actor first appears on the stage? All it does is break the mood of the play. Why is it necessary to applaud after each solo in a jazz concert? All it does is drown out the bridge of the following soloist. Is it that people get so emotionally worked up they have to vent their energy or bust? Let them bust!

* * *

AUDIENCES seem to adjust their personalities to the event they are attending and their preconceived ideas are sometimes frightening to contemplate. When attending Tanglewood, they will dress conservatively and will act with funereal decorum. The men go so far as to wear suitcoats matching the pants and white shirts with ties. The same group will then do a whirling about-face and come to the jazz concerts in windbreakers, open sport shirts and a stomach full of martinis.

There is a minority which still associates jazz with the roaring speakeasies of the twenties. They feel you have to be half in the bag before attending a jazz concert and then you have to whoop it up when you get there. Saxophonist Paul Desmond of the Dave Brubeck group was forced to move his position on the stage at their recent concert here because a drunk in the first row was giving him a hard time. In a night club the musician can always say "You can go home now, your cage is clean" or some similar remark, but there is always a bouncer around to act as referee for the repartee. All we bounce around here are balls.

* * *

IT IS the responsibility of the management to protect innocent listeners from the onslaughts of the drunk, disorderly or insane. It can usually be done around here with little bloodshed. The success of the officious young guides at Tanglewood in browbeating guests is always a wonder to behold. These Ivy League storm troopers could cow Hans Schmidt into skimmed milk. However, they are just trying to do their job as they see it and the important thing is they keep things quiet.

If wishes were bullets there would be a lot of dead people piled around me. For instance, there are the people who eat popcorn in the row behind you and spit the kernels into the back of your neck. Or the old people in the movies who discuss the picture in loud voices. Or the groups of young toughs who enter a movie theater like Comanches hitting a wagon trail. Or the parents who bring children to an event which brings out the noise in them. Or the people who come to something because they think it is something they ought to come to. Just one look at their faces is enough to spoil a whole evening.

* * *

WHEN YOU get right down to it this list just about covers everybody who goes to anything. And without audiences there would be no performances. Therefore, ladies and gentlemen, I withdraw the curse made at midnight over the blood of a fresh-killed dog while the seven spirits were chanting the black magic words. Bring the bottle and we'll all have fun.

LEAD BOSTON SYMPHONY. Pierre Monteux, left, veteran orchestral and opera conductor, and Dr. Charles Munch, Boston Symphony conductor and Berkshire Festival musical director, in "Tanglewood." Monteux and Dr. Munch will conduct both in "Tanglewood" and on the forthcoming European tour of the orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908

JUL 17 1956

Noted Italian Composer Very Busy at Tanglewood

Goffredo Petrassi Will Have Concerto, Opera, Madrigal and Other Compositions Performed At Berkshire Music Festival This Summer

Lenox, July 17—Goffredo Petrassi, the distinguished Italian composer currently on his first teaching visit to the United States as this summer's guest instructor of composition at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, was born at Zagarolo near Rome on July 16, 1904. His Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and performed for the first time by this orchestra in Boston and on tour last December, will receive its Tanglewood premiere at a Berkshire Festival concert on Friday evening, the 27th, Charles Munch conducting. In addition, his opera, "Morte Dell' Aria," composed in 1949-1950, will be performed by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center on Saturday afternoon, the 28th. Petrassi himself will conduct his 1948 composition, "Sonata Da Camera," at the concert of contemporary music under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation on the 23d, and Tanglewood's choral department will present his 1940-1941 work, "Coro di Morti," a dramatic madrigal for male chorus, three pianos, brass, double basses and percussion at Thursday concert by the student symphony orchestra.

GOFFREDO PETRASSI

Petrassi had experience in music before he systematically studied it, for he worked in a music shop and not until 1925 at the age of 21 did he take his first lessons in composition. He studied with Di Donato and in the class of Alessandro Bustini in the Santa Cecilia Conservatory in Rome and also took organ practice with Rienzi and Germani. In 1939 he became a professor of composition at the Santa Cecilia Academy and has remained in that position ever since. He recently completed a term as president of the International Society of Contemporary Music.

Although Petrassi's works were at first basically diatonic, he has arrived at using the 20-tone technique in a manner that is not radical and is wholly personal in expression. His critics have noted the influence of Hindemith and Stravinsky in his work, an influence needless to say almost inescapable in contemporary composition.

John N. Burk, program annotator for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has written: "It could be said that the existence of the artist Petrassi has been made possible by the lively interest in instrumental, even in non-delineative, music in his own country today. The present 'symphonic Italy' intensively revives and nurtures the rich store of their own 17th century music, the works of Vivaldi, Corelli and a host of others. The popularity of purely instrumental music all but disappeared in Italy through the last two centuries while opera prevailed, with its vocal emphasis and eventually with its strength of verismo in Puccini, Mascagni and their fellows. Pioneers such as Sgambati (born 1841), Martucci (1856), Bossi (1861), and Sinigaglia (1868), whose instrumental works were a complement to their theatrical efforts, were in most cases more notable for what they started in others than for what they themselves composed. They were followed by a generation of conscious zealots in whom the theatre was kept incidental to the purely instrumental field: Respighi (born 1879), Pizzetti, (1880), Malipiero (1882), Casella (1883), Rieti (1898). Petrassi acknowledges a considerable debt to Casella who, like Malipiero, dedicated himself to the cause of pure neo-classicism. Since Petrassi's earliest compositions, he has nevertheless abandoned the neo-classical forms to seek a more liberal mode of expression, adhering to contemporary realism."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Telegram-News (e)
LYNN, Mass.
Democrat
Circ. 21,784

JUL 17 1956

Clem Norton Says—

HIRE

Fly to Miami and hire an auto at the airport. That's what ex-Gov. Dever of Massachusetts did last winter. 200,000 autos are rented out today in this country, as against an estimated 43,000 ten years ago. Greyhound, the nation's largest bus line is getting into the field. Hopes to have 10,000 autos and trucks to rent by the end of this year. 3000 companies lease out autos exclusively. The business has grown by leaps and bounds.

SPORTS

Why we fear the Soviets in the 1956 Australian Olympics. Their Amazonian women hold at least 10 world track and field records. Distance runner Vladimir Kuc, hurdler Jurri Lituev, hammer thrower Mikhail Krivonosiv are considered tops. Gymnastics is a Russian monopoly. Their soccer teams as a rule lick anything in Europe. They are strong in boxing, weight lifting and shooting. They have beaten the British at rowing. The Canadians at ice-hockey. The Scandinavians at skiing. At Helsinki, in 1952, they threw a scare into the U.S. in its own game of basketball.

POLYGAMY

Here is one of the causes of trouble in the past in French Morocco. Ismail, a former head of the Moroccan empire, had at least 549 wives and when he died he left 800 sons who fought for power among themselves, hence there was chaos for years. Ismail left no daughters, for they were strangled at birth. When Louis XIV of France sent his first ambassador, old Ismail asked for the hand of one of the king's daughters, to make his 550th wife, but this was refused. He had courage.

ORCHESTRA

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is one of the world's top musical outfits. The Soviets specifically asked the U.S. State Department to allow this orchestra to visit Russia, so it will.

MISSILES

Driving through New Jersey, a brilliant green flash appeared in the sky. Then followed a bright orange flame and a thundering reverberation. What was it? A routine testing of new rocket motors by Reaction Motors, Inc., who have been in the business for 15 years. Wake up! We are in the rocket age. Over 17,000 scientists are busy on rocket study today in this land, the end-product of which is the guided missile. General Tire & Rubber is in this line.

Our Berkshires

Music Repels the Hot Dog

By William S. Annin

AS I HAVE hinted before, I am not much given to order or method, and the vagaries of my filing system nearly caused me to fail to give my readers a vital piece of information. Even as it is, the information is somewhat late. It is that, for the first time, a National Hot Dog Month has been officially proclaimed, the month being none other than July, 1956. Who the officials are who have designated it, the communication I have received does not divulge, though it tells about everything else, including the hot dog's history.

* * *

THE MAIN ingredient of the hot dog is the frankfurter, which is named for Frankfort-on-Main, instead of Frankfort-on-Oder as I had previously supposed, because of its characteristic smell. It was, it seems, the collaborative effort of the local Butchers' Guild and the legend is that its shape was suggested by the lines of the Dachshund.

However, the American hot dog is of much later invention and dates back only to the Louisiana Purchase Exposition of 1904. The co-inventors were a pair of concessionaires named Sigmund and Otto. Sigmund was doing a big business in roasted sausages which came off the stove so hot he let the customers spear them with forks. He lost so many forks that he tried supplying gloves as a substitute, but the cost of the gloves also proved prohibitive. It was at this point that Otto, a baker, conceived the idea of inclosing the sausage in a bun designed for the purpose. The two have been associated ever since.

* * *

THE HOT DOG knows no geographic limitations, but there is one report I would like to have checked. It is that New Englanders will eat them raw. Now of course my experience with New England is largely confined to Berkshire County, which admittedly is not all New England, but I have yet to see anyone eat one raw. Of course this region is higher and cooler than much of New England, and perhaps along the seashore people just put them out to get a little sunburn, but around here everyone that I know cooks them. Still, if people will eat raw pork at the risk of getting trichinosis, I suppose they might eat raw, or cold dogs. Not I, however.

Otherwise it can be grilled, boiled, broiled, fried, barbecued, steamed, stewed or electrically cooked. During this summer the consumption will average 16 dogs per capita, which at an average length of six inches, means eight feet of hot dog for each person. On a national basis this is enough hot dog mileage to go to the moon and the equivalent of a billion pounds in weight; on a local basis, the hot dogs eaten here would stretch from Pittsfield to Philadelphia.

* * *

WHILE the hot dog is a national tradition and a national institution, it continues to spread. Long a favorite at drive-ins, picnics, ball parks, back yards, beaches, circuses and lunch-eonettes, and recently a commodity handled by a vending machine, it is being taken up and adapted by other peoples. In Finland it is being made of reindeer meat; in Moslem territory, religious dietary requirements cause it to be made of lamb; in other regions it is made of antelope or even whale meat. It seems to be only a matter of time when it will be taken up in Moscow and the Russians will claim to have invented it.

In fact, the only element that seems so far to have kept hot dogs at a distance is music. I have never heard of them being in evidence at the Metropolitan Opera House or at Symphony Hall in Boston. Come to think of it, I cannot recall ever seeing any eaten at Tanglewood, although the restaurant sells frankfurters and beans by the plate. This omission I applaud heartily. Much as I approve of the hot dog as a national institution, it does not seem to me that the Tanglewood audience munching hot dogs would add to either the atmosphere or the music. In fact it is encouraging to think of Tanglewood as the bulwark that hurls back the advance of the hot dog and commands, "Thus far can you go and no farther."

[86]

Capacity Crowd At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., July 15.—The Bach-Mozart concerts, which opened the first portion of the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, ended Sunday afternoon with a week-end attendance of 10,479, compared with 7,643 the previous week end, which was hard hit by inclement weather.

Sunday afternoon's audience of 3,741 and Saturday night's crowd of 4,530 filled the theater concert hall to overflowing.

Saturday night's concert by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony, with Charles Munch conducting, proved to be the most popular of the six Bach-Mozart performances when William Kroll, violinist, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, appeared as soloists.

The chamber orchestra opened Saturday evening's concert with Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major, followed by the Violin Concert in F Major with Mr. Kroll as soloist. After intermission Mrs. Dwyer captivated her audience playing the flute solo in Bach's Suite No. 2 in B Minor. The evening's performance was concluded with Bach's Suite No. 3 in D Major.

Sunday afternoon's concert was devoted to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" in which the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra was assisted by the festival chorus of students at the Berkshire Music Center, trained by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department, and five soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

Full Orchestra Is At Tanglewood Now

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Lenox move into high gear this week as the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra of 106 pieces assembles at Tanglewood under the baton of Chas. Munch, Music Director. Having completed their two weeks of free Esplanade concerts on the Charles River under the leadership of Arthur Fiedler, 70 players of the Boston Symphony move to the Berkshires to join the 36 principals who have been teaching the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, and performing as a chamber orchestra in the fortnight of "Bach-Mozart" concerts that traditionally opens the Festival.

The entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate this Friday evening the annual series of twelve week-end concerts in the huge 6,000 seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, which is open on three sides so the music may spill out on the spacious lawns where additional thousands of music-lovers assemble under the tall pines. In 1955 the Shed concerts attracted an audience of 108,336, or an average attendance of 9,028 persons.

This third week of Berkshire Festival concerts begins with a joint recital by the Boston Symphony's Brass Ensemble and by Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw and pianist Ralph Berkowitz, on Wednesday evening in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall; followed on Friday evening by a program of Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel and Brahms in the Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Dr. Munch, then on Saturday, Dr. Munch will conduct a program featuring the first act of "Die Walkure", sung in concert version by Miss Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert DaCosta, and basso James Pease; and Sunday afternoon there will be a program of Rossini, Bartok and Schubert led by Pierre Monteux.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p. m.; the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p. m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

A bonus for Festival patrons will be the first of four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a. m. for which a very small charge is made for the the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

At Tanglewood This Week

Margaret Harshaw

Miss Harshaw, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, who made her Tanglewood debut in 1955, returns to the Berkshire Festival for two concerts this week.

On Wednesday, July 18 (8:30 p.m., Theatre-Concert Hall), she will sing the Wesendonck Song Cycle of Wagner and a group of Richard Strauss songs, on the same program as a chamber music concert by The Brass Ensemble of the Boston Symphony.

On Saturday, July 21 (8:30 p.m. Music Shed), the soprano will be teamed with Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa and basso James Pease in a concert version of Act 1 of "Die Walkure", with Chas. Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

JUL 18 1956

Petrovec

MARGARET HARSHAW, Metropolitan Opera soprano, who will sing Wagner's Wesendonck Song Cycle this evening at 8:30 in the Theater Concert Hall at Tanglewood, goes over the score at rehearsal with Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center. The opera star will appear on the same program with the Brass Ensemble of the Boston Symphony tonight with Roger Voisin conducting.

Joint Recital At Festival This Evening

TANGLEWOOD—The third week of concerts in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1956 Berkshire Festival will get under way this evening at 8:30 with a joint recital in the Theater-Concert Hall by the orchestra's brass ensemble under the direction of Roger Voisin, and by Metropolitan Opera soprano, Margaret Harshaw, with Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

Donating Services

Miss Harshaw and Mr. Berkowitz are donating their services for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center.

Members of the Brass Ensemble are Roger Voisin and Armando Ghitalla, trumpets; Harold Meek and Paul Keaney, French horns; Joseph Orosz and Kauko Kahila, trombones; and K. Vinal Smith, tuba. William Gibson, first trombone of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will assist. The group will perform the Canzon Septimi Toni No. 1 for Double Brass Quartet by Giovanni Gabrieli (1557-1612), and a toccata from the first book of "Ricercari e Canzoni" by Gabrieli's contemporary, the 16th century composer, Aurelio Bonelli (1531-1612), along with two works by contemporary composers: the Sonata for Horn, Trumpet and Trombone by Francis Poulenc (1899-) and the Brass Suite for Seven Instruments by the late Nicolai Berezowsky (1900-1953).

After the intermission Miss Harshaw and Mr. Berkowitz will perform the Five Songs to texts by Mathilde Wesendonck by Wagner (Der Engel; Stehe still; Im Treibhaus; Schmerzen and Traume) and four songs by the late Richard Strauss (Befreit; Nichts; Ruhe, meine Seele! and Kling). Miss Harshaw made her Tanglewood debut last summer, singing in a concert version of "Fidelio" with the Boston Symphony.

Move to Shed Friday

On Friday evening Charles Munch and the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform the first of this season's 12 Berkshire Festival concerts in the Music Shed. For Friday Dr. Munch has chosen a program comprised of Berlioz' Overture, "The Roman Carnival;" Debussy's Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun; the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe;" and Brahms' Second Symphony. A new recording by Dr. Munch and the Orchestra of the Brahms Symphony has just been released by RCA-Victor.

Saturday evening, Dr. Munch conducts a concert performance of Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkure" with Miss Harshaw as Sieglinde, Albert Da Costa as Siegmund, and James Pease as Hunding; also, Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and the Tanglewood premiere of Brohuslav Martinu's Fantasies Symphonique.

Monteux Sunday

On Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux makes his first appearance of this season at Tanglewood as guest conductor in a program made up of works by Rossini, Bartok and Schubert.

Remaining seats for tonight's concert, as well as for the 12 Shed concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office and telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Chamber music. The Brass Ensemble under Roger Voisin. Theater - Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,259

JUL 18 1956

PASSAGE TO RUSSIA: Asst. Manager Gail Rector of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, center, signs agreement with a KLM Royal Dutch Airlines agent, Dolph Bulterman, to fly the 106-man orchestra and its staff for a concert tour in 15 West European cities as well as Leningrad, Moscow, and Prague. Standing, is Thomas D. Perry Jr. of 66 Burditt Avenue, Hingham, manager of the first American orchestra to play in the Soviet Union since 1917.

Press (e)
BRISTOL, Conn.
Independent Republican
Circ. 12,670

JUL 18 1956

Music Festival This Week-End At Tanglewood

Inspiring, relaxing music, floating on the cool breezes that play in the rolling vistas of the beautiful Berkshire Hills — all this, and more, is yours by simply visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival, at enchanting Tanglewood, this weekend, beginning July 20th.

Friday evening's 8:30 performance, according to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, will feature works of Brahms, Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel. On Saturday, at the same time, a night of Wagner is in store for visitors to this music lovers paradise. Sunday, the performance begins at 2:30 p.m. Works of Rossini, Bartok, as well as Schubert's Symphony No. 7 in C major, are scheduled.

Bring the entire family along for a memorable weekend in the Berkshires. Swimming, fishing, hiking, boating picnicking and recreational facilities galore dot the natural playgrounds that make up the Hills.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and the Festival, is located on Route 7, south of Pittsfield. Main east-west routes 2 - 9 and 20, all connect with Route 7.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

JUL 18 1956

Tanglewood Program

3d Concert Week Opening at Lenox

The third week of concerts in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will get under way tonight at 8:30 with a joint recital in Tanglewood's intimate Theatre-Concert Hall by the Orchestra's Brass Ensemble under the direction of Roger Voisin, and by Metropolitan Opera soprano, Margaret Harshaw, with Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

Miss Harshaw and Mr. Berkowitz are donating their services for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival.

On Friday evening, Charles Munch and the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform the first of this season's 12 Berkshire Festival concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. For Friday, Dr. Munch has chosen a program comprised of Berlioz' Overture, "The Roman Carnival;" Debussy's Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun; the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe;" and Brahms' Second Symphony.

Saturday evening, Dr. Munch conducts a concert performance of Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkure" with Miss Harshaw as Sieglinde, Albert Da Costa as Siegmund, and James Pease as Hunding; also, Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and the Tanglewood premiere of Brohuslav Martinu's Fantasies Symphonique.

On Sunday afternoon, Pierre Monteux makes his first appearance of this season at Tanglewood as guest conductor in a program of works by Rossini, Bartok and Schubert.

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through Aug. 12

Berkshire Festival

BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

Wed., July 18 (Theatre) at 8:30, MARGARET HARSHAW; THE BRASS ENSEMBLE

SHED CONCERTS by the BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

FRI., July 20, at 8:30—BERLIOZ—DEBUSSY—RAVEL—BRAHMS (MUNCH)
SAT., July 21, at 8:30—BARBER—MARTINU—WAGNER (MUNCH)
SUN., July 22, at 2:30—ROSSINI—BARTOK—SCHUBERT (MONTEUX)

Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Admission $2)

TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Phone LEnox 600

RCA Victor Records
Baldwin Piano

[87]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
FRAMINGHAM, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 11,200
JUL 18 1956

Music Festival At Tanglewood

LENOX, July 18 — Inspiring, relaxing music, floating on the cool breezes that play in the rolling vistas of the beautiful Berkshire Hills— all this, and more is yours by simply visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival, at enchanting Tanglewood, this weekend, beginning July 20.

Friday evening's 8:30 performance, according to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, will feature works on Brahms, Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel. On Saturday, at the same time, a night of Wagner is in store for visitors to this music lovers paradise. Sunday, the performance begins at 2:30 p.m. Works of Rossini, Bartok, as well as Schubert's Symphony No. 7 in C major, are scheduled.

Brass Group, Soprano In Berkshire Concert

The third week of concerts in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1956 festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will get under way this evening at 8:30 p.m. with a joint recital in Tanglewood's intimate theatre-concert hall by the orchestra's brass ensemble under the direction of Roger Voisin, and by Metropolitan Opera soprano, Margaret Harshaw, with Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

Miss Harshaw and Mr. Berkowitz are donating their services for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its concerts of the Berkshire Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928
JUL 18 1956

Joint Recital At Tanglewood This Evening

The third week of concerts in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, will get underway this evening at 8:30 p.m. with a joint recital in Tanglewood's intimate Theatre-Concert Hall by the orchestra's brass ensemble under the direction of Roger Voisin, and by Metropolitan Opera soprano, Margaret Harshaw, with Ralph Berkowitz, piano. Miss Harshaw and Mr. Berkowitz are donating their services for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its concerts of the Berkshire Festival.

Members of the brass ensemble are Roger Voisin and Armando Ghitalla, trumpets; Harold Meek and Paul Keaney, French horns; Joseph Orosz and Kauko Kahila, trombones; and K. Vinal Smith, tuba. William Gibson, first trombone of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will assist. The group will perform the Canzon Septimi Toni No. 1 for Double Brass Quartet by Giovanni Gabrieli (1557-1612), and a Toccata from the first book of "Ricercari e Canzoni" by Gabrieli's contemporary, the 16th century composer, Aurelio Bonelli (1531-1612), along with two works by contemporary composers: the Sonato for Horn, Trumpet and Trombone by Francis Poulenc (1899-) and the Brass Suite for Seven Instruments by the late Nicolai Berezowsky (1900-1953).

After the intermission Miss Harshaw and Mr. Berkowitz will perform the Five Songs to text by Mathilde Wesendonck by Wagner (Den Engel; Stehe still; Im Treibhaus; Schmerzen and Traume) and four songs by the late Richard Strauss (Befreit; Nichts; Ruhe, meine Seele! and Kling).

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908
JUL 18 1956

BRASS GROUP TO BE HEARD THIS EVENING

Orchestra Ensemble, Margaret Harshaw, Met. Soprano, at Tanglewood

Lenox, July 18—The third week of concerts in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, will get under way this evening at 8.30 p. m. with a joint recital in Tanglewood's intimate Theater-concert hall by the orchestra's brass ensemble under the direction of Roger Voisin, and by Metropolitan Opera soprano, Margaret Harshaw, with Ralph Berkowitz, piano. Miss Harshaw and Mr. Berkowitz are donating their services for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its concerts of the Berkshire Festival.

Brass Ensemble

Members of the Brass Ensemble are Roger Voisin and Armando Ghitalla, trumpets; Harold Meek and Paul Keaney, French horns; Joseph Orosz and Kaukò Kahila, trombones; and K. Vinal Smith, tuba. William Gibson, first trombone of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will assist. The group will perform the Canzon Septimi Toni No. 1 for Double Brass Quartet by Giovanni Gabrieli (1557-1612), and a toccata from the first book of "Ricercar e Canzoni" by Gabrieli's contemporary, the 16th century composer, Aurelio Bonelli (1531-1612), along with two works by contemporary composers: the Sonata for Horn, Trumpet and Trombone by Francis Poulenc (1899-) and the Brass Suite for Seven Instruments by the late Nicolai Berezowsky (1900-1953).

After the intermission Miss Harshaw and Mr. Berkowitz will perform the Five Songs to texts by Mathilde Wesendonck by Wagner (Der Engel; Stehe still; Im Treibhaus; Schmerzen and Traume) and four songs by the late Richard Strauss (Befreit; Nichts; Ruhe, meine Seele! and Kling). Miss Harshaw made her Tanglewood debut to notable acclaim last summer, singing in a concert version of "Fidelio" with the Boston Symphony.

Shed Concert Friday

On Friday evening Charles Munch and the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform the first of this season's 12 Berkshire Festival concerts in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood. For Friday Dr. Munch has chosen a program comprised of Berlioz' Overture, "The Roman Carnival"; Debussy's Prelude to the "Afternoon of a Faun;" the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe"; and Brahms' Second Symphony. A new recording by Dr. Munch and the Orchestra of the Brahms Symphony has just been released by RCA-Victor.

Saturday evening Dr. Munch conducts a concert performance of Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkure" with Miss Harshaw as "Sieglinde," Albert Da Costa as "Siegmund," and James Pease as "Hunding"; also, Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and the Tanglewood premiere of Brohuslav Martinu's "Fantasies Symphonique."

On Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux makes his first appearance of this season at Tanglewood as guest conductor in a program made up of works by Rossini, Bartok and Schubert.

Remaining seats for tonight's concert, as well as for the 12 Shed concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra July 20 to Aug. 12, are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office and telephone reservations are accepted —Lenox 600. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

Music

Brass, Harshaw Share Tanglewood Stage

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE PROGRAM in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood last night was evenly divided between the "Brass Ensemble," under the direction of Roger Voisin, and Soprano Margaret Harshaw, assisted at the piano by Ralph Berkowitz. It was the third in the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts and marked the completion of half of the schedule in this series.

The Ensemble is composed of Boston Symphony Orchestra wind players and includes Voisin and Armando Ghitalla, trumpets; Harry Shapiro, who substituted on mere hours' notice for indisposed Harold Meek, and Paul Keaney, French horns; Josef Orosz and Kauka Kahila, trombones; and K. Vinal Smith, tuba. Trombonist William Gibson was an assisting artist.

* * *

THEIR PROGRAM, in turn, was divided between two 16th century Italian composers, Giovanni Gabrieli and Bonelli, whose works showed the beauty of wind instruments in polyphonic ensemble and specifically, the wealthy tonal and broad dynamic competence of last night's group.

Gabrieli's "Canzon Septimi Toni, No. 1," was for double quartet of brass and the octet was separated on the stage to either side where statements and responses were lucidly exposed. The style of these compositions was in the nature of vocal works of that period with which most of us are more familiar, but these men were innovators in matters requiring contrasts and expanding the secular uses of instruments.

* * *

THE POULENC sonata for horns, trumpets and trombones and the Berezowsky suite for seven brass instruments are, of course, centuries later but, by comparison, seem to fritter beauty away and rely on crude humor, in the case of Poulenc, whose trio was written in 1922, and midnight oil, in the case of the late Berezowsky whose suite was written in 1939. The performances were enlivened by a complete palette of resources and skill on the part of the players and the preparation had obviously been careful and experienced.

Miss Harshaw sang two groups: The five Wagner songs on poems of Mathilde Wesendonck and four songs of Richard Strauss: "Befreit," "Nichts," "Ruhe, meine Seele!" and "Kling." The Wesendonck songs date from 1857. Wagner was still alive when Strauss wrote some of the songs Miss Harshaw sang so beautifully last night. There was a musical kinship between them and an implied relation to the "Tristan" days, and the soloist was completely in her element. The power of her voice and its regulation and restraint were lessons in voice control, but she used these attributes only to give form and substance to each song and achieved great success in their accomplishment.

IN THE MORE dramatic choices such as the Wagner "Stehe still" and the Strauss "Kling," she was the heroic opera singer Tanglewood has had the joy of knowing in other seasons and will again have the chance to hear this Saturday night, opening the flood gates of her vocal resources but still maintaining musicianship above vocalism. In the more lyric choices, there was commanding flexibility, splendid diction, and radiant warmth. Mr. Berkowitz was always a thorough part of the production and conspicuously carried through the moods established by Miss Harshaw in the postludes several of the songs permitted.

Brass Ensemble At Tanglewood

The third week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., begins at 8:30 tonight with a concert by the Boston Symphony Brass Ensemble and Margaret Harshaw, soprano, in the Theater-Concert Hall. The instrumentalists, under Roger Voisin's direction, will play sixteenth century and modern music and Miss Harshaw will sing Wagner's five Wesendonck Songs.

The complete Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, will give its first concert in Tanglewood's Music Shed Friday night, playing works by Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel and Brahms. Saturday night's concert will be devoted to Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkuere" and works of Samuel Barber and Bohuslav Martinu. Pierre Monteux will make his first Tanglewood appearance of the season Sunday afternoon.

Boston Herald
July 18, 1956

Voisin, Harshaw In Berkshire Fete

The third week of concerts in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, will get underway this evening at 8:30 p.m. with a joint recital in Tanglewood's intimate Theatre-Concert Hall by the Orchestra's Brass Ensemble under the direction of Roger Voisin, and by Metropolitan Opera soprano, Margaret Harshaw, with Ralph Berkowitz, piano. Miss Harshaw and Mr. Berkowitz are donating their services for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. (The summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its concerts of the Berkshire Festival.)

Members of the Brass Ensemble are Roger Voisin and Armando Ghitalla, trumpets; Harold Meek and Paul Keaney, French horns; Joseph Orosz and Kauko Kahila, trombones; and K. Vinal Smith, tuba. William Gibson, first trombone of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will assist. The group will perform the Canzon Septimi Toni No. 1 for Double Brass Quartet by Giovanni Gabrieli (1557-1612), and a Toccata from the first book of "Ricercari e Canzoni" by Gabrieli's contemporary, the 16th century composer, Aurelio Bonelli (1531-1612), along with two works by contemporary composers: the Sonata for Horn, Trumpet and Trombone by Francis Poulenc (1899-) and the Brass Suite for Seven Instruments by the late Nicolai Berezowsky (1900-1953).

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
FRAMINGHAM, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 11,200
JUL 18 1956

Music Festival At Tanglewood

LENOX, July 18 — Inspiring, relaxing music, floating on the cool breezes that play in the rolling vistas of the beautiful Berkshire Hills— all this, and more is yours by simply visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival, at enchanting Tanglewood, this weekend, beginning July 20.

Friday evening's 8:30 performance, according to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, will feature works on Brahms, Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel. On Saturday, at the same time, a night of Wagner is in store for visitors to this music lovers paradise. Sunday, the performance begins at 2:30 p.m. Works of Rossini, Bartok, as well as Schubert's Symphony No. 7 in C major, are scheduled.

Brass Group, Soprano In Berkshire Concert

The third week of concerts in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1956 festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will get under way this evening at 8:30. p.m. with a joint recital in Tanglewood's intimate theatre-concert hall by the orchestra's brass ensemble under the direction of Roger Voisin, and by Metropolitan Opera soprano, Margaret Harshaw, with Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

Miss Harshaw and Mr. Berkowitz are donating their services for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its concerts of the Berkshire Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

JUL 18 1956

Joint Recital At Tanglewood This Evening

The third week of concerts in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, will get underway this evening at 8:30 p.m. with a joint recital in Tanglewood's intimate Theatre-Concert Hall by the orchestra's brass ensemble under the direction of Roger Voisin, and by Metropolitan Opera soprano, Margaret Harshaw, with Ralph Berkowitz, piano. Miss Harshaw and Mr. Berkowitz are donating their services for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its concerts of the Berkshire Festival.

Members of the brass ensemble are Roger Voisin and Armando Ghitalla, trumpets; Harold Meek and Paul Keaney, French horns; Joseph Orosz and Kauko Kahila, trombones; and K. Vinal Smith, tuba. William Gibson, first trombone of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will assist. The group will perform the Canzon Septimi Toni No. 1 for Double Brass Quartet by Giovanni Gabrieli (1557-1612), and a Toccata from the first book of "Ricercari e Canzoni" by Gabrieli's contemporary, the 16th century composer, Aurelio Bonelli (1531-1612), along with two works by contemporary composers: the Sonata for Horn, Trumpet and Trombone by Francis Poulenc (1899-) and the Brass Suite for Seven Instruments by the late Nicolai Berezowsky (1900-1953).

After the intermission Miss Harshaw and Mr. Berkowitz will perform the Five Songs to text by Mathilde Wesendonck by Wagner (Den Engel; Stehe still; Im Treibhaus; Schmerzen and Traume) and four songs by the late Richard Strauss (Befreit; Nichts; Ruhe, meine Seele! and Kling).

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908

JUL 18 1956

BRASS GROUP TO BE HEARD THIS EVENING

Orchestra Ensemble, Margaret Harshaw, Met. Soprano, at Tanglewood

Lenox, July 18—The third week of concerts in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, will get under way this evening at 8.30 p. m. with a joint recital in Tanglewood's intimate Theater-concert hall by the orchestra's brass ensemble under the direction of Roger Voisin, and by Metropolitan Opera soprano, Margaret Harshaw, with Ralph Berkowitz, piano. Miss Harshaw and Mr. Berkowitz are donating their services for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its concerts of the Berkshire Festival.

Brass Ensemble

Members of the Brass Ensemble are Roger Voisin and Armando Ghitalla, trumpets; Harold Meek and Paul Keaney, French horns; Joseph Orosz and Kauko Kahila, trombones; and K. Vinal Smith, tuba. William Gibson, first trombone of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will assist. The group will perform the Canzon Septimi Toni No. 1 for Double Brass Quartet by Giovanni Gabrieli (1557-1612), and a toccata from the first book of "Ricercar e Canzoni" by Gabrieli's contemporary, the 16th century composer, Aurelio Bonelli (1531-1612), along with two works by contemporary composers: the Sonata for Horn, Trumpet and Trombone by Francis Poulenc (1899-) and the Brass Suite for Seven Instruments by the late Nicolai Berezowsky (1900-1953).

After the intermission Miss Harshaw and Mr. Berkowitz will perform the Five Songs to texts by Mathilde Wesendonck by Wagner (Der Engel; Stehe still; Im Treibhaus; Schmerzen and Traume) and four songs by the late Richard Strauss (Befreit; Nichts; Ruhe, meine Seele! and Kling). Miss Harshaw made her Tanglewood debut to notable acclaim last summer, singing in a concert version of "Fidelio" with the Boston Symphony.

Shed Concert Friday

On Friday evening Charles Munch and the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform the first of this season's 12 Berkshire Festival concerts in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood. For Friday Dr. Munch has chosen a program comprised of Berlioz' Overture, "The Roman Carnival"; Debussy's Prelude to the "Afternoon of a Faun;" the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe"; and Brahms' Second Symphony. A new recording by Dr. Munch and the Orchestra of the Brahms Symphony has just been released by RCA-Victor.

Saturday evening Dr. Munch conducts a concert performance of Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkure" with Miss Harshaw as "Sieglinde," Albert Da Costa as "Siegmund," and James Pease as "Hunding"; also, Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and the Tanglewood premiere of Brohuslav Martinu's "Fantasies Symphonique."

On Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux makes his first appearance of this season at Tanglewood as guest conductor in a program made up of works by Rossini, Bartok and Schubert.

Remaining seats for tonight's concert, as well as for the 12 Shed concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra July 20 to Aug. 12, are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office and telephone reservations are accepted —Lenox 600. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

Berkshire Eagle, Thursday, July 19, 1956

Music

Brass, Harshaw Share Tanglewood Stage

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE PROGRAM in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood last night was evenly divided between the "Brass Ensemble," under the direction of Roger Voisin, and Soprano Margaret Harshaw, assisted at the piano by Ralph Berkowitz. It was the third in the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts and marked the completion of half of the schedule in this series.

The Ensemble is composed of Boston Symphony Orchestra wind players and includes Voisin and Armando Ghitalla, trumpets; Harry Shapiro, who substituted on mere hours' notice for indisposed Harold Meek, and Paul Keaney, French horns; Josef Orosz and Kauka Kahila, trombones; and K. Vinal Smith, tuba. Trombonist William Gibson was an assisting artist.

* * *

THEIR PROGRAM, in turn, was divided between two 16th century Italian composers, Giovanni Gabrieli and Bonelli, whose works showed the beauty of wind instruments in polyphonic ensemble and specifically the wealthy tonal and broad dynamic competence of last night's group.

Gabrieli's "Canzon Septimi Toni, No. 1," was for double quartet of brass and the octet was separated on the stage to either side where statements and responses were lucidly exposed. The style of these compositions was in the nature of vocal works of that period with which most of us are more familiar, but these men were innovators in matters requiring contrasts and expanding the secular uses of instruments.

* * *

THE POULENC sonata for horns, trumpets and trombones and the Berezowsky suite for seven brass instruments are, of course, centuries later but, by comparison, seem to fritter beauty away and rely on crude humor, in the case of Poulenc, whose trio was written in 1922, and midnight oil, in the case of the late Berezowsky whose suite was written in 1939. The performances were enlivened by a complete palette of resources and skill on the part of the players and the preparation had obviously been careful and experienced.

Miss Harshaw sang two groups: The five Wagner songs on poems of Mathilde Wesendonck and four songs of Richard Strauss: "Befreit," "Nichts," "Ruhe, meine Seele!" and "Kling." The Wesendonck songs date from 1857. Wagner was still alive when Strauss wrote some of the songs Miss Harshaw sang so beautifully last night. There was a musical kinship between them and an implied relation to the "Tristan" days, and the soloist was completely in her element. The power of her voice and its regulation and restraint were lessons in voice control, but she used these attributes only to give form and substance to each song and achieved great success in their accomplishment.

IN THE MORE dramatic choices such as the Wagner "Stehe still" and the Strauss "Kling," she was the heroic opera singer Tanglewood has had the joy of knowing in other seasons and will again have the chance to hear this Saturday night, opening the flood gates of her vocal resources but still maintaining musicianship above vocalism. In the more lyric choices, there was commanding flexibility, splendid diction, and radiant warmth. Mr. Berkowitz was always a thorough part of the production and conspicuously carried through the moods established by Miss Harshaw in the postludes several of the songs permitted.

Brass Ensemble At Tanglewood

The third week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., begins at 8:30 tonight with a concert by the Boston Symphony Brass Ensemble and Margaret Harshaw, soprano, in the Theater-Concert Hall. The instrumentalists, under Roger Voisin's direction, will play sixteenth century and modern music and Miss Harshaw will sing Wagner's five Wesendonck Songs.

The complete Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, will give its first concert in Tanglewood's Music Shed Friday night, playing works by Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel and Brahms. Saturday night's concert will be devoted to Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkuere" and works of Samuel Barber and Bohuslav Martinu. Pierre Monteux will make his first Tanglewood appearance of the season Sunday afternoon.

Boston Herald
July 18, 1956

Voisin, Harshaw In Berkshire Fete

The third week of concerts in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, will get underway this evening at 8:30 p.m. with a joint recital in Tanglewood's intimate Theatre-Concert Hall by the Orchestra's Brass Ensemble under the direction of Roger Voisin, and by Metropolitan Opera soprano, Margaret Harshaw, with Ralph Berkowitz, piano. Miss Harshaw and Mr. Berkowitz are donating their services for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. (The summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its concerts of the Berkshire Festival.)

Members of the Brass Ensemble are Roger Voisin and Armando Ghitalla, trumpets; Harold Meek and Paul Keaney, French horns; Joseph Orosz and Kauko Kahila, trombones; and K. Vinal Smith, tuba. William Gibson, first trombone of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will assist. The group will perform the Canzon Septimi Toni No. 1 for Double Brass Quartet by Giovanni Gabrieli (1557-1612), and a Toccata from the first book of "Ricercari e Canzoni" by Gabrieli's contemporary, the 16th century composer, Aurelio Bonelli (1531-1612), along with two works by contemporary composers: the Sonata for Horn, Trumpet and Trombone by Francis Poulenc (1899-) and the Brass Suite for Seven Instruments by the late Nicolai Berezowsky (1900-1953).

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

JUL 19 1956

Music Fund Is Being Revived

Founded in 1948 At Tanglewood By Koussevtizky

The International Music Fund, founded at Tanglewood in 1948 by Serge Koussevitzky at a special benefit concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is being revived on the occasion of the fifth anniversary of the passing of its founder, through cooperation with the International Music Council, the non-governmental organization affiliated with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organizations. The Fund, with an international office at UNESCO House in Paris, was founded as a means of aiding and encouraging the contemorary composer by the international exchange of contemporary music and by the exchange of composers between countries.

Inaugurating the fund's revived activities will be a special broadcast over Radio Station WQXR, New York (1560 KC) tomorrow evening from 10:05 to 11. The program will feature recordings by Dr. Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra and also an interview made by him on behalf of the International Music Fund at UNESCO House in 1950.

The executive committee of the International Music Fund is constituted under the presidency of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, with Sir Steuart Wilson, president of the International Music Council, as vice president. Other members of the executive committee are Dr. Charles Munch, Henri Barraud (France), Aaron Copland, Marcel Cuvelier (Belgium), Howard Hanson, Mario Labroca (Italy), Domingo Santa Cruz (Chile), and Carleton Sprague Smith. Jack Bernoff, executive secretary of the International Music Council, is also executive secretary of the International Music Fund.

Among those who have agreed to serve on the international committee of the International Music Fund, are Henry B. Cabot, president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Leonard Bernstein, Eleazar deCarvalho, Luigi Dallapiccola, Zino Francescatti, Irving Fine, William Kroll, Mrs. Edward MacDowell, Archibald MacLeish, Pierre Monteux, Goffredo Petrassi, Gregor Piatigorsky, Hugh Ross, Rudolph Serkin, Roger Sessions and Isaac Stern.

An American affiliate, the American International Music Fund, has been incorporated as a nonprofit organization for the purpose of assisting American composers and is located at 119 West 57th Street, New York.

STUDENT CONDUCTORS, who will share the podium in the Music Shed at Tanglewood tonight for the student orchestra concert, discuss the program with Eleazar deCarvalho, left, head of the student orchestra department. The two student conductors are Jean-Louis LeRoux of Montevideo, Uruguay, center, and David Woolridge of London.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 20,000

JUL 19 1956

MUSIC SHED CONCERTS AT TANGLEWOOD TO OPEN

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Lenox move into high gear this week when the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra of 106 pieces assembles at Tanglewood under the baton of Charles Munch, music director.

The entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate on this Friday evening, July 20, the annual series of twelve weekend concerts in the huge 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, which is open on three sides so that the music may spill out on the spacious lawns where additional thousands of music-lovers assemble under the stars and tall pines, or picnic in Sunday sunshine. In 1955 the Shed concerts attracted an audience of 108,336, or an average attendance of 9,028 persons.

A feature of the Shed series will be the first Tanglewood performances of four symphonic works commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during its 75th anniversary season from Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi, who is guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, from Aaron Copland, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston. The American compositions will be played in Europe this fall when the Boston Symphony undertakes a five-and-a-half week tour of 13 countries, including a week in the USSR. Charles Munch will also devote two of the Shed concerts to concert versions of Wagner operas.

During the Shed season his podium will be shared by Pierre Monteux, who was conductor of the orchestra from 1919-1924 and who has been invited by Dr. Munch to share the conducting during the forthcoming European tour; by Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra since 1920; by Leonard Bernstein, who has headed the Berkshire Music Center's department of orchestra and conducting since 1946; and by Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro, who is filling Mr. Bernstein's post on the music school's faculty during the latter's sabbatical this summer.

A program of Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel and Brahms by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be led by Dr. Munch on Friday evening. Dr. Munch will conduct an all-Wagner program, featuring the first act of "Die Walkure," sung in concert version by Miss Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa and basso James Pease on Saturday evening, and a program of Rossini, Bartok and Schubert led by Mr. Monteux will be heard Sunday afternoon.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m.; the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

A bonus for Festival patrons will be the first of four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a.m. this Saturday, for which the nominal charge is made of $1 for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Town Times, Inc.

For news or information call CRestwood 4-1968. Address mail to TOWN TIMES, Box 888, Oakville, or to Box 1, Watertown, Conn.
Publishers: Carl Less, Joseph F. Smith
Re-entered as second class matter May 12, 1955 at the post office at Watertown Conn. Original entry as second class matter Jan. 13, 1948 at the post office Oakville Conn., under the Act of March 3, 1879.

St. John Passion Heard By Sellout Festival Audience

A sell-out Theater-Concert Hall audience heard an inspiring performance of the Passion According To St. John by Johann Sebastian Bach at the Sunday afternoon performance of the work by the Chamber Orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Festival Chorus, directed by Hugh Ross and a stellar lineup of vocal soloists, at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

With the Hall filled to capacity, the large crowd spilled over onto the wide green lawns of Tanglewood to listen with rapt attention to the performance of the great devotional work by Bach.

With the impressive quality of musical and vocal artistry displayed at this well-attended concert, it is difficult to single out ony element or group, such as the orchestra, chorus, or soloists for praise in excess of the others.

The delicate blending of voices, the excellent harmony and the dept of emotion communicated by the Festival Chorus under the Direction of Hugh Ross was a magnificent portrayal of what Bach must have been trying to express when he penned the immortal work over two hundred years ago. It was first performed in Leipzig, shortly before Bach was installed as Cantor of St. Thomas Church there.

John McCollum's tenor voice as the Evangelist was an outstanding experience for the audience. He sang the role with power and deep understanding of the tragic theme. A high point in his performance, we think, was his Aria just preceding the intermission in the first part of the "Passion."

Florence Kopleff's solo contralto singing was an auditory delight as she showed great precision and power in executing some of the more rapid and difficult parts called for by her role.

The ever-popular artist Miss Adele Addison endeared herself to the audience with the pure tones of her soprano solo rendition.

James Joyce in the bass roles of Peter and Pilate; and Mac Morgan with his bass presentation of the part of Jesus, filled out the remainder of the group of vocal soloists with a high degree of artistic understanding.

The orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, was the unifying element in the lengthy work. Never overwhelming in volume, it struck a nice balance in giving the proper perspective and depth of feeling to the "Johannes-passion."

Instrumental soloists included Daniel Pinkham on Harpsichord, Louis Speyer on Oboe d'amore, Alfred Zighera on Viola de gamba and Edouard Nies-Berger on the Organ.

The setting at Tanglewood was ideal for the presentation with the towering white cumulus clouds over the green Berkshire Hills and the wind softly penetrating the tall pines of the beautiful estate creating an inspiring background for a monumental work singing the praises of God.

The series of twelve concerts in the huge Music Shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. with Mr. Munch conducting the "Roman Carnival" overture by Berlioz; the prelude to "Afternoon Of A Faun" by Debussy; Ravel's "Rapsodie Espagnole" and the Brahms Symphony No. 2 in D major.

A change has been announced for the Saturday evening program. Samuel Barber's "Adagio For Strings" will open the program and will be followed by "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6) by Bohuslav Martinu, called "the best new orchestral work presented in New York in 1955" by the New York Music Critics' Circle. The works replace the previously announced "A Faust Overture," Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," and Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

In addition to the substitution, the concert will include the first act of "Die Walkure" with Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease as soloists.

On Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p.m., Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in performances of the Rossini overture to "L' Italina In Algeri," The Bartok Concerto for Orchestra, with Ruth Posselt as soloist, and the Schubert Symphony No. 7 in C. major.

L.F.M.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

JUL 19 1956

Tanglewood Programs

Works by Barber and Martinů Scheduled for the Weekend

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has made changes in two of the programs the orchestra will play in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., during the current Berkshire Festival.

Instead of two all-Wagner programs on Saturday evening, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, Dr. Munch has made substitutions in the first half of each concert.

* * *

On July 21, Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings will open the program, followed by Bohuslav Martinů's Fantaisies Symphoniques (Symphony No. 6), which the conductor commissioned for the Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary season, and which was named by the New York Music Critics' Circle the best new orchestral work presented in New York in 1955.

Both the Barber and Martinů works will be receiving first performances at Tanglewood. They will replace the previously announced "A Faust Overture," Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," and Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

* * *

On Aug. 12, Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica," will be substituted for the previously listed Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhäuser and "A Siegfried Idyll."

On both programs Dr. Munch will retain the concert versions of Wagner operas originally scheduled: Act I of "Die Walküre" on July 21, with Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, and James Pease as soloists; and Act III of "Die Meistersinger" (opening and final scene), with Messrs. Da Costa and Pease, and Marguerite Willauer in solo roles.

[89]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

JUL 19 1956

Music Fund Is Being Revived

Founded in 1948 At Tanglewood By Koussevtizky

The International Music Fund, founded at Tanglewood in 1948 by Serge Koussevitzky at a special benefit concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is being revived on the occasion of the fifth anniversary of the passing of its founder, through cooperation with the International Music Council, the non-governmental organization affiliated with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organizations. The Fund, with an international office at UNESCO House in Paris, was founded as a means of aiding and encouraging the contemorary composer by the international exchange of contemporary music and by the exchange of composers between countries.

Inaugurating the fund's revived activities will be a special broadcast over Radio Station WQXR, New York (1560 KC) tomorrow evening from 10:05 to 11. The program will feature recordings by Dr. Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra and also an interview made by him on behalf of the International Music Fund at UNESCO House in 1950.

The executive committee of the International Music Fund is constituted under the presidency of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, with Sir Steuart Wilson, president of the International Music Council, as vice president. Other members of the executive committee are Dr. Charles Munch, Henri Barraud (France), Aaron Copland, Marcel Cuvelier (Belgium), Howard Hanson, Mario Labroca (Italy), Domingo Santa Cruz (Chile), and Carleton Sprague Smith. Jack Bernoff, executive secretary of the International Music Council, is also executive secretary of the International Music Fund.

Among those who have agreed to serve on the international committee of the International Music Fund, are Henry B. Cabot, president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Leonard Bernstein, Eleazar deCarvalho, Luigi Dallapiccola, Zino Francescatti, Irving Fine, William Kroll, Mrs. Edward MacDowell, Archibald MacLeish, Pierre Monteux, Goffredo Petrassi, Gregor Piatigorsky, Hugh Ross, Rudolph Serkin, Roger Sessions and Isaac Stern.

An American affiliate, the American International Music Fund, has been incorporated as a nonprofit organization for the purpose of assisting American composers and is located at 119 West 57th Street, New York.

Petrovec

STUDENT CONDUCTORS, who will share the podium in the Music Shed at Tanglewood tonight for the student orchestra concert, discuss the program with Eleazar deCarvalho, left, head of the student orchestra department. The two student conductors are Jean-Louis LeRoux of Montevideo, Uruguay, center, and David Woolridge of London.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 20,000

JUL 19 1956

MUSIC SHED CONCERTS AT TANGLEWOOD TO OPEN

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Lenox move into high gear this week when the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra of 106 pieces assembles at Tanglewood under the baton of Charles Munch, music director.

The entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate on this Friday evening, July 20, the annual series of twelve weekend concerts in the huge 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, which is open on three sides so that the music may spill out on the spacious lawns where additional thousands of music-lovers assemble under the stars and tall pines, or picnic in Sunday sunshine. In 1955 the Shed concerts attracted an audience of 108,336, or an average attendance of 9,028 persons.

A feature of the Shed series will be the first Tanglewood performances of four symphonic works commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during its 75th anniversary season from Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi, who is guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, from Aaron Copland, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston. The American compositions will be played in Europe this fall when the Boston Symphony undertakes a five-and-a-half week tour of 13 countries, including a week in the USSR. Charles Munch will also devote two of the Shed concerts to concert versions of Wagner operas.

During the Shed season his podium will be shared by Pierre Monteux, who was conductor of the orchestra from 1919-1924 and who has been invited by Dr. Munch to share the conducting during the forthcoming European tour; by Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra since 1920; by Leonard Bernstein, who has headed the Berkshire Music Center's department of orchestra and conducting since 1946; and by Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro, who is filling Mr. Bernstein's post on the music school's faculty during the latter's sabbatical this summer.

A program of Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel and Brahms by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be led by Dr. Munch on Friday evening. Dr. Munch will conduct an all-Wagner program, featuring the first act of "Die Walkure," sung in concert version by Miss Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa and basso James Pease on Saturday evening, and a program of Rossini, Bartok and Schubert led by Mr. Monteux will be heard Sunday afternoon.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m.; the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

A bonus for Festival patrons will be the first of four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a.m. this Saturday, for which the nominal charge is made of $1 for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Town Times, Inc.

For news or information call CRestwood 4-1968. Address mail to TOWN TIMES, Box 888, Oakville, or to Box 1, Watertown, Conn.
Publishers: Carl Less, Joseph F. Smith
Re-entered as second class matter May 12, 1955 at the post office at Watertown Conn. Original entry as second class matter Jan. 13, 1948 at the post office Oakville Conn., under the Act of March 3, 1879.

St. John Passion Heard By Sellout Festival Audience

A sell-out Theater-Concert Hall audience heard an inspiring performance of the Passion According To St. John by Johann Sebastian Bach at the Sunday afternoon performance of the work by the Chamber Orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Festival Chorus, directed by Hugh Ross and a stellar lineup of vocal soloists, at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

With the Hall filled to capacity, the large crowd spilled over onto the wide green lawns of Tanglewood to listen with rapt attention to the performance of the great devotional work by Bach.

With the impressive quality of musical and vocal artistry displayed at this well-attended concert, it is difficult to single out ony element or group, such as the orchestra, chorus, or soloists for praise in excess of the others.

The delicate blending of voices, the excellent harmony and the dept of emotion communicated by the Festival Chorus under the Direction of Hugh Ross was a magnificent portrayal of what Bach must have been trying to express when he penned the immortal work over two hundred years ago. It was first performed in Leipzig, shortly before Bach was installed as Cantor of St. Thomas Church there.

John McCollum's tenor voice as the Evangelist was an outstanding experience for the audience. He sang the role with power and deep understanding of the tragic theme. A high point in his performance, we think, was his Aria just preceding the intermission in the first part of the "Passion."

Florence Kopleff's solo contralto singing was an auditory delight as she showed great precision and power in executing some of the more rapid and difficult parts called for by her role.

The ever-popular artist Miss Adele Addison endeared herself to the audience with the pure tones of her soprano solo rendition.

James Joyce in the bass roles of Peter and Pilate; and Mac Morgan with his bass presentation of the part of Jesus, filled out the remainder of the group of vocal soloists with a high degree of artistic understanding.

The orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, was the unifying element in the lengthy work. Never overwhelming in volume, it struck a nice balance in giving the proper perspective and depth of feeling to the "Johannes-passion."

Instrumental soloists included Daniel Pinkham on Harpsichord, Louis Speyer on Oboe d'amore, Alfred Zighera on Viola de gamba and Edouard Nies-Berger on the Organ.

The setting at Tanglewood was ideal for the presentation with the towering white cumulus clouds over the green Berkshire Hills and the wind softly penetrating the tall pines of the beautiful estate creating an inspiring background for a monumental work singing the praises of God.

The series of twelve concerts in the huge Music Shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. with Mr. Munch conducting the "Roman Carnival" overture by Berlioz; the prelude to "Afternoon Of A Faun" by Debussy; Ravel's "Rapsodie Espagnole" and the Brahms Symphony No. 2 in D major.

A change has been announced for the Saturday evening program. Samuel Barber's "Adagio For Strings" will open the program and will be followed by "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6) by Bohuslav Martinu, called "the best new orchestral work presented in New York in 1955" by the New York Music Critics' Circle. The works replace the previously announced "A Faust Overture," Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," and Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

In addition to the substitution, the concert will include the first act of "Die Walkure" with Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease as soloists.

On Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p.m., Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in performances of the Rossini overture to "L' Italina In Algeri," The Bartok Concerto for Orchestra, with Ruth Posselt as soloist, and the Schubert Symphony No. 7 in C. major.

L.F.M.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

JUL 19 1956

Tanglewood Programs

Works by Barber and Martinů Scheduled for the Weekend

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has made changes in two of the programs the orchestra will play in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., during the current Berkshire Festival.

Instead of two all-Wagner programs on Saturday evening, July 21, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12, Dr. Munch has made substitutions in the first half of each concert.

* * *

On July 21, Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings will open the program, followed by Bohuslav Martinů's Fantaisies Symphoniques (Symphony No. 6), which the conductor commissioned for the Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary season, and which was named by the New York Music Critics' Circle the best new orchestral work presented in New York in 1955.

Both the Barber and Martinů works will be receiving first performances at Tanglewood. They will replace the previously announced "A Faust Overture," Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," and Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

* * *

On Aug. 12, Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica," will be substituted for the previously listed Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhäuser and "A Siegfried Idyll."

On both programs Dr. Munch will retain the concert versions of Wagner operas originally scheduled: Act I of "Die Walküre" on July 21, with Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, and James Pease as soloists; and Act III of "Die Meistersinger" (opening and final scene), with Messrs. Da Costa and Pease, and Marguerite Willauer in solo roles.

[89]

Tanglewood Boxholders Are Listed

Berkshire Festival Main Shed Concerts Will Begin Tomorrow

Area boxholders for the Berkshire Festival concerts this year at Tanglewood, Lenox, were announced today. Concerts in the main Shed will begin tomorrow evening at 8:30.

They are Mrs. William Felton Barrett of Egremont, James Phinney Baxter III of Williamstown, Frederick W. Beinecke of New York and Great Barrington, Alan J. Blau of 193 Bartlett Ave., Miss Mabel Choate of New York and Stockbridge, Mrs. Bruce Crane of Dalton and Mrs. Winthrop M. Crane Jr. of Dalton.

Also, Edward V. Dillon of 434 Williams St., Julius Fleischman of Cincinnati and Chatham, Mrs. Charles C. Griswold of New York and Stockbridge, Walter Hoving of New York, Mrs. Rodney Procter of New York and Stockbridge; Mrs. Bruce W. Sanborn of St. Paul, Minn., and Lenox and Mrs. John L. Senior of New York and Lenox.

Others are Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of New York and Stockbridge; Mrs. Edgar B. Stern of New Orleans, La., and Lenox, Dr. Walter VonHorst of Rego Park, N.Y., and Housatonic, Robert K. Wheeler of Great Barrington, John S. Williams of Old Chatham, N.Y., Mrs. Serge Koussewitzky of Lenox, Robert B. Anderson of Housatonic and Mrs. William Whittlesey of 1 Crofut St.

Public Events

Tonight

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs." Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.

8:40—"St. Joan." Williamstown Summer Theater.

8:45—"The Wayward Saint." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"The Solid Gold Cadillac." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

9:00—Melissa Hayden and Francisco Moncion. Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival. Becket.

Tomorrow

10:00 a.m.—Young Audiences Concert. Dulcimore Quartet. South Mountain.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,625

JUL 19 1956

Four County Residents Study at Tanglewood

Petroveo

Three Pittsfield residents and one from Stockbridge are studying this summer at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. Left to right are Miss Grace Henderson of 70 Harding St., who plays flute in the student orchestra; Miss Charlotte Eberwein of 52 Commonwealth Ave., who is in the Tanglewood study group; Miss Sue Erickson of Stockbridge, who sings in the festival chorus; and Ronald Hebert of 106 Cole Ave., who plays French h... are among 400 students.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,140

JUL 19 1956

MUSIC

ALFRED W. BURKE

LOWELL—A change in policy will mark this year's schedule at the Organ Institute of Andover with the regular weekly series of recitals given on Thursday and Friday evenings. Previous to this Friday and Saturday were reserved for the series.

The opening concert this year will be played on Thursday evening, Aug. 2. There has been no official announcement, but it is certain that a program played on another instrument will be listed.

For the first time since the series was inaugurated, Arthur Howes, director of the Institute, will not appear in the artist series. His activities as a teacher and adviser will force him to be absent during the week - ends listed.

Largest Enrollment

There is much interest on the part of students in regards to the Institute this year. Possibly the largest enrollment yet recorded in the daily classes has been announced.

Possibly the interest in organ is growing and it could also be that the directing committee and faculty have made this possible. Aside from the large scale summer festivals, the Organ Institute has shown the largest growth.

One of the finest chamber music programs yet recorded in the history of the Berkshire festival was given at last Wednesday evening program. The Boston Symphony quartet conducted by the orchestra's concert master, Richard Burgin, marked the occasion.

The final movement of Haydn's "Quartet in E flat major" brought much sincere humor to those present. It seemed that this final expression on the part of the group more than sufficed for a not too interesting opening.

The evening's highlight occurred when the celebrated clarinetist, Benny Goodman, joined the group in a performance of Mozart's "Clarinet Quintet in A major."

Benny Goodman is one of the few who finds interest in both the long and short of it all. Basically, he is more at home in the lighter vein. However, in full credit to this fine musician, it is safe to say that if he did nothing else but play simple-styled scales, his knowledge of his chosen instrument is such that he musically speaks with great authority.

Tomorrow evening Charles Munch and the full 106-piece Boston Symphony orchestra will perform the first of this season's 12 Berkshire festival concerts in the giant music shed at Tanglewood. For this program, Dr. Munch has chosen Berlioz' overture, "The Roman Carnival"; Debussy's prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun; the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe"; and Brahm's Second Symphony.

Saturday evening, Dr. Munch conducts a concert performance of Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkure" with Miss Harshaw as Sieglinde, Albert Da Costa as Siegmund, and James Pease as Hundling; also, Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and the Tanglewood premiere of Brohuslav Martinu's "Fantasies Symphonique."

On Sunday afternoon, Pierre Monteaux makes his first appearance of this season at Tanglewood as guest conductor in a program made up of works by Rossni, Bartok and Schubert.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124

JUL 17 1956

Main Events Starting At Tanglewood

The first of the major Berkshire Festival concerts by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be played at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this weekend.

Series A opens Friday night in the big music shed at 8:30 o'clock. Mr. Munch will conduct the orchestra in Berlioz's "Roman Carnival" Overture; Debussy's Prelude to "The Afternoon Of A Faun"; Ravel's Rapsodie Espagnol; and Brahms' Second Symphony.

Monteux Scheduled

Saturday night, the program will include the Adagio For Strings, by Samuel Barber; Martinu's Symphony No. 6 (Fantajsies Symphoniques); and the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkuere," for which the soloists will be Margaret Harshaw, soprano, Albert da Costa, tenor, and James Pease, bass.

On Sunday, Pierre Monteux, conductor of the San Francisco Symphony, will lead the Boston Symphony in Rossini's Overture for "L'Italiana in Algeri"; the Bartok Concerto For Orchestra, and Schubert's Seventh Symphony.

St. John Passion Heard By Sellout Festival Audience

A sell-out Theater-Concert Hall audience heard an inspiring performance of the Passion According To St. John by Johann Sebastian Bach at the Sunday afternoon performance of the work by the Chamber Orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Festival Chorus, directed by Hugh Ross and a stellar lineup of vocal soloists, at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

With the Hall filled to capacity, the large crowd spilled over onto the wide green lawns of Tanglewood to listen with rapt attention to the performance of the great devotional work by Bach.

With the impressive quality of musical and vocal artistry displayed at this well-attended concert, it is difficult to single out ony element or group, such as the orchestra, chorus, or soloists for praise in excess of the others.

The delicate blending of voices, the excellent harmony and the dept of emotion communieated by the Festival Chorus under the Direction of Hugh Ross was a magnificent portrayal of what Bach must have been trying to express when he penned the immortal work over two hundred years ago. It was first performed in Leipzig, shortly before Bach was installed as Cantor of St. Thomas Church there.

John McCollum's tenor voice as the Evangelist was an outstanding experience for the audience. He sang the role with power and deep understanding of the tragic theme. A high point in his performance, we think, was his Aria just preceding the intermission in the first part of the "Passion."

Florence Kopleff's solo contralto singing was an auditory delight as she showed great precision and power in executing some of the more rapid and difficult parts called for by her role.

The ever-popular artist Miss Adele Addison endeared herself to the audience with the pure tones of her soprano solo rendition.

James Joyce in the bass roles of Peter and Pilate; and Mac Morgan with his bass presentation of the part of Jesus, filled out the remainder of the group of vocal soloists with a high degree of artistic understanding.

The orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, was the unifying element in the lengthy work. Never overwhelming in volume, it struck a nice balance in giving the proper perspective and depth of feeling to the "Johannes-passion."

Instrumental soloists included Daniel Pinkham on Harpsichord, Louis Speyer on Oboe d'amore, Alfred Zighera on Viola de gamba and Edouard Nies-Berger on the Organ.

The setting at Tanglewood was ideal for the presentation with the towering white cumulus clouds over the green Berkshire Hills and the wind softly penetrating the tall pines of the beautiful estate creating an inspiring background for a monumental work singing the praises of God.

The series of twelve concerts in the huge Music Shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. with Mr. Munch conducting the "Roman Carnival" overture by Berlioz; the prelude to "Afternoon Of A Faun" by Debussy; Ravel's "Rapsodie Espagnole"; and the Brahms Symphony No. 2 in D major.

A change has been announced for the Saturday evening program. Samuel Barber's "Adagio For Strings" will open the program and will be followed by "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6) by Bohuslav Martinu, called "the best new orchestral work presented in New York in 1955" by the New York Music Critics' Circle. The works replace the previously announced "A Faust Overture," Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," and Prelude and Love Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

In addition to the substitution, the concert will include the first act of "Die Walkure" with Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease as soloists.

On Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p.m. Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in performances of the Rossini overture to "L' Italina In Algeri." The Bartok Concerto for Orchestra, with Ruth Posselt as soloist, and the Schubert Symphony No. 7 in C. major.

L.F.M.

[90]

Tanglewood Boxholders Are Listed

Berkshire Festival Main Shed Concerts Will Begin Tomorrow

Area boxholders for the Berkshire Festival concerts this year at Tanglewood, Lenox, were announced today. Concerts in the main Shed will begin tomorrow evening at 8:30.

They are Mrs. William Felton Barrett of Egremont, James Phinney Baxter III of Williamstown, Frederick W. Beinecke of New York and Great Barrington, Alan J. Blau of 193 Bartlett Ave., Miss Mabel Choate of New York and Stockbridge, Mrs. Bruce Crane of Dalton and Mrs. Winthrop M. Crane Jr. of Dalton.

Also, Edward V. Dillon of 434 Williams St., Julius Fleischman of Cincinnati and Chatham, Mrs. Charles C. Griswold of New York and Stockbridge, Walter Hoving of New York, Mrs. Rodney Procter of New York and Stockbridge; Mrs. Bruce W. Sanborn of St. Paul, Minn., and Lenox and Mrs. John L. Senior of New York and Lenox.

Others are Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of New York and Stockbridge; Mrs. Edgar B. Stern of New Orleans, La., and Lenox, Dr. Walter VonHorst of Rego Park, N.Y., and Housatonic, Robert K. Wheeler of Great Barrington, John S. Williams of Old Chatham, N.Y., Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky of Lenox, Robert B. Anderson of Housatonic and Mrs. William Whittlesey of 1 Crofut St.

Public Events

Tonight

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs." Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.

8:40—"St. Joan." Williamstown Summer Theater.

8:45—"The Wayward Saint." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"The Solid Gold Cadillac." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

9:00—Melissa Hayden and Francisco Moncion. Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival. Becket.

Tomorrow

10:00 a.m.—Young Audiences Concert. Dulcimore Quartet. South Mountain.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,625

JUL 19 1956

Four County Residents Study at Tanglewood

Petroveo

Three Pittsfield residents and one from Stockbridge are studying this summer at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. Left to right are Miss Grace Henderson of 70 Harding St., who plays flute in the student orchestra; Miss Charlotte Eberwein of 52 Commonwealth Ave., who is in the Tanglewood study group; Miss Sue Erickson of Stockbridge, who sings in the festival chorus; and Ronald Hebert of 106 Cole Ave., who plays French h[illegible] re among 400 students.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,140

JUL 19 1956

MUSIC

ALFRED W. BURKE

LOWELL—A change in policy will mark this year's schedule at the Organ Institute of Andover with the regular weekly series of recitals given on Thursday and Friday evenings. Previous to this Friday and Saturday were reserved for the series.

The opening concert this year will be played on Thursday evening, Aug. 2. There has been no official announcement, but it is certain that a program played on another instrument will be listed.

For the first time since the series was inaugurated, Arthur Howes, director of the Institute, will not appear in the artist series. His activities as a teacher and adviser will force him to be absent during the week - ends listed.

Largest Enrollment

There is much interest on the part of students in regards to the Institute this year. Possibly the largest enrollment yet recorded in the daily classes has been announced.

Possibly the interest in organ is growing and it could also be that the directing committee and faculty have made this possible. Aside from the large scale summer festivals, the Organ Institute has shown the largest growth.

One of the finest chamber music programs yet recorded in the history of the Berkshire festival was given at last Wednesday evening program. The Boston Symphony quartet conducted by the orchestra's concert master, Richard Burgin, marked the occasion.

The final movement of Haydn's "Quartet in E flat major" brought much sincere humor to those present. It seemed that this final expression on the part of the group more than sufficed for a not too interesting opening.

The evening's highlight occurred when the celebrated clarinetist, Benny Goodman, joined the group in a performance of Mozart's "Clarinet Quintet in A major."

Benny Goodman is one of the few who finds interest in both the long and short of it all. Basically, he is more at home in the lighter vein. However, in full credit to this fine musician, it is safe to say that if he did nothing else but play simple-styled scales, his knowledge of his chosen instrument is such that he musically speaks with great authority.

Tomorrow evening Charles Munch and the full 106-piece Boston Symphony orchestra will perform the first of this season's 12 Berkshire festival concerts in the giant music shed at Tanglewood. For this program, Dr. Munch has chosen Berlioz' overture, "The Roman Carnival"; Debussy's prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun; the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe"; and Brahm's Second Symphony.

Saturday evening, Dr. Munch conducts a concert performance of Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkure" with Miss Harshaw as Sieglinde, Albert Da Costa as Siegmund, and James Pease as Hundling; also, Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and the Tanglewood premiere of Brohuslav Martinu's "Fantasies Symphonique."

On Sunday afternoon, Pierre Monteaux makes his first appearance of this season at Tanglewood as guest conductor in a program made up of works by Rossni, Bartok and Schubert.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124

JUL 17 1956

Main Events Starting At Tanglewood

The first of the major Berkshire Festival concerts by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be played at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this weekend.

Series A opens Friday night in the big music shed at 8:30 o'clock. Mr. Munch will conduct the orchestra in Berlioz's "Roman Carnival" Overture; Debussy's Prelude to "The Afternoon Of A Faun"; Ravel's Rapsodie Espagnol; and Brahms' Second Symphony.

Monteux Scheduled

Saturday night, the program will include the Adagio For Strings, by Samuel Barber; Martinu's Symphony No. 6 (Fantaisies Symphoniques); and the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkuere," for which the soloists will be Margaret Harshaw, soprano, Albert da Costa, tenor, and James Pease, bass.

On Sunday, Pierre Monteux, conductor of the San Francisco Symphony, will lead the Boston Symphony in Rossini's Overture for "L'Italiana in Algeri"; the Bartok Concerto For Orchestra, and Schubert's Seventh Symphony.

St. John Passion Heard By Sellout Festival Audience

A sell-out Theater-Concert Hall audience heard an inspiring performance of the Passion According To St. John by Johann Sebastian Bach at the Sunday afternoon performance of the work by the Chamber Orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Festival Chorus, directed by Hugh Ross and a stellar lineup of vocal soloists, at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

With the Hall filled to capacity, the large crowd spilled over onto the wide green lawns of Tanglewood to listen with rapt attention to the performance of the great devotional work by Bach.

With the impressive quality of musical and vocal artistry displayed at this well-attended concert, it is difficult to single out ony element or group, such as the orchestra, chorus, or soloists for praise in excess of the others.

The delicate blending of voices, the excellent harmony and the dept of emotion communicated by the Festival Chorus under the Direction of Hugh Ross was a magnificent portrayal of what Bach must have been trying to express when he penned the immortal work over two hundred years ago. It was first performed in Leipzig, shortly before Bach was installed as Cantor of St. Thomas Church there.

John McCollum's tenor voice as the Evangelist was an outstanding experience for the audience. He sang the role with power and deep understanding of the tragic theme. A high point in his performance, we think, was his Aria just preceding the intermission in the first part of the "Passion."

Florence Kopleff's solo contralto singing was an auditory delight as she showed great precision and power in executing some of the more rapid and difficult parts called for by her role.

The ever-popular artist Miss Adele Addison endeared herself to the audience with the pure tones of her soprano solo rendition.

James Joyce in the bass roles of Peter and Pilate; and Mac Morgan with his bass presentation of the part of Jesus, filled out the remainder of the group of vocal soloists with a high degree of artistic understanding.

The orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, was the unifying element in the lengthy work. Never overwhelming in volume, it struck a nice balance in giving the proper perspective and depth of feeling to the "Johannes-passion."

Instrumental soloists included Daniel Pinkham on Harpsichord, Louis Speyer on Oboe d'amore, Alfred Zighera on Viola de gamba and Edouard Nies-Berger on the Organ.

The setting at Tanglewood was ideal for the presentation with the towering white cumulus clouds over the green Berkshire Hills and the wind softly penetrating the tall pines of the beautiful estate creating an inspiring background for a monumental work singing the praises of God.

The series of twelve concerts in the huge Music Shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. with Mr. Munch conducting the "Roman Carnival" overture by Berlioz; the prelude to "Afternoon Of A Faun" by Debussy; Ravel's "Rapsodie Espagnole" and the Brahms Symphony No. 2 in D major.

A change has been announced for the Saturday evening program. Samuel Barber's "Adagio For Strings" will open the program and will be followed by "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6) by Bohuslav Martinu, called "the best new orchestral work presented in New York in 1955" by the New York Music Critics' Circle. The works replace the previously announced "A Faust Overture," Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried," and Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde."

In addition to the substitution, the concert will include the first act of "Die Walkure" with Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa and James Pease as soloists.

On Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p.m., Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in performances of the Rossini overture to "L' Italina In Algeri," The Bartok Concerto for Orchestra, with Ruth Posselt as soloist, and the Schubert Symphony No. 7 in C. major.

L.F.M.

[90]

Boston Symphony Schedules 27 Concerts In 13 Countries

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play twenty-seven concerts in thirteen countries during its five-and-a-half week tour of Europe in August and September, manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., announced recently.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, its Music Director for the past seven years, the 106 players of the Bostor Symphony will fly to Europe immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival here on August 12.

Continued on Page Five

Boston Symphony Orchestra

Continued from Page One

The first of two concerts in Ireland will be played in Cork on Friday evening, August 24, followed by a matinee in Dublin the next day. Five concerts will be given at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, August 26-30, then the Symphony will visit Scandinavia for four days.

A highlight of the tour is the invitation, recently issued by the Ministry of Culture in Moscow and immediately accepted by the Board of Trustees of the orchestra, for the Boston Symphony to be the first American orchestra to perform in the U.S.S.R. During the six days, September 5-10, the orchestra will be in Soviet territory, a pair of concerts will be given each in Leningrad and Moscow. The U.S.S.R. will assume the expenses of this portion of the tour, including transportation by air and train, and will also pay a stipend for the four concerts. It is expected the Russian government will fly the members of the orchestra, its staff and equipment from Helsinki to Leningrad, and from Moscow to its next date in Prague, capital of Czechoslovakia.

Concerts subsequently will be performed in Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres (where the orchestra has been invited to play in the famous Cathedral), Leeds and London.

Pierre Monteux, once regular music director of the Boston Symphony (1919-1924), has been invited by his friend and colleague, Dr. Munch, to conduct some ten of the orchestra's 27 concerts abroad.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's tour of Europe is to be made in cooperation with the International Exchange Program of the American National Theatre and Academy, the professional agency appointed by the State Department to assist American performing artists to tour abroad, to help cover the cost of trans-Atlantic transportation by air, and to help defray deficits to the orchestra from concerts abroad.

The six-week 24 concert schedule of the Berkshire Festival which opened last week terminates on Sunday afternoon, August 12. On Tuesday afternoon, August 14, a K.L.M. Royal Dutch Airlines chartered Super Constellation will transport 79 persons from Logan Airport, Boston, to Shannon Airport, Ireland. Some 40 persons will sail simultaneously, along with the orchestra's 16,000 pounds of instruments and scores and baggabe aboard the Nieuw Amsterdam, of the Holland-American Line, from Boston to Cobh, Ireland. A 59-passenger K.L.M. Constellation will bring the rearguard of the orchestra to Ireland on August 22. Included in total party will be a staff of ten, some wives and members of the orchestra, and newspaper critics.

At the conclusion of the second London concert in Festival Hall on September 25, two chartered planes again will fly the Boston Symphony's tour personnel across the Atlantic and a special air freighter will return their equipment simultaneously for the opening of the orchestra's 76th season in Boston's Symphony Hall on Friday, October 5.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Free Press
MELROSE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,490

JUL 19 1956

Berkshire Music Festival To Open Week End of July 20

The famous Berkshire Music Festival, at Tanglewood, opens this weekend, July 20.

Friday evening's 8:30 performance, according to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, will feature works on Brahms, Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel. On Saturday, at the same time, a night of Wagner is in store for visitors to this music lovers paradise. Sunday, the performance begins at 2:30 p.m. Works of Rossini, Bartok, as well as Schubert's Symphony No. 7 in C major, are scheduled.

The entire family will enjoy a weekend in the Berkshires. Swimming, fishing, hiking, boating, picnicking and recreational facilities galore dot the natural playgrounds that make up the Hills.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and the Festival, is located on Route 7, south of Pittsfield. Main east-west routes 2-9 and 20, all connect with Route 7.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Journal
ROCKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Republican
Circ. 3,549

JUL 19 1956

SCHEDULE GIVEN FOR TANGLEWOOD THIS WEEKEND

Work on Brahms, Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel will be featured Friday at 8:30 p.m. at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood. On Satuprday at the same time; a night of Wagner is in store for visitores. Sunday the performance begins at 2:30 p.m. Works of Rossini, Bartok, as well as Schubert's Symphony No. 7 in C major, are scheduled.

Swimming, fishing, hiking, boating, picknicking and recreational facilities also dot the natural playgrounds that make up the Hills, the Massachusetts Department of Commerce says.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and the Festival, is located on Route 7, south of Pittsfield. Main east-west routes 2-9 and 20, all connect with Route 7.

Harshaw Soloist In 'Tanglewood'; Center Benefit

Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera soprano, and Ralph Berkowitz, pianist, donated their services in concert in "Tanglewood" last night for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony. The orchestra's Brass Ensemble, led by Roger Voisin, also performed.

Miss Harshaw

Tomorrow night, Dr. Charles Munch and the full 106-piece orchestra will present the first of this season's 12 Berkshire Festival concerts in the Music Shed in "Tanglewood." Dr. Munch has chosen a program comprised of Berlioz's Overture, "The Roman Carnival"; Debussy's "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun"; the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe"; and Brahms' Second Symphony. A new recording by Dr. Munch and the orchestra of the Brahms Symphony has just been released by RCA-Victor.

Pease

Da Costa

Saturday night Dr. Munch conducts a concert performance of Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkure" with Miss Harshaw as Sieglinde, Albert Da Costa as Siegmund, and James Pease os Hunding; also Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and the "Tanglewood" premiere of Brohuslav Marinu's "Fantasies Symphonique." On Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux makes his first appearance of this season at "Tanglewood" as guest conductor in a program made up of works by Rossini, Bartok and Schubert.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald
CRANSTON, R. I.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 4,724

JUL 19 1956

Berkshires Scene Of Music Festival This Weekend

LENOX, MASS., — Inspiring, relaxing music, floating on the cool breezes that play in the rolling vistas of the beautiful Berkshire Hills — all this, and more, is yours by simply visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival, at enchanting Tanglewood, this weekend, beginning July 20th.

Friday evening's 8:30 performance, according to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, will feature works on Brahms, Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel. On Saturday, at the same time, a night of Wagner is in store for visitors to this music lovers paradise. Sunday, the performance begins at 2:30 p.m. Works of Rossini, Bartok, as well as Schubert's Symphony No. 7 in C major, are scheduled.

Bring the entire family along for a memorable weekend in the Berkshires. Swimming fishing, hiking, boating, picnicking and recreational facilities galore dot the natural playgrounds that make up the Hills.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and the Festival, is located on Route 7, south of Pittsfield Main east-west routes 2, 9 and 20, all connect with Route 7.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Review
DARIEN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,094

JUL 19 1956

OPERA AT TANGLEWOOD

An evening comprising acts from five 19th Century operas will be given by students of the opera department of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, on Monday, July 30, at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2325

JUL 19 1956

Festival Concerts Move Into High Gear

Entire Boston Symphony Will Be Heard Friday

Orchestra to Inaugurate Seventy-fifth Anniversary Year Tomorrow Night With Music of Berlioz, Ravel and Brahms.—Other Programs Set for Saturday and Sunday.

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Lenox move into high gear this week. The entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate tomorrow evening the annual series of 12 week-end concerts in the huge 6000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood. In 1955 the Shed concerts attracted an audience of 108,336, or an average attendance of 9028 persons.

A feature of the Shed series will be first Tanglewood performances of four symphonic works commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during this, its 75th anniversary season, from Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi, who is guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer; from Aaron Copland, Howard Hanson and Walter Piston. Charles Munch will also devote two of the Shed concerts to concert versions of Wagner operas.

During the Shed season his podium will be shared by Pierre Monteux, who was conductor of the orchestra from 1919-1924 and who has been invited by Dr. Munch to share the conducting during the forthcoming European tour; by Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra since 1920; by Leonard Bernstein, who has headed the Berkshire Music Center's department of orchestra and conducting since 1946; and by Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro, who is filling Mr. Bernstein's post on the music school's faculty during the latter's sabbatical this summer.

Friday's program of Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel and Brahms by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be led by Dr. Munch. He also will conduct an all-Wagner program, featuring the first act of "Die Walkure," sung in concert version by Miss Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera tenor Albert Da Costa, and basso James Pease on Saturday, and a program of Rossini, Bartok and Schubert led by Mr. Monteux, a regular guest on the Tanglewood podium since 1951, will be given Sunday afternoon.

Music performed during the week for the first time at Berkshire Festival concerts will be: Wagner, "Faust Overture" and Act I. "Die Walkure" on Saturday; and Rossini, Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri" and Bartok, Concerto for Orchestra on Sunday.

A bonus for festival patrons will be the first of four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a.m. Saturday, for which a nominal charge is made for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

The fourth week of Berkshire Festival concerts will commence with a program of chamber music of Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms by The Beaux Arts Trio, Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano, on Wednesday, July 25, in the Theatre-Concert Hall. In the Music Shed Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, July 27, in works by Beethoven, Petrassi and Tchaikovsky, and Saturday evening, July 28, in music by Hanson, Schuman, Honegger and Debussy, with Rudolph Serkin as piano soloist. The Sunday afternoon, July 29, Music Shed concert is conducted by Richard Burgin, with Ruth Posselt as violin soloist, music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler.

[91]

FAMOUS FACE . . . Charles Munch, internationally known conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will again be the chief director at Tanglewood concerts in the big shed this summer. Tomorrow evening marks the opening of the big shed part of the Berkshire Festival.

PROGRAM LISTED AT TANGLEWOOD

This weekend's Music Shed concerts at Tanglewood, in Lenox, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening, July 21: Samuel Barber: Adagio for Strings; Bohuslav Martinu: Fantaisies Symphoniques; Wagner: Die Walkure, Act I, with soloists Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, James Pease; Charles Munch, conductor. Sunday afternoon, July 22: Rossini: Overture to L'Italiana in Algeri; Bartok: Concerto for Orchestra; Schubert: Symphony No. 7, in C Major; Pierre Monteux, conductor.

Next week the Berkshire Festival moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, with a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms by The Beaux Arts Trio, fourth in a series of six Wednesday evening programs of this nature, in the Theatre-Concert Hall on July 25.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday (July 27 and Saturday (July 28) evenings, and the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 29).

Dr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer who is guest teacher of composition this summer at the orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center.

The Saturday evening Festival concert is composed of works by Schumann, Honegger, Debussy, and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Howard Hanson, director of music at the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, New York.

Both the Petrassi Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, on Friday night and the Hanson Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky on Saturday evening were commissioned jointly by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitzky Music Foundation for the current, 75th, anniversary of the orchestra, and were introduced to audiences during the past winter in Boston.

Rudolf Serkin, the celebrated pianist will be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor, on July 28.

Richard Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert consists fo music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler, with Ruth Posselt — in private life, Mrs. Burgin — as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Mr. Burgin, with William Kroll, heads the chamber music teaching at the Berkshire Music Center, where Miss Posselt is also on the faculty.

TANGLEWOOD — FRIDAY
By A. C. S.

Those who braved the rain on Friday evening were richly rewarded for their efforts. A program of music by Mozart featured three piano concertos. Boris Goldovsky, well-known in the operatic field, appeared as both conductor and performer. His uncle, Pierre Luboshutz, also undertook the double role.

Considering his many activities, the performance of Mr. Goldovsky in the Piano Concerto in A Major was a very high standard, thoughtful, well-wrought, often exciting. As a conductor he handled the orchestra with an artist's hand, always maintaining a perfect balance of forces, selecting the suitable tempo, and communicating to musicians and audience alike a spirit thoroughly attuned to the work at hand. There was strength and vitality, warmth and song, all adding up to a fruitful reading.

The seldom heard Concerto in F Major for Three Pianos found Mr. Goldovsky and the piano team of Luboshutz and Nemenoff in delightful rapport. The duo also gave an excellent performance of the popular Concerto in E Flat Major. Portions of the D Major Serenade opened the program.

TANGLEWOOD
SATURDAY AND SUNDAY
By A. C. S.

Those who say they cannot stand Bach would have been converted Saturday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood. With Charles Munch on the podium and the able assistance of members of the Boston Symphony, music from the "Coethen period" was presented.

The Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 opened the program. Roger Voisin managed the difficult and exciting high trumpet part expertly, while Doriot Dwyer, Ralph Gomberg, and Richard Burgin gave excellent account of the other solo instruments: flute, oboe, and violin.

William Kroll, famous for his work in chamber music, appeared as soloist in the E Major Violin Concerto. He displayed a fine technique but, with the exception of the slow movement, seemed only to skim the surface of the work.

Mrs. Dwyer was triumphant as usual in the delightful Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings. As is often the case, the final movement of the suite had to be repeated to satisfy the demands of the large audience. Mr. Munch chose a burst of Baroque splendor, the Suite No. 3, for the close.

The Sunday offering was a finely wrought performance of Bach's St. John Passion. John McCollum was in excellent voice for the exacting role of the Evangelist. Great expressivity and clarity of diction marked his presentation. Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, and James Joyce, bass, also made outstanding vocal contributions in solo parts. Mac Morgan, in the role of Jesus, was often barely audible. Even soto voce singing must have projection. The Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross, was beautifully trained and utterly responsive to the direction of Charles Munch.

A word should be said about occasional imbalance in the various musical elements. It was a pity that the organ should protrude at intervals, and that the strings should sometimes fail to match the wondrous piannissimos of the chorus. These tended to detract from the otherwise inspiring performance.

[92]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

JUL 19 1956

Brass Ensemble, Margaret Harshaw In Feature Roles

The ninth program of the Tanglewood season was given in the Theatre-Concert Hall last night for a relatively small audience of 1483.

The Boston Symphony brass ensemble presented the first half of the program, with music from the 1600s to the 20th century.

The ensemble was under the direction of Roger Voisin who, with Armando Ghitalla played trumpets. Harold Shapiro and Paul Keaney were heard on the French horns, Josef Orosz and Kauko Kahila, trombones and K. Vinal Smith on the tuba. They played first a Canzon Septimi Toni, No. I, for Double Quartet of Brass by Gabrielli (1557-1612) and second a Toccata from "Ricercari e Canzoni," (First Book) by Bonelli (1531-1612). Both these works were typical of those written for antiphonal brass choirs as used in churches of the day. The echoing from one side to the other, the mellow blending of the brass sounds and the wonderfully predictable harmonies, made these two works the outstanding moments of the evening.

They were followed by a Sonata for Horn, Trumpet and Trombone by Poulenc which was quite delightful for its conversational ease and humorous rapport between the instruments.

A Berezowsky Brass Suite for Seven Instruments was played next. This began with an amusing Fanfare and Galop followed by a Lullaby which was played with muted instruments. The effect was as though you could only catch snatches of the music from a distance. The tuba player was the only one who did not quite succeed in sounding muted. He sounded rather like an unsuccessfully muffled "oom pah pah in the old town band."

Following the intermission Margaret Harshaw, who is with the Metropolitan Opera, sang two groups of songs, one by Wagner and the other by Strauss. We did not stay for more than one of the Strauss lieder but among the Wagner Songs found the Beautiful "traume" easiest to listen to undoubtedly because of its familiarity. Miss Harshaw has an effortless, even boring manner of delivery remarkable control and beautiful tone. It was difficult however to wade through the impact of the German words to get to the melody or voice. Ralph Berkowitz assisted Miss Harshaw very ably at the piano. The intimacy and informality of the theatre concert hall concerts is felt anew each time one attends a concert there, especially after hearing one in the enormous shed. The Wednesday night concerts are all in the smaller hall and are well worth a mid-week trip to Tanglewood for the different sort of musical treat which is offered.—F.M.R.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

JUL 19 1956

BRASS GROUP, SOPRANO GIVE FINE CONCERT

Symphony Ensemble, Miss Harshaw Perform Effectively at Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 18—Entering the third week of chamber music recitals in the concert-theater shed, a tremendously interesting program was presented tonight by a brass ensemble and a great American Wagnerian soprano.

The ensemble was made up of the first desk men of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, directed by Roger Voisin, and it included such virtuoso as Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Harry Shapiro, replacing the ailing Harold Meek; Joseph Oroz and Kauko Kahila, trombones, and Vinal Smith, tuba. William Gibson was the assisting trombonist.

Margaret Harshaw, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Association and Ralph Berkowitz, pianist, gave their services for this concert so that all proceeds might go to the revolving scholarship fund.

It was a clear, cold night and there were very few people outside the concert-theater hall. Those inside were treated to something quite different as the brass ensemble went through a program which included works by Gabrieli, Bonelli, Poulenc and Berezowsky. There was a stunning ensemble tone and the blending of instruments was perfect.

Another particularly provocative work was the brass suite for seven instruments by Berezowsky. Its four movements encompass a charming lullaby, a delightful waltz and a glittering rondo, to say nothing of the opening fanfare and galop. The audience was obviously delighted with this portion of the program.

Margaret Harshaw is an American singer and a very good one. The voice is large and admirably projected. We still feel that voices of this sort are heard to better advantage with orchestra accompaniment. Tonight she sang the five "Wesendonck" songs by Wagner. The texts are written by Mathilde Wesendonck, hence the nomenclature. Had Miss Harshaw been able to command the colors and beauty of tone which Ralph Berkowitz provided in accompaniment, the song cycle would have had an ideal interpretation, for Miss Harshaw has the voice and the understanding of text. She was particularly effective in "Schmerzen" and "Traume," the latter giving a bit of an idea as to how Miss Harshaw will sing "Tristam and Isolde." She is the logical successor of Flagstad and one may expect great results from this very fine artist.

In a group of songs by Richard Strauss, superbly accompanied by Mr. Berkowitz, we found Miss Harshaw impressive in such songs as "Ruhe, Meine Seele," and "Kling." There was also a delightful charm to "Nights."

Friday night the opening concert in the shed promises to lure a huge audience. Charles Munch will conduct and he has chosen some of his finest interpretations, including Debussy's "Prelude a l'Apres-Midi D'un Faun" and Ravel's "Daphnis et Chloe," "Ballet, Second Suite." The program will conclude with the second symphony of Brahms.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald
NATICK, Mass.
Weekly Ind. Dem.
Circ. 2,000

JUL 19 1956

Break Ground For New Shadowbrook

Tuesday, July 31st which marks the 400th Anniversary of the death of St. Ignatius of Loyola, will be ground-breaking day for the new Shadowbrook - St. Stanislaus Novitiate - at Lenox, Mass. The ceremonies will begin at 1:30 P. M. The trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Tanglewood Music Festival Association have kindly loaned the use of their facilities at Tanglewood for the ceremonies at which Archbishop Richard J. Cushing D.D. will deliver the address.

Berkshire Eagle, Friday, July 20, 1956

Petrovec

THE TANGLEWOOD STUDY GROUP rehearses for an informal program to be presented tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 in the Barn at Tanglewood. Ingolf Dahl, head of the study group, and Florence Dunn, right, associate, will direct the program which is open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will open tonight at 8:30 in Music Shed for first of 12 weekend concerts by full 106-piece orchestra with Dr. Charles Munch conducting.

BSO Moves to the Music Shed For First of Twelve Concerts

TANGLEWOOD — The first of this season's concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given tonight at 8:30 in the Music Shed with Dr. Charles Munch conducting.

Tonight's program will be comprised of Berlioz' Overture, "The Roman Carnival," Debussy's "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun," the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe," and Brahms' Second Symphony, which has just been released by RCA-Victor in a new recording by Dr. Munch and the BSO.

The Shed concert tonight will be the first of 12 to be given in the huge auditorium by the full orchestra, all of which will be concentrated in the final four weekends of the Berkshire Festival on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. Last year the 12 Shed concerts were attended by 108,336 persons, for an average of 9,028 for each performance.

Soloists Tomorrow

Tomorrow night Dr. Munch conducts the Tanglewood premiere of the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure," in concert form, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, and Albert Da Costa, tenor, both of the Metropolitan Opera, and James Pease, basso. Miss Harshaw made her Tanglewood debut last summer with the Boston Symphony in a concert performance of Beethoven's "Fidelio." Mr. Da Costa, singing with the Boston Symphony and at Tanglewood for the first time, is a young tenor who made his debut at the Metropolitan last season in "Die Meistersinger," a role he will sing at the final Tanglewood concert Aug. 12.

Mr. Pease is a former Berkshire Music Center student returning to Tanglewood after European triumphs in the Wagner repertory with the Hamburg Opera Company. The Saturday night program also includes two Tanglewood first performances by the orchestra: Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and Bohuslav Martinu's Symphonic Fantasies. The latter was commissioned by Dr. Munch for the Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary.

Remaining seats for tonight's concert, as well as for all remaining concerts in this summer's Berkshire Festival, are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office and telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

Opera Student At Tanglewood To Sing Sunday

DALTON — Harold S. Johnson, who is spending the summer at Tanglewood in the opera department, will be guest soloist at the First Congregational Church Sunday. Mr. Johnson, a native of Chicago, is a graduate of the Illinois School of Music where he was a member of the opera department. In addition to his work as a member of the opera department, he has done a great deal of religious music in the midwest.

Mr. Johnson, who is studying under Boris Goldovsky, has been assigned the part of the Impresario in Mozart's Impresario which will be presented next Tuesday evening at Tanglewood. In the fall he plans to go to New York and start his singing career as well as engaging in further study.

At the morning service he will sing "God Is My Shepherd" from the biblical songs of Dvorak and "If With All Your Hearts" from the Elijah by Mendelssohn.

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746
JUL 20 1956

First Berkshire Festival Concert In Shed Tonight

Lenox, July 19—The Berkshire Festival moves to the Music Shed Friday night when the first of this season's concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8:30.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will conduct a program comprised of Berlioz' Overture, "The Roman Carnival," Debussy's Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun, the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe," and Brahms' Second Symphony, which has just been released by RCA-Victor in a new recording by Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

As in the last two seasons, there will be 12 concerts in the Shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, all of them concentrated in the final four week ends of the Festival, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons.

Last season the 12 Shed concerts attracted a total attendance of 108,336, for an average of 9028.

On Saturday, Dr. Munch conducts the Tanglewood premiere of the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure," in concert form, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, and Albert Da Costa, tenor, both of the Metropolitan Opera, and James Pease, basso.

The Saturday night program also includes two Tanglewood first performances by the orchestra: Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and Bohuslav Martinu's Symphonic Fantasies.

On Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux returns to Tanglewood for the first of two appearances this summer, marking the fifth consecutive year that he has been guest conductor at the Berkshire Festival.

Paul Fromm

Rescuer of Necktie Salesmen

(Time Magazine)

Although U.S. foundations have poured out millions in support of the nation's composers, the big money has usually gone to the big names. For many a talented newcomer, a musical grubstake is still virtually impossible to find. In the audience at Tanglewood last week sat a man who has committed much of his time and most of his fortune to changing all that. He is 49-year-old Chicago wine importer Paul Fromm, and he was at Tanglewood to hear the works of two of his protégés, Ben Weber's "Serenade for Strings" and Alvin Epstein's "Sabina Fair," premiéred by members of the Boston Symphony.

When he set up his Fromm Music Foundation four years ago, Paul Fromm was nourishing an ambition as old as his student days in Germany. The son of a prosperous wine grower, he early became an enthusiastic supporter of contemporary German music, was on the point of establishing a music foundation in his homeland when he was forced to flee the country during Hitler's pogroms of 1938. In the U.S. he prospered quickly, set up his own wine-importing firm and bought into several other businesses. By 1952 he was ready to turn his attention to U.S. music.

Fromm's plan was simple. Computing the profits from his various enterprises, he set aside enough to finance expansion and to support himself and his family in an unpretentious seven-room apartment ("We live well, but we are not country club"), gave all the rest (roughly $50,000 a year) to the Fromm Foundation. To help him select worthy recipients of his charities, Founder Fromm hired a permanent four-man reviewing staff of professional musicians—Violinist Alexander Schneider, Brooklyn College's Siegmund Levarie, De Paul's Alexander Tcherepnin and the American Conservatory of Music's Max Sinzheimer—(supplemented by occasional guest experts), gave them complete autonomy to award grants to composers who might or might not be to his personal taste. Of the more than 600 young composers whose works the staff has reviewed, only 56 have received grants. "There is a lot of just good stuff; we are looking for art," explains Fromm. Although the initial awards are modest ($350 to $1,000), the foundation is prepared to "commit" itself to a composer for several years, i.e., to stay with him until he has achieved the reputation that will enable him to go on to bigger stipends from bigger foundations or stand alone. Beyond providing cash awards, the foundation arranges public performances of its composers' works, has then printed, recorded and released through regular channels.

Paul Fromm's reward for his good works is the knowledge that he has saved many a first-rate composer from money-grubbing. (On the theory that too much money can be as destructive as too little, he has also vowed never to expose his daughter to the temptations of a large inheritance.) He regards as one of his major triumphs the liberation of Benjamin Lees from the stress of film music writing. "If Ben kept it up, he would go to pieces musically," says Fromm. Last week's Tanglewood concert helped to get Composer Epstein a music teaching job. "We need the young composers far more than they need us," says Fromm. "All the foundation can do is see that they don't have to sell neckties."

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through Aug. 12

Berkshire Festival
BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

Shed Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra

FRI., July 20, at 8:30—BERLIOZ—DEBUSSY—RAVEL—BRAHMS (MUNCH)
SAT., July 21, at 8:30—BARBER—MARTINU—WAGNER (MUNCH)
SUN., July 22, at 2:30—ROSSINI—BARTOK—SCHUBERT (MONTEUX)

Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $3.50, $4, $5.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Admission $2)
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. Phone LEnox 666
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

OPEN REHEARSAL SAT. at 10 A.M.—ADMISSION $1.00

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUL 20 1956

Major Concerts At Tanglewood This Weekend

The 1956 Berkshire Festival moves across the spacious lawn at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight from the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall to the great Music Shed, when the first of this season's concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given. Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, will conduct a program comprised of Berlioz' Overture, "The Roman Carnival," Debussy's Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun, the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe," and Brahm's Second Symphony.

There will be twelves concerts in the Shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, all of them concentrated in the final four week ends of the Festival, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons.

Tomorrow night Dr. Munch conducts the Tanglewood premiere of the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure," in concert form, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, and Albert Da Costa, tenor, both of the Metropolitan Opera, and James Pease, basso. Miss Harshaw made her Tanglewood debut last summer with the Boston Symphony in a concert performance of Beethoven's "Fidelio." Mr. Da Costa, singing with the Boston Symphony and at Tanglewood for the first time, is a young tenor who made a sensational debut at the Metropolitan last season in "Die Meistersinger," a role he will sing at the final Tanglewood concert August 12. Mr. Pease is a former Berkshire Music Center student returning to Tanglewood after European triumphs in the Wagner repertory with the Hamburg Opera Company. The Saturday night program also includes two Tanglewood first performances by the orchestra: Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and Bohuslav Martinu's Symphonic Fantasies. The latter was commissioned by Dr. Munch for the Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary.

Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux, eighty-one year old former regular conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra who has been invited by Charles Munch to share some of the conducting with him on the forthcoming European tour of the Orchestra, returns to Tanglewood for the first of two appearances this summer, marking the fifth consecutive year that he has been guest conductor at the Berkshire Festival.

Pierre Monteux has chosen an all orchestral program — the Overture to Rossini's opera, "L'Italiana in Algeri," Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra, and the great C Major Symphony No. 7 by Schubert.

[93]

Berkshire Eagle, Friday, July 20, 1956

Petrovec

THE TANGLEWOOD STUDY GROUP rehearses for an informal program to be presented tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 in the Barn at Tanglewood. Ingolf Dahl, head of the study group, and Florence Dunn, right, associate, will direct the program which is open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will open tonight at 8:30 in Music Shed for first of 12 weekend concerts by full 106-piece orchestra with Dr. Charles Munch conducting.

BSO Moves to the Music Shed For First of Twelve Concerts

TANGLEWOOD — The first of this season's concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given tonight at 8:30 in the Music Shed with Dr. Charles Munch conducting.

Tonight's program will be comprised of Berlioz' Overture, "The Roman Carnival," Debussy's "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun," the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe," and Brahms' Second Symphony, which has just been released by RCA-Victor in a new recording by Dr. Munch and the BSO.

The Shed concert tonight will be the first of 12 to be given in the huge auditorium by the full orchestra, all of which will be concentrated in the final four weekends of the Berkshire Festival on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. Last year the 12 Shed concerts were attended by 108,336 persons, for an average of 9,028 for each performance.

Soloists Tomorrow

Tomorrow night Dr. Munch conducts the Tanglewood premiere of the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure," in concert form, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, and Albert Da Costa, tenor, both of the Metropolitan Opera, and James Pease, basso. Miss Harshaw made her Tanglewood debut last summer with the Boston Symphony in a concert performance of Beethoven's "Fidelio." Mr. Da Costa, singing with the Boston Symphony and at Tanglewood for the first time, is a young tenor who made his debut at the Metropolitan last season in "Die Meistersinger," a role he will sing at the final Tanglewood concert Aug. 12.

Mr. Pease is a former Berkshire Music Center student returning to Tanglewood after European triumphs in the Wagner repertory with the Hamburg Opera Company. The Saturday night program also includes two Tanglewood first performances by the orchestra: Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and Bohuslav Martinu's Symphonic Fantasies. The latter was commissioned by Dr. Munch for the Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary.

Remaining seats for tonight's concert, as well as for all remaining concerts in this summer's Berkshire Festival, are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office and telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

JUL 20 1956

First Berkshire Festival Concert In Shed Tonight

Lenox, July 19—The Berkshire Festival moves to the Music Shed Friday night when the first of this season's concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8:30.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will conduct a program comprised of Berlioz' Overture, "The Roman Carnival," Debussy's Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun, the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe," and Brahms' Second Symphony, which has just been released by RCA-Victor in a new recording by Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

As in the last two seasons, there will be 12 concerts in the Shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, all of them concentrated in the final four week ends of the Festival, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons.

Last season the 12 Shed concerts attracted a total attendance of 108,336, for an average of 9028.

On Saturday, Dr. Munch conducts the Tanglewood premiere of the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure," in concert form, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, and Albert Da Costa, tenor, both of the Metropolitan Opera, and James Pease, basso.

The Saturday night program also includes two Tanglewood first performances by the orchestra: Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and Bohuslav Martinu's Symphonic Fantasies.

On Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux returns to Tanglewood for the first of two appearances this summer, marking the fifth consecutive year that he has been guest conductor at the Berkshire Festival.

Paul Fromm

Rescuer of Necktie Salesmen

(Time Magazine)

Although U.S. foundations have poured out millions in support of the nation's composers, the big money has usually gone to the big names. For many a talented newcomer, a musical grubstake is still virtually impossible to find. In the audience at Tanglewood last week sat a man who has committed much of his time and most of his fortune to changing all that. He is 49-year-old Chicago wine importer Paul Fromm, and he was at Tanglewood to hear the works of two of his protégés, Ben Weber's "Serenade for Strings" and Alvin Epstein's "Sabina Fair," premiéred by members of the Boston Symphony.

When he set up his Fromm Music Foundation four years ago, Paul Fromm was nourishing an ambition as old as his student days in Germany. The son of a prosperous wine grower, he early became an enthusiastic supporter of contemporary German music, was on the point of establishing a music foundation in his homeland when he was forced to flee the country during Hitler's pogroms of 1938. In the U.S. he prospered quickly, set up his own wine-importing firm and bought into several other businesses. By 1952 he was ready to turn his attention to U.S. music.

Fromm's plan was simple. Computing the profits from his various enterprises, he set aside enough to finance expansion and to support himself and his family in an unpretentious seven-room apartment ("We live well, but we are not country club"), gave all the rest (roughly $50,000 a year) to the Fromm Foundation. To help him select worthy recipients of his charities, Founder Fromm hired a permanent four-man reviewing staff of professional musicians—Violinist Alexander Schneider, Brooklyn College's Siegmund Levarie, De Paul's Alexander Tcherepnin and the American Conservatory of Music's Max Sinzheimer — (supplemented by occasional guest experts), gave them complete autonomy to award grants to composers who might or might not be to his personal taste. Of the more than 600 young composers whose works the staff has reviewed, only 56 have received grants. "There is a lot of just good stuff; we are looking for art," explains Fromm. Although the initial awards are modest ($350 to $1,000), the foundation is prepared to "commit" itself to a composer for several years, i.e., to stay with him until he has achieved the reputation that will enable him to go on to bigger stipends from bigger foundations or stand alone. Beyond providing cash awards, the foundation arranges public performances of its composers' works, has then printed, recorded and released through regular channels.

Paul Fromm's reward for his good works is the knowledge that he has saved many a first-rate composer from money-grubbing. (On the theory that too much money can be as destructive as too little, he has also vowed never to expose his daughter to the temptations of a large inheritance.) He regards as one of his major triumphs the liberation of Benjamin Lees from the stress of film music writing. "If Ben kept it up, he would go to pieces musically," says Fromm. Last week's Tanglewood concert helped to get Composer Epstein a music teaching job. "We need the young composers far more than they need us," says Fromm. "All the foundation can do is see that they don't have to sell neckties."

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through Aug. 12

Berkshire Festival
BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

Shed Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra

FRI., July 20, at 8:30—BERLIOZ—DEBUSSY—RAVEL—BRAHMS (MUNCH)
SAT., July 21, at 8:30—BARBER—MARTINU—WAGNER (MUNCH)
SUN., July 22, at 2:30—ROSSINI—BARTOK—SCHUBERT (MONTEUX)

Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Admission $2)
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

OPEN REHEARSAL SAT. at 10 A.M.—ADMISSION $1.00

Opera Student At Tanglewood To Sing Sunday

DALTON — Harold S. Johnson, who is spending the summer at Tanglewood in the opera department, will be guest soloist at the First Congregational Church Sunday. Mr. Johnson, a native of Chicago, is a graduate of the Illinois School of Music where he was a member of the opera department. In addition to his work as a member of the opera department, he has done a great deal of religious music in the midwest.

Mr. Johnson, who is studying under Boris Goldovsky, has been assigned the part of the Impresario in Mozart's Impresario which will be presented next Tuesday evening at Tanglewood. In the fall he plans to go to New York and start his singing career as well as engaging in further study.

At the morning service he will sing "God Is My Shepherd" from the biblical songs of Dvorak and "If With All Your Hearts" from the Elijah by Mendelssohn.

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

JUL 20 1956

Major Concerts At Tanglewood This Weekend

The 1956 Berkshire Festival moves across the spacious lawn at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight from the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall to the great Music Shed, when the first of this season's concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given. Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, will conduct a program comprised of Berlioz' Overture, "The Roman Carnival," Debussy's Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun, the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe," and Brahm's Second Symphony.

There will be twelves concerts in the Shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, all of them concentrated in the final four week ends of the Festival, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons.

Tomorrow night Dr. Munch conducts the Tanglewood premiere of the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure," in concert form, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, and Albert Da Costa, tenor, both of the Metropolitan Opera, and James Pease, basso. Miss Harshaw made her Tanglewood debut last summer with the Boston Symphony in a concert performance of Beethoven's "Fidelio." Mr. Da Costa, singing with the Boston Symphony and at Tanglewood for the first time, is a young tenor who made a sensational debut at the Metropolitan last season in "Die Meistersinger," a role he will sing at the final Tanglewood concert August 12. Mr. Pease is a former Berkshire Music Center student returning to Tanglewood after European triumphs in the Wagner repertory with the Hamburg Opera Company. The Saturday night program also includes two Tanglewood first performances by the orchestra: Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and Bohuslav Martinu's Symphonic Fantasies. The latter was commissioned by Dr. Munch for the Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary.

Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux, eighty-one year old former regular conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra who has been invited by Charles Munch to share some of the conducting with him on the forthcoming European tour of the Orchestra, returns to Tanglewood for the first of two appearances this summer, marking the fifth consecutive year that he has been guest conductor at the Berkshire Festival.

Pierre Monteux has chosen an all orchestral program — the Overture to Rossini's opera, "L'Italiana in Algeri," Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra, and the great C Major Symphony No. 7 by Schubert.

Westbury Music Fair Goes 2 Shows a Night on Saturday

DAILY MIRROR FRIDAY JULY 20 1956

Lee Guber, Frank Ford and Shelly Gross, producers of the Westbury (L.I.) Music Fair, announce that they will institute a new policy of presenting two performances on Saturday nights, one at 6 p.m., another at 9:30 p.m., beginning Saturday night with the final performances of "Kismet."

This policy of two Saturday night shows continues throughout the Summer, and the Saturday matinees are, henceforth, eliminated.

* * *

NEXT WEEK'S ATTRACTION, starting Monday, is "Guys and Dolls," starring Phil Foster, Marilyn Ross, Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom and Joey Faye. It will play through Saturday night, Aug. 4.

William and Jean Eckart have been commissioned to design the settings for the forthcoming musical comedy, "Li'l Abner." They currently are represented by "Damn Yankees" for which they created both the settings and costumes. "Li'l Abner" opens here in the early Fall.

Jack Kirkland's stage version of "The Man With the Golden Arm" concludes a nine-week extended run at the Cherry Lane Theatre Sunday evening. It will have played 73 times.

CAROL GUSTAFSON, Zolya Talma and Robert Ellenstein have the leading roles in "Anastasia," which opens at the Hyde Park (NY) Playhouse, Monday, for one week.

The Bill Tabbert of "South Pacific and "Fanny" fame will sing in the Rodgers and Hammerstein Concert at Lewisohn Stadium, July 28.

* * *

TOMI ROMER, currently appearing with the American Shakspeare Festival in Stratford, Conn., has been set for a leading role in the Lee Pelzman production of Evan Hunter's "On the Seventh Day."

Marion Marlowe will represent the singers' division of the entertainment committee being formed to welcome Italy's famed Carabinieri Band of Rome. The musical aggregation is due here for a national tour Oct. 3.

Jerry the Clown, a veteran of Ringling Brothers and Barnum-Bailey circus, has joined the Storyland Village staff and will be at the park daily to greet youngsters. Storyland Village, Asbury Park, N. J., now open daily from noon to dusk, is the largest children's attraction on the Atlantic seaboard.

* * *

BECAUSE THEIR presentations of Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" and Rossini's "The Turk in Italy," done in music-theatre style, have met with such solid acclaim at the Green Mansions Theatre, Warrensburg, N. Y., owners Lena Barish and Sam Garlen are contemplating bringing the double-bill to an off-Broadway theatre early in October. The theatre gives four performances a week from now through the end of September.

The 1956 Berkshire Festival moves across the lawn at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight (Fri. day) from the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall to the Music Shed, when the first of this season's concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8:30. As in the last two seasons, there will be 12 concerts in the Shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, all of them concentrated in the final four week ends of the Festival, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons. Last season the twelve Shed concerts attracted a total attendance of 108,336, for an average of 9,028—one and one-half times the seating capacity (6,000), the overflow picnicking on the Tanglewood lawns under the stars or in Sunday sunshine.

TIMES-UNION  Albany, Fri., July 20, 1956

OVERFLOW AUDIENCE AT TANGLEWOOD

This is part of an overflow crowd which couldn't get into the 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood for concerts. Sponsors would be happy if tonight's concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra produces similar results.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

JUL 20 1956

Tanglewood Shed Opening Tonight

The 1956 Berkshire Festival moves across the spacious lawn at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight from the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall to the great Music Shed, when the first of this season's concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8:30. Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, will conduct a program comprised of Berlioz' Overture, "The Roman Carnival," Debussy's Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun, the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe," and Brahms' Second Symphony, which has just been released by RCA-Victor in a new recording by Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

As in the last two seasons there will be twelve concerts in the Shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, all of them concentrated in the final four week ends of the Festival, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons. Last season the twelve Shed concerts attracted a total attendance of 108,336, for an average of 9,028—one and one-half times the seating capacity (6,000), the overflow picnicking on the Tanglewood lawns under the stars or in Sunday sunshine.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

JUL 20 1956

Tanglewood Concerts Move to Shed Tonight

The 1956 Berkshire Festival moves across the spacious lawn at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight from the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall to the great Music Shed, when the first of this season's concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8:30 o'clock. Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will conduct a program comprised of Berlioz' Overture, The Roman Carnival, Debussy's Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun, the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe", and Brahms' Second Symphony.

As in the last two seasons there will be twelve concerts in the shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, all of them concentrated in the final four week ends of the Festival, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons. Last season the twelve Shed concerts attracted a total attendance of 108,336, for an average of 9,028—one and one-half times the seating capacity (6,000), the overflow picnicking on the Tanglewood lawns under the stars or in Sunday sunshine.

TANGLEWOOD PREMIER

Tomorrow night Dr. Munch conducts the Tanglewood premiere of the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure," in concert form, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, and Albert Da Costa, Amstterdam, N. Y., tenor, both of the Metropolitan Opera, and James Pease, basso.

Miss Harshaw made her Tanglewood debut last Summer with the Boston Symphony in a concert performance of Beethoven's "Fidelio." Da Costa, singing with the Boston Symphony and at Tanglewood for the first time, is a young tenor who made a sensational debut at the Metropolitan last season in "Die Meistersinger," a role he will sing at the final Tanglewood concert August 12.

FORMER STUDENT

Pease is a former Berkshire Music Center student returning to Tanglewood after European triumphs in the Wagner repertory with the Hamburg Opera Company. The Saturday night program also includes two Tanglewood first performances by the orchestra: Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and Bohuslav Martinu's Symphonic Fantasies. The latter was commissioned by Dr. Munch for this year's Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary.

Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux, 81-year-old former regular conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra returns to Tanglewood for the first of two appearances this Summer, marking the fifth consecutive year that he has been guest conductor at the Berkshire Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Press
THOMSONVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,800

JUL 19 1956

Concerts Starting At Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., — Inspiring, relaxing music, floating on the cool breezes that play in the rolling vistas of the beautiful Berkshire Hills — all this, and more, is yours by simply visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival at enchanting Tanglewood, this weekend, beginning July 20th.

Friday evening's 8:30 performance, according to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, will feature works on Brahms, Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel. On Saturday, at the same time, a night of Wagner is in store for visitors to this music lovers paradise. Sunday, the performance begins at 2:30 p.m. Works of Rossini, Bartok, as well as Schubert's Symphony No. 7 in C major, are scheduled.

Bring the entire family along for a memorable weekend in the Berkshires. Swimming, fishing, hiking, boating, picnicking and recreational facilites galore dot the natural playgrounds that make up the Hills.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and the Festival, is located on Route 7, south of Pittsfield. Main east-west routes 2-9 and 20, all connect with Route 7.

Berkshire Festival Begins Main Series at Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, in Lenox, will begin its main series of concerts with the first appearance, tonight in the Music Shed, of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in full numbers.

Charles Munch will conduct Berlioz' Overture, "The Roman Carnival"; Debussy's "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun," the Second Suite from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe," and Brahms' Second Symphony.

Saturday night at 8:30, Mr. Munch will feature a concert performance of the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkuere." The soloists will be Margaret Harshaw, soprano, and Albert Da Costa, tenor, both of the Metropolitan Opera, and James Pease, bass. The program will begin with Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings, and will include the Symphonic Fantasies by Martinu.

A SOLOIST TOMORROW at Tanglewood will be soprano Margaret Harshaw.

[94]

Westbury Music Fair Goes 2 Shows a Night on Saturday

Lee Guber, Frank Ford and Shelly Gross, producers of the Westbury (L.I.) Music Fair, announce that they will institute a new policy of presenting two performances on Saturday nights, one at 6 p.m., another at 9:30 p.m., beginning Saturday night with the final performances of "Kismet."

This policy of two Saturday night shows continues throughout the Summer, and the Saturday matinees are, henceforth, eliminated.

* * *

NEXT WEEK'S ATTRACTION, starting Monday, is "Guys and Dolls," starring Phil Foster, Marilyn Ross, Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom and Joey Faye. It will play through Saturday night, Aug. 4.

William and Jean Eckart have been commissioned to design the settings for the forthcoming musical comedy, "Li'l Abner." They currently are represented by "Damn Yankees" for which they created both the settings and costumes. "Li'l Abner" opens here in the early Fall.

Jack Kirkland's stage version of "The Man With the Golden Arm" concludes a nine-week extended run at the Cherry Lane Theatre Sunday evening. It will have played 73 times.

* * *

CAROL GUSTAFSON, Zolya Talma and Robert Ellenstein have the leading roles in "Anastasia," which opens at the Hyde Park (NY) Playhouse, Monday, for one week.

The Bill Tabbert of "South Pacific and "Fanny" fame will sing in the Rodgers and Hammerstein Concert at Lewisohn Stadium, July 28.

* * *

TOMI ROMER, currently appearing with the American Shakspeare Festival in Stratford, Conn., has been set for a leading role in the Lee Pelzman production of Evan Hunter's "On the Seventh Day."

Marion Marlowe will represent the singers' division of the entertainment committee being formed to welcome Italy's famed Carabinieri Band of Rome. The musical aggregation is due here for a national tour Oct. 3.

Jerry the Clown, a veteran of Ringling Brothers and Barnum-Bailey circus, has joined the Storyland Village staff and will be at the park daily to greet youngsters. Storyland Village, Asbury Park, N. J., now open daily from noon to dusk, is the largest children's attraction on the Atlantic seaboard.

* * *

BECAUSE THEIR presentations of Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" and Rossini's "The Turk in Italy," done in music-theatre style, have met with such solid acclaim at the Green Mansions Theatre, Warrensburg, N. Y., owners Lena Barish and Sam Garlen are contemplating bringing the double-bill to an off-Broadway theatre early in October. The theatre gives four performances a week from now through the end of September.

The 1956 Berkshire Festival moves across the lawn at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight (Friday) from the Intimate Theatre-Concert Hall to the Music Shed, when the first of this season's concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8:30. As in the last two seasons, there will be 12 concerts in the Shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, all of them concentrated in the final four week ends of the Festival, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons. Last season the twelve Shed concerts attracted a total attendance of 108,336, for an average of 9,028—one and one-half times the seating capacity (6,000), the overflow picnicking on the Tanglewood lawns under the stars or in Sunday sunshine.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

JUL 20 1956

Tanglewood Shed Opening Tonight

The 1956 Berkshire Festival moves across the spacious lawn at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight from the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall to the great Music Shed, when the first of this season's concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8:30. Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, will conduct a program comprised of Berlioz' Overture, "The Roman Carnival," Debussy's Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun, the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe," and Brahms' Second Symphony, which has just been released by RCA-Victor in a new recording by Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

As in the last two seasons there will be twelve concerts in the Shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, all of them concentrated in the final four week ends of the Festival, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons. Last season the twelve Shed concerts attracted a total attendance of 108,336, for an average of 9,028—one and one-half times the seating capacity (6,000), the overflow picnicking on the Tanglewood lawns under the stars or in Sunday sunshine.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

JUL 20 1956

OVERFLOW AUDIENCE AT TANGLEWOOD

This is part of an overflow crowd which couldn't get into the 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood for concerts. Sponsors would be happy if tonight's concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra produces similar results.

Tanglewood Concerts Move to Shed Tonight

The 1956 Berkshire Festival moves across the spacious lawn at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight from the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall to the great Music Shed, when the first of this season's concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8:30 o'clock. Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will conduct a program comprised of Berlioz' Overture, The Roman Carnival, Debussy's Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun, the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe", and Brahms' Second Symphony.

As in the last two seasons there will be twelve concerts in the shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, all of them concentrated in the final four week ends of the Festival, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons. Last season the twelve Shed concerts attracted a total attendance of 108,336, for an average of 9,028—one and one-half times the seating capacity (6,000), the overflow picnicking on the Tanglewood lawns under the stars or in Sunday sunshine.

TANGLEWOOD PREMIER

Tomorrow night Dr. Munch conducts the Tanglewood premiere of the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure," in concert form, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, and Albert Da Costa, Amstterdam, N. Y., tenor, both of the Metropolitan Opera, and James Pease, basso.

Miss Harshaw made her Tanglewood debut last Summer with the Boston Symphony in a concert performance of Beethoven's "Fidelio." Da Costa, singing with the Boston Symphony and at Tanglewood for the first time, is a young tenor who made a sensational debut at the Metropolitan last season in "Die Meistersinger," a role he will sing at the final Tanglewood concert August 12.

FORMER STUDENT

Pease is a former Berkshire Music Center student returning to Tanglewood after European triumphs in the Wagner repertory with the Hamburg Opera Company. The Saturday night program also includes two Tanglewood first performances by the orchestra: Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and Bohuslav Martinu's Symphonic Fantasies. The latter was commissioned by Dr. Munch for this year's Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary.

Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux, 81-year-old former regular conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra returns to Tanglewood for the first of two appearances this Summer, marking the fifth consecutive year that he has been guest conductor at the Berkshire Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Press
THOMSONVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,800

JUL 19 1956

Concerts Starting At Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., — Inspiring, relaxing music, floating on the cool breezes that play in the rolling vistas of the beautiful Berkshire Hills — all this, and more, is yours by simply visiting the famous Berkshire Music Festival, at enchanting Tanglewood, this weekend, beginning July 20th.

Friday evening's 8:30 performance, according to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, will feature works on Brahms, Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel. On Saturday, at the same time, a night of Wagner is in store for visitors to this music lovers paradise. Sunday, the performance begins at 2:30 p.m. Works of Rossini, Bartok, as well as Schubert's Symphony No. 7 in C major, are scheduled.

Bring the entire family along for a memorable weekend in the Berkshires. Swimming, fishing, hiking, boating, picnicking and recreational facilites galore dot the natural playgrounds that make up the Hills.

Lenox, site of Tanglewood and the Festival, is located on Route 7, south of Pittsfield. Main east-west routes 2-9 and 20, all connect with Route 7.

Berkshire Festival Begins Main Series at Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, in Lenox, will begin its main series of concerts with the first appearance, tonight in the Music Shed, of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in full numbers. Charles Munch will conduct Berlioz' Overture, "The Roman Carnival"; Debussy's "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun," the Second Suite from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe," and Brahms' Second Symphony.

Saturday night at 8:30, Mr. Munch will feature a concert performance of the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkuere." The soloists will be Margaret Harshaw, soprano, and Albert Da Costa, tenor, both of the Metropolitan Opera, and James Pease, bass. The program will begin with Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings, and will include the Symphonic Fantasies by Martinu.

A SOLOIST TOMORROW Tanglewood will be soprano Margaret Harshaw.

[94]

"ANASTASIA" - JACOB'S PILLOW DANCE FESTIVAL, II - TANGLEWOOD

By MARLENE A. BURNS

Melodrama and artistic phenomena, in strikingly similar manifestations, were seen at the Berkshire Playhouse, Jacob's Pillow, and Tanglewood during the July 4th weekend.

Moments of the second act of "Anastasia," when the defensively unapproachable Dowager Empress and the enigmatic young girl who claims to be her granddaughter, the Grand Duchess Anastasia, penetrate into the confused and tragedy-stricken heart of one another, seemed strangely akin to the ballet histrionics of Vladimir Dokoudovsky in the closing movement of his ballet set to Schumann's Spring (B flat) Symphony. In the last movement, "Farewell to Spring," Mr. Dokoudovsky, as Schumann, exposed to the full view of his wife the physical impact of her fleeting love in his own sudden death. The drama of "Anastasia" sounds more plausible and striking than that of "Spring Symphony"; and indeed it was, although both works were never removed from melodrama.

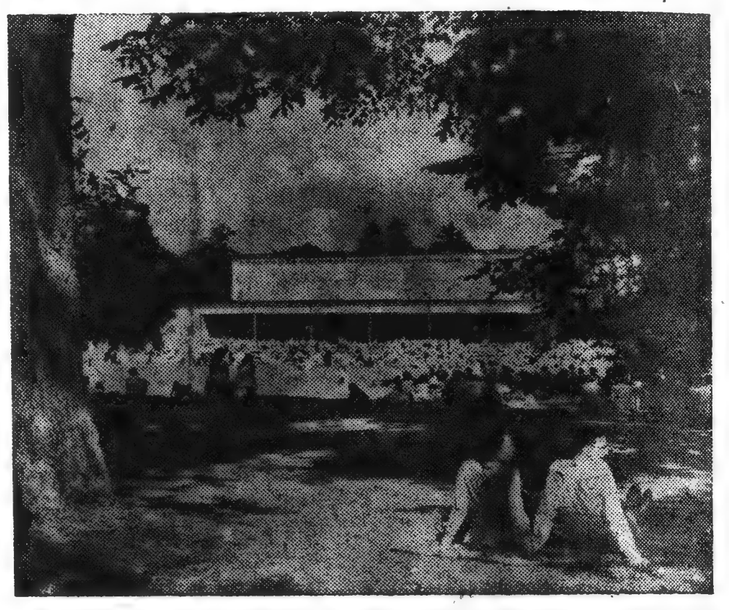
The artistic phenomena occurred at Jacob's Pillow, where Ruth St. Denis showed her ageless artistry in four historic solos; and at Tanglewood, where jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman turned to Mozart's Concerto for Clarinet, K.622, and was a resounding musical and popular success.

* * *

In addition to the excitement produced by the presence of Benny Goodman on the Tanglewood scene, the all-Mozart evening was a brisk-paced and stimulating one because of the spirited performances of the Symphonies in G Minor and D Major, conducted by Dr. Charles Munch. The somber and stirring Molto Allegro of the Symphony in G Minor was as sharply etched and complete in itself as its opposite the sustained and superbly controlled Andante of the Symphony in D. Major. Between the two symphonies, as a refreshing difference, came the Clarinet Concerto. The first notes were as dramatic as the very promise of the performance. Mozart and the clarinet are not generally associated together, but after the novelty was gone and the personality of the soloist overlooked, the beauty of the music itself filled the theatre-concert hall.

* * *

Unlike the holiday week, the week of July 16th will not be marked by unespected dramatic presences; but, as before, it will be marked by outstanding artistic performances. The fourth Jacob's Pillow program will include Geoffrey Holder and his company, featuring Carmen de Lavallada; Melissa Hayden and Francisco Moncion, soloists with the New York City Ballet; and the familiar face of Myra Kinch, and her company. During the same week, there will be a noticeable absence of Mozart music at Tanglewood; instead, the music of Gabrieli, Bonelli, Poulenc, Borozowsky, Wagner, Strauss, Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel, Brahms, Rossini, Bartok, and Schubert will be performed. "The Wayward Saint" will be seen at the Berkshire Playhouse during this time.



THE BERKSIRE FESTIVAL of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in its 19th summer of music in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the 17th in which the orchestra has participated under the direction of Charles Munch. The 1956 season of 24 concerts extends for six weeks, from July 4-August 12. In 1955 Festival concerts attracted a record-breaking total attendance of 136,087 music lovers. Its chamber orchestra concerts in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall averaged an attendance of 3,032 persons. An average of 9,028 persons attended performances in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood (capacity 6,000) with crowds overflowing on the spacious lawns.

New England Newscap Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 122,000

JUL 21 1956

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

Hail! Boston Symphony

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, July 20—The Boston Symphony Orchestra began the main series of concerts of the 19th annual Berkshire Music Festival tonight in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

Though the day had been threatening, and some rain had managed to suggest a damp evening, the weather behaved itself and the evening was dry, if cool and cloudy. An audience estimated at 6200 persons attended, which was a very good figure, indeed, under the meteorological circumstances of the day.

Charles Munch conducted a program of familiar and exceedingly popular items: "The Roman Carnival" overture of Berlioz; Debussy's "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun"; the second suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe," and the second symphony of Brahms.

The crowd was a genuinely enthusiastic one, and the applause which followed each number, and which at the end of Brahms' symphony burst out a second or two before the last chord had sounded, was, indeed, tremendous.

The orchestra was in magnificent form, apart from a few untidy locks of tonal hair, to be noted hereafter. To one who has not enjoyed the fine precision and the oceanic tonal richness of the full numbers of the Boston Symphony for a few months, such a concert sends a thrill up and down the back. So it happened again tonight.

Everyone has a few extra-vivid memories of musical experiences, and some of mine relate to Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" suite here in the days of Serge Koussevitsky. Tonight's reading of the same score, by Mr. Munch, was a dazzlement and revelation, such a glorious blend of technical finesse, glittering orchestration and sheer wonderful sound, that it will take its place in the gallery of musical interludes never to be forgotten.

One thing which impressed itself upon the carefully listening ear through most of the evening was the increased silkiness in the Boston Symphony tone, something which Mr. Munch has restored in the past two or three years. Especially was this true in the tenderness of the strings during the slow movement of Brahms' symphony. This was, in fact, one of the finest performances of the symphony in my memory—up to the finale.

The finale, for good reason, seems to over-excite Mr. Munch, and tonight it carried him away into slight hardness of tone and hurried pace. As a result, there were some entrances less than right on the beat, and a lack of delicate balance between the various sections of the orchestra. This was, however, but a relatively minor blemish upon a superb achievement.

Doriot Anthony Dwyer deservedly was singled out by the conductor for special and personal applause, after her beautiful "singing" performance of the flute part in Debussy's glowing score.

Rudolf Serkin will give a recital at Castle Hill in Ipswich, Mass., tonight. He will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood on Saturday night, July 28, and will be heard with Martial Singher, baritone, in Schubert's "Die Schöne Müllerin" at the Stratford, Ont., festival on Tuesday evening, Aug. 7.

Fourth Week At Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into the fourth of its six weeks with a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel, and Brahms by the Beaux Arts Trio on Wednesday evening in the Theater Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct two of the weekend's three concerts in the Music Shed on the evenings of Friday (July 27) and Saturday (July 28). The orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, will take the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 29).

Dr. Munch's Friday program will include tthe Beethoven "Leonore" Overture No. 2, Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, and the Tanglewood première of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer, who is guest teacher of composition this summer.

The Saturday evening concert will be composed of Schumann's A minor Piano Concerto, Honegger's Symphony No. 5, Debussy's "La Mer," and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Haward Hanson.

Both the Petrassi Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, on Friday night and the Hanson Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky on Saturday evening were commissioned jointly by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitzky Music Foundation for the current 75th anniversary of the orchestra.

Rudolf Serkin, pianist, will be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor on July 28.

Mr. Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert will consist of Prokofiev's "Romeo and Juliet," Hindemith's Violin Concerto, and Mahler's First Symphony, with Ruth Posselt as soloist in the Hindemith.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

JUL 20 1956

Tanglewood Students From Area

Studying at Tanglewood this summer, four residents of Springfield and vicinity cluster on the grass before the Music Shed with the assistant director of the Tanglewood Study Group. From left to right, James Fitzpatrick of 114 McKinstry Ave., Chicopee, studying orchestral conducting; Stephen H. Podgorski, Jr., of 194 Main St., West Springfield, a trombonist in the student orchestra; Carol Dunbar of 19 Rochelle St., West Springfield, a flautist in the orchestra; Mrs. Elihu Glass of 30 Bellevue Ave., Springfield, a member of the Tanglewood Study Group; and Florence Dunn of Williamstown, assistant director of the study group.

taking a general music study course.

Stephen Podgorski of 194 Main St., West Springfield, an Air Force vet with wide experience as trombonist. He's worked with the Springfield, Pioneer Valley, and Boston Civic Symphonies, graduated from Boston University. He hopes to get an MA this year.

Carol Dunbar of 19 Rochelle St., West Springfield. She taught music in Chicopee schools last year, is another flutist, and has appeared with the Springfield Symphony. A graduate of Eastman School, she studies at Tanglewood with Doriot Anthony.

James Fitzpatrick of 114 McKinstry St., Chicopee. He studies in the audit department at the center.

Ronald Hebert of 106 Cole Ave., Pittsfield, a member of both the Albany and Berkshire Symphonies. He studies the horn.

Grace Henderson of 70 Harding St., Pittsfield, still another flutist. She too is a Boston University grad.

Charlotte Eberwein of 52 Commonwealth Ave., Pittsfield. A public school teacher in New York, she is a violinist, works in the study group.

Sue Erickson, 18, of Stockbridge, who sings soprano in the Festival Chorus under Hugh Ross. She's a student at Ohio's Oberlin College.

Florence Dunn of Williamstown, an assistant director of the study group.

About 400 students work at the center under Ross, Eleazar De Carvalho, Richard Burgin, Aaron Copland, Boris Goldovsky, Geoffredo Petrassi and others.

Western Mass. Residents Are Studying in Lenox

World Famous Berkshire Music Center Attracts Prominent Teachers and Outstanding Students

Lenox, July 19—The Berkshire Music Center is famous world-round.

First under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky, late conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and now under Charles Munch, the orchestra's present leader, the center has attracted a prominent teaching staff and an outstanding enrollment.

Once a pupil at the center at Tanglewood, for instance, was Lukas Foss, a top-rate pianist and conductor who two weeks ago directed a Sunday afternoon concert which he finished with a scintillating performance of a Mozart piano concerto.

Several men and women from Western Massachusetts are students at the center this year. And one of their instructors is Lukas Foss, who has moved from learning to teaching.

Among area students at Tanglewood are:

Beverly Mason, 21, of 17 Morgan St., Springfield, who takes classes with Hugh Ross to study choral conducting. A graduate of Classical High School, she's a student at New England Conservatory.

Mrs. Elihu Glass of 30 Bellevue Ave., Springfield, an amateur flutist. Mrs. Glass, wanting background for her theater work, is

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 264,020

JUL 21 1956

Jesuit Head Thanks Symphony Trustees

The Very Rev. William E. FitzGerald, S.J., provincial of the Jesuit Order, yesterday thanked the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Tanglewood Music Festival for providing the facilities of Tanglewood for the groundbreaking ceremonies for the Shadowbrook Novitiate July 31.

With their former novitiate a pile of ashes as the result of the March 10 fire, the Jesuits lacked facilities for the ceremonies. When the need became know the buildings of the Berkshire Festival adjacent to the Shadowbrook land were offered by the Boston Symphony trustees.

Archbishop Cushing will deliver the address and the Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, bishop of the Springfield diocese, will preside.

First Berkshire Festival Concert In Shed Tonight

Lenox, July 19—The Berkshire Festival moves to the Music Shed Friday night when the first of this season's concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8.30.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will conduct a program comprised of Berlioz' Overture, "The Roman Carnival," Debussy's Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun, the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe," and Brahms' Second Symphony, which has just been released by RCA-Victor in a new recording by Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

As in the last two seasons, there will be 12 concerts in the Shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, all of them concentrated in the final four week ends of the Festival, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons.

Last season the 12 Shed concerts attracted a total attendance of 108,336, for an average of 9028.

On Saturday, Dr. Munch conducts the Tanglewood premiere of the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure," in concert form, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, and Albert Da Costa, tenor, both of the Metropolitan Opera, and James Pease, basso.

The Saturday night program also includes two Tanglewood first performances by the orchestra: Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and Bohuslav Martinu's Symphonic Fantasies.

On Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux returns to Tanglewood for the first of two appearances this summer, marking the fifth consecutive year that he has been guest conductor at the Berkshire Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908

JUL 20 1956

FIRST OF SHED SERIES TO BE GIVEN TONIGHT

Munch to Conduct Berlioz, Ravel, Brahms in Tanglewood Program

Lenox, July 19—The 1956 Berkshire Festival moves across the spacious lawns at Tanglewood tonight from the intimate theater-concert hall to the great Music Shed, when the first of this season's concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8.30. Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will conduct a program comprised of Berlioz' Overture, "The Roman Carnival," Debussy's prelude to the "Afternoon of a Faun," the second suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe," and Brahms' second symphony, which has just been released by RCA-Victor in a new recording by Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

As in the last two seasons there will be 12 concerts in the Shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, all of them concentrated in the final four week ends of the Festival, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons. Last season the 12 Shed concerts attracted a total attendance of 108,336, for an average of 9028—one and one-half times the seating capacity (6000), the overflow picnicking on the Tanglewood lawns under the stars or in Sunday sunshine.

Wagner Tomorrow

Tomorrow night Dr. Munch conducts the Tanglewood premiere of the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure," in concert form, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, and Albert Da Costa, tenor, both of the Metropolitan Opera, and James Pease, basso. Miss Harshaw made her Tanglewood debut last summer with the Boston Symphony in a concert performance of Beethoven's "Fidelio." Mr. Da Costa, singing with the Boston Symphony and at Tanglewood for the first time, is a young [illegible] a sensational debut [illegible] Metropolitan last season [illegible] Meistersinger," a role he will sing at the final Tanglewood concert Aug. 12.

Mr. Pease is a former Berkshire Music Center student returning to Tanglewood after European triumphs in the Wagner repertory with the Hamburg Opera Co. The Saturday night program also includes two Tanglewood first performances by the Orchestra: Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" and Bohuslav Martinu's "Symphonic Fantasies." The latter was commissioned by Dr. Munch for the Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary.

Monteux Sunday

Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux, 81-year-old former regular conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra who has been invited by Charles Munch to share some of the conducting with him on the forthcoming European tour of the orchestra, returns to Tanglewood for the first of two appearances this summer, marking the fifth consecutive year that he has been guest conductor at the Berkshire Festival.

Remaining seats for tonight's concert, as well as for all remaining concerts in this summer's Berkshire Festival, are now on sale at the Tanglewood boxoffice and telephone reservations are accepted—Lenox 600. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

JUL 21 1956

WAGNERIAN SOPRANO Margaret Harshaw will sing in a concert version of "Die Walkure," Act I, tonight at 8:30 as the Boston Symphony opens the giant shed at Tanglewood.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

JUL 20 1956

Tanglewood Students From Area

Studying at Tanglewood this summer, four residents of Springfield and vicinity cluster on the grass before the Music Shed with the assistant director of the Tanglewood Study Group. From left to right, James Fitzpatrick of 114 McKinstry Ave., Chicopee, studying orchestral conducting; Stephen H. Podgorski, Jr., of 194 Main St., West Springfield, a trombonist in the student orchestra; Carol Dunbar of 19 Rochelle St., West Springfield, a flautist in the orchestra; Mrs. Elihu Glass of 30 Bellevue Ave., Springfield, a member of the Tanglewood Study Group; and Florence Dunn of Williamstown, assistant director of the study group.

taking a general music study course.

Stephen Podgorski of 194 Main St., West Springfield, an Air Force vet with wide experience as trombonist. He's worked with the Springfield, Pioneer Valley, and Boston Civic Symphonies, graduated from Boston University. He hopes to get an MA this year.

Carol Dunbar of 19 Rochelle St., West Springfield. She taught music in Chicopee schools last year, is another flutist, and has appeared with the Springfield Symphony. A graduate of Eastman School, she studies at Tanglewood with Doriot Anthony.

James Fitzpatrick of 114 McKinstry St., Chicopee. He studies in the audit department at the center.

Ronald Hebert of 106 Cole Ave., Pittsfield, a member of both the Albany and Berkshire Symphonies. He studies the horn.

Grace Henderson of 70 Harding St., Pittsfield, still another flutist. She too is a Boston University grad.

Charlotte Eberwein of 52 Commonwealth Ave., Pittsfield. A public school teacher in New York, she is a violinist, works in the study group.

Sue Erickson, 18, of Stockbridge, who sings soprano in the Festival Chorus under Hugh Ross. She's a student at Ohio's Oberlin College.

Florence Dunn of Williamstown, an assistant director of the study group.

About 400 students work at the center under Ross, Eleazar De Carvalho, Richard Burgin, Aaron Copland, Boris Goldovsky, Geoffredo Petrassi and others.

Western Mass. Residents Are Studying in Lenox

World Famous Berkshire Music Center Attracts Prominent Teachers and Outstanding Students

Lenox, July 19—The Berkshire Music Center is famous worldround.

First under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky, late conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and now under Charles Munch, the orchestra's present leader, the center has attracted a prominent teaching staff and an outstanding enrollment.

Once a pupil at the center at Tanglewood, for instance, was Lukas Foss, a top-rate pianist and conductor who two weeks ago directed a Sunday afternoon concert which he finished with a scintillating performance of a Mozart piano concerto.

Several men and women from Western Massachusetts are students at the center this year. And one of their instructors is Lukas Foss, who has moved from learning to teaching.

Among area students at Tanglewood are:

Beverly Mason, 21, of 17 Morgan St., Springfield, who takes classes with Hugh Ross to study choral conducting. A graduate of Classical High School, she's a student at New England Conservatory.

Mrs. Elihu Glass of 30 Bellevue Ave., Springfield, an amateur flutist. Mrs. Glass, wanting background for her theater work, is

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 264,020

JUL 21 1956

Jesuit Head Thanks Symphony Trustees

The Very Rev. William E. FitzGerald, S.J., provincial of the Jesuit Order, yesterday thanked the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Tanglewood Music Festival for providing the facilities of Tanglewood for the groundbreaking ceremonies for the Shadowbrook Novitiate July 31.

With their former novitiate a pile of ashes as the result of the March 10 fire, the Jesuits lacked facilities for the ceremonies. When the need became know the buildings of the Berkshire Festival adjacent to the Shadowbrook land were offered by the Boston Symphony trustees.

Archbishop Cushing will deliver the address and the Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, bishop of the Springfield diocese, will preside.

First Berkshire Festival Concert In Shed Tonight

Lenox, July 19—The Berkshire Festival moves to the Music Shed Friday night when the first of this season's concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8.30.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will conduct a program comprised of Berlioz' Overture, "The Roman Carnival," Debussy's Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun, the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe," and Brahms' Second Symphony, which has just been released by RCA-Victor in a new recording by Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

As in the last two seasons, there will be 12 concerts in the Shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, all of them concentrated in the final four week ends of the Festival, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons.

Last season the 12 Shed concerts attracted a total attendance of 108,336, for an average of 9028.

On Saturday, Dr. Munch conducts the Tanglewood premiere of the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure," in concert form, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, and Albert Da Costa, tenor, both of the Metropolitan Opera, and James Pease, basso.

The Saturday night program also includes two Tanglewood first performances by the orchestra: Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and Bohuslav Martinu's Symphonic Fantasies.

On Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux returns to Tanglewood for the first of two appearances this summer, marking the fifth consecutive year that he has been guest conductor at the Berkshire Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

JUL 21 1956

WAGNERIAN SOPRANO Margaret Harshaw will sing in a concert version of "Die Walkure," Act I, tonight at 8:30 as the Boston Symphony opens the giant shed at Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908

JUL 20 1956

FIRST OF SHED SERIES TO BE GIVEN TONIGHT

Munch to Conduct Berlioz, Ravel, Brahms in Tanglewood Program

Lenox, July 20—The 1956 Berkshire Festival moves across the spacious lawn at Tanglewood tonight from the intimate theater-concert hall to the great Music Shed, when the first of this season's concerts by the full 106-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8.30. Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will conduct a program comprised of Berlioz' Overture, "The Roman Carnival," Debussy's prelude to the "Afternoon of a Faun," the second suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe," and Brahms' second symphony, which has just been released by RCA-Victor in a new recording by Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

As in the last two seasons there will be 12 concerts in the Shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, all of them concentrated in the final four week ends of the Festival, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons. Last season the 12 Shed concerts attracted a total attendance of 108,336, for an average of 9028—one and one-half times the seating capacity (6000), the overflow picnicking on the Tanglewood lawns under the stars or in Sunday sunshine.

Wagner Tomorrow

Tomorrow night Dr. Munch conducts the Tanglewood premiere of the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure," in concert form, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, and Albert Da Costa, tenor, both of the Metropolitan Opera, and James Pease, basso. Miss Harshaw made her Tanglewood debut last summer with the Boston Symphony in a concert performance of Beethoven's "Fidelio." Mr. Da Costa, singing with the Boston Symphony and at Tanglewood for the first time, is a young tenor who made a sensational debut at the Metropolitan last season in "Die Meistersinger," a role he will sing at the final Tanglewood concert Aug. 12.

Mr. Pease is a former Berkshire Music Center student returning to Tanglewood after European triumphs in the Wagner repertory with the Hamburg Opera Co. The Saturday night program also includes two Tanglewood first performances by the Orchestra: Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" and Bohuslav Martinu's "Symphonic Fantasies." The latter was commissioned by Dr. Munch for the Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary.

Monteux Sunday

Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux, 81-year-old former regular conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra who has been invited by Charles Munch to share some of the conducting with him on the forthcoming European tour of the orchestra, returns to Tanglewood for the first of two appearances this summer, marking the fifth consecutive year that he has been guest conductor at the Berkshire Festival.

Remaining seats for tonight's concert, as well as for all remaining concerts in this summer's Berkshire Festival, are now on sale at the Tanglewood boxoffice and telephone reservations are accepted—Lenox 600. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

[96]

Berkshire Summer Calendar

Music, From Classic to Jazz, Summer Theaters and the Dance

Sunday

July 22

Tanglewood

10:00—Chamber Music. Dept. 1. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)

2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Pierre Monteux. Music Shed.

Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri" — Rossini
Concerto for Orchestra — Bartok
Symphony No. 7 in C major — Schubert

8:30—Composers' Forum, Dept. 3. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Wilbur de Paris and New Orleans Jazz with Sidney de Paris and Omer Simeon

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Assisting artist, Marie Zorn, harpsichord.

Quartet in C major, K.465 — Mozart
Italian Concerto for Harpsichord — Bach
Concerto for Harpsichord and Strings in G minor — Bach
Quartet in A major, Op. 41, No. 3 — Schumann

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00

July 29

Tanglewood

10:00—Chamber Music, Dept. 1. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)

2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Richard Burgin. Music Shed.

"Romeo and Juliet," Suite No. 2 — Prokofieff
Violin Concerto — Hindemith
Soloist: Ruth Posselt
Symphony No. 1 in D major — Mahler

8:30—Composers' Forum, Dept. 3. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)

New York Pro Musica Antiqua

3:30—Concert of Renaissance and Early Barouque music under auspices of the Williamstown Theater Foundation. Adams Memorial Theater, Williamstown.

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Assisting artist, Natasha Magg, piano.

Quartet in B flat major, K.458 — Mozart
Sonata for Cello and Piano in G minor — Chopin
Quartet in F minor, Op. 95 — Beethoven

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey and band, with Louis Belsen and Charlie Shavers

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00

August 5

Tanglewood

10:00—Chamber Music, Dept. 1. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)

2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

Symphonic Ode — Copland
Violin Concerto — Tchaikovsky
Soloist: Zino Francescatti
Symphony No. 2 in C major — Schumann

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet.

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Sarah Vaughan and Trio

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00

August 12

Tanglewood

10:00—Dept. 1 Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. (Friends)

2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica") — Beethoven
"Die Meistersinger," Act 3 (opening and final scene) — Wagner
Chorus and Soloists: James Pease, Albert da Costa, Marguerite Willauer

New York Pro Musica Antiqua

3:30—Tudor and Elizabethan music
At South Mountain Temple of Chamber Music, Pittsfield.

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Modern Jazz Quartet and Chris Connors

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet.

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00

August 19

New York Pro Musica Antiqua

3:30—Claudio Monteverdi, sacred and secular works (At South Mountain Temple of Chamber Music, Pittsfield)

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Errol Garner Trio

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00

August 26

New York Pro Musica Antiqua

3:30—Music of the German Reformation and Baroque (At South Mountain Temple of Chamber Music, Pittsfield)

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Glenn Miller Orchestra with Ray McKinley

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00

September 2

New York Pro Musica Antiqua

3:30—The Old Testament in Early Music
(At South Mountain Temple of Chamber Music, Pittsfield)

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Modern Jazz Quartet, with Jerry Mulligan, Jimmy Giuffre and Lee Becker and Jazz Dance Group

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00

Monday

July 23

Tanglewood

8:30—Modern Chamber Music. Members of Boston Symphony and guest artists. Auspices, Fromm Music Foundation. (Friends)

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—"Heartbreak House," with Carmen Mathews, Larry Gates

July 30

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 4 Opera. Four complete acts from 19th century operas. (Friends—special tickets required)

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—"The Happy Time," with Paul Lipson

August 6

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 4 Opera. "Griffelkin," by Lukas Foss. First stage performance. (Friends — special tickets required)

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—"The Good Fairy," with Deirdre Owens

August 13

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45 — "A Roomful of Roses," with Francesca Bruning

August 20

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—"Made in Heaven," with Richard Arlen

August 27

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—"The Little Foxes," with Ruth Chatterton

September 3

Tuesday

July 24

Tanglewood

8:30—Dep. 4 Opera. Scenes from Mozart operas. Theater-Concert Hall. (Friends)

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"Mrs. McThing"

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"The Solid Gold Cadillac" (second week)

Sharon Playhouse

8:40—"Heartbreak House"

Jacob's Pillow

9:00—San Francisco Ballet. "Concerto Barocco"; world premiere of "The Dryad"; "Con Amore"

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45

July 31

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 2 Chorus, Tanglewood Choir. Theater-Concert Hall. (Friends)

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—Premiere of new play

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"Tea and Sympathy"

Sharon Playhouse

8:40—"Anastasia"

Jacob's Pillow

9:00—San Francisco Ballet. "The Tarot"; "Jinx"; "A Masque of Beauty and the Shepherd"

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45

August 7

Tanglewood

8:30—Department 4 Opera. "Griffelkin," by Lukas Foss. (Friends—special tickets required)

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"Point of No Return"

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"The Seven-Year Itch"

Sharon Playhouse

8:40—"The Importance of Being Earnest"

Jacob's Pillow

9:00—San Francisco Ballet. "Le Gourmand"; "Apollo"; "Con Amore"

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45

August 14

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"The Flowering Peach"

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"Bus Stop"

Sharon Playhouse

8:40—"The Rainmaker"

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45

August 21

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"The Glass Menagerie"

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"Bus Stop" (second week)

Sharon Playhouse

8:40—"Love Is a Two-Way Street," with Albert Dekker, Edith Atwater (new play)

Continuing: Berkshire Piayhouse, 8:45

August 28

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"Tiger at the Gates"

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"Anastasia"

Sharon Playhouse

8:40—"Blithe Spirit"

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45

September 4

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"The Festival"

Wednesday

July 25

Tanglewood

8:30—Chamber music. The Beaux Arts Trio. Theater-Concert Hall.

Trio in D minor — Mendelssohn
Trio in A minor — Ravel
Trio in C minor — Brahms

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 9:00

August 1

Tanglewood

8:30—Chamber Music. Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet. Theater-Concert Hall.

Symphonic Etudes — Schumann
Quintet for Piano and Woodwinds, K.452 — Mozart
"Carnaval" — Schumann

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 9:00

August 8

Tanglewood

8:30—Chamber Music. Zino Francescatti, violin; Arthur Balsam, piano. Theater-Concert Hall.

Violin Sonata No. 1 — Faure
Violin Sonata — Ravel
Violin Sonata — Franck

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 9:00

August 15

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Brindge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40

August 22

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40

August 29

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:40

September 5

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45

NOTE: For an event listed under "Continuing," follow the week's schedule back to the nearest complete program, which will be under a head printed in This Type.

HOW TO GET THERE: TANGLEWOOD, on Route 183 between Stockbridge (via Routes 102 and 183) and Lenox (via Route 183 from center of town); SOUTH MOUNTAIN on Route 7 just south of Pittsfield; MUSIC MOUNTAIN, off Route 7 in Falls Village, Conn.; BERKSHIRE PLAYHOUSE, off Route 7 on Route 102 near center of Stockbridge; MALDEN BRIDGE PLAYHOUSE, on Route 66 between Chatham and Pittsfield-Albany Road (Route 20); WILLIAMSTOWN SUMMER THEATER, on Main Street in Williamstown; BERKSHIRE MUSIC BARN, southeast of Tanglewood between Routes 7 and 183; SHARON PLAYHOUSE, just off Main Street in Sharon, Conn., on Route 4 toward Amenia. JACOB'S PILLOW, off Jacob's Ladder section of Route 20 in the village of West Becket.

Thursday

July 26

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 1 Orchestra. Music Shed. (Friends)

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs." Chico Hamilton Quintet

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 2

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 1 Orchestra. Music Shed. (Friends)

Berkshire Playhouse

3:00—Anna Russell, concert.

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs"

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 9

Tanglewood

Tanglewood on Parade.

6:00—Student Orchestra, Opera Scenes, Chorus, Chamber Music.

8:15—Shed Concert.
Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho.
Overture: "The Russian Easter" — Rimsky-Korsakoff
Chorus No. 10 (Rasga o coracoa) — Villa Lobos
Boston Pops Orchestra. Conductor, Arthur Fiedler.
La Boutique Fantasque — Rossini-Respighi
Piano Concerto in F — Gershwin
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma
Bolero — Ravel

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 16

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs" Evening of Calypso, West Indian and Cuban music.

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 23

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs"

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 30

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs" Jam Session.

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

September 6

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45

Friday

July 27

Tanglewood

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.
Overture, "Leonore" No. 2 — Beethoven
Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5 — Petrassi
Symphony No. 4 in F minor — Tchaikovsky

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 3

Tanglewood

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho. Music Shed.
"La Kermesse" — Barraud
"The Three-Cornered Hat" — Falla
Piano Concerto — Ravel
Soloist: Jocy de Oliveira
Ballet, "Petrouchka" (complete) — Stravinsky

Berkshire Playhouse

3:00—Anna Russell, concert.

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 10

Tanglewood

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.
Symphony No. 102 in B-flat major — Haydn
Symphony No. 6 — Piston
"Don Juan" — Strauss
"L'Apprenti Sorcier" — Dukas

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40.

August 17

Jacob's Pillow

9:00 and 9:00—Irina Borowska, Alan Howard, Emy St. Just & Company. Tommy Marlowe. Rebecca Harris

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 24

Jacob's Pillow

4:00 and 9:00—Nina Novak and Leon Danielian. Anna Sokolov's Theater Dance Company. Gina, dances of India.

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 31

Jacob's Pillow

4:00 and 9:00—Louis Smith and David Adams. Myra Kinch & Company. Lotte Goslar

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

September 7

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45

Saturday

July 28

Tanglewood

10:00—Boston Symphony Orchestra, open rehearsal. Music Shed. Benefit orchestra pension fund.

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.
Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky — Hanson
Piano Concerto in A minor — Schumann
Soloist: Rudolf Serkin
Symphony No. 5 — Honegger
"La Mer" — Debussy

South Mountain

3:30—Claremont String Quartet
Quartet, Op. 74 No. 1 — Haydn
Quartet, Op. 92 No. 5 — Shostakovich
Quartet, Op. 95 — Beethoven

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Folk Music Festival. Marais and Miranda

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

August 4

Tanglewood

10:00—Boston Symphony Orchestra, open rehearsal. Music Shed. Benefit orchestra pension fund.

3:00—Dept. 3 Composers' Forum. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Leonard Bernstein. Music Shed. (Concert in memory of Serge Koussevitsky).
Mass in C minor (K.427) Kyrie and Gloria — Mozart
Chorus and Soloists: Phyllis Curtin, Soprano; Eunice Alberts, Contralto; John McCollum, Tenor
Symphony No. 5 — Prokofieff

South Mountain

3:30—Beaux Arts Trio
Trio in B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke") — Beethoven
Trio in D minor, Op. 120 — Faure
Trio in B flat, Op. 99 — Schubert

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

August 11

Tanglewood

10:00—Boston Symphony Orchestra, open rehearsal. Music Shed. Benefit orchestra pension fund.

3:00—Dept. 1 Orchestra. Music Shed. (Friends)

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Pierre Monteux. Music Shed.
Festival Overture — Freed
Symphony No. 3 in F major — Brahms
Suite for Orchestra, Op. 9 — Enesco
Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" — Strauss

South Mountain

3:30—John Corigliano, New York Philharmonic Quartet
Sonata for Violin and Piano — Strauss
Serenade for Violin, Viola and Cello — Beethoven
Piano Quartet in G minor, Op. 25 — Brahms

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

August 18

South Mountain

3:30—Claremont String Quartet
Quartet, Op. 39, No. 1 — Boccherini
Quartet Op. 70 — Ernest Toch
Quartet, Op. 51, No. 1 — Brahms

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

August 25

South Mountain

3:30—Robert Goldsand, piano.
Partita in C minor — Bach
Sonata in G minor, Op. 22 — Schumann
"Gaspard de la Nuit" — Ravel

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45 Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

September 1

South Mountain

3:30—Trio Concertante (Eda K. Loeb Foundation Memorial Concert)

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

September 8

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45

NOTE: For an event listed under "Continuing," follow the week's schedule back to the nearest complete program, which will be under a head printed in This Type.

HOW TO GET THERE: TANGLEWOOD, on Route 183 between Stockbridge (via Routes 102 and 183) and Lenox (via Route 183 from center of town); SOUTH MOUNTAIN on Route 7 just south of Pittsfield; MUSIC MOUNTAIN, off Route 7 in Falls Village, Conn.; BERKSHIRE PLAYHOUSE, off Route 7 on Route 102 near center of Stockbridge; MALDEN BRIDGE PLAYHOUSE, on Route 66 between Chatham and Pittsfield-Albany Road (Route 20); WILLIAMSTOWN SUMMER THEATER, on Main Street in Williamstown; BERKSHIRE MUSIC BARN, southeast of Tanglewood between Routes 7 and 183; SHARON PLAYHOUSE, just off Main Street in Sharon, Conn., on Route 4 toward Amenia. JACOB'S PILLOW, off Jacob's Ladder section of Route 20 in the village of West Becket.

Thursday

July 26

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 1 Orchestra. Music Shed. (Friends)

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs." Chico Hamilton Quintet

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 2

Tanglewood

8:30—Dept. 1 Orchestra. Music Shed. (Friends)

Berkshire Playhouse

3:00—Anna Russell, concert.

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs"

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 9

Tanglewood

Tanglewood on Parade.

6:00—Student Orchestra, Opera Scenes, Chorus, Chamber Music.

8:15—Shed Concert.
Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho.
Overture: "The Russian Easter" — Rimsky-Korsakoff
Chorus No. 10 (Rasga o coracoa) — Villa Lobos
Boston Pops Orchestra. Conductor, Arthur Fiedler.
La Boutique Fantasque — Rossini-Respighi
Piano Concerto in F — Gershwin
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma
Bolero — Ravel

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 16

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs" Evening of Calypso, West Indian and Cuban music.

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 23

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs"

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 30

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—"Concert for Connoisseurs" Jam Session

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

September 6

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45

Friday

July 27

Tanglewood

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.
Overture, "Leonore" No. 2 — Beethoven
Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5 — Petrassi
Symphony No. 4 in F minor — Tchaikovsky

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 3

Tanglewood

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho. Music Shed.
"La Kermesse" — Barraud
"The Three-Cornered Hat" — Falla
Piano Concerto — Ravel
Soloist: Jocy de Oliveira
Ballet, "Petrouchka" (complete) — Stravinsky

Berkshire Playhouse

3:00—Anna Russell, concert.

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 10

Tanglewood

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.
Symphony No. 102 in B-flat major — Haydn
Symphony No. 6 — Piston
"Don Juan" — Strauss
"L'Apprenti Sorcier" — Dukas

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40.

August 17

Jacob's Pillow

4:00 and 9:00—Irina Borowska, Alan Howard, Emy St. Just & Company. Tommy Marlowe. Rebecca Harris

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 24

Jacob's Pillow

4:00 and 9:00—Nina Novak and Leon Danielian. Anna Sokolov's Theater Dance Company. Gina, dances of India.

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

August 31

Jacob's Pillow

4:00 and 9:00—Louis Smith and David Adams. Myra Kinch & Company. Lotte Goslar

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40

September 7

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45

Saturday

July 28

Tanglewood

10:00—Boston Symphony Orchestra, open rehearsal. Music Shed. Benefit orchestra pension fund.

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.
Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky — Hanson
Piano Concerto in A minor — Schumann
Soloist: Rudolf Serkin
Symphony No. 5 — Honegger
"La Mer" — Debussy

South Mountain

3:30—Claremont String Quartet
Quartet, Op. 74 No. 1 — Haydn
Quartet, Op. 92 No. 5 — Shostakovich
Quartet, Op. 95 — Beethoven

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Folk Music Festival. Marais and Miranda

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

August 4

Tanglewood

10:00—Boston Symphony Orchestra, open rehearsal. Music Shed. Benefit orchestra pension fund.

3:00—Dept. 3 Composers' Forum. Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Leonard Bernstein. Music Shed. (Concert in memory of Serge Koussevitsky).
Mass in C minor (K.427) Kyrie and Gloria — Mozart
Chorus and Soloists: Phyllis Curtin, Soprano; Eunice Alberts, Contralto; John McCollum, Tenor
Symphony No. 5 — Prokofieff

South Mountain

3:30—Beaux Arts Trio
Trio in E flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke") — Beethoven
Trio in D minor, Op. 120 — Faure
Trio in B flat, Op. 99 — Schubert

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

August 11

Tanglewood

10:00—Boston Symphony Orchestra, open rehearsal. Music Shed. Benefit orchestra pension fund.

3:00—Dept. 1 Orchestra. Music Shed. (Friends)

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Pierre Monteux. Music Shed.
Festival Overture — Freed
Symphony No. 3 in F major — Brahms
Suite for Orchestra, Op. 9 — Enesco
Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" — Strauss

South Mountain

3:30—John Corigliano, New York Philharmonic Quartet
Sonata for Violin and Piano — Strauss
Serenade for Violin, Viola and Cello — Beethoven
Piano Quartet in G minor, Op. 25 — Brahms

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

August 18

South Mountain

3:30—Claremont String Quartet
Quartet, Op. 39, No. 1 — Boccherini
Quartet Op. 70 — Ernest Toch
Quartet, Op. 51, No. 1 — Brahms

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

August 25

South Mountain

3:30—Robert Goldsand, piano.
Partita in C minor — Bach
Sonata in G minor, Op. 22 — Schumann
"Gaspard de la Nuit" — Ravel

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45 Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

September 1

South Mountain

3:30—Trio Concertante (Eda K. Loeb Foundation Memorial Concert)

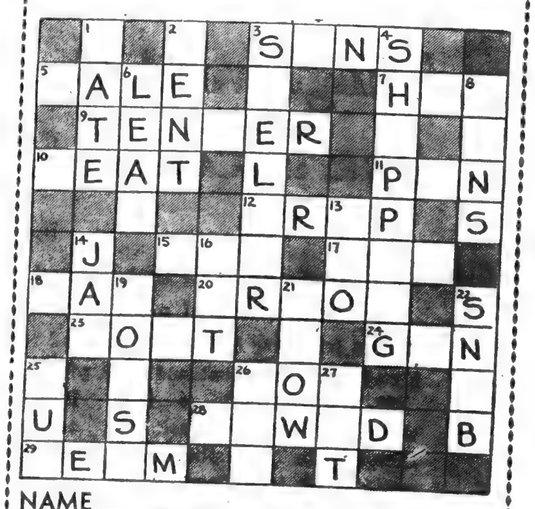
Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Sharon Playhouse, 8:40; Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00

September 8

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45

Cut on Dotted Line to Fit Postcard

'PRIZE PUZZLE' NO. 22



NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

CITY _____ ZONE ___ STATE ___

PRINT INITIAL OF LAST NAME

This Week's Prize Worth $1,000 (WITH BONUSES)

PASTE HERE >>>> Winners will receive DOUBLE their money if the marker with words "PRIZE PUZZLE No. 22 SPECIAL BONUS"—which will appear in The Knickerbocker News on Monday—is pasted in this space.

Paste on postcard and mail to "PRIZE PUZZLE," The Knickerbocker News, Albany, N. Y. Entries must be postmarked on or before midnight Tuesday, July 24 to be eligible. Entries received later will not qualify.

CLUES ACROSS:

3. Wicked —— can throw a shadow over a household.
5. It is quite normal for a woman to show interest in a —— of silk.
7. You'll remark many an American —— in London this year again.
9. Good actresses know how to play up the —— moments in a drama.
10. What the butcher sells.
11. A rusty one may take a lot of cleaning.
12. A mouse may be caught in one.
15. In certain games it may be hard at times to —— the ball.
17. Not bright.
18. An engineer could explain to you how it functions.
20. Felonious burning.
23. Often used with a nut.
24. Goes off with a bang.
26. It certainly reduces visibility.
28. When a boat is pulled it is said to be this.
29. Pour with rain.

CLUES DOWN:

1. May help decide when a ship is to sail.
2. It certainly won't improve the appearance of a baby carriage.
3. Naturally people would rather do this than freeze in an icy wind.
4. Common sense can overcome many —— problems.
6. At a sports meet, a terrific —— will certainly excite the spectators.
8. Where certain things are concerned, it's convenient to sell them in ——.
13. "Much —— About Nothing."
14. Short, sharp blow.
16. Consume food.
19. You'll find a —— in any zoo.
21. If he can —— his opponent up, a man gains a definite advantage.
22. Might make a quick-tempered man speak his mind.
25. What a boxer may be as a result of a vicious swing to the head.
26. Army leader preparing to attack would find this a menace.
27. Obtain or secure.

Prize Puzzle Contest Rules

Here are the rules for The Knickerbocker News Prize Puzzle contest:

1—The contest is open to everyone except employes of The Knickerbocker News and their families.

2—Contestants are required to solve each weekly Prize Puzzle as they would any crossword puzzle. The puzzle will be published every Saturday in The Knickerbocker News. Correct solutions and names of winners, if any, will be published each Friday.

3—Contestants may submit as many entries as they wish on the official entry blank in the paper. Facsimile copies may be submitted, but they must be exact size, and in fairness to all contestants, no more than 5 facsimile entries may be submitted by any one family. Copies of the puzzle and coupon, mimeographed or otherwise mechanically reproduced, will not be accepted.

After the Prize Puzzle has been completely filled in, paste it on a two-cent postcard, and mail it in time to bear a postmark on or before midnight, Tuesday, July 24. You may mail your solution of the puzzle in an envelope if you wish, but winning entries which have been enclosed in envelopes will under no circumstances be eligible for the 25% bonus.

5—Winning entries bearing the marker "PRIZE PUZZLE No. 22 SPECIAL BONUS" clipped from The Knickerbocker News on Monday, July 23, 1956, will be eligible and receive DOUBLE THE AMOUNT OF THE REGULAR PRIZE.

6—One prize of $25 will be awarded to the winner of each weekly Prize Puzzle. If more than one correct answer is received, the prize will be equally divided among the winners. If no correct solution is received, the $25 will be added to the following week's award.

7—There is only one correct solution to Prize Puzzle and only a correct solution can win. Neatness will be a factor, and the decision of the judges will be final. Only one prize will be permitted to a family unit.

8—Entries should be mailed to The Knickerbocker News, 18 Beaver St., Albany 1, New York, and must bear a postmark no later than midnight Tuesday following publication of the puzzle OR deposited in the Contest Box in the lobby of The Knickerbocker News before 8 p. m. on Tuesday.

Langford Has New Record

By DICK KLEINER
NEA Staff Writer

IF you've been saying to yourself "Whatever happened to Frances Langford?" you may rest easy. She's been cavorting around the Caribbean and the Gulf of Mexico in a cute little 120-foot yacht.

Langford

It's been 11 years since she made a record and well over a year since her last nightclub or TV appearance. And all you Langford fans will be happy to know that the lean period is over. She's back — pretty blonde hair, Florida dray, rich voice, 120-foot yacht and all.

She's just made her first record since '45. It's called "Rockin' in the Rocket Room" and it's on the new Unique label.

Frances, looking tanned as befits a yachtswoman, reports that it feels very nice to make a record again. She quit after dissatisfaction with her last effort and, although she's had offers in the meantime, just sort of never got around to acting on any of them.

For quite a few years she did a lot of TV—notably the very successful "The Bickersons" with Lew Parker—and made the rounds of the better night clubs and hotel rooms.

"Then I was so tired," she says, "that I finally took a vacation. I hadn't had a vacation since I started singing when I was 17. Well, the vacation has lasted a year and I guess that's long enough. I must admit that I've grown used to being lazy."

She sure has a nice backdrop for her laziness. She and her husband, outboard motor magnate Ralph Evinrude, "practically live" on their yacht, Chanticleer. It has a crew of seven, including a chef, air-conditioning and the latest movies and TV and hi-fi and, presumably, a keel.

This summer, after she launches her record, they're going to cruise through the Erie Canal and the Great Lakes to Milwaukee, then down the Mississippi River system to New Orleans and across the Gulf of Mexico to their home base in Florida.

• • •

DICK'S PICKS: Julie London could have another hit in "Lonely Girl" on Liberty. Others: "The Little Magician" (Carole Bennett, Capitol); "Pin of Gold" (Dick Noel, Fraternity); "Jungle Drums" (Esquivel Orchestra, RCA); "No Rock 'n' Roll Tonight" (Dorothy Collins, Coral); "The Beat" (Billy May, Capitol); "Lola's Theme" (Muir Mathieson, Columbia); La Riffi" (Larry Adler, Capitol).

A NEW RECORD IN THE MAKING—Benny Goodman, "The King of Swing," and Charles Munch, one of the world's great conductors of classical music, combine at Tanglewood to cut a record for RCA Victor of Mozart's "Clarinet Concerto." Goodman is backed up by the chamber group of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which Munch conducts. On the reverse side of the record, the release date of which has not been announced, is "Clarinet Quintet."

The Disc Jockeys Report

'Allegheny Moon' Rises To Top in K-N Tune Poll

A new name tops the list in The Knickerbocker News disc jockey poll this week as "Allegheny Moon," Patti Page's biggest record in many months, sent last week's leader in the Top 10 Tunes, Gogi Grant's "The Wayward Wind," tumbling all the way to fourth place.

Miss Page's record received either first or second place votes from all but one of the six radio platter-spinners participating in the poll to gain a decisive edge over its nearest contender, Vic Damone's "On the Street Where You Live."

Both Johnny Lawrence of WOKO and John Mounteer of WTRY went all the way with the Page record. Bob Wolf of WPTR placed it second to the Damone success with Earle Pudney making it his second choice behind Doris Day's fast-climbing disc, "Whatever Will Be, Will Be".

Mary Ellen Farrell of WABY gave her top vote to Elvis Presley's "I Want You, I Need You," but this record figured in the ballot of only one other panel member and wound up in a tie for 10th with Nat (King) Cole's latest, "That's All There Is to That."

Bruce Bradley of WROW liked Pat Boone's "I Almost Lost My Mind" well enough to give this record his No. 1 vote.

Panel members taking a look at other new tunes on their library shelves offered these predictions on future hits:

Mary Ellen Farrell: Carmen McCrae's record of "You Don't Know Me" and Al Hibbler's "After the Lights Go Down Low" are comers.

Johnny Lawrence: Nelson Riddle's theme from "The Proud Ones" may make the top 10.

Bob Wolf: Andy Williams' "Canadian Sunset" can't miss.

Bruce Bradley: Carol Richards' "Intrigue" is intriguing.

John Mounteer: Perry Como's "Somebody Up There Likes Me" is just getting started.

Top 10 Records

Here are the top 10 records of the week as chosen by The Knickerbocker News panel of disc jockeys (last week's rating is in parentheses):

1 (5) — Allegheny Moon (Patti Page, Mercury).
2 (2) — Street Where You Live (Vic Damone, Columbia).
3 (3) — I Almost Lost My Mind (Pat Boone, Dot).
4 (1) — Wayward Wind (Gogi Grant, Era).
5 (6) — Standing on the Corner (Four Lads, Columbia).
6 (7) — Whatever Will Be Will Be (Doris Day, Columbia).
7 (4)—Born to Be With You (Chordettes, Cadence).
8 — Sweet Old Fashioned Girl (Teresa Brewer, Coral).
9 — Ivory Tower (Cathy Carr, Fraternity).
10 (10)—I Want You, I Need You (Elvis Presley, Victor).
10 (tie)—That's All There is to That (Nat Cole, Victor).

*Here are top tunes in other parts of the country as reported in Variety:

Nationwide — Wayward Wind.

New York City — Moonglow from "Picnic" (Morris Stoloff, Decca).

Boston—I Almost Lost My Mind.

Philadelphia — Street Where You Live.

Chicago — I Almost Lost My Mind.

Galveston, Tex. — That's All There is to That.

Rutland, Vt. — I'm in Love Again (Fats Domino, Imperial).

Los Angeles — Wayward Wind.

*Copyright Variety Inc. Reprinted by permission.

JULY SALE
$200 OFF ON NEW SPINETS
Boardman & Gray
Eagle at Jay St.

GIFTS GALORE for every occasion—in every price range—here you'll find the best in • LUGGAGE
• LEATHER GOODS
• GIFTWARE
ALBANY LUGGAGE SHOP
515 BROADWAY
Open Thurs. Till 9

[98]

REDUCTION RATIO

19x

2.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm

A5

A4

A3

1.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.5 mm

PRECISION[SM] RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century

1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

4.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

3.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

A Noteworthy Thought for Dr. Knox

Tanglewood Conductor, Once Sailor, Charts Course for Music Education

By DUANE LA FLECHE

THE folks up at the State Education Department who are a bit concerned these days with the teaching of music in public schools (they have a committee working on it) might take a trip over to Tanglewood and talk to a South American sailor. He would give them a bit of encouragement and a bit of advice.

If they should go over there, they want to ask for Eleazar de Carvalho. His name isn't as familiar as "Elvis Presley," but it isn't entirely unknown, for that South American sailor is:

The composer of two operas and a symphony, together with lesser works.

Founder of a musical movement for youth in Brazil.

A director of an international musical youth movement.

Permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra.

A teacher of conducting and a trainer of orchestras.

And guest conductor with such orchestras as the Boston Symphony, the New York Philharmonic, the London Philharmonic. (He will be in Germany this winter to conduct during the Festival of Berlin.)

Mr. deCarvalho would tell Dr. Warren Knox, assistant education commissioner for instructional services (who named the committee that is seeking a better way to open the ears of children to music) to set an All-American course, and to bear in mind that while musical education in the United States is only a half dozen points better than horrible, it is, nevertheless, the best in the world.

But if Mr. de Carvalho is a conductor and musical educator, why did we call him a South American sailor?

• • •

WE have to go back a few (but not too many) years for that.

It was along about 1925 that a farm family moved from the interior of Northern Brazil to a seacoast city, and Papa de Carvalho bought 10-year-old Eleazar a pair of shoes and sent him off to school.

Young Eleazar raised hell.

And since school didn't quite agree with Eleazar, Papa de Carvalho (he had 11 other children to think about) looked for a way out. He decided to send Eleazar to sea, and enrolled him in a school for apprentice seamen.

There had to be a little manipulation in that move, for Eleazar was too young and so he was enrolled under the birth certificate of an older brother. But he did get into the school.

And there he heard his first brass band!

Hearing that brass band sent him on a voyage that lasted 20 years and five minutes. And in the five minutes he traveled almost as far as he did in the 20 years.

The school band aroused his interest in music. The school saw to it that he was trained as an ordinary seaman, and off to sea he went. (Reminded the other day that Rimsky-Korsakov had been a sailor too, Mr. de Carvalho replied with gusto:

"Yes, but he was an admiral. I was swabbing decks").

But he did get to join the Navy band, playing the contrabass; then, beginning in 1929 while on shore duty, he started his serious studies in music at the National School of Music of the University of Brazil. He served in the Navy and the National Corps in Rio de Janeiro until 1936.

The next four years saw him doing these things:

Winning a degree as doctor of music.

Playing a tuba in a circus and in casinos and cabarets.

Studying dentistry at night for three years. (He never really got his teeth into dentistry, maybe because he had got all the drilling he wanted in the Navy.)

And becoming a permanent member of the orchestra of the Teatro Municipal in Rio.

It wasn't long before he was conductor of the orchestra and wrote his two operas (one of them won him a $4,000 award.) Mr. de Carvalho had arrived—but only in Brazil.

• • •

IT was in 1946 that he first came to the United States and—as he admits now—with both a bit of ignorance and a bit of arrogance went to an agent and asked simply that the agent get him a job as guest conductor of the Boston, Philadelphia or New York Symphonies.

Mr. de Carvalho didn't discourage easily, but came the day he headed home, pretty much convinced that neither Boston, Philadelphia nor New York were yearning for him.

Then, before he sailed, it was suggested that he go to Tanglewood to see the late Serge Koussevitzky (conductor of the Boston Symphony and founder of the Berkshire School of Music.)

To Tanglewood he went, on the day before the opening of classes. But Koussevitzky would have none of him.

He would not accept Mr. de Carvalho as a conductor pupil.

He would not consider him as a guest conductor.

He would not even listen to Mr de Carvalho's glowing account of Mr. de Carvalho.

But finally, his back to the wall (probably the only time in his life Koussevitzky had his back to the wall), Koussezitsky gave Mr. de Carvalho five minutes to conduct the student orchestra.

The work was Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter" Overture.

Mr. de Carvalho raised his baton, the student orchestra sounded the first measures, and Koussevitzky was entranced.

• • •

MR. DE CARVALHO stayed at Tanglewood for the summer. A bit later he conducted the Boston Symphony in Symphony Hall. He had added a second continent to his conquests. Shortly after it was Europe.

This summer he is back again at Tanglewood as acting head of the department of orchestra and conducting. It was as a music educator that New York State's problem of musical education in the public schools was put to him.

In quick order then, Mr. de Carvalho:

Expressed his regret that the United States has remained aloof from the international organization, Jeunesses Musicales, that is working on the very problem of musical education.

Stressed that better training of teachers to teach music must be the first step in any program to improve the "taste and sensibility" of youth. (Everyone is pretty much in agreement on that.)

Urged that methods be followed in teaching that would avoid the "confusion of music."

Emphasized that training in the enjoyment of music must begin in the very first years. ("High school is much too late.")

And then he said:

"The teaching of musical taste and sensibility should start with the music of contemporary composers. In the United States it should start with the contemporary American composers, men like Piston and Aaron Copland, Lukas Foss and Randall Thompson. Men composing in an American idiom.

"Only after the ready ears of children have learned to hear their contemporaries should an effort be made to go back through musical history, era by era, to the masters."

• • •

MR. DE CARVALHO was asked:

"But won't the children find it hard to hear modern music? We adults sometimes find it so."

And he replied:

"Not at all. Youth is ready for anything!"

Mr. de Carvalho would leaven his musical curriculum of contemporary classicists with folk music and such, but there would be no place in it for popular music, so called.

"Children can hear that everywhere, and all the time," he says.

Perhaps, of course, the Education Department's committee studying musical education has had all the advice it can either assimilate or bear up under and won't go to Tanglewood to talk to Mr. de Carvalho at all.

But maybe some Albany folks would like to hear the Boston Symphony under his baton. They can, if they wish, the night of Aug. 3 when Mr. de Carvalho will conduct a rather modern program, Falla's "The Three Cornered Hat," Stravinsky's "Petrouchka," Barraud's "La Kermesse," and the Ravel Piano Concerto.

Soloist for the concerto will be Jocy de Oliveira, attractive, young, blonde and Brazilian.

She will be in tune with the occasion, in rapport with Ravel, in harmony with the conductor. . . .

She had better be. She is Mrs. de Carvalho.

Teacher-Student Harmony— Senor De Carvalho also heads the Music Center's student orchestra and conducting departments during the six week festival season. Above he is shown with two of his orchestra-conducting pupils, Clayton Westermann, center, and Kenneth Schermerhorn, Schenectady.

Family Harmony— Brazilian conductor Eleazar de Carvalho and his wife, Jocy de Oliveira, a concert pianist, review the score of Ravel's "Piano Concerto" in a shaded spot on the grounds of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood in preparation for a festival concert Aug. 3.

Symphonic Harmony— Senor De Carvalho conducts a student orchestra at the Berkshire Festival. The noted Brazilian musician will lead the orchestra Aug. 3 in Tanglewood's huge music shed in a program of Barraud, Falla, Stravinsky and Ravel.

REDUCTION

RATIO

14x

PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm

A3

A4

A5

1.0 mm

1.5 mm

2.0 mm

2.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century

A&P

1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

A Noteworthy Thou

Tanglewood Conductor, Once Sailor, Charts Course for Music Education

By DUANE LA FLECHE

THE folks up at the State Education Depar tment who are a bit concerned these days with the teaching of music in public school s (they have a committee working on it) might take a trip over to Tanglewood and talk to a South American sailor. He would give them a bit of encouragement and a bit of advice,

If they should go over there, they want to ask for Eleazar de Carvalho. His name isn't as familiar as "Elvis Presley," but it isn't entirely unknown, for that South American sailor is:

The composer of two operas and a symphony, together with lesser works.

Founder of a musical movement for youth in Brazil.

A director of an international musical youth movement.

Permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra.

A teacher of conducting and a trainer of orchestras.

And guest conductor with such orchestras as the Boston Symphony, the New York Philharmonic, the London Philharmonic. (He will be in Germany this winter to conduct during the Festival of Berlin.)

Mr. deCarvalho would tell Dr. Warren Knox, assistant education commissioner for instructional services (who named the committee that is seeking a better way to open the ears of children to music) to set an All-American course, and to bear in mind that while musical education in the United States is only a half dozen points better than horrible, it is, nevertheless, the best in the world.

But if Mr. de Carvalho is a conductor and musical educator, why did we call him a South American sailor?

• • •

WE have to go back a few (but not too many) years for that.

It was along about 1925 that a farm family moved from the interior of Northern Brazil to a seacoast city, and Papa de Carvalho bought 10-year-old Eleazar a pair of shoes and sent him off to school.

Young Eleazar raised hell.

And since school didn't quite agree with Eleazar, Papa de Carvalho (he had 11 other children to think about) looked for a way out. He decided to send Eleazar to sea, and enrolled him in a school for apprentice seamen.

There had to be a little manipulation in that move, for Eleazar was too young and so he was enrolled under the birth certificate of an older brother. But he did get into the school.

And there he heard his first brass band!

Hearing that brass band sent him on a voyage that lasted 20 years and five minutes. And in the five minutes he traveled almost as far as he did in the 20 years.

The school band aroused his interest in music. The school saw to it that he was trained as an ordinary seaman, and off to sea he went. (Reminded the other day that Rimsky-Korsakov had been a sailor too, Mr. de Carvalho replied with gusto:

"Yes, but he was an admiral. I was swabbing decks").

But he did get to join the Navy band, playing the contrabass; then, beginning in 1929 while on shore duty, he started his serious studies in music at the National School of Music of the University of Brazil. He served in the Navy and the National Corps in Rio de Janeiro until 1936.

The next four years saw him doing these things:

Winning a degree as doctor of music.

Playing a tuba in a circus and in casinos and cabarets.

Studying dentistry at night for three years. (He never really got his teeth into dentistry, maybe because he had got all the drilling he wanted in the Navy.)

And becoming a permanent member of the orchestra of the Teatro Municipal in Rio.

It wasn't long before he was conductor of the orchestra and wrote his two operas (one of them won him a $4,000 award.) Mr. de Carvalho had arrived—but only in Brazil.

• • •

IT was in 1946 that he first came to the United States and—as he admits now—with both a bit of ignorance and a bit of arrogance went to a agent and asked simply tha the agent get him a job as gues conductor of the Boston, Phil adelphia or New York Sym phonies.

Mr. de Carvalho didn't dis courage easily, but came th day he headed home, pretty much convinced that neithe Boston, Philadelphia nor New York were yearning for him.

Then, before he sailed, i was suggested that he go t Tanglewood to see the lat Serge Koussevitzky (conductor of the Boston Symphony and founder of the Berkshire School of Music.)

To Tanglewood he went, on the day before the opening o classes. But Koussevitzky would have none of him.

He would not accept Mr. d Carvalho as a conductor pupil

He would not consider hin as a guest conductor.

He would not even listen t Mr de Carvalho's glowing ac count of Mr. de Carvalho.

But finally, his back to th wall (probably the only tim in his life Koussevitzky ha his back to the wall), Kousse zitsky gave Mr. de Carvalh five minutes to conduct th student orchestra.

Family Harmony—

Brazilian conductor Eleazar de Carvalho and his wife, Jocy de Oliveira, a concert pianist, review the score of Ravel's "Piano Concerto" in a shaded spot on the grounds of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood in preparation for a festival concert Aug. 3.

Symphonic Harmony—

Senor De Carvalho conducts a student orchestra at the Berkshire Festival. The noted Brazilian musician will lead the orchestra Aug. 3 in Tanglewood's huge music shed in a program of Barraud, Falla, Stravinsky and Ravel.

Teacher-Stud t Har

Above he is show h two of h

Family Harmony—

Brazilian conductor Eleazar de Carvalho and his wife, Jocy de Oliveira, a concert pianist, review the score of Ravel's "Piano Concerto" in a shaded spot on the grounds of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood in preparation for a festival concert Aug. 3.

Symphonic Harmony—

Senor De Carvalho conducts a student orchestra at the Berkshire Festival. The noted Brazilian musician will lead the orchestra Aug. 3 in Tanglewood's huge music shed in a program of Barraud, Falla, Stravinsky and Ravel.

A Noteworthy Though

Tanglewood Conductor, Once Sailor, Charts Course for Music Education

By DUANE LA FLECHE

THE folks up at the State Education Depar tment who are a bit concerned these days with the teaching of music in public school s (they have a committee working on it) might take a trip over to Tanglewood and talk to a South American sailor. He would give them a bit of encouragement and a bit of advice,

If they should go over there, they want to ask for Eleazar de Carvalho. His name isn't as familiar as "Elvis Presley," but it isn't entirely unknown, for that South American sailor is:

The composer of two operas and a symphony, together with lesser works.

Founder of a musical movement for youth in Brazil.

A director of an international musical youth movement.

Permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra.

A teacher of conducting and a trainer of orchestras.

And guest conductor with such orchestras as the Boston Symphony, the New York Philharmonic, the London Philharmonic. (He will be in Germany this winter to conduct during the Festival of Berlin.)

Mr. deCarvalho would tell Dr. Warren Knox, assistant education commissioner for instructional services (who named the committee that is seeking a better way to open the ears of children to music) to set an All-American course, and to bear in mind that while musical education in the United States is only a half dozen points better than horrible, it is, nevertheless, the best in the world.

But if Mr. de Carvalho is a conductor and musical educator, why did we call him a South American sailor?

• • •

WE have to go back a few (but not too many) years for that.

It was along about 1925 that a farm family moved from the interior of Northern Brazil to a seacoast city, and Papa de Carvalho bought 10-year-old Eleazar a pair of shoes and sent him off to school.

Young Eleazar raised hell.

And since school didn't quite agree with Eleazar, Papa de Carvalho (he had 11 other children to think about) looked for a way out. He decided to send Eleazar to sea, and enrolled him in a school for apprentice seamen.

There had to be a little manipulation in that move, for Eleazar was too young and so he was enrolled under the birth certificate of an older brother. But he did get into the school.

And there he heard his first brass band!

Hearing that brass band sent him on a voyage that lasted 20 years and five minutes. And in the five minutes he traveled almost as far as he did in the 20 years.

The school band aroused his interest in music. The school saw to it that he was trained as an ordinary seaman, and off to sea he went. (Reminded the other day that Rimsky-Korsakov had been a sailor too, Mr. de Carvalho replied with gusto:

"Yes, but he was an admiral. I was swabbing decks").

But he did get to join the Navy band, playing the contrabass; then, beginning in 1929 while on shore duty, he started his serious studies in music at the National School of Music of the University of Brazil. He served in the Navy and the National Corps in Rio de Janeiro until 1936.

The next four years saw him doing these things:

Winning a degree as doctor of music.

Playing a tuba in a circus and in casinos and cabarets.

Studying dentistry at night for three years. (He never really got his teeth into dentistry, maybe because he had got all the drilling he wanted in the Navy.)

And becoming a permanent member of the orchestra of the Teatro Municipal in Rio.

It wasn't long before he was conductor of the orchestra and wrote his two operas (one of them won him a $4,000 award.) Mr. de Carvalho had arrived—but only in Brazil.

• • •

IT was in 1946 that he first came to the United States and—as he admits now—with both a bit of ignorance and a bit of arrogance went to an agent and asked simply that the agent get him a job as guest conductor of the Boston, Philadelphia or New York Symphonies.

Mr. de Carvalho didn't discourage easily, but came the day he headed home, pretty much convinced that neither Boston, Philadelphia nor New York were yearning for him.

Then, before he sailed, it was suggested that he go to Tanglewood to see the late Serge Koussevitzky (conductor of the Boston Symphony and founder of the Berkshire School of Music.)

To Tanglewood he went, on the day before the opening of classes. But Koussevitzky would have none of him.

He would not accept Mr. de Carvalho as a conductor pupil.

He would not consider him as a guest conductor.

He would not even listen to Mr de Carvalho's glowing account of Mr. de Carvalho.

But finally, his back to the wall (probably the only time in his life Koussevitzky had his back to the wall), Koussezitsky gave Mr. de Carvalho five minutes to conduct the student orchestra.

Teacher-Student Ha

Above he is shown with two of h

The work koff's "Russ
ture.
Mr. de Car ton, the sounded the Koussevitzky

• •

MR. DE C at Ta summer. A ducted the in Symphony added a sec his conquests
it was Europ

This summ again at Tang head of the chestra and was as a mu
New York S musical educa
lic schools wa

In quick or Carvalho:

Expressed h
United States from the inter
tion, Jeunesses working on the musical educati

Stressed that teachers to tea
the first step i improve the "ta

A Noteworthy Thought for Dr. Knox

Tanglewood Conductor, Once Sailor, Charts Course for Music Education

By DUANE LA FLECHE

THE folks up at the State Education Department who are a bit concerned these days with the teaching of music in public schools (they have a committee working on it) might take a trip over to Tanglewood and talk to a South American sailor. He would give them a bit of encouragement and a bit of advice,

If they should go over there, they want to ask for Eleazar de Carvalho. His name isn't as familiar as "Elvis Presley," but it isn't entirely unknown, for that South American sailor is:

The composer of two operas and a symphony, together with lesser works.

Founder of a musical movement for youth in Brazil.

A director of an international musical youth movement.

Permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra.

A teacher of conducting and a trainer of orchestras.

And guest conductor with such orchestras as the Boston Symphony, the New York Philharmonic, the London Philharmonic. (He will be in Germany this winter to conduct during the Festival of Berlin.)

Mr. deCarvalho would tell Dr. Warren Knox, assistant education commissioner for instructional services who named the committee that is seeking a better way to open the ears of children to music) to set an All-American course, and to bear in mind that while musical education in the United States is only a half dozen points better than horrible, it is, nevertheless, the best in the world.

But if Mr. de Carvalho is a conductor and musical educator, why did we call him a South American sailor?

• • •

WE have to go back a few (but not too many) years for that.

It was along about 1925 that a farm family moved from the interior of Northern Brazil to a seacoast city, and Papa de Carvalho bought 10-year-old Eleazar a pair of shoes and sent him off to school.

Young Eleazar raised hell.

And since school didn't quite agree with Eleazar, Papa de Carvalho (he had 11 other children to think about) looked for a way out. He decided to send Eleazar to sea, and enrolled him in a school for apprentice seamen.

There had to be a little manipulation in that move, for Eleazar was too young and so he was enrolled under the birth certificate of an older brother. But he did get into the school.

And there he heard his first brass band!

Hearing that brass band sent him on a voyage that lasted 20 years and five minutes. And in the five minutes he traveled almost as far as he did in the 20 years.

The school band aroused his interest in music. The school saw to it that he was trained as an ordinary seaman, and off to sea he went. (Reminded the other day that Rimsky-Korsakov had been a sailor too, Mr. de Carvalho replied with gusto:

"Yes, but he was an admiral. I was swabbing decks").

But he did get to join the Navy band, playing the contrabass; then, beginning in 1929 while on shore duty, he started his serious studies in music at the National School of Music of the University of Brazil. He served in the Navy and the National Corps in Rio de Janeiro until 1936.

The next four years saw him doing these things:

Winning a degree as doctor of music.

Playing a tuba in a circus and in casinos and cabarets.

Studying dentistry at night for three years. (He never really got his teeth into dentistry, maybe because he had got all the drilling he wanted in the Navy.)

And becoming a permanent member of the orchestra of the Teatro Municipal in Rio.

It wasn't long before he was conductor of the orchestra and wrote his two operas (one of them won him a $4,000 award.) Mr. de Carvalho had arrived—but only in Brazil.

• • •

IT was in 1946 that he first came to the United States and—as he admits now—with both a bit of ignorance and a bit of arrogance went to an agent and asked simply that the agent get him a job as guest conductor of the Boston, Philadelphia or New York Symphonies.

Mr. de Carvalho didn't discourage easily, but came the day he headed home, pretty much convinced that neither Boston, Philadelphia nor New York were yearning for him.

Then, before he sailed, it was suggested that he go to Tanglewood to see the late Serge Koussevitzky (conductor of the Boston Symphony and founder of the Berkshire School of Music.)

To Tanglewood he went, on the day before the opening of classes. But Koussevitzky would have none of him.

He would not accept Mr. de Carvalho as a conductor pupil.

He would not consider him as a guest conductor.

He would not even listen to Mr de Carvalho's glowing account of Mr. de Carvalho.

But finally, his back to the wall (probably the only time in his life Koussevitzky had his back to the wall), Koussezitsky gave Mr. de Carvalho five minutes to conduct the student orchestra.

The work was Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter" Overture.

Mr. de Carvalho raised his baton, the student orchestra sounded the first measures, and Koussevitzky was entranced.

• • •

MR. DE CARVALHO stayed at Tanglewood for the summer. A bit later he conducted the Boston Symphony in Symphony Hall. He had added a second continent to his conquests. Shortly after it was Europe.

This summer he is back again at Tanglewood as acting head of the department of orchestra and conducting. It was as a music educator that New York State's problem of musical education in the public schools was put to him.

In quick order then, Mr. de Carvalho:

Expressed his regret that the United States has remained aloof from the international organization, Jeunesses Musicales, that is working on the very problem of musical education.

Stressed that better training of teachers to teach music must be the first step in any program to improve the "taste and sensibility" of youth. (Everyone is pretty much in agreement on that.)

Urged that methods be followed in teaching that would avoid the "confusion of music."

Emphasized that training in the enjoyment of music must begin in the very first years. ("High school is much too late.")

And then he said:

"The teaching of musical taste and sensibility should start with the music of contemporary composers. In the United States it should start with the contemporary American composers, men like Piston and Aaron Copland, Lukas Foss and Randall Thompson. Men composing in an American idiom.

"Only after the ready ears of children have learned to hear their contemporaries should an effort be made to go back through musical history, era by era, to the masters."

• • •

MR. DE CARVALHO was asked:

"But won't the children find it hard to hear modern music? We adults sometimes find it so."

And he replied:

"Not at all. Youth is ready for anything!"

Mr. de Carvalho would leaven his musical curriculum of contemporary classicists with folk music and such, but there would be no place in it for popular music, so called.

"Children can hear that everywhere, and all the time," he says.

Perhaps, of course, the Education Department's committee studying musical education has had all the advice it can either assimilate or bear up under and won't go to Tanglewood to talk to Mr. de Carvalho at all.

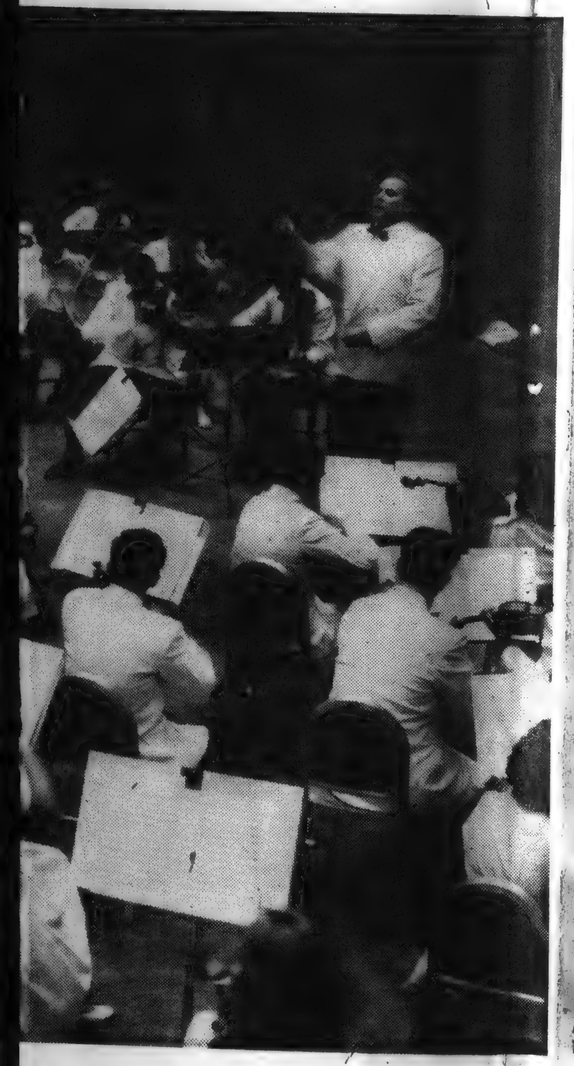
But maybe some Albany folks would like to hear the Boston Symphony under his baton. They can, if they wish, the night of Aug. 8 when Mr. de Carvalho will conduct a rather modern program, Falla's "The Three Cornered Hat," Stravinsky's "Petrouchka," Barraud's "La Kermesse," and the Ravel Piano Concerto.

Soloist for the concerto will be Jocy de Oliveira, attractive, young, blonde and Brazilian.

She will be in tune with the occasion, in rapport with Ravel, in harmony with the conductor. . . .

She had better be. She is Mrs. de Carvalho.

Teacher-Student Harmony—Senor De Carvalho also heads the Music Center's student orchestra and conducting departments during the six week festival season. Above he is shown with two of his orchestra-conducting pupils, Clayton Westermann, center, and Kenneth Schermerhorn, Schenectady.



Continued on Page 9

6203 AT FIRST HUB SYMPHONY SHED CONCERT

Orchestra, Conductor Appear Inspired in Opening Program

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 20—With the opening concert in the big shed, the Berkshire Music Festival really seems to get under way. There is something about the huge, 6000-seat shed and the 106 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra which gives the real feeling of a music festival. Tonight some 6203 people were on hand to welcome Charles Munch and the orchestra.

Mr. Munch divided the program into two parts. The first part was devoted to the works of Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel, the latter part to the "Symphony No. 2 in D Major," by Brahms. The distinguished French conductor is a particularly fine interpreter of French orchestral literature and he provided some rewarding readings tonight. The program opened with the overture, "The Roman Carnival," by Berlioz. This is always a sure-

Continued On Page 9

6203 at First

Continued From Page 1

fire hit. It has tremendous verve and climax and Mr. Munch was never more compelling than tonight. He demanded, and received, huge climaxes, but there was also meticulous attention to detail.

Debussy's "Prelude a L'Apres-midi d'un Faun" can become just about anything a conductor desires. Mr. Munch saw in the work sheer poetry and beauty. The work has always been one of the finest accomplishments of the Boston Orchestra, but tonight it seemed that both conductor and orchestra were inspired. There were colors of every hue, a range of dynamics which seemed limitless and a never ending flow of beautiful tone.

Ravel's "Daphne et Chloe" (second suite) is quite the richest score Ravel wrote. It is a vast musical fresco which pictures the ways of innocent but inquisitive young love. Mr. Munch offered the most vivid and exciting performance we have ever heard. It had tremendous power and audience impact. In fact, there were bravos aplenty after it ended and prolonged applause. Mr. Munch worked hard, we have seldom seen him so active on the podium, but he got the results he wanted and the audience benefited.

Notable Performance

It is not necessary to go into detail concerning the playing of the Second Symphony of Brahms. Suffice to relate that Mr. Munch stressed both its strength and inate romanticism. Where the First Symphony revelled in its immensity, the second offers a variety of moods in which charm, strength and deep feeling mingle. Each of its four movements has a definite message which amounts to a notable whole. The Boston players provided a performance that was notable for the full communication of the moods within the work.

Tomorrow night Mr. Munch will lead the orchestra in a program which opens with the "Adagio for Strings" by Samuel Barber. This and the "Symphony No. 6" by Marinu, written for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra, will comprise the first portion of the program. The second part will be devoted to the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkuere" with Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor, and James Pease as soloists.

Jesuits Thank Tanglewood For Ceremony Site Offer

Shadowbrook Ground-Breaking to Be at Adjacent Music Festival Property July 31

The Jesuits of New England yesterday thanked a famed neighbor in Lenox—Tanglewood for offering the site of the music festival for ceremonies marking the ground-breaking of the Shadowbrook Novitiate on July 31.

Lauds Neighborly Act

Very Rev. William E. Fitz-Gerald, S. J., provincial, lauded the "immediate and friendly assistance" of neighbors at the time of the fire which raxed the disclosed that "again our Lenox neighbors are answering our needs."

"The Jesuits and their friends," he said, "gratefully acknowledge the courtesies of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Tanglewood Music Festival in providing the facilities of Tanglewood for the ceremonies."

With the former Novitiate a pile of ashes and rubble, the Jesuits lacked facilities for the event which will include an address by Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston and participation by most of the Catholic Hierarchy of New England.

Persons attending will proceed from Tanglewood to the site of the new Novitiate near the ruins of the old for the actual ground-breaking by the Bishop Christopher J. Weldon of Springfield. Memorial services for the four Jesuits who perished in the fire will be held at the cemetery adjacent to the ruins.

Meanwhile, Joseph Sullivan of Lowell, national chairman of the appeal for $3,000,000 to rebuild the Novitiate, announced that $2,045,000 has been donated to date.

Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, July 21, 1956

Thursday August 9th ● Events From 6 to 11 P.M.

RAIN OR SHINE

TANGLEWOOD — LENOX, MASS.

"Tanglewood on Parade"

Shed Concert at 8:15 by the

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Conducted By ELEAZAR DE CARVALHO

Overture: "The Russian Easter" — Rimsky-Korsakoff
Chorus No. 10 (Rasga o coracoa) — Villa Lobos
Berkshire Festival Chorus

BOSTON POPS ORCHESTRA

ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor

In a Typical Pops Program

La Boutique Fantasque — Rossini-Respighi
Piano Concerto in F — Gershwin
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma
Bolero — Ravel

(Encores May be Expected)

Lawn Party ★ Picnic Supper ★ Door Prizes

TICKETS: Box Seats $5; Front Sections (All seats reserved) $4 and $3; Unreserved Section $2.50.

All who purchase tickets will be invited to attend the activities of the Berkshire Music Center at 6 o'clock:

Symphony Orchestra ★ Opera Scenes
The Chorus ★ Chamber Music

—REMAINING FESTIVAL CONCERTS—
Fri. and Sat. Eves., Sun. Afts., July 27, 28, 29; Aug. 3, 4, 5; Aug. 10, 11, 12
(Chamber Concerts—Wed. Eves., July 25, Aug. 1, 8)
Wed. Eve. Chamber Concerts—$2, $3; Fri. Eve., Sat. Eve and Sun. Aft. Shed Concerts—$2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50
Box Seats $6.50) Admission $2.00
Write or Phone
TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. (Lenox 600)
Baldwin Piano — RCA Victor Records

[99]

GREAT HANDS AT CONDUCTING, Pierre Monteux, left, and Dr. Charles Munch, will share the podium at the Berkshire Festival concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood over the weekend. Mr. Monteux, 81-year-old former conductor of the Boston Symphony, has been invited by the BSO musical director to share some of the conducting with Dr. Munch on the orchestra's forthcoming tour of Europe. He will make his first Tanglewood appearance tomorrow afternoon. Dr. Munch will conduct BSO tonight.

Tanglewood Benefit

Sanroma Coming to Parade As Soloist With Boston Pops

TANGLEWOOD — Eleazar de Carvalho, the Brazilian conductor, who is heading the student orchestra department at the Berkshire Music Center this season, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops, and Jesus Maria Sanroma, the noted pianist, will appear on the program with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood on Parade Thursday, Aug. 9.

This annual gala concert, which benefits the Music Center, will be held in the Music Shed. Mr. de Carvalho, artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the BSO in the first half of the program. The performance will include Rimski-Korsakov's "Russian Easter Overture" and a work by de Carvalho's countryman, the Brazilian composer Heitor Villa-Lobos, the Chorus No. 10, titled in Portuguese, "Rasga o coracao." Assisting in the Villa-Lobos performance will be the Festival chorus of the Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department.

Third Appearance

After the intermission, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will make their third consecutive Tanglewood on Parade appearance. Mr. Sanroma, who will be a soloist with the Pops orchestra, will be making his first appearance at Tanglewood since 1942. He will introduce to the Festival audience the Piano Concerto in F by Gershwin.

In addition, Mr. Fiedler will conduct a suite from the ballet, "La Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini orchestrated by Respighi, and other works from the Pops repertory. As is customary at the Boston Pops concert, encores may be expected.

Starts at 4 p.m.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center starting at 4 p.m. in the formal gardens and barn. At 5:45 p.m. there will be a fanfare and formal welcoming address by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, on the lawns outside the Music Shed, and at 6 p.m. simultaneous performances in the Shed, Theater and Chamber Music Hall by students of the orchestral, opera and composition departments. At 7 p.m., while concertgoers eat their picnic suppers on the lawn, the Tanglewood Chorus, under the direction of Hugh Ross, will present an informal concert on the porch of the main house. The gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin promptly at 8:15 p.m. and at its conclusion, at approximately 10:30 p.m., there will be waltzing on the lawn.

Tickets for Tanglewood on Parade are now on sale at the box office.

U.N. Visitors Here for Seventh Year

Group Representing 19 Nations Guests Of County Families

Thirty-four United Nations visitors from 19 different countries arrived last night by bus for the seventh annual U.N. visit to Pittsfield, sponsored by the Workshop for World Understanding and other community groups.

Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood tonight and tomorrow afternoon will be the featured scheduled events, with the hosts providing informal entertaining and sightseeing today.

An open house for hosts and friends was slated for this afternoon, and again after tonight's concert, at the Castle at Pontoosuc Lake.

Picnic Tomorrow

Tomorrow will see the group picnicking on the lawn at Tanglewood, with the luncheon being served by the Merry-Mates of the First Baptist Church, under the direction of Mrs. Raymond Warner.

The Boston Symphony Assn. is again providing tickets for Shed seats for the group.

Twenty individual Pittsfield families have opened their homes to the U.N. Secretariat members, many of whom are special internes, selected by their countries for one-year assignments at the U.N.

The group will board the bus for the return trip after tomorrow's concert.

Mrs. R. S. Schoonmaker is chairman of the hosts' committee, with Mrs. F. M. Myers in charge of the U.N. arrangements. K. K. Paluev is arranging the Tanglewood visits and Miss Peggy Parsons handled the U.N. end of the hospitality visit, which has seen some 400 U.N. people come to the Berkshires since the first trip in 1950.

Guests Listed

The guests, their nationality, and their hosts follow: Miss Edith Meyer, Chile, and Miss Jean Ward, Mexico, Mr. and Mrs. William Abrams, Canaan, N.Y.; Miss Laila Faris, Lebanon, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Boughton, Canaan, N.Y.; Nemesio Gomez, Philippines, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Buckheim, 42 Lexington Pkwy.; Cheng Ho, China, and Albert S. St. Laurent, Canada, The Castle; Mr. and Mrs. Angel Bonomini, Argentina, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Conroy, 40 Revilla Ter.

Also Miss Albertina Martinez, Dominican Republic, and Miss Rosa Guerra, Mexico, Catherine and Elisabeth Derivan, 117 Livingston Pkwy.; Miss Helen Black, New Zealand, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Finch, Canaan, N.Y.; Dr. and Mrs. Edward Lal, China, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Galitsine, Stockbridge; Miss Parsons, U.S.A., and Miss Ghita Newfeld, South Africa, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hermann, Pontoosuc Lake; Mr. and Mrs. Loh Chu-Fen Hang, China, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Hill, 84 Tor Ct.; Mrs. Nora Norton, United Kingdom, Miss Dorothy Koepke, 39 Allendale Rd.

Also, Dr. Robert Harpignies, Belgium, and G. K. Robinson, United Kingdom, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Myers, 106 Crofut St.; Haiti Tarcut, Turkey, and Amos Melamede, Israel, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ross, 145 Barbara Ave.; Miss Marlen de Vries, Argentina, and Miss Sylvette Loesch, Luxembourg, Mr. and Mrs. Schoonmaker; Miss Eugenie Bulachowski, France, and Miss Sally Handasyde, United Kingdom, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Skole, 531 Crane Ave.

Also, Robustiano Espiritu, Philippines, and Ismael Osman, Afghanistan, A. E. Schubert, 892 West St.; Miss Marianne Stein, Chile, Miss May Thayer, 395 West Housatonic St.; Mrs. Flora Dawes, Mr. and Mrs. Morton Wayne, 397 Partridge Rd.; and Ernest Perl, Dr. K. L. Hirschmann, 88 Tor Ct.

Social Briefs

Miss Charlotte G. Salzman of Cleveland, Ohio, will arrive tomorrow to spend a few days with her brother and sister-in-law, Rabbi and Mrs. Harold I. Salzmann of 48 Revere Pkwy.

Here for the weekend Berkshire Festival concerts are Mr. and Mrs. George H. Judd of Cannonsville, N.Y., who are staying with Mr. Judd's son, William M. Judd of Glendale. George Judd is retired manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Among guests of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the weekend Berkshire Festival concerts are Francis Madeira of Providence, conductor of the Rhode Island Philharmonic Orchestra, and T. K. Hebert, Netherlands consul, of Boston.

Mrs. Ralph A. Bridges of 40 Pollock Ave. has returned from New Bedford, where she spent three weeks with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Neill Bridges.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller, 500 Williams St., have as their weekend guests for the Tanglewood concerts, Mrs. K. S. Choate of Topsfield and Judge Raymond S. Wilkins of Boston. Judge Wilkins, who is a member of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court, is a trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Guest of Mrs. John L. Senior of Under Mountain Road, Lenox, this weekend will be her son, J. L. Senior Jr. of Redgeberry, Conn.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Taft of Boston are staying at the Lenox Club this weekend for the Berkshire Festival. Mr. Taft is a trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Visiting Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Flournoy of 153 South St. are their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Flournoy of Darien, Conn., and another son, Thomas N. Flournoy of New York. The John Flournoys' son, Peter, is spending the summer at Camp Hazen, Chester, Conn.

What's Going On?

TONIGHT:

8:30—Tanglewood. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Shed.

8:40—Williamstown Summer Theater. Final Performance, "St. Joan."

8:40—Sharon (Conn.) Playhouse. Final performance, "Shadow and Substance."

8:45—Berkshire Playhouse. Final performance, "The Wayward Saint."

8:45—Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse. "The Solid Gold Cadillac."

9:00—Jacob's Pillow. Melissa Hayden and Francisco Moncion. Myra Kinch & Company, with Ted Shawn. Geoffrey Holder & Company of Trinidad, with Carmen de Lavallade.

For complete schedule of outstanding cultural events in Berkshire for the next seven weeks, see the Berkshire Summer Calendar in the second section of today's Eagle.

Berkshire Week

Entire page from ↓

Munch, Monteux To Conduct At Weekend Festival Concerts

TANGLEWOOD — Dr. Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in concerts tonight and tomorrow afternoon to conclude the first weekend concerts in the Music Shed here, when the Berkshire Festival comes to the halfway mark.

Tonight's program, starting at 8:30, revised from the all-Wagner concert announced originally, lists the "Adagio for Strings," by Samuel Barber and Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" on the first part of the program.

Tanglewood Premiere

The Martinu score, commissioned by Dr. Munch for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was given its premiere by the orchestra in January, 1955, and performed later that month by Dr. Munch and the orchestra in New York and other cities. Earlier this year it received the award of the New York Music Critics' Circle as the best new orchestral work performed in New York during 1955. Tonight's performance will be its Tanglewood premiere.

After the intermission Dr. Munch and the orchestra, with three vocal soloists, will be heard in a concert presentation of the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure." Soloists will be Margaret Harshaw, soprano, and Albert Da Costa, tenor, both of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and James Pease, bass, of the Hamburg Opera Company. Mr. Da Costa, a native of nearby Amsterdam, N.Y., who scored in the Wagner repertory at the Metropolitan Opera in the season just past, will be making his Tanglewood debut. Both Miss Harshaw and Mr. Pease are well known at Tanglewood for their past appearances here. Mr. Pease, a student at the Berkshire Music Center in 1946, 1948, 1949 and 1951, appeared in Festival concerts with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on numerous occasions during that period. Miss Harshaw made her Tanglewood debut at a Festival concert by Pierre Monteux in 1953 and returned last summer to sing under the direction of Dr. Munch.

Sunday's Program

Mr. Monteux has chosen an all-orchestral program for his concert tomorrow afternoon at 2:30—The Overture to Rossini's opera, "L'Italiana in Algeri," Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra, and the C Major Symphony No. 7 by Schubert. The Bartok score, a contemporary classic, was commissioned by Serge Koussevitzky for the Koussevitzky Music Foundation and given its world premiere performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Dr. Koussevitzky's direction in December, 1944. Its performance at tomorrow afternoon's concert will be its first at the Berkshire Festival.

Since celebrating his 81st birthday in April, Mr. Monteux has conducted concerts in several European cities. He also spent a week in Rome conducting a recording of Verdi's opera, "La Traviata," which will be released by RCA Victor in the fall. Returning to the United States at the end of June, Mr. Monteux conducted the first two weeks of the Lewisohn Stadium concerts in New York and then journeyed to Chicago for three concerts with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra at the Ravinia Festival.

Great Ba

ANTHONY G. RUD, STEPHEN S

Tourist Trade Is Picking Up

GREAT BARRINGTON — One of the most active weekends in the tourist trade so far this summer is expected here, after exceptionally heavy traffic through town yesterday.

Personnel at the Chamber of Commerce's information booth confirmed that inquiries had picked up, as they usually do each summer with the opening of the concerts in the big Shed at Tanglewood. Requests for room reservations are fairly numerous, with the greatest demand for motel accommodations.

Easing the housing situation this summer is the new camp policy of staggering visitors' weekends. In other years almost all the camps in the area had visitors on the same weekends.

The Summer Trade

AT TANGLEWOOD, still dogged by poor weather that was keeping attendance figures slightly below last year's record highs, the spotlight shifted to the Music Shed, where an audience of 6,203 attended the first of 12 major concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra . . . An estimated 7,000 persons lined the shores of Lake Onota to watch a flotilla of motorized craft compete in the second annual regatta of the Pittsfield Boating Club . . . In Stockbridge, the venerable Red Lion Inn was placed under a temporary trusteeship to satisfy creditors, whose claims were quoted as running to approximately $205,000. The inn will remain open, however . . . With more than 300 riders competing for some $7,000 in prizes before a final-day crowd of 3,000, the annual Great Barrington Horse Show on the town's fair grounds was rated the most successful (and profitable) to date.

It Could Be Verse

Bach Arias in Berkshire

The bare essentials form the themes
Of modern musical extremes;
And summer festivals are gay
With fans in tans and decolletd.

Las Vegas boasts its famous Strip,
At Coney Isle they just unzip;
But Tanglewood is out ahead,
They even call their shop The Shed.

ALBERT H. JACKSON
Becket.

Tanglewood Tangle

Grunts From an Old Grouch

FOR SOME unfathomable reason the editor of this special section of The Eagle has asked the Old Grouch, a long-time resident of the Berkshires, to air herein some of his pet peeves, of which he has a notoriously large array. Could anything be sillier? Here is the editor trying to make the Berkshires better known to more people, and here is the Old Grouch asked to pour poison into his propaganda! "My number one pet peave," the Old Grouch grunts, "is that there are too many visitors in the Berkshires already, and they all come at one time — during the Music Festival at Tanglewood.

"They don't come to get acquainted with the Berkshires, but to get acquainted with Bach. They crowd the roads, they make Lenox uninhabitable, they sprawl over the once-aristocratic grass at Tanglewood displaying their anatomies (and the less alluring the anatomy, the greater the display).

"Then in mid-August they disappear. 'But wasn't it wonderful that so many people could hear great music amid our beautiful hills?' I am asked. What is so wonderful about it, I grunt. Half of 'em are outside the Shed and don't hear the music properly at all. All of 'em are so jammed in traffic going and coming that they can't see the 'beautiful hills.' There's nothing beautiful about the rear end of a motor car belching in your face.

"What was wonderful was when people came to the Berkshires in June and stayed till November in our pleasant hotels, and really saw the Berkshires. Then they went back to town and listened to great music where it belongs — in a concert hall."

"At this point," the Old Grouch goes on, "I am frequently asked, 'Is it just possible that you don't like music?' You know the tone; it puts me in my rightful place among the lower primates. Of course it is possible. You'd be surprised how many people there are who don't really like 'great music.' Whether I do or don't is nobody's business, though I'm willing to confess that hearing one more Brandenburg concerto would send me jabbering to the Riggs Clinic.

"It is also possible that I don't like people, certainly not too many people invading the peaceful Berkshires for six weeks and then leaving our hotels high and dry the rest of the year. So far as I'm concerned the Berkshire Music Festival is a disaster to the Berkshires."

At this point somebody said to the Old Grouch, "It's lucky that you aren't a musician; your Bach would be even worse than your bite."

Music

Boston Symphony Orchestra

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE ENTIRE Boston Symphony orchestra made its first appearance of the season at Tanglewood last night in a program, give or take Ravel a few years, of 19th century music.

Charles Munch led the zestful orchestra with brilliant vitality and vivid color in French music for the first half, and in the Brahms second symphony after intermission.

The first two weeks of the Berkshire Festival had been played by the chamber orchestra in the smaller Theater-Concert Hall, except for one Mozart program that was moved to the larger Shed when the weather made it impossible for the overflow audience to remain unprotected outdoors. Last night, while the skies were only the slightest bit threatening, the auditorium was filled and the surrounding lawns surprisingly populated with an audience which totalled 6,203.

* * *

THE ATTACK of the initial entrance of the orchestra in Berlioz' overture "The Roman Carnival" foretold the story of the whole evening, a performance marked by vibrant spirit and tremendous variety. Never has the orchestra played with more warmth and loving expression than in the coda of the Brahms first movement. In between, the orchestra produced every nuance of color and degree of dynamics from the diaphanous texture of the Debussy "Afternoon of a Faun" to excessive peaks of vehemence in the Ravel "Daphnis and Chloe" second suite.

Munch is a restless conductor. He rarely stays in one mood for long but picks up and moves on, especially when he has receded for an instant to a reflective or more quiet passage. He is eager and impatient to be on; and the superb instrument upon which he plays mirrors every impulse instantly and faithfully.

* * *

THE ORCHESTRAL tone last night was magnificent. A fortified basic foundation in the violas and celli made for excellent balance and the various soloists emerged in a program, especially the French half, which gave them plenty of opportunity. Munch called flute soloist Doriot Anthony Dwyer to the front to share the applause after the Debussy, and several others, notably oboeist Gomberg and clarinetist Cioffi, might well, too, have been singled out for outstandingly beautiful work.

* * *

EXCEPT FOR the Berlioz overture, the rest of the program has been heard in these concerts many times, yet there was never a question of satiety in the audience nor was there ever evidence of routine within the orchestra. The spirit of the performance was as fresh and vigorously contrasted as Munch and the orchestra ever gave on that platform. We can already envisage the reception the orchestra will receive on their forthcoming European tour when they play with the splendor and scintillation that was consistently in evidence last night.

SYRACUSE HERALD-AMERICAN, Sunday, July 22, 1956

Hanson 'Elegy' to Be Played in Berkshires

The fourth week of the Berkshire Festival concerts—six weeks in all by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and artists, will start Wednesday night, July 25, with a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms, played by the Beaux Arts Trio in the Theater concert hall.

In the Music Shed, where thousands hear the full 106-piece Boston Symphony, (many more music lovers listening from the broad lawns) Dr. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct two of the weekend's three concerts, Friday and Saturday nights. On Sunday afternoon, July 29, Richard Burgin, the orchestra's associate conductor and concert-master, will be on the podium.

The Friday night program comprises orchestral works by Beethoven, Tschaikowsky, and the "Tanglewood" premiere of a composition by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer, who is a guest teacher of composition this summer in the Berkshire Music Center in "Tanglewood".

The Saturday night Festival concert program is devoted to works by Schumann, Debussy and Honneger and the first performance, in the great Music Shed, of an Elergy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky, for years conductor of the Boston Symphony. Composer of the "Elegy" is Dr. Howard Hanson of Eastman School of Music, Rochester.

Rudolf Serkin, noted concert pianist, who attracted a near-record audience of 15,624 last summer when he made his first appearance in a Berkshire Festival concert, will be soloist Saturday night, playing Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor.

DR. HOWARD Hanson
. . . composer of "Elegy"

Next Sunday afternoon's concert will comprise music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler. Soloist in the Hinemith Violin Concerto will be Ruth Posselt, in private life Mrs. Richard Burgin. The fifth week of Berkshire Festival concerts opens Wednesday night, Aug. 1 with a joint recital by Pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet. On Friday night, Aug. 3, the gifted young conductor Eleazar de Cavallo will conduct the full Symphony orchestra in works by Barraud, de Falla, Ravel and Stravinsky. Jocy de Oliveira (Mrs. de Cavallo) will be soloist in the Ravel Concerto. Mr. de Cavallo conducted the Israel Philharmonic in Syracuse seasons ago.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, JULY 22, 1956

Berkshire Series at Midpoint

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood enters the second half of its six weeks' course with this afternoon's concert by the complete Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of the eighty-one-year-old Pierre Monteux. He will also conduct on Saturday night, Aug. 11. Charles Munch will conduct five of the remaining festival symphony concerts. The other conductors sharing the schedule with him are Richard Burgin next Sunday, Eleazar de Carvalho Aug. 3 and Leonard Bernstein Aug. 4. Mr. de Carvalho and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the major concert of the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit on Thursday, Aug. 9.

Besides the three remaining Wednesday night chamber music programs, there will be a concert of contemporary chamber music tomorrow night in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall, sponsored by the Fromm Foundation. Two works commissioned by the Foundation, a Quintet for Bassoon and strings by Leland Smith and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" by Julian Orbon, will have their first performances.

The Berkshire Music Center's Opera Department will present scenes from fourteen Mozart works Tuesday night and a mixed bill from five operas, including acts of Puccini's "La Rondine" and Berlioz' "The Trojans," on Monday night, July 30.

The annual chamber music series at South Mountain, Pittsfield, Mass., a few miles from Lenox and Tanglewood, opens at 3:30 p. m. next Saturday with a concert by the Claremont String Quartet. The Beaux Arts Quartet will give the second of these six weekly concerts on Aug. 4.

* * *

July 17, 1956

MILLBROOK ROUND TABLE

Berkshire Festival

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, 2:30. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting. Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri," Rossini; Concerto for Orchestra, Bartok; Symphony No. 7 in C major, Schubert.

Wednesday, 8:30. Beaux Arts Trio. Trio in D minor, Mendelssohn; Trio in A minor, Ravel; Trio in C minor, Brahms.

Friday, 8:30. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conductor. Overture, "Leonore," No. 2, Beethoven; Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, Petrassi; Symphony No. 4 in F minor, Tchaikovsky.

Saturday, 8:30. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; soloist, Rudolf Serkin, pianist. Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky, Hanson; Piano Concerto in A minor, Schumann; Symphony No. 3, Honegger; "La Mer," Debussy.

Sunday, July 29, 2:30. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Richard Burgin conducting; soloist, Ruth Posselt, violinist. "Romeo and Juliet," Suite No. 2, Prokofiev; Violin Concerto, Hindemith; Symphony No. 1 in D major, Mahler.

THE KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
Albany, N.Y., Sat., July 21, [illegible]

[101]

Great Ba

ANTHONY G. RUD, STEPHEN S

Tourist Trade Is Picking Up

GREAT BARRINGTON — One of the most active weekends in the tourist trade so far this summer is expected here, after exceptionally heavy traffic through town yesterday.

Personnel at the Chamber of Commerce's information booth confirmed that inquiries had picked up, as they usually do each summer with the opening of the concerts in the big Shed at Tanglewood. Requests for room reservations are fairly numerous, with the greatest demand for motel accommodations.

Easing the housing situation this summer is the new camp policy of staggering visitors' weekends. In other years almost all the camps in the area had visitors on the same weekends.

The Summer Trade

AT TANGLEWOOD, still dogged by poor weather that was keeping attendance figures slightly below last year's record highs, the spotlight shifted to the Music Shed, where an audience of 6,203 attended the first of 12 major concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra . . . An estimated 7,000 persons lined the shores of Lake Onota to watch a flotilla of motorized craft compete in the second annual regatta of the Pittsfield Boating Club . . . In Stockbridge, the venerable Red Lion Inn was placed under a temporary trusteeship to satisfy creditors, whose claims were quoted as running to approximately $205,000. The inn will remain open, however . . . With more than 300 riders competing for some $7,000 in prizes before a final-day crowd of 3,000, the annual Great Barrington Horse Show on the town's fair grounds was rated the most successful (and profitable) to date.

It Could Be Verse

Bach Arias in Berkshire

The bare essentials form the themes
Of modern musical extremes;
And summer festivals are gay
With fans in tans and decolletés.

Las Vegas boasts its famous Strip,
At Coney Isle they just unzip;
But Tanglewood is out ahead,
They even call their show The Shed.

ALBERT M. JACKSON
Becket.

Tanglewood Tangle

Grunts From an Old Grouch

FOR SOME unfathomable reason the editor of this special section of The Eagle has asked the Old Grouch, a long-time resident of the Berkshires, to air herein some of his pet peeves, of which he has a notoriously large array. Could anything be sillier? Here is the editor trying to make the Berkshires better known to more people, and here is the Old Grouch asked to pour poison into his propaganda! "My number one pet peeve," the Old Grouch grunts, "is that there are too many visitors in the Berkshires already, and they all come at one time — during the Music Festival at Tanglewood.

"They don't come to get acquainted with the Berkshires, but to get acquainted with Bach. They crowd the roads, they make Lenox uninhabitable, they sprawl over the once-aristocratic grass at Tanglewood displaying their anatomies (and the less alluring the anatomy, the greater the display).

"Then in mid-August they disappear. 'But wasn't it wonderful that so many people could hear great music amid our beautiful hills?' I am asked. What is so wonderful about it, I grunt. Half of 'em are outside the Shed and don't hear the music properly at all. All of 'em are so jammed in traffic going and coming that they can't see the 'beautiful hills.' There's nothing beautiful about the rear end of a motor car belching in your face.

"What was wonderful was when people came to the Berkshires in June and stayed till November in our pleasant hotels, and really saw the Berkshires. Then they went back to town and listened to great music where it belongs — in a concert hall."

"At this point," the Old Grouch goes on, "I am frequently asked, 'Is it just possible that you don't like music?' You know the tone; it puts me in my rightful place among the lower primates. Of course it is possible. You'd be surprised how many people there are who don't really like great music.' Whether I do or don't is nobody's business, though I'm willing to confess that hearing one more Brandenburg concerto would send me jabbering to the Riggs Clinic.

"It is also possible that I don't like people, certainly not too many people invading the peaceful Berkshires for six weeks and then leaving our hotels high and dry the rest of the year. So far as I'm concerned the Berkshire Music Festival is a disaster to the Berkshires."

At this point somebody said to the Old Grouch, "It's lucky that you aren't a musician; your Bach would be even worse than your bite."

Music

Boston Symphony Orchestra

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE ENTIRE Boston Symphony orchestra made its first appearance of the season at Tanglewood last night in a program, give or take Ravel a few years, of 19th century music.

Charles Munch led the zestful orchestra with brilliant vitality and vivid color in French music for the first half, and in the Brahms second symphony after intermission.

The first two weeks of the Berkshire Festival had been played by the chamber orchestra in the smaller Theater-Concert Hall, except for one Mozart program that was moved to the larger Shed when the weather made it impossible for the overflow audience to remain unprotected outdoors. Last night, while the skies were only the slightest bit threatening, the auditorium was filled and the surrounding lawns surprisingly populated with an audience which totalled 6,203.

* * *

THE ATTACK of the initial entrance of the orchestra in Berlioz' overture "The Roman Carnival" foretold the story of the whole evening, a performance marked by vibrant spirit and tremendous variety. Never has the orchestra played with more warmth and loving expression than in the coda of the Brahms first movement. In between, the orchestra produced every nuance of color and degree of dynamics from the diaphanous texture of the Debussy "Afternoon of a Faun" to excessive peaks of vehemence in the Ravel "Daphnis and Chloe" second suite.

Munch is a restless conductor. He rarely stays in one mood for long but picks up and moves on, especially when he has receded for an instant to a reflective or more quiet passage. He is eager and impatient to be on; and the superb instrument upon which he plays mirrors every impulse instantly and faithfully.

* * *

THE ORCHESTRAL tone last night was magnificent. A fortified basic foundation in the violas and celli made for excellent balance and the various soloists emerged in a program, especially the French half, which gave them plenty of opportunity. Munch called flute soloist Doriot Anthony Dwyer to the front to share the applause after the Debussy, and several others, notably oboeist Gomberg and clarinetist Cioffi, might well, too, have been singled out for outstandingly beautiful work.

* * *

EXCEPT FOR the Berlioz overture, the rest of the program has been heard in these concerts many times, yet there was never a question of satiety in the audience nor was there ever evidence of routine within the orchestra. The spirit of the performance was as fresh and vigorously contrasted as Munch and the orchestra ever gave on that platform. We can already envisage the reception the orchestra will receive on their forthcoming European tour when they play with the splendor and scintillation that was consistently in evidence last night.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, JULY 22, 1956

Berkshire Series at Midpoint

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood enters the second half of its six weeks' course with this afternoon's concert by the complete Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of the eighty-one-year-old Pierre Monteux. He will also conduct on Saturday night, Aug. 11. Charles Munch will conduct five of the remaining festival symphony concerts. The other conductors sharing the schedule with him are Richard Burgin next Sunday, Eleazar de Carvalho Aug. 3 and Leonard Bernstein Aug. 4. Mr. de Carvalho and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the major concert of the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit on Thursday, Aug. 9.

Besides the three remaining Wednesday night chamber music programs, there will be a concert of contemporary chamber music tomorrow night in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall, sponsored by the Fromm Foundation. Two works commissioned by the Foundation, a Quintet for Bassoon and strings by Leland Smith and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" by Julian Orbon, will have their first performances.

The Berkshire Music Center's Opera Department will present scenes from fourteen Mozart works Tuesday night and a mixed bill from five operas, including acts of Puccini's "La Rondine" and Berlioz' "The Trojans," on Monday night, July 30.

The annual chamber music series at South Mountain, Pittsfield, Mass., a few miles from Lenox and Tanglewood, opens at 3:30 p. m. next Saturday with a concert by the Claremont String Quartet. The Beaux Arts Quartet will give the second of these six weekly concerts on Aug. 4.

* * *

July 17, 1956

THE KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
Albany, N.Y., Sat., July 21, 1956

MILLBROOK ROUND TABLE

Berkshire Festival

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, 2:30. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting. Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri," Rossini; Concerto for Orchestra, Bartok; Symphony No. 7 in C major, Schubert.

Wednesday, 8:30. Beaux Arts Trio. Trio in D minor, Mendelssohn; Trio in A minor, Ravel; Trio in C minor, Brahms.

Friday, 8:30. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conductor. Overture, "Leonore," No. 2, Beethoven; Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, Petrassi; Symphony No. 4 in F minor, Tchaikovsky.

Saturday, 8:30. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; soloist, Rudolf Serkin, pianist. Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky, Hanson; Piano Concerto in A minor, Schumann; Symphony No. 5, Honegger; "La Mer," Debussy.

Sunday, July 29, 2.30. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Richard Burgin conducting; soloist, Ruth Posselt, violinist. "Romeo and Juliet," Suite No. 2, Prokofiev; Violin Concerto, Hindemith; Symphony No. 1 in D major, Mahler.

[10]

SYRACUSE HERALD-AMERICAN, Sunday, July 22, 1956

Hanson 'Elegy' to Be Played in Berkshires

The fourth week of the Berkshire Festival concerts—six weeks in all by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and artists, will start Wednesday night, July 25, with a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms, played by the Beaux Arts Trio in the Theater concert hall.

In the Music Shed, where thousands hear the full 106-piece Boston Symphony, (many more music lovers listening from the broad lawns) Dr. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct two of the weekend's three concerts, Friday and Saturday nights. On Sunday afternoon, July 29, Richard Burgin, the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, will be on the podium.

The Friday night program comprises orchestral works by Beethoven, Tschaikowsky, and the "Tanglewood" premiere of a composition by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer, who is a guest teacher of composition this summer in the Berkshire Music Center in "Tanglewood".

The Saturday night Festival concert program is devoted to works by Schumann, Debussy and Honneger and the first performance, in the great Music Shed, of an Elergy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky, for years conductor of the Boston Symphony. Composer of the "Elegy" is Dr. Howard Hanson of Eastman School of Music, Rochester.

Rudolf Serkin, noted concert pianist, who attracted a near-record audience of 15,624 last summer when he made his first appearance in a Berkshire Festival concert, will be soloist Saturday night, playing Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor.

DR. HOWARD Hanson
. . . composer of "Elegy"

Next Sunday afternoon's concert will comprise music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler. Soloist in the Hinemith Violin Concerto will be Ruth Posselt, in private life Mrs. Richard Burgin. The fifth week of Berkshire Festival concerts opens Wednesday night, Aug. 1 with a joint recital by Pianist Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet. On Friday night, Aug. 3, the gifted young conductor Eleazar de Cavallo will conduct the full Symphony orchestra in works by Barraud, de Falla, Ravel and Stravinsky. Jocy de Oliveira (Mrs. de Cavallo) will be soloist in the Ravel Concerto. Mr. de Cavallo conducted the Israel Philharmonic in Syracuse seasons ago.

Monteux at Tanglewood—Pierre Monteux, a frequent guest on the Berkshire Festival podium and director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra from 1919 to 1924, will return tomorrow to the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Mass. Mr. Monteux will conduct the orchestra in works by Rossini, Bartok and Schubert. This is the first of four weekends of shed concerts for the festival, which is directed by Charles Munch. Tomorrow's program will begin at 2:30 p. m.

This Week In Music

SUNDAY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, Tanglewood, Mass., 2:30 p. m. Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Pierre Monteux.

Overture to L'Italiana in Algeri . Rossini
Concerto for Orchestra ..... Bartok
Symphony No. 7 in C Major .... Schubert

BERKSHIRE MUSIC BARN, Lenox, Mass., 8:40 p. m., Wilbur de Paris and New Orleans jazz, with Sidney de Paris and Omer Simeon.

EMPIRE STATE MUSIC FESTIVAL, Ellenville, 3:30 p. m. Symphony of the Air conducted by Milton Katims.

Overture Euryanthe ..... Weber
Symphony No. 2 in D Minor ..... Dvorak
Concerto No. 2
(Earl Wild, pianist ..... Rachmaninoff
Roumanian Rhapsody No. 1 Enesco

MAVERICK SUNDAY CONCERTS, Woodstock, 4 p. m., chamber music program: Christiane Nazzi, flute; Gerald Kunz, viola; Cynthia Eddy, cello; Ilse Sass, piano.

Sonata for Flute, Cello and Piano in C Major ..... Lotti
Variations for Cello and Piano . Bethovan
Contertino for Flute, Viola and Piano
Sonata for Flute, Cello and Piano in B Minor ..... Bloch
Trio for Fluet, Viola and Cello . Roussel

SOUTHERN VERMONT ART CENTER, Manchester, Vt., 3:30 p. m., Dance Drama Company, in "At the Still Point" (music by Debussy), "The Ballad of the False Lady," "Haunted Moments" and "Play in Four Times."

MONDAY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, 8:30 p. m. Theater-Concert Hall, modern chamber music by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Works by Barber, De Falla, Milhaud, Petrassi.
Quintet for Bassoon and Strongs . . . Leland Smith.
Himnus ad Galli Cantum . . . Julian Orbon.

TUESDAY

JACOB'S PILLOW DANCE FESTIVAL, Lee Mass., 9 p. m., San Francisco Ballet, Lew Christensen, director.

Concerto Barocco . . . Bach-Balanchine
The Dryad . . . Schubert-Christensen
Con Amore . . . Rossini-Christensen

TURNAU OPERA PLAYERS, Woodstock, 8:30 p. m., Byrdcliffe Theater, "In a Garden" and "I Pagliacci."

WEDNESDAY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, 8:30 p. m., Theater-Concert Hall, chamber music by the Beaux Arts Trio: Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, Cello; Menahem Pressler, piano.

Trio in D Minor . . . Mendelssohn
Trio in A Minor . . . Ravel
Trio in C Minor . . . Brahms

EMPIRE STATE, 8:30 p. m., Symphony of the Air conducted by Thor Johnson.

London Symphony No. 104 in D Major . . . Haydn.
Concerto No. 2 in G Minor for Violin and Orchestra . . . Prokofieff.
Italian Symphony No. 4 in A Major, Op. 90 . . . Mendelssohn.

JACOB'S PILLOW, 9 p. m., San Francisco Ballet, repetition of Tuesday's program.

THURSDAY

BERKSHIRE MUSIC BARN, 8:40 p. m., Concert for Connoisseurs.

EMPIRE STATE, 8:30 p. m., Bizet's "Carmen" conducted by Tibor Kozmar and with a cast including Gloria Lane, Guilio Gari, Frank Guarrera and Maria Ferriero.

JACOB'S PILLOW, 4 p. m. San Francisco Ballet, repetition of Tuesday's program.

FRIDAY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.

Overture to Leonore No. 2 . . . Beethoven.
Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 . . Petrassi.
Symphony No. 4 in F Minor . . . Tchaikovsky.

JACOB'S PILLOW, 4 p. m., 9 p. m., San Francisco Ballet, repetition of Tuesday's program.

TURNAU OPERA PLAYERS, 8:30 p. m., "The Telephone" and "Cupid and Psyche."

NEXT SATURDAY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.

Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitsky . . . Hanson.
Piano Concerto in A Minor (Rudolf Serkin, soloist) . . . Schumann.
Symphony No. 5 . . . Honegger.
Le Mer . . . Debussy.

BERKSHIRE MUSIC BARN, 4 p. m., folk music by Marais and Miranda.

EMPIRE STATE, 8:30 p. m., Carmen, same as Thursday's program.

JACOB'S PILLOW, 4 p. m., 9 p. m., San Francisco Ballet, repetition of Tuesday's program.

SOUTH MOUNTAIN TEMPLE, Pittsfield, Mass., 3:30 p. m., Claremont String Quartet.

POLARI GALLERY, Woodstock, 8 p. m., classical guitarist Manuel Gayol.

• • •

PIERRE MONTEUX and Charles Munch, the one with the walrus moustache and the other with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are as thick as two Frenchmen in a bistro.

Mr. Monteux got his first sip of the Boston group in 1919-24, when he was director. Since then, he has barely been able to stay away, and a lucky thing it is for New England music lovers.

Mr. Monteux substitutes for Dr. Munch on occasion during the orchestra's winter season, and he drops in at Tanglewood every summer to poke about the Berkshire Festival and conduct several of its concerts.

The 81-year-old Gaul takes the baton for the first time this summer tomorrow afternoon in the Music Shed, where, also for the first time this summer, a concert will

Music Shed Concerts Start this Week End

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, with a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms by the Beaux Arts Trio, fourth in a series of six Wednesday evening programs of this nature, in the Theatre Concert Hall on July 25.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of next week end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday (July 27) and Saturday (July 28) evenings, and the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 29).

This week end's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening, July 21: Samuel Barber: Adagio for Strings; Bohuslav Martinu: Fantaisies Symphoniques; Wagner: "Die Walkure," Act I, with soloists Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da-Costa, James Pease; Charles Munch, conductor.

Sunday afternoon, July 22: Rossini: Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri;" Bartok: Concerto for Orchestra; Schubert: Symphony No. 7, in C major; Pierre Monteux, conductor.

• • •

Official Send-Off For Symphony Director Aug. 13

Boston will give an official send-off to the Boston Symphony Orchestra on the eve of the European departure for tours of principal cities abroad.

Conductor Charles Munch and trustees of the orchestra will meet with Mayor Hynes Monday, Aug. 13, at City Hall.

A flag of the City of Boston will be presented the conductor to be flown in all concert halls. The conductor also will receive autographed copies of "Boston . . . America's Home Port," for presentation to mayors of cities to be visited.

Munch will also receive a surprise gift from the mayor.

The sketch book by Jack Frost contains illustrations of Greater Boston historic, commercial and industrial landmarks.

The orchestra's first concert will be in Cork, Ireland, Aug. 24. Other countries to be visited are Scotland, Denmark, Norway, Finland, Sweden, Austria, Germany, Switzerland, France, England, Russia and Czecho-Slovakia.

Nieuw Amsterdam, Calling at Boston, Has Choice Space

Many better rooms are available on the special sailing of the Holland-America Line flagship Nieuw Amsterdam Aug. 14 from Boston, according to Theodore K. Hebert, the company's district passenger manager here.

A number of accommodations at either end of the first class range may be had, while cabin class offers a wide choice of rooms, he said. However, in noting the popularity of past Nieuw Amsterdam sailings from Boston, Mr. Hebert urged prospective passengers to book promptly to be sure of obtaining space.

This year's trip will be the third postwar sailing the flagship has made from Commonwealth Pier. Abp. Richard J. Cushing acted as spiritual leader of a national Catholic pilgrimage which crossed to Europe in 1954 on the vessel. The Most Rev. Jeremiah F. Minihan, auxiliary bishop of Boston, led a similar group on last year's trip of the liner.

On this latest crossing, Abp. Cushing will be traveling as spiritual director of the first major American Catholic pilgrimage to Germany. Sailing with him will be Bishop John J. Wright of Worcester who will lead another Catholic group on a visit to the Joan of Arc country in Southern France.

The many members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra also sailing on this trip will offer special concerts en route, under the direction of guest conductor Pierre Monteux. The orchestra is scheduled to play 27 engagements abroad before returning home at the end of September.

Petrassi, Hanson Music at Tanglewood

Two scores commissioned for the 75th anniversary season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be heard at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood next week-end. They are Goffredo Petrassi's Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, and Howard Hanson's Elegy in Memory of My Friend, Serge Koussevitzky. Programs for the coming week are as follows:

Wednesday at 8:30, Theatre—Concert Hall, The Beaux Arts Trio. Mendelssohn: Trio in D minor; Ravel: Trio in A minor; Brahms: Trio in C minor.

Friday at 8:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch. Beethoven: Overture, "Leonore" No. 2; Petrassi: Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5 Tanglewood premiere); Tchaikovsky: Fourth Symphony.

Saturday at 8:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch. Hanson: Elegy in Memory of My Friend, Serge Koussevitzky (Tanglewood premiere); Schumann: Piano Concerto in A minor, soloist: Rudolf Serkin; Honegger: Fifth Symphony; Debussy: "La Mer."

Sunday, July 29, at 2:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Richard Burgin conducting. Prokofieff: "Romeo and Juliet." Suite No. 2; Hindemith: Violin Concerto, soloist: Ruth Posselt; Mahler: First Symphony.

Festival-goers are invited to a free concert, on a non-reserved seat basis, of contemporary chamber music, donated to the Berkshire Music Center by the Forum Music Foundation, Chicago, in the Theatre-Concert Hall Monday at 8:30 p.m. Principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will participate, assisted by guest artists Sylvia Marlowe, harpsichord; Marjorie McClung, soprano; Norma Farber, reciter, in works by Manuel de Falla, Leland Smith, Julian Orbon, Goffredo Petrassi, Samuel Barber and Darius Milhaud.

entire page

75TH ANNIVERSARY WORK IS PLAYED IN TANGLEWOOD SHED

Boston Symphony in Martinu Selection; 'Walkure' Portion Sung

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 21—It is beginning to look as though nature had no interest in music. The treatment we have received here has been very poor. It rained Friday night and again tonight, which meant a relatively small crowd of 5753.

However, the music and performances we are hearing are not affected. Tonight Charles Munch opened proceedings with a very beautiful performance of Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings." It was a bit on the very slow side, but the sound of the Boston Symphony Orchestra strings would be difficult to equal. This is a work of sheer melody and it came as a welcome relief from some of the music we have beard.

Dedicated to Munch

Bohuslav Martinu is one of our significant contemporary composers, and he has written for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony his sixth symphony which he titled "Fantasies Symphoniques." It is dedicated to Charles Munch and a composer could hardly have a finer interpreter than this admirable French conductor. As to the work itself. It is one of those works which demand more than one hearing for complete assimilation. Martinu relies on a constant and prominent melodic line, often backed by startling rhythms and colorful figures. There is much to enjoy in this work, enough for us to wish to hear it again. The performance was vital, colorful and compelling.

(Continued On Page 8A)

75TH ANNIVERSARY

(Continued From Page 1A)

The final portion of the program was given over to the first act of Wagners' "Die Walkure" with Sieglinde was sung by Margaret Harshaw; Siegmund by Albert DaCosta; and Hunding by James Pease. The first act of this opera is a story which might well be the first of the mythological family triangles. Hunding is the husband, Sieglinde, the wife, and Siegmund the unknown party, and there is also a sword imbedded in a tree; a deal of music is heard

GROUP FROM UN ENJOYING VISIT TO BERKSHIRES

Members Taking Part in Tours, Picnic at Tanglewood

Pittsfield, July 21—Thirty-five representatives of the Secretariat of the United Nations are spending the week end in Pittsfield as guests in local homes.

This is the seventh annual visit, and to date more than 400 UN people representing all UN member nations have spent a week end here. The current group included representatives from 19 different countries.

The group arrived last night by chartered bus. Today, they were taken on scenic tours and attended an open house at The Castle, summer home of a group of GE engineers at Pontoosuc Lake. Tonight and tomorrow afternoon, the visitors will be guests of Tanglewood, and a picnic will precede tomorrow's concert, arranged by the Merry Mates of First Baptist Church.

Annual visits have brought together socially many persons who have become good friends, and have resulted in better understanding among the representatives of many different countries, according to K. T. Paluev, chairman. The trip is sponsored by the Workshop for World Understanding and the United Nations Volunteer Services.

On Mr. Paluev's committee are Mrs. F. M. Myers, Mrs. R. S. Schoonmaker and Mrs. Raymond Warner of Pittsfield and Miss Margaret Parsons of New York.

Tanglewood Premieres Of Contemporary Works

Concerto for Orchestra by Petrassi to be Performed Friday, 'Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky' by Hanson Saturday — Serkin Soloist

Lenox, July 21—The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, with a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms by the Beaux Arts Trio, fourth in a series of six Wednesday evening programs of this nature, in the Theater-Concert Hall on the 25th.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct two of the week end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, next Friday (July 27) and Saturday (July 28) evenings, while the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 29).

Tanglewood Firsts

Dr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer who is guest teacher of composition this summer at the orchestra's summer music school at the Berkshire Music Center.

The Saturday evening festival concert is composed of works by Schumann, Honegger, Debussy, and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Howard Hanson, director of music at the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, N. Y.

Both the Petrassi Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, on Friday night and the Hanson Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky on Saturday evening were commissioned jointly by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitzky Music Foundation for the current 75th anniversary of the orchestra, and were introduced to audiences during the past winter in Boston.

Serkin Soloist

Rudolf Serkin, the celebrated concert pianist who apeared at Tanglewood in 1955 for the first time at a Berkshire Festival concert, and who attracted a near-record audience of 15,624, will be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor, Saturday night.

RUDOLF SERKIN

Richard Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert July 29 consists of music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler, with Ruth Posselt—in private life Mrs. Burgin—as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Burgin, with William Kroll, heads the chamber music teaching at the Berkshire Music Center, where Miss Posselt is also on the faculty.

Tanglewood concerts are at 8.30 p. m. on Fridays and Saturdays, and the Sunday afternoon concert is at 2.30 p. m. General admissions to the grounds, enabling overflow audiences to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance. A bonus for festival patrons is the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a. m. (July 28), for which a nominal charge is made of $1, for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund. The complete programs:

Wednesday, July 25 — 8.30 p. m.
Theatre-Concert Hall
Chamber Music
Trio in D minor ..... Mendelssoon
Trio in A minor ..... Ravel
Trio in C minor ..... Brahms
Beaux Arts Trio
(Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano)

Friday, July 27 — 8.30 p. m.
Music Shed
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Overture, "Leonore," No. 2 .. Beethoven
Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5 .. Petrassi
Symphony No. 4, in F minor .. Tchaikovsky
Charles Munch, Conductor

Saturday, July 28 — 8.30 p. m.
Music Shed
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky ..... Hanson
Piano Concerto in A minor .. Schumann
Soloist ..... Rudolf Serkin
Symphony No. 5 ..... Honegger
"La Mer" ..... Debussy
Charles Munch, Conductor

Sunday, July 29 — 2.30 p. m.
Music Shed
Boston Symphony Orchestra
"Romeo and Juliet," Suite No. 2 ..... Prokofieff
Violin Concerto ..... Hindemith
Soloist ..... Ruth Posselt
Sympnony No. 1, in D major .. Mahler
Richard Burgin, Conductor

Tomorrow afternoon's concert in the Music Shed will be conducted by Pierre Monteux. The program will include Rossini's Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri," Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra, and Schubert's Symphony No. 7. Two events will be held tomorrow in the Chamber Music hall, a concert of chamber music by students of Dept. 1 at 10 a. m., and a composers' forum by students of Dept. 3 at 8.30 p. m.

TWO PREMIERES TOMORROW NIGHT

Lenox, July 21—Festival-goers are invited to a free concert, on a nonreserved seat basis, of contemporary chamber music, donated to the Berkshire Music Center by the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, which will be held in the Theater-Concert Hall on Monday at 8:30 p. m.

except this

NEW YORK POST, SUNDAY, JULY 22.

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Munch Opens Lenox Shed Concerts

Lenox, Mass., July 21—The Berkshire Festival opened four weeks of concerts in its 6,000-seat music shed here at Tanglewood last night with a program which would rival the Goldman Band concerts in Central Park for circulating in the "pop" genre. Opening with the smash-bang Berlioz Overture, "The Roman Carnival," Charles Munch, conducting the Boston Symphony, then proceeded to Debussy's "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun," Ravel's Second Suite from "Daphnis and Chloe" followed with Brahms' Second Symphony providing the conclusion.

With the exception of the Berlioz, all of the above can be considered great music, and obviously it would be carping to damn such choices because they are familiar.

Having just come from the youthful Empire State Festival at Ellenville, however, one cannot help but compare the admirable courage and convictions of this new venture with the current summer policy of its well-established, solvent Massachusetts neighbor.

During four weeks of operation, the Symphony of the Air has played one world premiere, the Villa-Lobos ballet, "The Emperor Jones," and a U. S. premiere, Orff's musical score for Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream."

Sunday Music . . .

Guggenheim Memorial Concert by Goldman Band, Richard Franko Goldman conducting. On the Mall, Central Park, 8:30.

The Bostonians, on the other hand, find themselves playing no premieres during the month of shed concerts, but instead highlighting such favorites as the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto and the Schumann Piano Concerto.

Daphnis and Chloe Exciting

This is not to say that the Berkshire opening did not have its share of musical excitement. Especially in the "Daphnis and Chloe," which alternated between shimmer and excitement, and the Brahms Symphony, which projected much beautiful and luscious sound, did Munch achieve his best.

The conductor's dynamic personality communicated a sense of drama to the Ravel Suite that brought a picturesque vividness and intensity to its chameleon-like moods. During the first movement of the Brahms, the tempo was deliberate and relaxed with a tendency toward exaggerated ritards. But the interpretation of this most lyrical of the four Brahms symphonies was, at the same time, in the atmosphere of a summer night and altogether pleasureable. The "Allegretto Grazioso" had such delicacy in the pizzicato portions it was pixie-like and altogether wonderful in its effect.

Considering the unlimited seating capacity of the Tanglewood grounds, the audience was small, only 6,203 listeners, including a couple of thousand outside on the grass.

[103]

BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER REUNION SITE OF FRIENDS

Eleazar de Carvalho and James Stagliano Meet There Again

Tanglewood, July 21 — Widely separated places of the world have long been joined here at the Berkshire Music Festival. This season is no exception. Notable personalities of the Music Center and the Festival Concerts have renewed close friendships made here a decade ago. The conductor of the Rio de Janeiro Symphony—Eleazar de Carvalho, who has in recent years toured Europe, and his friend and associate, James Stagliano of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are enjoying a reunion here this summer after some five years and 100,000 miles of travel in opposite directions.

Widely Traveled

Both have flown over 50,000 miles since they last met here at Tanglewood. De Carvalho has been guest conductor throughout Europe, Stagliano has traveled with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on its European tour, and a year ago this past spring was guest soloist with the NBC Symphony that toured the Orient. With the close of the Berkshire Music Festival, both will take to the air once again. Stagliano goes with the BSO to Ireland, the continent and on the Russian tour. De Carvalho will return to Brazil for three weeks and then fly to Europe where he will again meet his BSO friends in Paris on Sept. 19.

As de Carvalho puts it, this is his 10th jubilee with the BSO at Tanglewood. It is his wife Jocy's first visit to the United States. Although July and August are usually his busiest time as conductor of the Rio de Janeiro Symphony—for this is the winter time in his native Brazil—the popular conductor relates that it was sentimental reasons that induced him to come here to Tanglewood to follow in the footsteps of Serge Koussevitzky as director of the classes in conducting at the Berkshire Music Center.

It was with this same Boston Symphony that de Carvalho made a host of friends and gained his first prestige outside of Brazil, 10 years ago this summer. It is for this reason that he attaches much sentiment to the Berkshire Music Festival. Furthermore, the Berkshire mountains and lakes are to him the same atmosphere as he enjoys in Brazil.

Both de Carvalho and Stagliano are married to noted soloists. Mrs. de Carvalho, known professionally as Jocy de Oliveira, will be piano soloist with the Boston Symphony in the Music Shed Concert of Friday night, Aug. 3, in Ravel's concerto. On the podium that night will be her husband as guest conductor. Mrs. Stagliano, known to the music world as singer Marguerite Willauer, will be soloist in Wagner's "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg, Act 3," on the Sunday afternoon program of August 12, the Festival finale.

Stagliano, who occupies a first chair with the BSO, was French horn soloist with the BSO and de Carvalho conducting in Strauss' Horn Concerto five years ago here at Tanglewood.

While he has been instructing horn classes at the Music Center, his wife has been engaged this summer as the soprano at the Pittsburgh (Pa.) Opera.

On the few off-nights enjoyed by de Carvalho and Stagliano during the busy schedule of the Festival season, both have been renewing their old friendship as the eminent Brazilian conductor, quite a chef by hobby, prepares Brazilian dishes for his BSO friend.

At present Stagliano is also endeavoring to map another Oriental tour, this time with a chamber music group of first-chair men of the BSO who are at leisure during May when the Pops are scheduled in Boston.

TIGHT BINDING

Second Thoughts on Music

Boris Goldovsky Doubles As Pianist and Conductor

Luboshutz and Nemenoff Also Heard in Program Of Three Mozart Concertos; Bach 'Passion According to St. John' Ends Sunday Series

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 21—Boris Goldovsky, the genial head of the Opera Department at the Berkshire Center here at Tanglewood, had his innings this week but it wasn't in opera. Goldovsky appeared as soloist and conductor in an all-Mozart program, along with his uncle Pierre Luboshutz and his aunt Genia Nemenoff. Because of rain the concert was moved from the small hall into the Shed.

The program consisted of the three-piano concerto in F major, the two-piano concerto in E-flat major and the piano concerto in A major. Goldovsky opened the program with a vigorous reading of three movements from the "Serenade in D major." Luboshutz and Nemenoff have played many years together and have achieved a fine balance of tone and unity of thought. Their playing of the two-piano concerto was a model of elegance and fine musicianship. They received fine support from the orchestra.

Goldovsky Conducts

The three-piano concerto in which Goldovsky joined the duo received a first rate performance. It was ably and musically conducted from the piano by Goldovsky, who seemed very happy about the whole thing. In the solo concerto, he played fluently and displayed complete understanding of the style of the work.

An all-Bach program drew 4200 people to Tanglewood on one of the few pleasant nights we have had. Those who came were amply repaid for Charles Munch has a way with Bach and the program enlisted the talents of violinist William Kroll in the F-major concerto and of Boriot Anthony Dwyer in the Suite No. 2 in B minor for flute and strings.

Mr. Munch opened the program with a studied performance of the second Brandenburg concerto. Aside from the pitch troubles encountered by Roger Voisin in the first movement the performance was rewarding. Mr. Kroll is a distinguished violinist whose tone sounds better with orchestral accompaniment than it sometimes does with the members of the Kroll String Quartet. There was authority in his performance of the concerto and his playing was of the type that won him a real ovation from the orchestra.

Boriot Anthony Dwyer repeated her success of last season in the Suite for flute and strings. It was a splendid performance with a real burst of virtuosity in the finale. She was called back time after time and finally Mr. Munch came on and the finale was repeated. The concert concluded with an admirable performance of the "Suite No. 4 in D major for orchestra."

Last of Series

Sunday afternoon these chamber orchestra concerts devoted primarily to the music of Bach and Mozart came to an end with a beautiful performance of "The Passion According to Saint John." It was a performance scaled to the size of the concert hall with emphasis primarily on beautiful sound. Mr. Munch cut the work considerably but it went smoothly. John McCullum, tenor, sang the role of the Evangelist and sang it in superb fashion. His voice is quite the finest we have heard in late years and his command of the oratorio style seems complete.

Mac Morgan's fine baritone was admirably used and his interpretation was well thought out and admirably projected. Adele Addison, soprano and Florence Kopleff, contralto, sang their solos with required style and fine communication. James Joyce used his resonnant bass to advantage. The Festival Chorus is much better this year than it was last summer. There is a better balance of parts and a finer total tone. Hugh Ross had prepared the singers for his work which was sung in acceptable German.

Pierre Monteux, veteran French conductor and former conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will make his initial appearance of the season with the orchestra tomorrow afternoon. His program includes the overture to "L'Italina in Algeri," Rossini; Concerto for Orchestra, Bartok and Symphony in C major, No. 7 by Schubert.

PIERRE MONTEUX CONDUCTS TODAY'S CONCERT IN SHED

Schubert, Bartok, Rossini Works to Be Heard This Afternoon

Lenox, July 21—Tomorrow afternoon (July 22) Pierre Monteux, (eighty-one) year-old former regular conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who has been invited by Charles Munch to share some of the conducting with him on the forthcoming European tour of the Orchestra, returns to Tanglewood for the first of two appearances this summer, marking the fifth consecutive year that he has been guest conductor at the Berkshire Festival.

PIERRE MONTEUX

Pierre Monteux has chosen an all orchestral program for his concert tomorrow afternoon—the Overture to Rossini's opera, "L'Italiana in Algeri," Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra, and the great C Major Symphony No. 7 by Schubert. The Bartok score, a contemporary classic, was commissioned by Serge Koussevitzky for the Koussevitzky Music Foundation and given its world premiere performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Dr. Koussevitzky's direction in Dec. 1944. Its performance at tomorrow afternoon's concert will be its first at the Berkshire Festival. The Sunday program begins at 2.30 p. m.

Since celebrating his (eighty-first) birthday in April, Mr. Monteux has conducted concerts in several European cities, including a week's stay in Rome during which he conducted a recording of Verdi's opera, "La Traviata," which will be released by RCA Victor in the fall. Returning to the United States at the end of June, Mr. Monteux conducted the first two weeks of the Lewisohn Stadium concerts in New York and then journeyed to Chicago for three concerts with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra at the Ravinia Festival.

In Forthcoming Concerts at Berkshire Festival

The Beaux Arts Trio, pictured here at left, will present a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood next Wednesday night, July 25. The trio comprises Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano. One week from this afternoon, in the Music Shed, Richard Burgin and his wife, Ruth Posselt, seen in picture at right, will appear. Mr. Burgin will be the conductor of the Boston Symphony program on that July 29 afternoon. The program will include Hindemith's Violin Concerto, with Ruth Posselt as soloist.

Tanglewood On Parade Will Take Place Thursday, Aug. 9

Boston Symphony to Be Heard in First Half of Program and Then Boston Pops Orchestra

Lenox, July 21—The program details are announced for Tanglewood on Parade, the gala concert to be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, here, on Thursday night, Aug. 9. The concert climaxes the annual celebration which benefits the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival Concerts.

DeCarvalho and Fiedler

The first half of the program will be conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, Artistic Director and Permanent Conductor of the Brazil Symppony Orchestra and guest conductor at this summer's Berkshire Festival concerts, who is acting head of the school's department of orchestra and conducting. Mr. de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and a work by his countryman, the Brazilian composer Heitor Villa-Lobos the Choros No. 10, titled in Portuguese "Rasga o coracao." Assisting in the Villa-Lobos performance will be the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department.

After the intermission, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will make their third consecutive Tanglewood on Parade appearance, bringing with them the well-known piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Saroma, who will play at Tanglewood for the first time since August, 1942, and who will introduce to the Berkshire Festival the Piano Concerto in F by Gershwin. In addition, Mr. Fiedler will conduct a suite from the Ballet, "La Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini orchestrated by Respighi, and other works from the Pops repertory. As is customary at a Boston Pops concert, encores may be expected—and undoubtedly will be performed—on this part of the program.

Other Attractions

As in former years, ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center starting at 4.00 p. m. in the Formal Gardens and Barn by students of the opera department and Tanglewood Study Group respectively. At 5.45 p. m. there will be a fanfare and formal welcoming address by Ralph Berkowitz, Dean of the Berkshire Music Center, on the lawn outside the great Music Shed, and at 6.00 p. m. simultaneous performances in the Shed, Theater and Chamber Music Hall by students of the orchestral, opera and composition departments.

At 7.00 p. m., while concert-goers eat their picnic suppers on the lawn, the Tanglewood Chorus, under the direction of Hugh Ross, will present an informal concert on the porch of the Main House. The gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin promptly at 8.15 p. m. and at its conclusion, at approximately 10.30 p. m., there will be waltzing on the lawn.

Tickets for Tanglewood on Parade are now on sale at the box office. Telephone reservations may be made by calling Lenox (Mass.) 600.

New York, July 21—The tradition that the annual Gershwin concert at New York's Lewisohn Stadium will bring out something uncommon in weather conditions (the composer himself once took part in one on a day when the street temperature soared to 104 degrees) was not belied by this year's.

In Composers' Spotlight

GOFFREDO PETRASSI

HOWARD HANSON

Mr. Petrassi's Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, will have its Tanglewood premiere, Charles Munch conducting, next Friday night. Mr. Hanson's Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitsky will be performed for the first time at Tanglewood, under Mr. Munch's direction, next Saturday night.

Friends Meet Again

Renewing old friendship at Tanglewood. Left to right: James Stagliano of Boston Symphony Orchestra and Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazilian Symphony Orchestra.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through AUG. 12
Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS by the BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
TODAY at 2:30
FRI. July 27, at 8:30—BEETHOVEN—PETRASSI—TCHAIKOVSKY (MUNCH)
SAT. July 28, 8:30—HANSON—SCHUMANN—HONEGGER—DEBUSSY (MUNCH)
Soloist: Rudolf Serkin, Piano
SUN. July 29, at 2:30—PROKOFIEFF—HINDEMITH—MAHLER (BURGIN)
Soloist: Ruth Posselt, Violin
NEXT WED. July 25 (Theatre) at 8:30—THE BEAUX ARTS TRIO
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $1)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—THURS. AUG. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesús María Sanromá, Piano
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone Lenox 600
RCA Victor Records

FRENCH COMPOSERS' MUSIC TO BE HEARD

Symphonic works of three French composers will be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, directed by Charles Munch for the Berkshire Festival concert tomorrow (NBC Radio, 8.15-9 p. m., EDT). The selections are the "Roman Carnival Overture" by Berlioz, Debussy's "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun" and Roussell's Second Suite from "Bacchus et Ariane."

[104]

SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN ● SPRINGFIELD, MASS. ● JULY 22, 1956

BERKSHIRE VACATIONLAND

It's vacation time and beaches and mountains beckon folks from every walk of life, luring them with the promise of cool lakeside breezes, dancing surf and the peaceful solitude of deep, green forests. Because farther fields often seem greener, Western Massachusetts vacation planners are apt to sometimes overlook the wonderful recreational facilities of the Berkshires, with their magnificent mountains, sparkling lakes and streams, ideal golf courses, summer resorts, famous old-world inns, state parks, camping and picnic areas, and the thousand-and-one other attractions that make the Berkshires a perfect year 'round vacationland. Or, if it's the theater that captures your fancy, the Berkshires abound in excellent summer stock. There's scenic pleasure at every turn of lovely highways and there's the charm of country fairs and country auctions. There's the fabulous wealth of music that emanates from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood and the magic of the dance at Jacob's Pillow. This entire roto supplement is devoted to the wide variety of attractions that make the Berkshires a flawless vacationland.

Rotophotos by Paul Krause

TANGLEWOOD SCENE

Whether you have a seat in the music shed, or prefer to relax on Tanglewood's green lawns, you'll never experience anything more thrilling than a visit to the Berkshire Music Festival.

8 A THE BOSTON SUNDAY HERALD, JULY 22, 1956 Section IV

Hotel and T

Third Post-War Departure from Boston

Space on Nieuw Amsterdam Available for Aug. 14 Sailing

Many better rooms are available on the special sailing of the Holland-America Line flagship Nieuw Amsterdam Aug. 14 from Boston, according to Theodore K. Herbert, the company's district passenger manager here.

A number of accommodations at either end of the first class range may be had, while cabin class offers a wide choice of rooms, he said. However, in noting the popularity of past Nieuw Amsterdam sailings from Boston, Mr. Hebert urged prospective passengers to book promptly to be sure of obtaining space.

This year's trip will be the third post-war sailing the flagship has made from Commonwealth Pier. Archbishop Richard J. Cushing acted as spiritual leader of a national Catholic pilgrimage which crossed to Europe in 1954 on the vessel.

The Most Rev. Jeremiah F. Minihan, Auxiliary Bishop of Boston, led a similar group on last year's trip of the liner.

On this latest crossing, Archbishop Cushing will be traveling as spiritual director of the first major American Catholic pilgrimage to Germany. Sailing with him will be Bishop John J. Wright, of Worcester, who will lead another Catholic group on a visit to the Joan of Arc country in southern France.

The many members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra who also will sail August 14 on the Nieuw Amsterdam will offer special concerts en route, under the direction of guest conductor Pierre Monteux. The orchestra is scheduled to play twenty-seven engagements abroad before returning home at the end of September.

TO SAIL FROM BOSTON—The Holland-America Line flagship Nieuw Amsterdam will sail for Europe from Boston.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544

JUL 22 19[illegible]

"Tanglewood on Parade"

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual celebration which benefits the Berkshire Music Center, this year will be Thursday, Aug. 9, at Tanglewood, in Lenox. There will be exhibition performances by the various departments of the Center, and a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8:15. Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the first half—to include music by Rimsky-Korsakoff and Villa-Lobos, and Pops conductor Arthur Fiedler will be in charge of the remainder. Jesus Maria Sanroma will be soloist in Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F.

BOSTON SUNDAY HERALD, JULY 22, 1956

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • CONCERTS through AUG. 12

Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS by the BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
TODAY at 2:30
FRI. July 27, at 8:30—BEETHOVEN—PETRASSI—TCHAIKOVSKY (MUNCH)
SAT. July 28, 8:30—HANSON—SCHUMANN—HONEGGER—DEBUSSY (MUNCH)
Soloist: Rudolf Serkin, Piano
SUN. July 29, at 2:30—PROKOFIEFF—HINDEMITH—MAHLER (BURGIN)
Soloist: Ruth Posselt, Violin
NEXT WED. July 25 (Theatre) at 8:30—THE BEAUX ARTS TRIO
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—THURS. AUG. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma, Piano
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

[105]

SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN ● SPRINGFIELD, MASS. ● JULY 22, 1956

BERKSHIRE VACATIONLAND

It's vacation time and beaches and mountains beckon folks from every walk of life, luring them with the promise of cool lakeside breezes, dancing surf and the peaceful solitude of deep, green forests. Because farther fields often seem greener, Western Massachusetts vacation planners are apt to sometimes overlook the wonderful recreational facilities of the Berkshires, with their magnificent mountains, sparkling lakes and streams, ideal golf courses, summer resorts, famous old-world inns, state parks, camping and picnic areas, and the thousand-and-one other attractions that make the Berkshires a perfect year 'round vacationland. Or, if it's the theater that captures your fancy, the Berkshires abound in excellent summer stock. There's scenic pleasure at every turn of lovely highways and there's the charm of country fairs and country auctions. There's the fabulous wealth of music that emanates from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood and the magic of the dance at Jacob's Pillow. This entire roto supplement is devoted to the wide variety of attractions that make the Berkshires a flawless vacationland.

Rotophotos by Paul Krause

TANGLEWOOD SCENE

Whether you have a seat in the music shed, or prefer to relax on Tanglewood's green lawns, you'll never experience anything more thrilling than a visit to the Berkshire Music Festival.

8 A THE BOSTON SUNDAY HERALD, JULY 22, 1956 Section IV

Hotel and T

Third Post-War Departure from Boston

Space on Nieuw Amsterdam Available for Aug. 14 Sailing

Many better rooms are available on the special sailing of the Holland-America Line flagship Nieuw Amsterdam Aug. 14 from Boston, according to Theodore K. Herbert, the company's district passenger manager here.

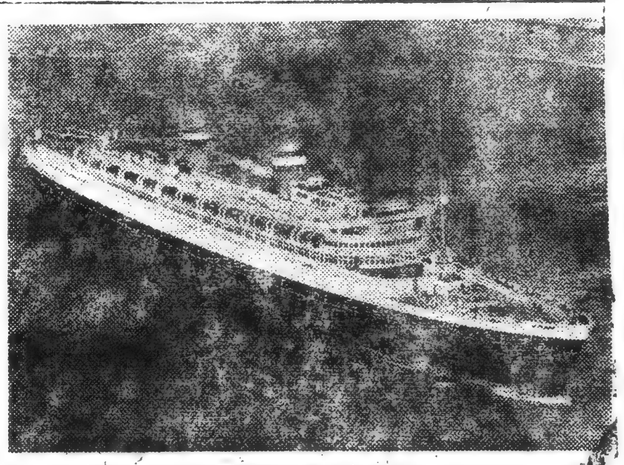
A number of accommodations at either end of the first class range may be had, while cabin class offers a wide choice of rooms, he said. However, in noting the popularity of past Nieuw Amsterdam sailings from Boston, Mr. Hebert urged prospective passengers to book promptly to be sure of obtaining space.

This year's trip will be the third post-war sailing the flagship has made from Commonwealth Pier. Archbishop Richard J. Cushing acted as spiritual leader of a national Catholic pilgrimage which crossed to Europe in 1954 on the vessel.

The Most Rev. Jeremiah F. Minihan, Auxiliary Bishop of Boston, led a similar group on last year's trip of the liner.

On this latest crossing, Archbishop Cushing will be traveling as spiritual director of the first major American Catholic pilgrimage to Germany. Sailing with him will be Bishop John J. Wright, of Worcester, who will lead another Catholic group on a visit to the Joan of Arc country in southern France.

The many members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra who also will sail August 14 on the Nieuw Amsterdam will offer special concerts en route, under the direction of guest conductor Pierre Monteux. The orchestra is scheduled to play twenty-seven engagements abroad before returning home at the end of September.



TO SAIL FROM BOSTON—The Holland-America Line flagship Nieuw Amsterdam will sail for Europe from Boston.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544

JUL 22 19[illegible]

"Tanglewood on Parade"

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual celebration which benefits the Berkshire Music Center, this year will be Thursday, Aug. 9, at Tanglewood, in Lenox. There will be exhibition performances by the various departments of the Center, and a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8:15. Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the first half—to include music by Rimsky-Korsakoff and Villa-Lobos, and Pops conductor Arthur Fiedler will be in charge of the remainder. Jesus Maria Sanroma will be soloist in Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F.

BOSTON SUNDAY HERALD, JULY 22, 1956

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • CONCERTS through AUG. 12

Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS by the BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
TODAY at 2:30
FRI. July 27, at 8:30—BEETHOVEN—PETRASSI—TCHAIKOVSKY (MUNCH)
SAT. July 28, 8:30—HANSON—SCHUMANN—HONEGGER—DEBUSSY (MUNCH)
Soloist: Rudolf Serkin, Piano
SUN. July 29, at 2:30—PROKOFIEFF—HINDEMITH—MAHLER (BURGIN)
Soloist: Ruth Posselt, Violin
NEXT WED. July 25 (Theatre) at 8:30—THE BEAUX ARTS TRIO
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—THURS. AUG. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma, Piano
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

[105]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Indep. Republican
Circ. 253,604

JUL 22 1956

The Week at Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, with a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms, by the Beaux Arts Trio, fourth in a series of six Wednesday evening programs of this nature, in the Theatre-Concert Hall on Wednesday.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday (July 27) and Saturday (July 28) evenings, and the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 29).

HOWARD HANSON has composed a eulogy for Serge Koussevitzky which the Boston Symphony will play for the first time next Saturday night at Tanglewood.

Petrassi Premier

Dr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer who is guest teacher of composition this summer at the orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center.

The Saturday evening Festival concert is composed of works by Schumann, Honegger, Debussy, and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Howard Hanson, director of music at the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, New York.

Both the Petrassi Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, on Friday night and the Hanson Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky on Saturday evening were commissioned jointly by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitzky Music Foundation for the current, 75th, anniversary of the orchestra, and were introduced to audiences during the past winter in Boston.

Serkin Soloist

Rudolf Serkin, the celebrated concert pianist who appeared at Tanglewood in 1955 for the first time at a Berkshire Festival concert, and who attracted a near-record audience of 15,624, will be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor, on July 28.

Richard Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert consists of music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler, with Ruth Posselt—in private life, Mrs. Burgin—as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Mr. Burgin, with William Kroll, heads the chamber music teaching at the Berkshire Music Center, where Miss Posselt is also on the faculty.

Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 264,020

JUL 23 1956

Music Review

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, July 22—Pierre Monteux, unofficial permanent guest conductor of the Boston Symphony, was on the podium this afternoon to bring to a close the first series of week end concerts presented in the Music Shed.

Mr. Monteux, as always, was greeted with affectionate applause as he made his initial entrance, and enthusiastically at the conclusion of the excellent program.

Mr. Monteux seldom reaches any great heights of musical excitement in his conducting but he brings an honesty and integrity to the scores, offering deep rewards to the dedicated listener which no amount of frenzied showmanship can duplicate.

It was not particularly venturesome programming but there was something for every taste. He opened with Rossini's rollickingly paced overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri," building skillfully and unhurriedly the famous orchestra crescendi with all the masterful know-how of a veteran maestro.

Next came Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra, probably the greatest masterpiece composed in the last fifteen years and tailor-made for the Boston Symphony.

Commissioned in 1943 by Serge Koussevitzky, the concerto is put together in an unusual manner. The individual instruments have solo passages throughout the work; then combined they are treated as virtuoso choirs.

Mr. Monteux' interpretation was admirable for its marvelous control and amazing poise. The orchestra's playing shone in all its famous brilliance.

The conductor closed with Schubert's "great" Symphony in C Major, a work in which Mr. Monteux exhibits an altogether happy and sympathetic understanding.

The weather cleared just in time for the 2:30 p. m. concert.

The audience numbered 7000.

NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, JULY 22, 1956.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through AUG. 12
Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS by the BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
TODAY at 2:30
FRI. July 27, at 8:30—BEETHOVEN—PETRASSI—TCHAIKOVSKY (MUNCH)
SAT. July 28, 8:30—HANSON—SCHUMANN—HONEGGER—DEBUSSY (MUNCH)
Soloist: Rudolf Serkin, Piano
SUN. July 29, at 2:30—PROKOFIEFF—HINDEMITH—MAHLER (BURGIN)
Soloist: Ruth Posselt, Violin
NEXT WED. July 25 (Theatre) at 8:30—THE BEAUX ARTS TRIO
Tickets: Wed. $2; $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—THURS. AUG. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesús María Sanromá, Piano
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 490
Baldwin Piano — RCA Victor Records

LENOX FETE PLANS GALA CONCERT AUG. 9

A gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be the climax of the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" celebration in the Music Shed at Lenox, Mass., on Aug. 9. The celebration will benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brzil Symphony Orchestra and acting head of the school's conducting department, will lead the first half of the program. He will direct the Choros No. 10, "Rasga o coracao," by his countryman, Heitor Villa-Lobbos. The orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of Music Center, students trained by Hugh Ross.

For the second half of the concert Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra and Jesus Maria Sanroma, pianist, in Gershwin's Concerto in F and other works from the Pops repertory.

Holders of tickets for the evening concert are invited to a series of presentations by Departments of the Berkshire Music Center. These start at 4 P.M. with opera department performances in the Formal Gardens. Other performances will be given through the afternoon by students of the opera, composition and orchestra departments.

MASSACHUSETTS
LENOX

Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood

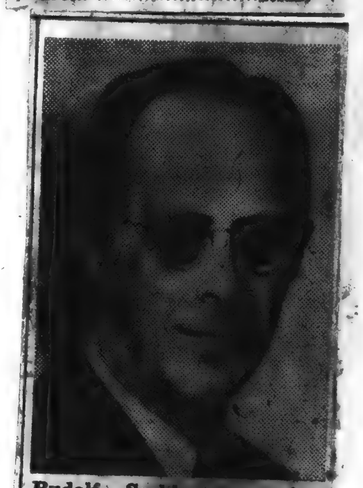
TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Pierre Monteux.
Overture to L'Italiana in Algeri ..... Rossini
Concerto for Orchestra ..... Bartok
Symphony No. 7 ..... Schubert

MONDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall, special program of modern chamber music donated to the Berkshire Music Center by the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, Ill. Participants: Principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra assisted by Sylvia Marlowe, harpsichordist; Marjorie McClung, soprano; Norma Farber, reciter.
Program of works by Manuel de Falla, Goffredo Petrassi (who will conduct his own composition), Samuel Barber and Darius Milhaud, and two first performances: Leland Smith's Quintet for Bassoon and Strings; and Julian Orbon's Himnus ad Galli Cantum (Hymn to the Crowing of the Cock), conducted by Seymour Lipkin).

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall, chamber music by the Beaux Arts Trio.
Trio in D minor ..... Mendelssohn
Trio in A minor ..... Ravel
Trio in C minor ..... Brahms

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.
Leonore Overture No. 3 ..... Beethoven
Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 ..... Petrassi
Symphony No. 4 ..... Tchaikovsky

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; Rudolf Serkin, pianist.
Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky ..... Hanson
Piano Concerto ..... Schumann
Symphony No. 5 ..... Honegger
La Mer ..... Debussy



Rudolf Serkin, appearing Saturday at Tanglewood, Sunday at Marlboro, Vt.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, MONDAY, JULY 23, 1956.

Music: Festival Week-End at Lenox

First 'Walkuere' Act Is Directed by Munch

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 22—Wagner was performed with a rare transparency and eloquence here at Tanglewood last night. The first act of "Die Walkuere," directed by Charles Munch and played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was enfolded like a mighty symphony.

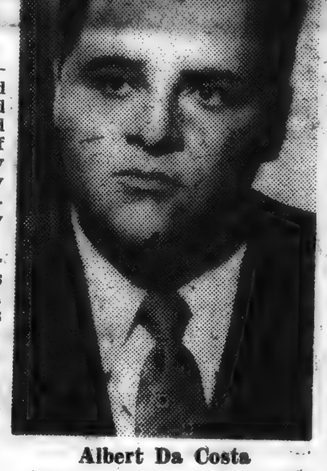
When one hears an orchestra of this caliber in Wagner's music, one is reminded afresh how essentially symphonic his musical thinking was. From the opening with its raging storm music through the development and interplay of motifs to the closing invocation to spring and love, the Bostonians conveyed the ebb and flow of the drama in sound. The phrasing was full of nuance; the coloring, particularly by the winds, was admirable, and the entire act was built up under Mr. Munch's leadership like a force of nature.

•

Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera soprano, who has sung Sieglinde just once before, gave a remarkably authoritative performance, and her voice had a stirring opulence.

Albert Da Costa, Met tenor, attempting his first Siegmund, gave a satisfactory account of himself. He sank intelligently and accurately. When he has got more thoroughly under the skin of the part, he should be a rousing Siegmund; indeed, the promise of his becoming a fine Heldentenor is bearing fruit.

James Pease, who has been



Albert Da Costa

singing with the Hamburg Opera, gave evidence that he has become an outstanding Wagnerian. His Hunding, to begin with, was sung throughout; and secondly, it was realized as a full-dimensional character. Mr. Pease has learned not only how to handle German but also to make music with a role like Hunding, which some basses wade through like barking seals.

All three soloists were Americans. One would venture to guess that not even the best theatres in Germany could come up with a trio of superior Wagner singers.

At last night's concert, Mr. Munch led a moving performance of Samuel Barber's elegiac Adagio for Strings and a convincing interpretation of Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques," a work that is disarming in its modesty, charm and symphonic resource.

Bostonians Are Heard in Bartok Concerto

The Martinu piece, like Bartók's Concerto for Orchestra, which was conducted at this afternoon's concert by Pierre Monteux, was commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. The Bartók score has more iron in its make-up. It is the work that has the better chance of enduring. The foundation—and the Boston Symphony—have a right to be proud of both.

Mr. Monteux continues to amaze the listener. His conducting had a delightful buoyancy, as though being an octogenarian had freed him from heaviness and cares. He led Rossini's "Italiana in Algeri" overture with irresistible freshness. The Bartók score was played with an incisiveness that did not diminish either its gravity or contrasting brightness.

•

Bartók had a subtle mind, but in his music, especially in this work, there shone an innocence of spirit. The same quality in the framework of another day pervades Schubert's great C major Symphony. It was a joy to hear it performed with so much sympathy.

The weather turned sympathetic this afternoon, just in time to keep the entire weekend from being a lost one. But even in last night's miserable wind, rain and cold more than 5,000 persons came to Tanglewood. Your real music-lover is as hardy as some breeds of sports fan.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

JUL 23 1956

Fromm Foundation Tanglewood Concert

The second of two concerts of contemporary chamber music, presented under the auspices of the Fromm Foundation of Chicago, will be given tonight at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, as part of this Summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Two works commissioned by the Fromm Foundation will receive first performances. They are the Quintet for bassoon and strings by Leland Smith of the University of Chicago and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments, by composer Julian Orbon of Havana, a 1946 Tanglewood composition student.

[106]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Indep. Republican
Circ. 253,604

JUL 22 1956

The Week at Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, with a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms, by The Beaux Arts Trio, fourth in a series of six Wednesday evening programs of this nature, in the Theatre-Concert Hall on Wednesday.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday (July 27) and Saturday (July 28) evenings, and the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 29).

HOWARD HANSON has composed a eulogy for Serge Koussevitzky which the Boston Symphony will play for the first time next Saturday night at Tanglewood.

Petrassi Premier

Dr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer who is guest teacher of composition this summer at the orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center.

The Saturday evening Festival concert is composed of works by Schumann, Honegger, Debussy, and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Howard Hanson, director of music at the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, New York.

Both the Petrassi Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, on Friday night and the Hanson Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky on Saturday evening were commissioned jointly by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitzky Music Foundation for the current, 75th, anniversary of the orchestra, and were introduced to audiences during the past winter in Boston.

Serkin Soloist

Rudolf Serkin, the celebrated concert pianist who appeared at Tanglewood in 1955 for the first time at a Berkshire Festival concert, and who attracted a near-record audience of 15,624, will be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor, on July 28.

Richard Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert consists of music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler, with Ruth Posselt—in private life, Mrs. Burgin—as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Mr. Burgin, with William Kroll, heads the chamber music teaching at the Berkshire Music Center, where Miss Posselt is also on the faculty.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

JUL 23 1956

Fromm Foundation Tanglewood Concert

The second of two concerts of contemporary chamber music, presented under the auspices of the Fromm Foundation of Chicago, will be given tonight at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, as part of this Summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Two works commissioned by the Fromm Foundation will receive first performances. They are the Quintet for bassoon and strings by Leland Smith of the University of Chicago and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments, by composer Julian Orbon of Havana, a 1946 Tanglewood composition student.

Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 264,020

JUL 23 1956

Music Review

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, July 22—Pierre Monteux, unofficial permanent guest conductor of the Boston Symphony, was on the podium this afternoon to bring to a close the first series of week end concerts presented in the Music Shed.

Mr. Monteux, as always, was greeted with affectionate applause as he made his initial entrance, and enthusiastically at the conclusion of the excellent program.

Mr. Monteux seldom reaches any great heights of musical excitement in his conducting but he brings an honesty and integrity to the scores, offering deep rewards to the dedicated listener which no amount of frenzied showmanship can duplicate.

It was not particularly venturesome programming but there was something for every taste. He opened with Rossini's rollickingly paced overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri," building skillfully and unhurriedly the famous orchestra crescendi with all the masterful knowhow of a veteran maestro.

Next came Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra, probably the greatest masterpiece composed in the last fifteen years and tailor-made for the Boston Symphony.

Commissioned in 1943 by Serge Koussevitzky, the concerto is put together in an unusual manner. The individual instruments have solo passages throughout the work; then combined they are treated as virtuoso choirs.

Mr. Monteux' interpretation was admirable for its marvelous control and amazing poise. The orchestra's playing shone in all its famous brilliance.

The conductor closed with Schubert's "great" Symphony in C Major, a work in which Mr. Monteux exhibits an altogether happy and sympathetic understanding.

The weather cleared just in time for the 2:30 p. m. concert. The audience numbered 7000.

NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, JULY 22, 1956.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through AUG. 12

Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS by the BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
TODAY at 2:30
FRI. July 27, at 8:30—BEETHOVEN—PETRASSI—TCHAIKOVSKY (MUNCH)
SAT. July 28, 8:30—HANSON—SCHUMANN—HONEGGER—DEBUSSY (MUNCH)
Soloist: Rudolf Serkin, Piano
SUN. July 29, at 2:30—PROKOFIEFF—HINDEMITH—MAHLER (BURGIN)
Soloist: Ruth Posselt, Violin
NEXT WED. July 25 (Theatre) at 8:30—THE BEAUX ARTS TRIO
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—THURS. AUG. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesús María Sanromá, Piano
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

LENOX FETE PLANS GALA CONCERT AUG. 9

A gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be the climax of the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" celebration in the Music Shed at Lenox, Mass., on Aug. 9. The celebration will benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brzil Symphony Orchestra and acting head of the school's conducting department, will lead the first half of the program. He will direct the Choros No. 10, "Rasga o coracao," by his countryman, Reitor Villa-Lohbos. The orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of Music Center, students trained by Hugh Ross.

For the second half of the concert Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra and Jesus Maria Sanroma, pianist, in Gershwin's Concerto in F and other works from the Pops repertory.

Holders of tickets for the evening concert are invited to a series of presentations by Departments of the Berkshire Music Center. These start at 4 P. M. with opera department performances in the Formal Gardens. Other performances will be given through the afternoon by students of the opera, composition and orchestra departments.

MASSACHUSETTS
LENOX

Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood

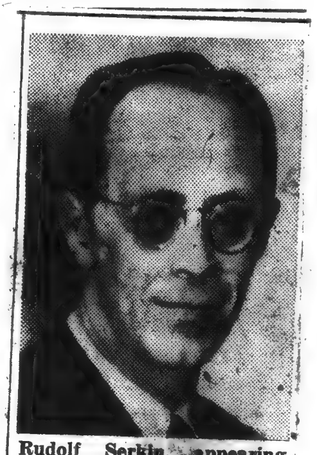
TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Pierre Monteux.
Overture to L'Italiana in Algeri ..... Rossini
Concerto for Orchestra ..... Bartok
Symphony No. 7 ..... Schubert

MONDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall, special program of modern chamber music donated to the Berkshire Music Center by the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, Ill. Participants: Principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra assisted by Sylvia Marlowe, harpsichordist; Marjorie McClung, soprano; Norma Farber, reciter.
Program of works by Manuel de Falla, Goffredo Petrassi (who will conduct his own composition), Samuel Barber and Darius Milhaud, and two first performances: Leland Smith's Quintet for Bassoon and Strings; and Julian Orbon's Himnus ad Galli Cantum (latter conducted by Seymour Lipkin).

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall, chamber music by the Beaux Arts Trio.
Trio in D minor ..... Mendelssohn
Trio in A minor ..... Ravel
Trio in C minor ..... Brahms

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.
Leonore Overture No. 2 ..... Beethoven
Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 ..... Petrassi
Symphony No. 4 ..... Tchaikovsky

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; Rudolf Serkin, pianist.
Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky ..... Hanson
Piano Concerto ..... Schumann
Symphony No. 5 ..... Honegger
La Mer ..... Debussy



Rudolf Serkin, appearing Saturday at Tanglewood, Sunday at Marlboro, Vt.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, MONDAY, JULY 23, 1956.

Music: Festival Week-End at Lenox

First 'Walkuere' Act Is Directed by Munch

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 22—Wagner was performed with a rare transparency and eloquence here at Tanglewood last night. The first act of "Die Walkuere," directed by Charles Munch and played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was enfolded like a mighty symphony.

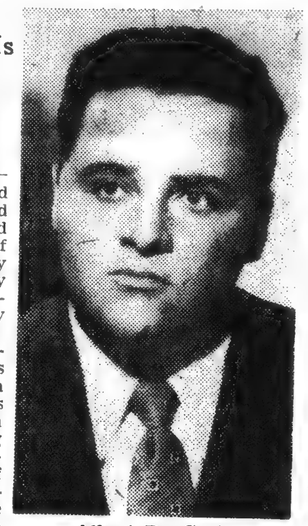
When one hears an orchestra of this caliber in Wagner's music, one is reminded afresh how essentially symphonic his musical thinking was. From the opening with its raging storm music through the development and interplay of motifs to the closing invocation to spring and love, the Bostonians conveyed the ebb and flow of the drama in sound. The phrasing was full of nuance; the coloring, particularly by the winds, was admirable, and the entire act was built up under Mr. Munch's leadership like a force of nature.

•

Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera soprano, who has sung Sieglinde just once before, gave a remarkably authoritative performance, and her voice had a tsirring opulence.

Albert Da Costa, Met tenor, attempting his first Siegmund, gave a satisfactory account of himself. He sank intelligently and accurately. When he has got more thoroughly under the skin of the part, he should be a rousing Siegmund; indeed, the promise of his becoming a fine Heldentenor is bearing fruit.

James Pease, who has been



Albert Da Costa

singing with the Hamburg Opera, gave evidence that he has become an outstanding Wagnerian. His Hunding, to begin with, was sung throughout; and secondly, it was realized as a full-dimensional character. Mr. Pease has learned not only how to handle German but also to make music with a role like Hunding, which some basses wade through like barking seals.

All three soloists were Americans. One would venture to guess that not even the best theatres in Germany could come up with a trio of superior Wagner singers.

At last night's concert, Mr. Munch led a moving performance of Samuel Barber's elegiac Adagio for Strings and a convincing interpretation of Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques," a work that is disarming in its modesty, charm and symphonic resource.

Bostonians Are Heard in Bartok Concerto

The Martinu piece, like Bartók's Concerto for Orchestra, which was conducted at this afternoon's concert by Pierre Monteux, was commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. The Bartók score has more iron in its make-up. It is the work that has the better chance of enduring. The foundation—and the Boston Symphony—have a right to be proud of both.

Mr. Monteux continues to amaze the listener. His conducting had a delightful buoyancy, as though being an octogenarian had freed him from heaviness and cares. He led Rossini's "Italiana in Algeri" overture with irresistible freshness. The Bartók score was played with an incisiveness that did not diminish either its gravity or contrasting brightness.

•

Bartók had a subtle mind, but in his music, especially in this work, there shone an innocence of spirit. The same quality in the framework of another day pervades Schubert's great C major Symphony. It was a joy to hear it performed with so much sympathy.

The weather turned sympathetic this afternoon, just in time to keep the entire weekend from being a lost one. But even in last night's miserable wind, rain and cold more than 5,000 persons came to Tanglewood. Your real music-lover is as hardy as some breeds of sports fan.

[106]

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL:

2 Programs Well Played

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 23.—Two contemporary masterpieces occupied an important place in the Berkshire Festival programs of the weekend. Charles Munch included Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" in the Saturday night concert. Pierre Monteux played Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra" yesterday afternoon. They pointed up the Boston Symphony's first weekend in the famous music shed, which drew a total audience of 18,951 people, and were well received.

Munch brought the Martinu back to Carnegie Hall last March after it had won the Music Critics Circle award. Hearing it then confirmed first impressions of its significance. Still further acquaintance underlines its beauty, unfolds more revealingly its world of fantasy, and places it at the head of a list of Martinu's works. The Bostonians' performance has grown richer and Munch's interpretation enhances both Martinu's workmanship and the considerable substance of the work.

Abreast of Times

Monteux shows how abreast of the times he is at the age of 81 when he elects to offer the Bartok masterpiece. It has been interpreted with more freedom and flavor but probably with no more precision. A dozen years have found it gain favor with audiences. Yesterday's was most enthusiastic.

Otherworldliness and fantasy are common to both the Martinu and Bartok. So, too, are originality and communicative power. Both composers gave something of themselves that singles out these works as representative of our times. Each stood in direct contrast to the other major items of these programs.

The Saturday night concert featured a performance of Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkuere" with Margaret Harshaw as Sieglinde, Albert da Costa as Siegmund, and James Pease as Hunding.

Yesterday Monteux offered Schubert's Seventh Symphony.

Both works bathed the listener in the effulgence of 19th Century romanticism, taking him into quite a different world from the 20th Century so graphically represented by Martinu and Bartok.

Munch paced his Wagner somewhat deliberately but drew sensuous sounds from the orchestra. The soloists gave outstanding accounts of themselves and the music. Miss Harshaw has seldom sung better; Da Costa qualifies potentially as a top-rank heldentenor; Pease has returned with a new sense of authority in voice and in manner. Never having sung his role before, Da Costa brought special distinction to himself.

Barber's "Adagio for Strings" provided the keynote for the Saturday program. It stands as a thing of beauty, its quality undiminished with the passing years. Monteux opened gaily with Rossini's overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri" and let the Schubert flow mellifluously to its joyous conclusion.

The weekend weather was damp and cold until the sun finally came through yesterday afternoon. It cut attendance noticeably, with only 5,753 attending Saturday and 6,995 coming for yesterday's event.

New York Journal-American
★ Mon., July 23, 1956 11

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485
JUL 23 1956

From Foundation Tanglewood Concert

The second of two concerts of contemporary chamber music, presented under the auspices of the Fromm Foundation of Chicago, will be given tonight at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, as part of this Summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Two works commissioned by the Fromm Foundation will receive first performances. They are the Quintet for bassoon and strings by Leland Smith of the University of Chicago and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments, by composer Julian Orbon of Havana, a 1946 Tanglewood composition student.

NEW YORK POST, MONDAY, JULY 23, 1956 26

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

'Walkuere' Thrills at Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., July 23—The contrasting personalities of two Frenchmen, Charles Munch, Saturday night, and Pierre Monteux, yesterday afternoon, on the podium for the Bostonians here at Tanglewood, plus more provocative fare, program-wise, whetted interest in the Berkshire Festival week-end.

Though two highly significant contemporary works were performed, the most exciting event from the audience standpoint without a doubt was the concert version of Act I from Wagner's "Die Walkuere," performed Saturday night.

Munch conducted the work with his usual communicative excitement but the outstanding contribution of the three soloists should not be underestimated. If Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera soprano, as Sieglinde, did not thrill every listener with the opulent beauty of her voice, the fault was not hers. Singing on a cold, damp night, where even wrapped in a mink stole she must have been chilly, she poured out tones which were effulgent in quality and alive with Wagnerian ecstasy. In my experience I have never heard her sing so well. And as could be expected, she sang with her familiar impeccable musicianship.

The Siegmund was the young tenor, Albert Da Costa, who made a great stir this past season when he sang Walther in the Met's "Die Meistersinger" on short notice, his first leading role in the house. Da Costa is a real find, the Met should guard him well. This was his first Siegmund anywhere and his trumpet-like quality which soars over even the loudest orchestral passages, was excellent in its effect. He also obviously had studied the role with thoroughness, was impressive in his sincerity. His command of the Wagnerian style and his vocal opulence will grow with experience, but he is well on his way to a big career in this almost-impossible-to-find category.

James Pease, bass, recently returned after a long series of successes in European opera houses, sang the lesser role of Hunding, with authority and with a sonorous richness.

While Munch doesn't command the Wagnerian style as he does the French, and there were many details which left something to be desired, the general effect was dynamic and convincing.

Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques," which won the N. Y. Music Critics Circle Prize for the outstanding new orchestral work performed during 1955, was played before the intermission on Saturday. The Bartok "Concerto for Orchestra" had the same place on yesterday's schedule.

The Martinu wears well, on second hearing it proved again to be worth the honor awarded it. Under Munch's direction, the Bostonians played the composition with stunning drama and a picturesque sense of color.

Monteux, the calm philosopher and the impartial, wise Jupiter of the baton, as opposed to the promethean approach of Munch, projected a significant and masterly interpretation of the Bartok. The majestic grandeur of Schubert's Seventh Symphony brought yesterday's program to a close.

Sartre's 'No Exit' At Theater East

"No Exit," Jean-Paul Sartre's existentialist play done on Broadway in 1946, will be revived Aug. 14 at Theater East, 211 E. 60th St. by Patricia Newhall and Hans Weigert. . . Jack Warden, who was in Arthur Miller's "A View From the Bridge," is negotiating for a leading role in "A Very Special Baby," the Rober Alan Aurthur play starring Sylvia Sidney and Ezio Pinza due at the Belasco Nov. 14. . . Alvin Colt will design the costumes for "Li'l Abner."

* * *

Convinced that prospective theater clientele prefer sun and surf on summer days, producers Sam Zerinsky and Joseph S. King of the Long Beach, L.I., Playhouse have cut out all matinees and substituted two performances on Saturday nights, at 7 and 9:45 p.m. The producers also experimented last year to see whether their audiences preferred staging in the round or a compromise three-quarter round. The latter won the poll. And this season, they have raised the stage in the three-quarter set-up so that customers can face left and right as well as front stage, thus getting an intimate view but without seeing too many turned backs.

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300
JUL 23 1956

A Paradise at Tanglewood As Sun, Music Sparkle

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, July 22—The first weekend of the main series of concerts in the Berkshire Festival ended this afternoon in a blaze of sunshine: the radiance of Schubert's C Major Symphony and the blaze of Old Sol, who stopped his sulking and transformed the Tanglewood area into the green paradise it ought to be.

Thanks to this improvement, the audience picked up from last night's figure, and totaled 6995.

This Sunday concert was conducted by that distinguished veteran, Pierre Monteux, a master of precise beat and delicate shadings. The program began with Rossini's inconsequential but carefree overture to "The Italian Girl in Algiers," and included Bela Bartok's fine Concerto For Orchestra.

Both Taste and Style

Mr. Monteux's peculiarly personal talents shone best in Rossini and Schubert. The overture glinted and shimmered; it was done with both taste and style. Schubert's "symphony of celestial length" (Robert Schumann said that; to this unregenerate chronicler, the slow movement and minuet are more on the oriental order where 300 years are three minutes—and vice versa) went its own singing way. This music needs no drive behind it, indeed would not be proper Schubert were it driven. Mr. Monteux found the right tempi and the correct grace of style.

In Bartok's concerto, with its puckish changes of mood and its varied allusions to Hungarian folk music, I for one would have preferred a more vigorous approach. Here Mr. Monteux was less the authoritative master. Mellow he was, and musicianly, but on the stodgy side. Perhaps this piece is too far from his own artistic generation—in this 82d year of his life—to arouse his finest qualities. At any rate, the concerto surprisingly took on an unaccustomed air of dullness, apart from the briskness of the finale.

A Regrettable Fact

The fact was regrettable, since the Concerto For Orchestra is music of true distinction and stature. Not that it ought to be given any wayward, gypsy abandon, but rhythmic vitality as much as harmonic astringency was part of the essence of Bartok.

Where the cold, wet weather had had its inevitable effects upon the pitch and the color quality of certain instruments at the Saturday night concert, today's improvement was reflected in the sound of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. All was crisp and precise within the huge music shed. Even the best of orchestras cannot operate at its finest amid shivers and drip. Perhaps all will be well, however, for the remaining three weeks of the festival.

In Brief . . .

Critic Jay S. Harrison's broadside at Tanglewood programming, reprinted on this page from yesterday's New York Herald Tribune, forcefully underscores the eternal dilemma confronting not only the Berkshire Festival but innumerable other ventures in the creative world: Whether to rely on the bread-and-butter crowd-pleasers or to risk box-office losses by blazing new trails. Certainly there's much to be said for Mr. Harrison's view that the nation's foremost music festival has obligations in the direction of pioneering . . . In Tanglewood's defense, however, it should be noted that the indictment was based on Friday night's opening concert in the Shed series, which happened to be a singularly unoriginal program . . . The Saturday and Sunday programs included works by contemporaries, and the remaining concerts of the series will include four works composed specifically for the Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary season . . .

The county's commendations are again in order for K. K. Paluev and his fellow promoters of the annual Berkshire weekend for U.N. personnel—a project that, after seven successful years, remains a heartening example of grass-roots internationalism . . . Considering the fact that virtually every member of the county's CD organization gets nothing more tangible than headaches in return for his time and talent, the fine showing in Friday's practice alert adds up to a striking demonstration of community conscience . . . The switch of the square dance festival from Wahconah Park to the Jewish Community Center must mark one of the few times in these parts that a dance has had to be relocated because of wet grounds . . .

A small town is one where everybody is interested in what the Joneses will name the latest baby, while a big city is where they worry about what the zoo will call the new elephant.—Detroit News.

The grandson of the man who came across the Plains on foot feels pretty heroic because there is a stretch of hot sidewalk between his air-conditioned car and his air-conditioned office.—Hartford Courant.

Science really is wonderful. For years you could hear static on the radio. Now on TV you can see it.—Toronto Daily Star.

Tanglewood Resolves Discord

The classicist takes a hard swipe
At modern music; calls it tripe:
"A riveting machine," he sneers,
"Would be more soothing to my ears."

The modernist gets in a blow;
"You only like the things you know.
New music is exciting, free,
From old concepts of harmony."

Although they argue quite a bit
They are good Friends in spite of it.

FLORENCE WILLNER

Pittsfield.

[107]

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL:

2 Programs Well Played

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 23.—Two contemporary masterpieces occupied an important place in the Berkshire Festival programs of the weekend. Charles Munch included Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" in the Saturday night concert. Pierre Monteux played Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra" yesterday afternoon. They pointed up the Boston Symphony's first weekend in the famous music shed, which drew a total audience of 18,951 people, and were well received.

Munch brought the Martinu back to Carnegie Hall last March after it had won the Music Critics Circle award. Hearing it then confirmed first impressions of its significance. Still further acquaintance underlines its beauty, unfolds more revealingly its world of fantasy, and places it at the head of a list of Martinu's works. The Bostonians' performance has grown richer and Munch's interpretation enhances both Martinu's workmanship and the considerable substance of the work.

Abreast of Times

Monteux shows how abreast of the times he is at the age of 81 when he elects to offer the Bartok masterpiece. It has been interpreted with more freedom and flavor but probably with no more precision. A dozen years have found it gain favor with audiences. Yesterday's was most enthusiastic.

Otherworldliness and fantasy are common to both the Martinu and Bartok. So, too, are originality and communicative power. Both composers gave something of themselves that singles out these works as representative of our times. Each stood in direct contrast to the other major items of these programs.

The Saturday night concert featured a performance of Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkuere" with Margaret Harshaw as Sieglinde, Albert da Costa as Siegmund, and James Pease as Hunding.

Yesterday Monteux offered Schubert's Seventh Symphony.

Both works bathed the listener in the effulgence of 19th Century romanticism, taking him into quite a different world from the 20th Century so graphically represented by Martinu and Bartok.

Munch paced his Wagner somewhat deliberately but drew sensuous sounds from the orchestra. The soloists gave outstanding accounts of themselves and the music. Miss Harshaw has seldom sung better; Da Costa qualifies potentially as a top-rank heldentenor; Pease has returned with a new sense of authority in voice and in manner. Never having sung his role before, Da Costa brought special distinction to himself.

Barber's "Adagio for Strings" provided the keynote for the Saturday program. It stands as a thing of beauty, its quality undiminished with the passing years. Monteux opened gaily with Rossini's overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri" and let the Schubert flow mellifluously to its joyous conclusion.

The weekend weather was damp and cold until the sun finally came through yesterday afternoon. It cut attendance noticeably, with only 5,753 attending Saturday and 6,995 coming for yesterday's event.

New York Journal-American
★ Mon., July 23, 1956. 11

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485

JUL 23 1956

From Foundation Tanglewood Concert

The second of two concerts of contemporary chamber music, presented under the auspices of the Fromm Foundation of Chicago, will be given tonight at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, as part of this Summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Two works commissioned by the Fromm Foundation will receive first performances. They are the Quintet for bassoon and strings by Leland Smith of the University of Chicago and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments, by composer Julian Orbon of Havana, a 1946 Tanglewood composition student.

NEW YORK POST, MONDAY, JULY 23, 1956 26

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

'Walkuere' Thrills at Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., July 23—The contrasting personalities of two Frenchmen, Charles Munch, Saturday night, and Pierre Monteux, yesterday afternoon, on the podium for the Bostonians here at Tanglewood, plus more provocative fare, program-wise, whetted interest in the Berkshire Festival week-end.

Though two highly significant contemporary works were performed, the most exciting event from the audience standpoint without a doubt was the concert version of Act I from Wagner's "Die Walkuere," performed Saturday night.

Munch conducted the work with his usual communicative excitement but the outstanding contribution of the three soloists should not be underestimated. If Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera soprano, as Sieglinde, did not thrill every listener with the opulent beauty of her voice, the fault was not hers. Singing on a cold, damp night, where even wrapped in a mink stole she must have been chilly, she poured out tones which were effulgent in quality and alive with Wagnerian ecstasy. In my experience I have never heard her sing so well. And as could be expected, she sang with her familiar impeccable musicianship.

The Siegmund was the young tenor, Albert Da Costa, who made a great stir this past season when he sang Walther in the Met's "Die Meistersinger" on short notice, his first leading role in the house. Da Costa is a real find, the Met should guard him well. This was his first Siegmund anywhere and his trumpet-like quality which soars over even the loudest orchestral passages, was excellent in its effect. He also obviously had studied the role with thoroughness, was impressive in his sincerity. His command of the Wagnerian style and his vocal opulence will grow with experience, but he is well on his way to a big career in this almost-impossible-to-find category.

James Pease, bass, recently returned after a long series of successes in European opera houses, sang the lesser role of Hunding, with authority and with a sonorous richness.

While Munch doesn't command the Wagnerian style as he does the French, and there were many details which left something to be desired, the general effect was dynamic and convincing.

Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques," which won the N. Y. Music Critics Circle Prize for the outstanding new orchestral work performed during 1955, was played before the intermission on Saturday. The Bartok "Concerto for Orchestra" had the same place on yesterday's schedule.

The Martinu wears well, on second hearing it proved again to be worth the honor awarded it. Under Munch's direction, the Bostonians played the composition with stunning drama and a picturesque sense of color.

Monteux, the calm philosopher and the impartial, wise Jupiter of the baton, as opposed to the promethean approach of Munch, projected a significant and masterly interpretation of the Bartok. The majestic grandeur of Schubert's Seventh Symphony brought yesterday's program to a close.

Sartre's 'No Exit' At Theater East

"No Exit," Jean-Paul Sartre's existentialist play done on Broadway in 1946, will be revived Aug. 14 at Theater East, 211 E. 60th St. by Patricia Newhall and Hans Weigert. . . Jack Warden, who was in Arthur Miller's "A View From the Bridge," is negotiating for a leading role in "A Very Special Baby," the Rober Alan Aurthur play starring Sylvia Sidney and Ezio Pinza due at the Belasco Nov. 14. . . Alvin Colt will design the costumes for "Li'l Abner."

* * *

Convinced that prospective theater clientele prefer sun and surf on summer days, producers Sam Zerinsky and Joseph S. King of the Long Beach, L.I., Playhouse have cut out all matinees and substituted two performances on Saturday nights, at 7 and 9:45 p.m. The producers also experimented last year to see whether their audiences preferred staging in the round or a compromise three-quarter round. The latter won the poll. And this season, they have raised the stage in the three-quarter set-up so that customers can face left and right as well as front stage, thus getting an intimate view but without seeing too many turned backs.

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

JUL 23 1956

A Paradise at Tanglewood As Sun, Music Sparkle

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, July 22—The first weekend of the main series of concerts in the Berkshire Festival ended this afternoon in a blaze of sunshine: the radiance of Schubert's C Major Symphony and the blaze of Old Sol, who stopped his sulking and transformed the Tanglewood area into the green paradise it ought to be.

Thanks to this improvement, the audience picked up from last night's figure, and totaled 6995.

This Sunday concert was conducted by that distinguished veteran, Pierre Monteux, a master of precise beat and delicate shadings. The program began with Rossini's inconsequential but carefree overture to "The Italian Girl in Algiers," and included Bela Bartok's fine Concerto For Orchestra.

Both Taste and Style

Mr. Monteux's peculiarly personal talents shone best in Rossini and Schubert. The overture glinted and shimmered; it was done with both taste and style. Schubert's "symphony of celestial length" (Robert Schumann said that; to this unregenerate chronicler, the slow movement and minuet are more on the oriental order where 300 years are three minutes—and vice versa) went its own singing way. This music needs no drive behind it, indeed would not be proper Schubert were it driven. Mr. Monteux found the right tempi and the correct grace of style.

In Bartok's concerto, with its puckish changes of mood and its varied allusions to Hungarian folk music, I for one would have preferred a more vigorous approach. Here Mr. Monteux was less the authoritative master. Mellow he was, and musicianly, but on the stodgy side. Perhaps this piece is too far from his own artistic generation—in this 82d year of his life—to arouse his finest qualities. At any rate, the concerto surprisingly took on an unaccustomed air of dullness, apart from the briskness of the finale.

A Regrettable Fact

The fact was regrettable, since the Concerto For Orchestra is music of true distinction and stature. Not that it ought to be given any wayward, gypsy abandon, but rhythmic vitality as much as harmonic astringency was part of the essence of Bartok.

Where the cold, wet weather had had its inevitable effects upon the pitch and the color quality of certain instruments at the Saturday night concert, today's improvement was reflected in the sound of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. All was crisp and precise within the huge music shed. Even the best of orchestras cannot operate at its finest amid shivers and drip. Perhaps all will be well, however, for the remaining three weeks of the festival.

In Brief . .

Critic Jay S. Harrison's broadside at Tanglewood programming, reprinted on this page from yesterday's New York Herald Tribune, forcefully underscores the eternal dilemma confronting not only the Berkshire Festival but innumerable other ventures in the creative world: Whether to rely on the bread-and-butter crowd-pleasers or to risk box-office losses by blazing new trails. Certainly there's much to be said for Mr. Harrison's view that the nation's foremost music festival has obligations in the direction of pioneering . . . In Tanglewood's defense, however, it should be noted that the indictment was based on Friday night's opening concert in the Shed series, which happened to be a singularly unoriginal program . . . The Saturday and Sunday programs included works by contemporaries, and the remaining concerts of the series will include four works composed specifically for the Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary season . . .

The county's commendations are again in order for K. K. Paluev and his fellow promoters of the annual Berkshire weekend for U.N. personnel—a project that, after seven successful years, remains a heartening example of grass-roots internationalism . . . Considering the fact that virtually every member of the county's CD organization gets nothing more tangible than headaches in return for his time and talent, the fine showing in Friday's practice alert adds up to a striking demonstration of community conscience . . . The switch of the square dance festival from Wahconah Park to the Jewish Community Center must mark one of the few times in these parts that a dance has had to be relocated because of wet grounds . . .

A small town is one where everybody is interested in what the Joneses will name the latest baby, while a big city is where they worry about what the zoo will call the new elephant.—Detroit News.

The grandson of the man who came across the Plains on foot feels pretty heroic because there is a stretch of hot sidewalk between his air-conditioned car and his air-conditioned office.—Hartford Courant.

Science really is wonderful. For years you could hear static on the radio. Now on TV you can see it.—Toronto Daily Star.

Tanglewood Resolves Discord

The classicist takes a hard swipe
At modern music; calls it tripe:
"A riveting machine," he sneers,
"Would be more soothing to my ears."

The modernist gets in a blow;
"You only like the things you know.
New music is exciting, free,
From old concepts of harmony."

Although they argue quite a bit
They are good Friends in spite of it.

FLORENCE WILLNER
Pittsfield.

[107]

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL:

2 Programs Well Played

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 23.—Two contemporary masterpieces occupied an important place in the Berkshire Festival programs of the weekend. Charles Munch included Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" in the Saturday night concert. Pierre Monteux played Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra" yesterday afternoon. They pointed up the Boston Symphony's first weekend in the famous music shed, which drew a total audience of 18,951 people, and were well received.

Munch brought the Martinu back to Carnegie Hall last March after it had won the Music Critics Circle award. Hearing it then confirmed first impressions of its significance. Still further acquaintance underlines its beauty, unfolds more revealingly its world of fantasy, and places it at the head of a list of Martinu's works. The Bostonians' performance has grown richer and Munch's interpretation enhances both Martinu's workmanship and the considerable substance of the work.

Abreast of Times

Monteux shows how abreast of the times he is at the age of 81 when he elects to offer the Bartok masterpiece. It has been interpreted with more freedom and flavor but probably with no more precision. A dozen years have found it gain favor with audiences. Yesterday's was most enthusiastic.

Otherworldliness and fantasy are common to both the Martinu and Bartok. So, too, are originality and communicative power. Both composers gave something of themselves that singles out these works as representative of our times. Each stood in direct contrast to the other major items of these programs.

The Saturday night concert featured a performance of Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkuere" with Margaret Harshaw as Sieglinde, Albert da Costa as Siegmund, and James Pease as Hunding.

Yesterday Monteux offered Schubert's Seventh Symphony.

Both works bathed the listener in the effulgence of 19th Century romanticism, taking him into quite a different world from the 20th Century so graphically represented by Martinu and Bartok.

Munch paced his Wagner somewhat deliberately but drew serisuous sounds from the orchestra. The soloists gave outstanding accounts of themselves and the music. Miss Harshaw has seldom sung better; Da Costa qualifies potentially as a top-rank heldentenor; Pease has returned with a new sense of authority in voice and in manner. Never having sung his role before, Da Costa brought special distinction to himself.

Barber's "Adagio for Strings" provided the keynote for the Saturday program. It stands as a thing of beauty, its quality undiminished with the passing years. Monteux opened gaily with Rossini's overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri" and let the Schubert flow mellifluously to its joyous conclusion.

The weekend weather was damp and cold until the sun finally came through yesterday afternoon. It cut attendance noticeably, with only 5,753 attending Saturday and 6,995 coming for yesterday's event.

New York Journal-American
★ Mon., July 23, 1956 11

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485

JUL 23 1956

From Foundation Tanglewood Concert

The second of two concerts of contemporary chamber music, presented under the auspices of the Fromm Foundation of Chicago, will be given tonight at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, as part of this Summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Two works commissioned by the Fromm Foundation will receive first performances. They are the Quintet for bassoon and strings by Leland Smith of the University of Chicago and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments, by composer Julian Orbon of Havana, a 1946 Tanglewood composition student.

NEW YORK POST, MONDAY, JULY 23, 1956 26

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

'Walkuere' Thrills at Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., July 23—The contrasting personalities of two Frenchmen, Charles Munch, Saturday night, and Pierre Monteux, yesterday afternoon, on the podium for the Bostonians here at Tanglewood, plus more provocative fare, program-wise, whetted interest in the Berkshire Festival week-end.

Though two highly significant contemporary works were performed, the most exciting event from the audience standpoint without a doubt was the concert version of Act I from Wagner's "Die Walkuere," performed Saturday night.

Munch conducted the work with his usual communicative excitement but the outstanding contribution of the three soloists should not be underestimated. If Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera soprano, as Sieglinde, did not thrill every listener with the opulent beauty of her voice, the fault was not hers. Singing on a cold, damp night, where even wrapped in a mink stole she must have been chilly, she poured out tones which were effulgent in quality and alive with Wagnerian ecstasy. In my experience I have never heard her sing so well. And as could be expected, she sang with her familiar impeccable musicianship.

The Siegmund was the young tenor, Albert Da Costa, who made a great stir this past season when he sang Walther in the Met's "Die Meistersinger" on short notice, his first leading role in the house. Da Costa is a real find, the Met should guard him well. This was his first Siegmund anywhere and his trumpet-like quality which soars over even the loudest orchestral passages, was excellent in its effect. He also obviously had studied the role with thoroughess, was impressive in his sincerity. His command of the Wagnerian style and his vocal opulence will grow with experience, but he is well on his way to a big career in this almost-impossible-to-find category.

James Pease, bass, recently returned after a long series of successes in European opera houses, sang the lesser role of Hunding, with authority and with a sonorous richness.

While Munch doesn't command the Wagnerian style as he does the French, and there were many details which left something to be desired, the general effect was dynamic and convincing.

Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques," which won the N. Y. Music Critics Circle Prize for the outstanding new orchestral work performed during 1955, was played before the intermission on Saturday. The Bartok "Concerto for Orchestra" had the same place on yesterday's schedule.

The Martinu wears well, on second hearing it proved again to be worth the honor awarded it. Under Munch's direction, the Bostonians played the composition with stunning drama and a picturesque sense of color.

Monteux, the calm philosopher and the impartial, wise Jupiter of the baton, as opposed to the promethean approach of Munch, projected a significant

Sartre's 'No Exit' At Theater East

"No Exit," Jean-Paul Sartre's existentialist play done on Broadway in 1946, will be revived Aug. 14 at Theater East, 211 E. 60th St. by Patricia Newhall and Hans Weigert. . . Jack Warden, who was in Arthur Miller's "A View From the Bridge," is negotiating for a leading role in "A Very Special Baby," the Rober Alan Aurthur play starring Sylvia Sidney and Ezio Pinza due at the Belasco Nov. 14. . . Alvin Colt will design the costumes for "Li'l Abner."

* * *

Convinced that prospective theater clientele prefer sun and surf on summer days, producers Sam Zerinsky and Joseph S. King of the Long Beach, L.I., Playhouse have cut out all matinees and substituted two performances on Saturday nights, at 7 and 9:45 p.m. The producers also experimented last year to see whether their audiences preferred staging in the round or a compromise three-quarter round. The latter won the poll. And this season, they have raised the stage in the three-quarter set-up so that customers can face left and right as well as front stage, thus getting an intimate view but without seeing too many turned backs.

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

JUL 23 1956

A Paradise at Tanglewood As Sun, Music Sparkle

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, July 22—The first weekend of the main series of concerts in the Berkshire Festival ended this afternoon in a blaze of sunshine: the radiance of Schubert's C Major Symphony and the blaze of Old Sol, who stopped his sulking and transformed the Tanglewood area into the green paradise it ought to be.

Thanks to this improvement, the audience picked up from last night's figure, and totaled 6995.

This Sunday concert was conducted by that distinguished veteran, Pierre Monteux, a master of precise beat and delicate shadings. The program began with Rossini's inconsequential but carefree overture to "The Italian Girl in Algiers," and included Bela Bartok's fine Concerto For Orchestra.

Both Taste and Style

Mr. Monteux's peculiarly personal talents shone best in Rossini and Schubert. The overture glinted and shimmered; it was done with both taste and style. Schubert's "symphony of celestial length" (Robert Schumann said that; to this unregenerate chronicler, the slow movement and minuet are more on the oriental order where 300 years are three minutes—and vice versa) went its own singing way. This music needs no drive behind it, indeed would not be proper Schubert were it driven. Mr. Monteux found the right tempi and the correct grace of style.

In Bartok's concerto, with its puckish changes of mood and its varied allusions to Hungarian folk music, I for one would have preferred a more vigorous approach. Here Mr. Monteux was less the authoritative master. Mellow he was, and musicianly, but on the stodgy side. Perhaps this piece is too far from his own artistic generation—in this 82d year of his life—to arouse his finest qualities. At any rate, the concerto surprisingly took on an unaccustomed air of dullness, apart from the briskness of the finale.

A Regrettable Fact

The fact was regrettable, since the Concerto For Orchestra is music of true distinction and stature. Not that it ought to be given any wayward, gypsy abandon, but rhythmic vitality as much as harmonic astringency was part of the essence of Bartok.

Where the cold, wet weather had had its inevitable effects upon the pitch and the color quality of certain instruments at the Saturday night concert, today's improvement was reflected in the sound of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. All was crisp and precise within the huge music shed. Even the best of orchestras cannot operate at its finest amid shivers and drip. Perhaps all will be well, however, for the remaining three weeks of the festival.

In Brief . . 7/23/56

Critic Jay S. Harrison's broadside at Tanglewood programming, reprinted on this page from yesterday's New York Herald Tribune, forcefully underscores the eternal dilemma confronting not only the Berkshire Festival but innumerable other ventures in the creative world: Whether to rely on the bread-and-butter crowd-pleasers or to risk box-office losses by blazing new trails. Certainly there's much to be said for Mr. Harrison's view that the nation's foremost music festival has obligations in the direction of pioneering . . . In Tanglewood's defense, however, it should be noted that the indictment was based on Friday night's opening concert in the Shed series, which happened to be a singularly unoriginal program . . . The Saturday and Sunday programs included works by contemporaries, and the remaining concerts of the series will include four works composed specifically for the Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary season . . .

The county's commendations are again in order for K. K. Paluev and his fellow promoters of the annual Berkshire weekend for U.N. personnel—a project that, after seven successful years, remains a heartening example of grass-roots internationalism . . . Considering the fact that virtually every member of the county's CD organization gets nothing more tangible than headaches in return for his time and talent, the fine showing in Friday's practice alert adds up to a striking demonstration of community conscience . . . The switch of the square dance festival from Wahconah Park to the Jewish Community Center must mark one of the few times in these parts that a dance has had to be relocated because of wet grounds . . .

A small town is one where everybody is interested in what the Joneses will name the latest baby, while a big city is where they worry about what the zoo will call the new elephant.—Detroit News.

The grandson of the man who came across the Plains on foot feels pretty heroic because there is a stretch of hot sidewalk between his air-conditioned car and his air-conditioned office.—Hartford Courant.

Science really is wonderful. For years you could hear static on the radio. Now on TV you can see it.—Toronto Daily Star.

Tanglewood Resolves Discord

The classicist takes a hard swipe
At modern music; calls it tripe:
"A riveting machine," he sneers,
"Would be more soothing to my ears."

The modernist gets in a blow;
"You only like the things you know.
New music is exciting, free,
From old concepts of harmony."

Although they argue quite a bit
They are good Friends in spite of it.

FLORENCE WILLNER
Pittsfield.

[107]

Music

Berkshire Eagle, Monday, July 23, 1956

Weekend Concerts at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST HALF of the Tanglewood season was completed with the brace of concerts in the Shed played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton Saturday evening of Charles Munch and yesterday afternoon of Pierre Monteux, making the first of two appearances scheduled for this season.

Monteux played the Rossini overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri," the Bartok concerto for orchestra and the Schubert seventh symphony. While the whole program was beautifully played, the Bartok concerto was the big moment of the afternoon. It was written on commission of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation and given its first performance by Koussevitzky with the Boston orchestra in Carnegie Hall in New York in 1944.

* * *

THERE ARE five movements, each one of individual integrity. Monteux made the complex and intricate phrases seem amazingly simple and the orchestra performed with a virtuosity that was nearly uncanny. There was sweep and gusto in the playing. There was the same confident, unperturbed control in Monteux's conducting of it as there was in the completely predictable Schubert.

Bartok goes to all manner of sources for his material, from the blueprint and drawing board to the popular and music-hall type of contagious song, but there is mastery in his handling of each material. The first entrance of the violins could be a hideous bit of contrary motion but, played legato and muted over sustained tones in the 'celli, it becomes a fascinating and pungent segment. Every detail will stand analysis but they are all parts of the whole and pass so fleetingly that alone they are not identifiable.

* * *

MONTEUX conducted with a minimum of effort and the orchestra responded with its maximum. The same attitude in the Schubert produced a remarkably pleasant atmosphere. The warm sun appeared at about the time this part of the program was reached and the two caused a beatific somnolence to invade the cordial audience from which they roused themselves at the end to give the conductor and the orchestra a tremendous ovation.

Saturday night Munch gave the first Tanglewood performance of Bohislav Martinu's "Fantasies Symphoniques," a work in three movements which the composer considered his sixth symphony. It was written at the request of Munch for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and was first played, in Boston, last year.

* * *

MARTINU SAID he "wished to write something for Munch . . . I am impressed (with) his spontaneous approach to music," "an almost imperceptible slowing down or rushing up gives the melody sudden life."

The "fantastic" qualification survived an originally grandiose conception and now may more properly refer to a nonconformity with a more formal framework. That Munch has made Berlioz' symphony of a like name or less his piece de resistance was apparently merely a coincidence.

The work is episodic and, if it were a drama, would require many and swift scenery changes. For instance, after the opening shimmering sound, ingeniously contrived, like reflections on rippling water, the music is clarified and proceeds in good sonorous assignments to the strings. Indeed, the whole evening was marked by music predominantly for these choirs and less than normally for brass. The opening Samuel Barber "Adagio," of course, is for strings only. This was beautifully played and proves, if there were any challenge or protest, how little it is imperative for a program to begin with a noisy overture or that, at the minimum, the first note should be a crash.

* * *

WAGNERIAN SINGERS with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Saturday night's Berkshire Festival performance of Act I of "Die Walkure," were, left to right, James Pease, a leading Wagnerian basso at the Hamburg, Germany, State Opera; Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera soprano, and Albert Da Costa, Metropolitan Opera tenor, who will sing his Tanglewood role of Siegmund for first time at Met next season.

MARTINU switched from skillfully placed melodies to "effects," by no means offensively but not, at first glance, rational. There are several points of similarity and significance between the works both Munch and Monteux placed in exact juxtaposition on their respective programs. Bartok and Martinu both wrote on commissions from the incumbent Boston conductors. They both preferred not to call their works symphonies although, in broad shape, that is what they are. Martinu divided his composition into three movements; Bartok has in five.

The appellation, of course, is not important, whether it is a symphony, suite, fantasy or concerto, and if they felt that one term limited or did not accurately express their purpose, every one is content. Bartok wrote "finis" to this particular work 13 days after he reached 62½ years of age; Martinu did the same for his 13 days before he reached the identical milestone.

* * *

MUNCH DEVOTED the last half of his program to the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure." A concert performance of an entire act of opera was an innovation at Tanglewood and it accumulated audience absorption as it proceeded until, at the finale, there was still applause, shouting and many recalls for all the principals. Brunnhilde was sung by soprano Margaret Harshaw, Siegmund by tenor Albert Da Costa and Hunding by bass James Pease.

Wagner's music, without the aids of scenery, actors and movement, did not convey a discernible dramatic situation at the outset, nor did the docility of the orchestra at this point noticeably help, but as the plot developed so did the ties across the imaginary footlights, and as the three young American principals had opportunities to make their roles graphic by means of their powerful and poignant voices and such dramatic effectiveness as "black tie" would permit, Wagner and all concerned came into their own. And to insert here before going any further that no vocalism of the evening excelled for pure tonal beauty the two solos which befell 'cellist Samuel Mayes.

* * *

AS THE STAGE action becomes more involved and Wagner matches its progress with the significance of his music, the orchestra reveled in the lush fields the composer has waiting for those who invade the rich sanctuary. In general the vocalists were well able to rise above the orchestral volume. Munch's desire (and achievement) to support the soloists sometimes caused him to indicate certain beats with an unnecessary vehemence but the singing was in the grand manner. Brunnhilde and Siegmund have greater opportunities in this act but no precedence in effectiveness could be claimed and the enthusiasm of the audience did not show any discrimination.

Fromm Concert At Tanglewood Tonight at 8:30

TANGLEWOOD — The second of three programs of contemporary chamber music, presented under the auspices of the Fromm Foundation of Chicago, will be given tonight at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, as part of this summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony, the concert is open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose contributions help support the music school, and to the general public. Seats are unreserved.

First Performance

Two works commissioned by the Fromm Foundation will receive their first performances tonight. They are the Quintet for Bassoon and Strings by Leland Smith of the University of Chicago's Music Department, and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments by Cuban composer Julian Orbon of Havana, a 1947 Tanglewood composition student.

Participating in tonight's concert are the following members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale and Eugen Lehner, violas; Samuel Mayes, cello; Georges Moleux, bass; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; James Stagliano, horn; and Bernard Zighera, harp. Guest artists are: Sylvia Marlowe, harpsichord; Seymour Lipkin, piano; Marjorie McClung, soprano; Norma Farber, reciter; and Goffredo Petrassi and Seymour Lipkin, conductors.

The Program

Concerto for Harpsichord (1926)
Manuel De Falla (1876-1946)
Miss Marlowe; Mrs. Dwyer; Messrs. Gomberg, Cioffi, Burgin, Mayes

Quintet for Bassoon and Strings (1956)
Leland Smith (b. 1925)
(Commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation); Messrs. Burgin, Krips, de Pasquale, Mayes, Walt

Himnus ad Galli Cantum (1956)
Julian Orbon (b. 1925)
(Commissioned by the FROMM Music Foundation); Miss McClung; Mrs. Dwyer; Messrs. Gomberg, Cioffi, Zighera, Burgin, Krips, de Pasquale, Mayes, Lipkin

Sonata da Camera (1946)
Goffredo Petrassi (b. 1904)
Miss Marlowe; Mrs. Dwyer; Messrs. Gomberg, Cioffi, Walt, Burgin, Krips, de Pasquale, Lehner, Mayes, Moleux, Petrassi

Summer Music (1953)
Samuel Barber (b. 1910)
Mrs. Dwyer; Messrs. Gomberg, Cioffi, Stagliano, Walt

Cantate de l'Enfant et de la Mere (1939)
Darius Milhaud (b. 1892)
Mrs. Farber; Messrs. Burgin, Krips, de Pasquale, Mayes, Lipkin

20,000 Attend Opening At Tanglewood

(Special to The Republican)

Lenox, Mass., July 22—The first week end of concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra in the music shed at Tanglewood brought more than 20,000 music lovers for three concerts conducted by Charles Munch and guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

More than 6,200 were in the opening audience Friday evening when Charles Munch raised his baton to start the four-week season of concerts in the big music shed. The performance of the Brahms "Symphony No. 2, in D major" was so fine that one was assured of another memorable season of excellent performances which the large week-end audiences here have come to accept as normal.

Despite the heavy rain of Saturday which kept away many who normally are seated on the spacious lawns, there was a large audience for the performance of Wagner's "Die Walkure," Act I, which featured the soloists Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; and James Pease, bass. The first part of the program presented Barber's "Adagio for Strings" and Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques", composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

It was a rapt audience which listened to the excellent performance of Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun" at the opening concert. There was color and fire in the performance of Ravel's ballet music from his "Daphnis et Chloe." Throughout the evening the string section of the Boston gave an inspired performance. Mr. Munch conducted with such ease of manner and the orchestra responded with such splendor that it was difficult to realize what rehearsal had gone on behind the scenes in the days preceding.

The Sunday afternoon performance brought a large audience to the grounds as well as the shed to hear the 31-year-old Pierre Monteux conduct the program of Rossini, Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra," and Schubert's "Symphony in C Major."

Concerts this week will bring the music of Beethoven, Tschaikovsky, and Petrassi Friday evening; Rudolph Serkin as soloist in the Schumann "Piano Concerto in A minor" Saturday evening, and Ruth Posselt as soloist in the Hindemith "Violin Concerto" Sunday afternoon with her husband, Richard Burgin, concertmeister, conducting that concert.

The Sunday afternoon program will include Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" and Mahler's "Symphony No. 1, in D Major."

S.M.

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE, TUESDAY, JULY 24, 1956

* * *

THE ANNUAL Tanglewood on Parade program of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be played on the evening of Aug. 9 in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The orchestra program climaxes the annual celebration which benefits the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the first half of the orchestra program and following intermission Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will make their third consecutive appearance at the affair with Jesus Maria Sanroma, pianist, as soloist in the Gershwin "Piano Concerto in F."

Mr. de Carvalho will conduct the orchestra in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and a work by Heitor Villa-Lobos, "Chorus number 10 or Rasga o coracao."

Mr. Fiedler's program will also include a suite from the ballet, "La Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini orchestrated by Respighi and other works from the Pops repertory.

Ticket holders for the evening concert have been invited to performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center starting at 4 p.m. in the Formal Gardens and Barn. The programs will be presented by students of the opera department and the Tanglewood Study Group.

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the center, will present a formal welcoming address at 5:45 p.m. and at 6 p.m. there will be simultaneous performances in the Shed, Theatre and Chamber Music Hall by students of the the orchestral, opera and composition departments. At 7 p.m. while concert goers eat their picnic suppers on the lawn the Tanglewood Chorus, directed by Hugh Ross, will present an informal concert on the porch of the Main House.

The gala concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin promptly at 8:15 p.m. and at its conclusion there will be waltzing on the lawn.

Tickets for Tanglewood on Parade are now on sale at the box office.

[108]

Weekend Concerts at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST HALF of the Tanglewood season was completed with the brace of concerts in the Shed played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton Saturday evening of Charles Munch and yesterday afternoon of Pierre Monteux, making the first of two appearances scheduled for this season.

Monteux played the Rossini overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri," the Bartok concerto for orchestra and the Schubert seventh symphony. While the whole program was beautifully played, the Bartok concerto was the big moment of the afternoon. It was written on commission of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation and given its first performance by Koussevitzky with the Boston orchestra in Carnegie Hall in New York in 1944.

* * *

THERE ARE five movements, each one of individual integrity. Monteux made the complex and intricate phrases seem amazingly simple and the orchestra performed with a virtuosity that was nearly uncanny. There was sweep and gusto in the playing. There was the same confident, unperturbed control in Monteux's conducting of it as there was in the completely predictable Schubert.

Bartok goes to all manner of sources for his material, from the blueprint and drawing board to the popular and music-hall type of contagious song, but there is mastery in his handling of each material. The first entrance of the violins could be a hideous bit of contrary motion but, played legato and muted over sustained tones in the 'celli, it becomes a fascinating and pungent segment. Every detail will stand analysis but they are all parts of the whole and pass so fleetingly that alone they are not identifiable.

* * *

MONTEUX conducted with a minimum of effort and the orchestra responded with its maximum. The same attitude in the Schubert produced a remarkably pleasant atmosphere. The warm sun appeared at about the time this part of the program was reached and the two caused a beatific somnolence to invade the cordial audience from which they roused themselves at the end to give the conductor and the orchestra a tremendous ovation.

Saturday night Munch gave the first Tanglewood performance of Bohislav Martinu's "Fantasies Symphoniques," a work in three movements which the composer considered his sixth symphony. It was written at the request of Munch for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and was first played, in Boston, last year.

* * *

MARTINU SAID he "wished to write something for Munch . . . I am impressed (with) his spontaneous approach to music," "an almost imperceptible slowing down or rushing up gives the melody sudden life."

The "fantastic" qualification survived an originally grandiose conception and now may more properly refer to a nonconformity with a more formal framework. That Munch has made Berlioz' symphony of a like name or less his piece de resistance was apparently merely a coincidence.

The work is episodic and, if it were a drama, would require many and swift scenery changes. For instance, after the opening shimmering sound, ingeniously contrived, like reflections on rippling water, the music is clarified and proceeds in good sonorous assignments to the strings. Indeed, the whole evening was marked by music predominantly for those choirs and less than normally for brass. The opening Samuel Barber "Adagio," of course, is for strings only. This was beautifully played and proves, if there were any challenge or protest, how little it is imperative for a program to begin with a noisy overture or that, at the minimum, the first note should be a crash.

WAGNERIAN SINGERS with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Saturday night's Berkshire Festival performance of Act 1 of "Die Walkure," were, left to right, James Pease, a leading Wagnerian basso at the Hamburg, Germany, State Opera; Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera soprano, and Albert Da Costa, Metropolitan Opera tenor, who will sing his Tanglewood role of Siegmund for first time at Met next season.

MARTINU switched from skillfully placed melodies to "effects," by no means offensively but not, at first glance, rational. There are several points of similarity and significance between the works both Munch and Monteux placed in exact juxtaposition on their respective programs. Bartok and Martinu both wrote on commissions from the incumbent Boston conductors. They both preferred not to call their works symphonies although, in broad shape, that is what they are. Martinu divided his composition into three movements; Bartok his in five.

The appellation, of course, is not important, whether it is a symphony, suite, fantasy or concerto, and if they felt that one term limited or did not accurately express their purpose, everyone is content. Bartok wrote "finis" to this particular work 13 days after he reached 62½ years of age; Martinu did the same for his 13 days before he reached the identical milestone.

* * *

MUNCH DEVOTED the last half of his program to the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure." A concert performance of an entire act of opera was an innovation at Tanglewood and it accumulated audience absorption as it proceeded until, at the finale, there was wild applause, shouting and many recalls for all the principals. Brunnhilde was sung by soprano Margaret Harshaw, Siegmund by tenor Albert Da Costa and Hunding by bass James Pease.

Wagner's music, without the aids of scenery, actors and movement, did not convey a discernible dramatic situation at the outset, nor did the docility of the orchestra at this point noticeably help, but as the plot developed, so did the ties across the imaginary footlights, and as the three young American principals had opportunities to make their roles graphic by means of their powerful and poignant voices and such dramatic effectiveness as "black tie" would permit, Wagner and all concerned came into their own. And let us insert here before going any further that no vocalism of the evening excelled for pure tonal beauty the two solos which befell 'cellist Samuel Mayes.

* * *

AS THE STAGE action becomes more involved and Wagner matches its progress with the significance of his music, the orchestra reveled in the lush fields the composer has waiting for those who invade the rich sanctuary. In general the vocalists were well able to rise above the orchestral volume. Munch's desire (and achievement) to support the soloists sometimes caused him to indicate certain beats with an unnecessary vehemence but the singing was in the grand manner. Brunnhilde and Siegmund have greater opportunities in this act but no precedence in effectiveness could be claimed and the enthusiasm of the audience did not show any discrimination.

Fromm Concert At Tanglewood Tonight at 8:30

TANGLEWOOD — The second of four concerts of contemporary chamber music, presented under the auspices of the Fromm Foundation of Chicago, will be given tonight at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, as part of this summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony, the concert is open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose contributions help support the music school, and to the general public. Seats are unreserved.

First Performance

Two works commissioned by the Fromm Foundation will receive their first performances tonight. They are the Quintet for Bassoon and Strings by Leland Smith of the University of Chicago's Music Department, and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments by Cuban composer, Julian Orbon of Havana, a 1946 Tanglewood composition student.

Participating in tonight's concert are the following members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale and Eugen Lehner, violas; Samuel Mayes, cello; Georges Moleux, bass; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; James Stagliano, horn; and Bernard Zighera, harp. Guest artists are: Sylvia Marlowe, harpsichord; Seymour Lipkin, piano; Marjorie McClung, soprano; Norma Farber, reciter; and Goffredo Petrassi and Seymour Lipkin, conductors.

The Program

Concerto for Harpsichord (1926)
Manuel De Falla (1876-1946)
Miss Marlowe; Mrs. Dwyer; Messrs. Gomberg, Cioffi, Burgin, Mayes

Quintet for Bassoon and Strings (1956)
Leland Smith (b. 1925)
(Commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation): Messrs. Burgin, Krips, de Pasquale, Mayes, Walt

Himnus ad Galli Cantum (1956)
Julian Orbon (b. 1925)
(Commissioned by the FROMM Music Foundation); Miss McClung; Mrs. Dwyer; Messrs. Gomberg, Cioffi, Zighera, Burgin, Krips, de Pasquale, Mayes, Lipkin

Sonata da Camera (1946)
Goffredo Petrassi (b. 1904)
Miss Marlowe; Mrs. Dwyer; Messrs. Gomberg, Cioffi, Walt, Burgin, Krips, de Pasquale, Lehner, Mayes, Moleux, Petrassi

Summer Music (1955)
Samuel Barber (b. 1910)
Mrs. Dwyer; Messrs. Gomberg Cioffi, Stagliano, Walt

Cantate de l'Enfant et de la Mere (1938)
Darius Milhaud (b. 1892)
Mrs. Farber; Messrs. Burgin, Krips, de Pasquale, Mayes, Lipkin

20,000 Attend Opening At Tanglewood

Watertown Republican July 24 1956

(Special to The Republican)

Lenox, Mass., July 22—The first week end of concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra in the music shed at Tanglewood brought more than 20,000 music lovers for three concerts conducted by Charles Munch and guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

More than 6,200 were in the opening audience Friday evening when Charles Munch raised his baton to start the four-week season of concerts in the big music shed. The performance of the Brahms "Symphony No. 2, in D major" was so fine that one was assured of another memorable season of excellent performances which the large week-end audiences here have come to accept as normal.

Despite the heavy rain of Saturday which kept away many who normally are seated on the spacious lawns, there was a large audience for the performance of Wagner's "Die Walkure," Act I, which featured the soloists Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; and James Pease, bass. The first part of the program presented Barber's "Adagio for Strings" and Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques", composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

It was a rapt audience which listened to the excellent performance of Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun" at the opening concert. There was color and fire in the performance of Ravel's ballet music from his "Daphnis et Chloe." Throughout the evening the string section of the Boston gave an inspired performance. Mr. Munch conducted with such ease of manner and the orchestra responded with such splendor that it was difficult to realize what rehearsal had gone on behind the scenes in the days preceding.

The Sunday afternoon performance brought a large audience to the grounds as well as the shed to hear the 81-year-old Pierre Monteux conduct the program of Rossini, Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra," and Schubert's "Symphony in C Major."

Concerts this week will bring the music of Beethoven, Tschaikovsky, and Petrassi Friday evening; Rudolph Serkin as soloist in the Schumann "Piano Concerto in A minor" Saturday evening, and Ruth Posselt as soloist in the Hindemith "Violin Concerto" Sunday afternoon with her husband, Richard Burgin, concertmeister, conducting that concert.

The Sunday afternoon program will include Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" and Mahler's "Symphony No. 1, in D Major."

S.M.

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE, TUESDAY, JULY 24, 1956

* * *

THE ANNUAL Tanglewood on Parade program of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be played on the evening of Aug. 9 in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The orchestra program climaxes the annual celebration which benefits the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the first half of the orchestra program and following intermission Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will make their third consecutive appearance at the affair with Jesus Maria Sanroma, pianist, as soloist in the Gershwin "Piano Concerto in F."

Mr. de Carvalho will conduct the orchestra in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and a work by Heitor Villa-Lobos, "Chorus number 10 or Rasga o coracao."

Mr. Fiedler's program will also include a suite from the ballet, "La Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini orchestrated by Respighi and other works from the Pops repertory.

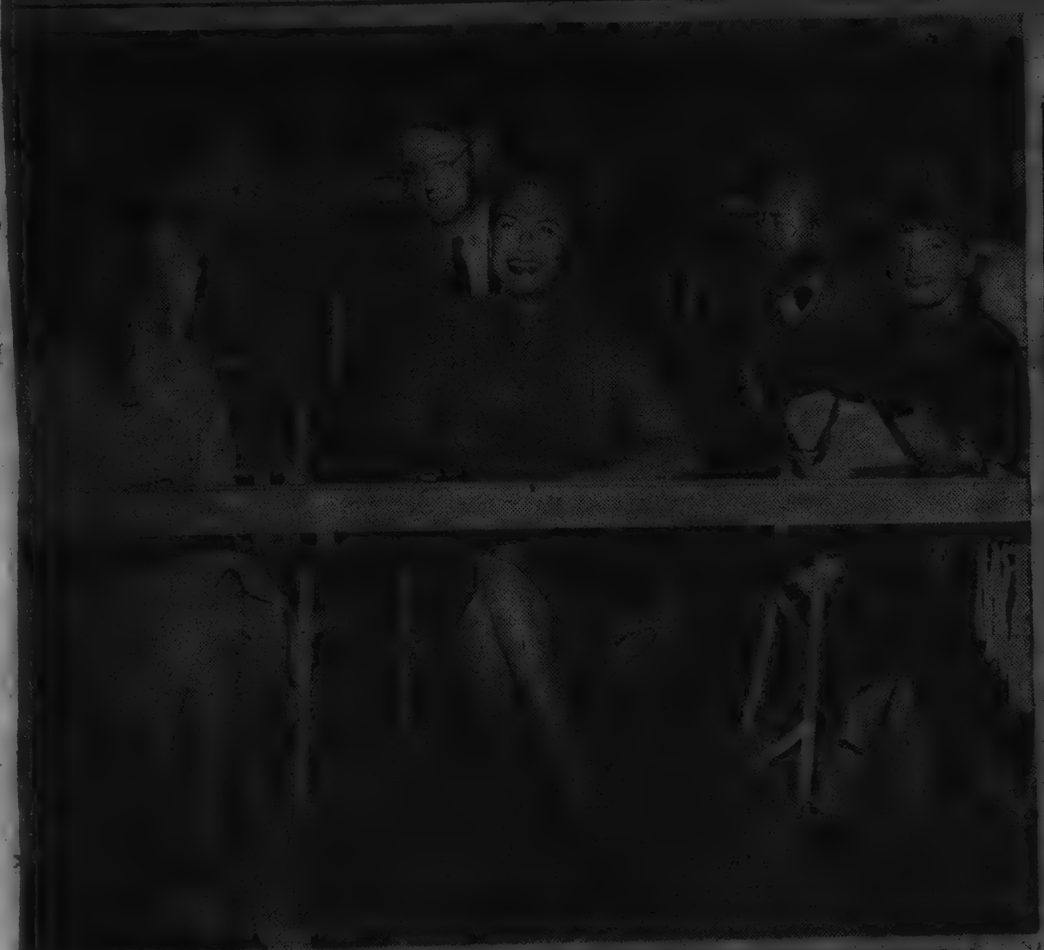
Ticket holders for the evening concert have been invited to performances by the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center starting at 4 p.m. in the Formal Gardens and Barn. The programs will be presented by students of the opera department and the Tanglewood Study Group.

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the center, will present a formal welcoming address at 5:45 p.m. and at 6 p.m. there will be simultaneous performances in the Shed, Theatre and Chamber Music Hall by students of the the orchestral, opera and composition departments. At 7 p.m. while concert goers eat their picnic suppers on the lawn the Tanglewood Chorus, directed by Hugh Ross, will present an informal concert on the porch of the Main House.

The gala concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin promptly at 8:15 p.m. and at its conclusion there will be waltzing on the lawn.

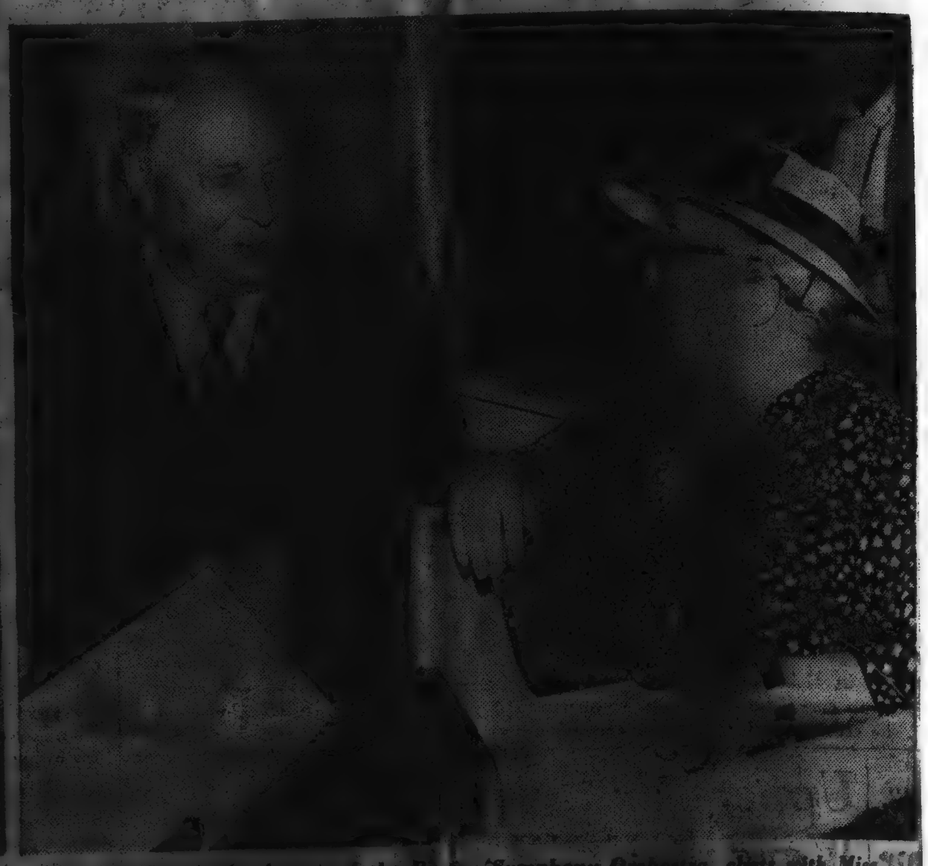
Tickets for Tanglewood on Parade are now on sale at the box-office.

[108]

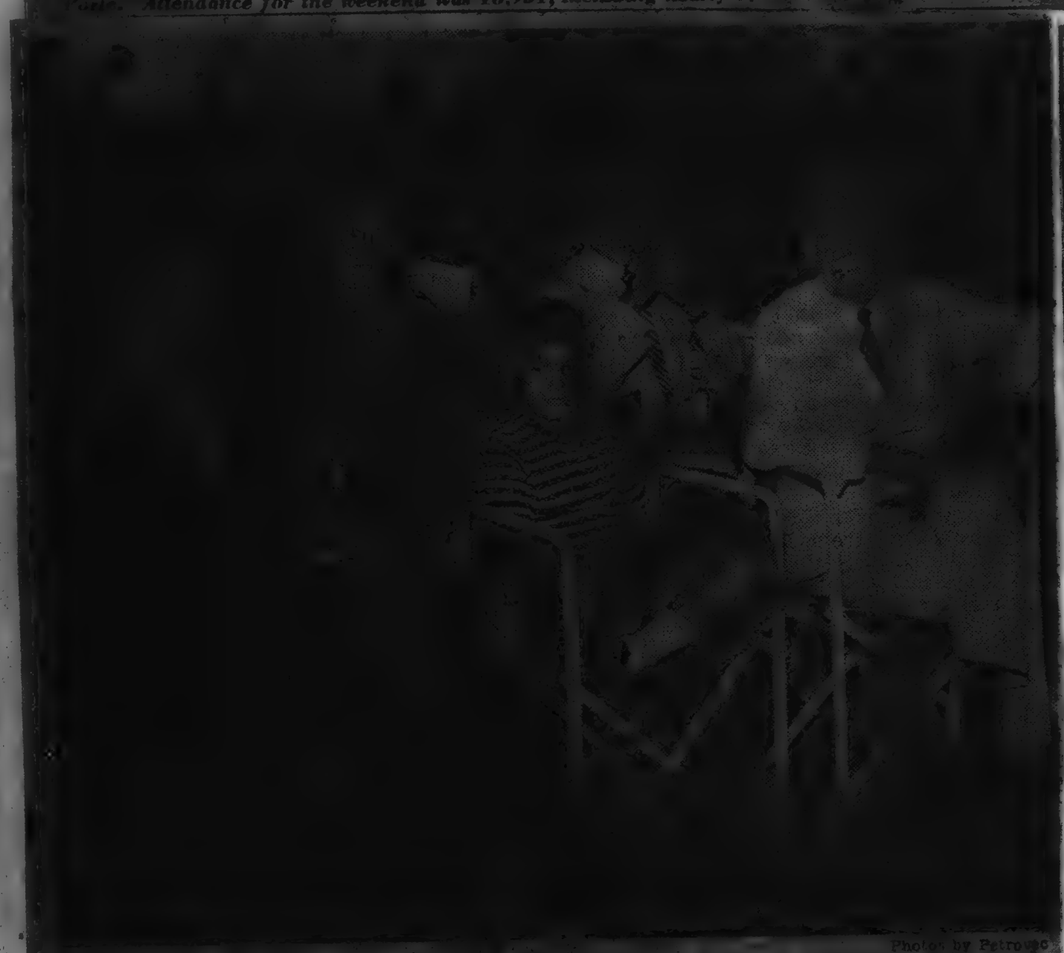


Guests of Governor's Councilor Bruce Crane and Mrs. Crane in their box at yesterday's concert were Robert T. Capeless, former mayor of Pittsfield; Mrs. Capeless, Miss Martha Poncy of Lenox and R. Lucien LaPorte of Los Angeles, Calif. Left to right, front, are Mrs. Capeless, Mrs. Crane and Miss Poncy; rear, Mr. Capeless, Mr. Crane and Mr. LaPorte. Attendance for the weekend was 18,951, including nearly 7,000 Sunday afternoon.

Among Boxholders at Tanglewood



Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, chats with Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of New York and Glendale during intermission. Miss Robinson Smith was the prime mover behind original plan for outdoor concerts in the Berkshires and president of Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc., under whose auspices first concert was held Aug. 23, 1934, at [illegible] Stockbridge.



Photos by Petrowic

George E. Judd of Canonsville, N.Y., at right, retired manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was among boxholders for the opening main Shed concerts at Tanglewood this weekend. With him yesterday were his son, William M. Judd of New York and Glendale, vice president of Columbia Artists management; grandson, Jeffrey Judd, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Judd Jr. of New York. In back row are Mrs. Judd, and John Wilson of New York.

MONTEUX AT 81 LEADS CONCERT AT TANGLEWOOD

Veteran Conductor Is Star As 6996 Attend Program

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 22—Pierre Monteux, 81 years old, was the bright particular star of the concert this afternoon, a concert which drew 6996 people to the shed and grounds. It was the first pleasant day we had had during the week end and music lovers made the most of it.

Presides With Vigor

It is always a rewarding experience to listen to a concert conducted by Monteux and when he is conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra, it is a doubly interesting experience. He carries his 81 years easily and it seemed to this listener that he presided with greater vigor than last season.

He opened the program with a glittering performance of the overture "L'Italiana in Algeri." There was a wonderful humor and rhythm in the reading and a perfect comprehension of its spirit.

Bartok's "Concerto for Orch-

Continued On Page 5

Monteux at 81

Continued From Page 1

estra" is a work to test the metal of any conductor. Many have tried it, but it is doubtful if many have produced so lucid, detailed and flexible a reading as we heard this afternoon. The work was written at the behest of Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston players know it well. They have the virtuosity to meet all its demands. Thus one listened to a performance that was as spectacular as it was musical.

Brings Ardor

It is a long way from Schubert to Bartok, but in his reading of Schubert's "Symphony in C Major, No. 7," Mr. Monteux brought the same ardor and beauty of detail that he had brought to the Bartok. He conducts with a minimum of gesture these days, but every gesture has a meaning and it in turn is translated by the players. Schubert had six symphonies in back of him and in the seventh he gave from the whole maturity of his being, while there is still the enchanting melodic moments.

There is in this work a depth of feeling and a sense of sobriety above the others. The performance had dignity, grace and charm.

Tomorrow night the second chamber music concert devoted to contemporary composers will be given as a gift from the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago. Wednesday night the Beaux Arts Trio will play works of Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms.

N. Y. Critic Conten... Tanglewood Se... Same Old Che...

Some of the musica... grams being offered a... glewood in Lenox this s... are coming in for a l... more than the usual cr... tion by some of the n... critics. One of the New Y... writers yesterday conte... that if the orchestra... played do not show "con... ably more variety wit... year or so the Berkshi... sic Festival will cease to ... tion as a legitimate ar... enterprise. Year in, ye... the same chestnuts ... warmed, the same tire... es played over and ... again."

This critic says "It ... as if the whole ope... were meant simply to ... cate the Boston Sym... Orchestra's winter ac... its home town." He ... that recent reference to ... glewood as "Brahms ... in air" provided a phra... apt as it is painfully ...

Other Attitudes

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., WEDNESDAY, JULY 25, 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
New Englander
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 9,100
JUL 1956

Boston Symphony Soviet Tour

During its tour of Europe this year, the Boston Symphony Orchestra will spend six days in Soviet Russia.

The new stop was added to the tour when an invitation from the Ministry of Culture in Moscow was transmitted to the Orchestra's manager, Thomas D. Perry, Jr.

The Berkshire Festival is offering the Music Shed concerts again this year, plus Bach-Mozart concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, and other chamber concerts. Benny Goodman will play in the Mozart Clarinet Concerto. The Festival runs from July through August.

Fiedler Returning to Lenox At 'Tanglewood On Parade'

Lenox, July 24—Arthur Fiedler, the popular maestro of the Boston "Pops" Orchestra for the past 27 years, will return to Lenox to conduct the third consecutive summer appearance by the Boston "pops" at this year's "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, to be held this year on Thursday, Aug. 9.

Fiedler is currently in San Francisco, where for the sixth consecutive season he is in charge of the Art Commission Pop Concerts in San Francisco's Civic Auditorium. At the end of July he flies from San Francisco to Boston for a few days of rest before flying to Miami to conduct the University of Miami Pops on Aug. 5. Four days later he conducts at "Tanglewood on Parade," and then immediately flies back to San Francisco to conclude the season there late in August.

At their "Tanglewood on Parade" appearance Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will perform a Suite from the ballet "LaBoutique Fantasque," arranged by Respighi from music by Rossini; the Gershwin Piano Concerto in F with Jesus Maria Sanroma as soloist; and Ravel's "Bolero."

During the afternoon, simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments — student symphony and chamber music (Dept. I), chorus (Dept. II), original compositions (Dept. III), opera (Dept. IV), and the amateur division or Tanglewood Study Group (Dept. V).

109

Among Boxholders at Tanglewood

Guests of Governor's Councilor Bruce Crane and Mrs. Crane in their box at yesterday's concert were Robert T. Capeless, former mayor of Pittsfield, Mrs. Capeless, Miss Marthe Poncy of Lenox and R. Lucien LaPorte of Los Angeles, Calif. Left to right, front, are Mrs. Capeless, Mrs. Crane and Miss Poncy; rear, Mr. Capeless, Mr. Crane and Mr. LaPorte. Attendance for the weekend was 18,951, including nearly 7,000 Sunday afternoon.

Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, chats with Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of New York and Glendale during intermission. Miss Robinson Smith was the prime mover behind original plan for outdoor concerts in the Berkshires and president of Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., under whose auspices first concert was held Aug. 23, 1934, at Hanna farm, Stockbridge.

Photos by Petrowec

George E. Judd of Canonsville, N.Y., at right, retired manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was among boxholders for the opening main Shed concerts at Tanglewood this weekend. With him yesterday were his son, William M. Judd of New York and Glendale, vice president of Columbia Artists management; grandson, Jeffrey Judd, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Judd Jr. of New York. In back row are Mrs. Judd, and John Wilson of New York.

MONTEUX AT 81 LEADS CONCERT AT TANGLEWOOD

Veteran Conductor Is Star As 6996 Attend Program

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 22—Pierre Monteux, 81 years old, was the bright particular star of the concert this afternoon, a concert which drew 6996 people to the shed and grounds. It was the first pleasant day we had had during the week end and music lovers made the most of it.

Presides With Vigor

It is always a rewarding experience to listen to a concert conducted by Monteux and when he is conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra, it is a doubly interesting experience. He carries his 81 years easily and it seemed to this listener that he presided with greater vigor than last season.

He opened the program with a glittering performance of the overture "L'Italiana in Algeri." There was a wonderful humor and rhythm in the reading and a perfect comprehension of its spirit.

Bartok's "Concerto for Orch-

Continued On Page 8

Monteux at 81

Continued From Page 1

estra" is a work to test the metal of any conductor. Many have tried it, but it is doubtful if many have produced so lucid, detailed and flexible a reading as we heard this afternoon. The work was written at the behest of Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston players know it well. They have the virtuosity to meet all its demands. Thus one listened to a performance that was as spectacular as it was musical.

Brings Ardor

It is a long way from Schubert to Bartok, but in his reading of Schubert's "Symphony in C Major, No. 7," Mr. Monteux brought the same ardor and beauty of detail that he had brought to the Bartok. He conducts with a minimum of gesture these days, but every gesture has a meaning and it in turn is translated by the players. Schubert had six symphonies in back of him and in the seventh he gave from the whole maturity of his being, while there is still the enchanting melodic moments.

There is in this work a depth of feeling and a sense of sobriety above the others. The performance had dignity, grace and charm.

Tomorrow night the second chamber music concert devoted to contemporary composers will be given as a gift from the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago. Wednesday night the Beaux Arts Trio will play works of Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms.

N. Y. Critic Contend... Tanglewood Ser... Same Old Chest...

Some of the musical ... grams being offered at T... glewood in Lenox this se... are coming in for a l... more than the usual cu... tion by some of the ... critics. One of the New Y... writers yesterday conte... that if the orchestra w... played do not show "con... ably more variety with... year or so the Berkshire ... sic Festival will cease to ... tion as a legitimate ar... enterprise. Year in, year ... the same chestnuts are ... warmed, the same tired p... es played over and ... again."

This critic says "It ... as if the whole opera... were meant simply to ... cate the Boston Symph... Orchestra's winter season ... its home town." He ... that recent reference to T... glewood as "Brahms burs... in air" provided a phrase ... apt as it is painfully true."

Other Attitudes

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
New Englander
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 9,100
JUL 1956

Boston Symphony Soviet Tour

During its tour of Europe this year, the Boston Symphony Orchestra will spend six days in Soviet Russia.

The new stop was added to the tour when an invitation from the Ministry of Culture in Moscow was transmitted to the Orchestra's manager, Thomas D. Perry, Jr.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
THE ETUDE
BRYN MAWR, PA.
JUL 1956

The Berkshire Festival is offering the Music Shed concerts again this year, plus Bach-Mozart concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, and other chamber concerts. Benny Goodman will play in the Mozart Clarinet Concerto. The Festival runs from July through August.

[109]

Fiedler Returning to Lenox At 'Tanglewood On Parade'

Lenox, July 24—Arthur Fiedler, the popular maestro of the Boston "Pops" Orchestra for the past 27 years, will return to Lenox to conduct the third consecutive summer appearance by the Boston "pops" at this year's "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, to be held this year on Thursday, Aug. 9.

Fiedler is currently in San Francisco, where for the sixth consecutive season he is in charge of the Art Commission Pop Concerts in San Francisco's Civic Auditorium. At the end of July he flies from San Francisco to Boston for a few days of rest before flying to Miami to conduct the University of Miami Pops on Aug. 5. Four days later he conducts at "Tanglewood on Parade," and then immediately flies back to San Francisco to conclude the season there late in August.

At their "Tanglewood on Parade" appearance Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will perform a Suite from the ballet "LaBoutique Fantasque," arranged by Respighi from music by Rossini; the Gershwin Piano Concerto in F with Jesus Maria Sanroma as soloist; and Ravel's "Bolero."

During the afternoon, simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments — student symphony and chamber music (Dept. I), chorus (Dept. II), original compositions (Dept. III), opera (Dept. IV), and the amateur division, or Tanglewood Study Group (Dept. V).

Berkshire Music Festival

Pierre Monteux Conducts Boston Symphony Concert

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 22.—For all his eighty years, Pierre Monteux has more vitality than most sprites of five. Conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra this afternoon for the first time in Tanglewood's current season he displayed, as ever, the kind of musical vigor that makes a younger man cringe with envy. And his program was no four beats-to-the-measure snap, for it included Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra," Schubert's Symphony in C Major, No. 7, and, as an appetizer, Rossini's Overture to the opera "L'Italiana in Algeri."

Straightaway it can be safely said that the orchestra was at the height of its form and played for Maitre Monteux with all the zest of which it is capable. As is commonly known, the Bartok Concerto is a virtuoso vehicle demanding that every last man involved in it be a star, and since every last man in the Boston ensemble is just that the performance went like the wind. Indeed, never in my experience—not even in the golden days of Koussevitzky—have I heard the brasses work with such extraordinary precision, such grand sonority and fiery elegance.

And by no means did they stand alone. In their perfection they were equaled by every choir in the band, which condition led, inevitably, to a rendition that held the attention like a vise.

A Musical Feast

As a whole, in fact, the performance was seeded with precisely the kind of hidden energy and inner tension that makes every idea emerge as taut as a fiddle string without seeming at the same time nervous and edgy. Thus, Mr. Monteux's reading was at once tight and ample, rigidly controlled, yet liberal in its communicative direction. It was a feat and a feast—nothing less.

As regards the Schubert C Major, I suspect that those accustomed to hearing the work played as though its composer were a steaming, raging tyrant a la Beethoven were disappointed. But for others, among whom I count myself, Mr. Monteux's lack of hysteria, his refusal to grow wild-eyed, served as a tonic. In his hands the contours of the symphony grew, they did not explode, for his interpretation was serene though not wan, silken though not soft. In all, then, it was an afternoon to stir the senses and freshen the hearing.

Last night's event held in the midst of intermittent rainfall and Siberian weather, was largely devoted to a concert version of the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure," played and sung in its entirety by the Boston Symphony under Charles Munch, with Margaret Harshaw as Sieglinde, Albert Da Costa as Siegmund and James Pease as Hunding. Preceding it had come Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques"—which in 1955 received the New York Music Critics' Girls prize as the best new orchestral composition of the year—and Samuel Barber's lovely and limpid Adagio for Strings.

Soloists Excellent

In essence, the concert was mainly marked by the brilliance of its execution. Personally, I hold to the view that the opening act of "Walkure" is Wagner's finest single effort and its performance by an orchestra that trafficks in opera but rarely was a thoroughly gratifying experience. Moreover, the soloists of the occasion outdid themselves to provide the work with the power, pace, drama and sentiment that is its native due.

Mr. Da Costa, for example, is not yet a finished artist. But he is literally alight with wondrous Wagnerian potentials. His tenor is big, brave, clangorous, and his feeling for the German style admirable. He is not reduced to barking or bellowing to receive attention, as his voice, even at the mezzo-piano level, has remarkable carrying power and a firm core of resonance. Theatrical temperament, however, he lacks at present, and his recounting of Siegmund's narratives as a result was sometimes a mite pallid. Still, his coloring of such a line as the crucial one commencing "Nun weisst du fragend frau" indicated that seasoning is all he wants to toss him headlong into the top ranks of Wagner heroes.

Miss Harshaw Pleases

Miss Harshaw is also a Wagnerian from crown to toe and though her Sieglinde was in several moments a bit glacial in expressivity, in its over-all significance she made a fine show. Her tones reached out to the rafters, echoin gthroughout the music shed even in competition with some hundred instrumentalists fighting her with every forte at their command.

And as for Mr. Pease, he has grown so during his residence in Europe that his basso is no longer recognizable as the voice one had come to know several seasons ago at the New York City Center. It has deepened, become enriched and looms now as an aural thunderclap. I suggest that the Metropolitan had better hear him at once before he returns to foreign places.

For the rest, Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" remain to these ears a puzzling work. Indeed, I find it oddly unmoving and impersonal, despite the craft of its construction and the wizardry of its orchestration. To me it seems an ill-assorted collection of isolated effects, a melange cluttered with bizarre elements that do not fit together in any way. But it was played to the hilt by Mr. Munch and his colleagues, a fact which almost succeeded in blanketing the piece's strangely patchwork progress and quality.

Face-Lifting Needed?

Tanglewood's Worn Face

(Jay S. Harrison, writing in the New York Herald Tribune)

There seems little use in ducking the issue any longer—if the orchestral programs given at Tanglewood do not show considerably more variety within a year or so the Berkshire Music Festival will cease to function as a legitimate artistic enterprise. Year in, year out the same chestnuts are rewarmed, the same tired pieces played over and over again.

It seems indeed, as if the whole operation were meant simply to duplicate the Boston Symphony Orchestra's winter season in its home town and New York. I cannot recall which of the Herald Tribune book reviewers put it in print, but recently in pointing to Tanglewood he referred to it as "Brahms bursting in air." The phrase is as apt as it is painfully true; the contemporary spirit is as alien to the Berkshire Music Festival as it is to a brocaded Victorian sofa.

Last night [July 20], for example, the series entered its current major phase with a concert in the Music Shed played by the Boston Orchestra under Charles Munch's direction. For the event, a program was served up for 6,000 listeners that for sheer lack of imagination balks description. It began with Berlioz' "Roman Carnival" Overture, continued with Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun," Ravel's Second "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite and concluded with Brahms' Symphony No. 2, in D major.

Granted, these are all great works, staples of the repertory, marvels of their kind. But to ask an audience to travel hundreds of miles to hear them performed is sheer effrontery and nothing less. There is not a radio station throughout the land that does not, through first-rate recordings, air them once weekly at least, and symphonic groups from coast to coast give them hearings at regular intervals.

Why, then should America's leading music festival do precisely what every hamlet does equally as well? To this writer it makes not a shred of sense, since Tanglewood was never founded to serve as a hazy carbon copy of the Boston Symphony's winter season. It was meant to act as a vivifying force, a modern trumpet blast in the still night of the orchestral unproductive summer months. And unless directors of this formerly forward-look festival begin to insert new or untried works in its program scheme I cannot see how it will continue to attract the visitors it needs for its financial support.

As a counter argument there are those who may insist that the Boston men make up no ordinary band, that any performance it gives is worth a lengthy trip over hot coals. And there is, of course, no questioning the virtuoso wonders of the group. Last night, the Berlioz overture was set down as a real carnival and a ringingly Italian one at that. As always Mr. Munch sought out the wild theatrical contrasts implied by the score's sudden alterations of dynamic and color, and the result was a shotgun blast of teeming orchestral sound. Conversely, the Debussy Prelude was sensuous, sultry and languid — exquisitely right in its sonority and detail. And the following "Daphnis and Chloe" brought forth surges of gorgeous sound such as aural dreams are made of. It was, all told, a glowing fresco of unbelievably vivid color, with every member of the orchestra offering a brilliant tonal dab of his own.

The Brahms, however, I found gray, lifeless and sluggish, the combination resulting in a generally dispiriting reading. But even if it had rocked the skies, it would not have rubbed the curse from a program familiar to the point of embarrassment.

No doubt about it. Tanglewood is in desperate need of an esthetic face-lifting. It is beginning to show its age; it has begun to grow haggard and worn.

Berkshire Eagle, Tuesday, July 24, 1956

VARIETY

Wednesday, July 25, 1956

Bostonians Hit Russian Cities

Boston, July 24.

Boston Symphony will play 37 concerts in 13 countries, including Russia, during its five and one-half week tour starting next month. Charles Munch and 106 men fly to Europe in two groups immediately following the close of the orchestra's current Berkshire Festival on Aug. 12.

Opener: concerts in Cork, Ireland, Friday night, Aug. 24, followed by a matinee in Dublin the next day. Then five concerts at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, as part of the Edinburgh Festival, Aug. 26-30. After that Scandinavia for four days.

Bostonians will be first American symph to perform in the Soviet Union. During six days, Sept. 5-10, a brace of concerts will be given in Leningrad and Moscow, respectively.

Expenses of this portion of the tour will be assumed by the Russian government, including transportation by air and train, and also a stipend for the four concerts. After Russia Hubsters hit Prague, Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres, Leeds, and London.

Tour was traffic-managed here this week by Thomas D. Perry, orch manager, and Dolf C. Bulterman, N. E. manager of KLM Royal Dutch Airlines.

Music

Two Works Are Premiered At Fromm Chamber Concert

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE SECOND of two contemporary chamber music concerts donated to the Berkshire Music Center by the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago was played in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood last night. As on the previous evening, the program included two works commissioned by the Foundation, of which one, again, was by a former student of the Center.

The two new compositions were a quintet for five instruments by Leland Smith of the University of Chicago's music department and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments by Cuban composer Julian Orbon, who was a Berkshire Music Center student in 1946. It was the first performance of both compositions.

* * *

THE REST of the program consisted of De Falla's concerto for harpsichord, in which Sylvia Marlowe was soloist; Goffredo Petrassi's Sonata da Camera, which the composer, guest of the composition faculty at the Center this season, conducted; Samuel Barber's "Summer Music"; and Milhaud's "Cantata de l'Enfant and de la Mere," in which the poem by Maurice Careme, was recited by Norma Farber.

Beyond the immediate enjoyment of the program there were several factors for which all concerned are indebted to Paul Fromm and the Foundation which he established and maintains. The Foundation in these two concerts provided something at Tanglewood which would otherwise not have been supplied: One is to offer the students of the school the opportunity to hear, well-played and prepared, more currently written music, some even by their former classmates; and second, to support and encourage composers, and give them an additional forum upon which to be heard under auspices about as favorable as they could hope for. The general over-all stimulus such an enterprise provides is not calulable.

NOT ALL the music was pleasant; some was interesting, some instructive. Only a few combined both of these essentials. The two prize compositions were by men, both born in 1925. Orbon's Hymn, for the performance of which the composer came from his home in Cuba only two days ago, is for a soprano solo, in which Marjorie McClung filled the role, with an accompaniment of eight instruments, conducted by Seymour Lipkin. This was written with devotion and sincerity and an excellent sense of sonority. There was nothing of a pioneering nature in it but the performance was first-rate and accounted in some degree for the hearty acceptance which it received and which the composer came to the stage to share with the performers.

* * *

SMITH'S QUINTET was less comprehensible. It was blotchy and lacking in linear direction. We could not discern its harmonic structure from the performance, even though conductor Ingolf Dahl kept the artists apparently in its intended unity. Mr. Smith uses metronomic markings to denote movement character, instead of the more common Italian or English designations. Smith, himself a bassoonist, wrote for his instrument with string quartet. One might have expected a little more favoritism.

Petrassi's sonata for harpsichord, with an orchestra of 10 instruments, would have benefited by the use of a larger clavecin, or the substitution of a harp or even a piano. This would also have applied to the De Falla concerto. Petrassi's music is thoroughly sophisticated and is no longer the tentative groping of a man uncertain of his powers or his terrain. He stays within modest limits so far as the technique of his composition is concerned, and the performance reflected both the players' interest in the music and their artistic sympathy.

[110]

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., TUESDAY, JULY 24, 1956

LENOX LIBRARY OFFERS INVITING ONE-MAN SHOW

New Art Exhibitions Also Seen at Tanglewood and Festival House

By WAYNE C. SMITH

Lenox, July 23—Additional value is being given to the season's exhibition program here through the new shows which recently opened at the Lenox Library, the reception hall at Tanglewood's main gate and at Festival House.

The exhibitions which opened at the library during the week end are especially inviting as they include a one-man show of paintings by Harry Lane of State Line and a group of sculptures by Homer Gunn of West Stockbridge.

Fresh Subject Selection

Lane works entirely in a representational vein but his paintings always are found fresh in subject selection and treatment and masterful in technique. Included in the present show is a group of paintings in which the subjects are marvelously painted floral vignettes and include "Cyclamen," "Boulders and Berries," "Hollyhocks," "In the Meadow" and "Columbine."

Then there is a group of still lifes including two autumn bouquets and "Festive Laurel' having unusual arrangements, the contrasting portraits of a "Centenarian" and "Child Asleep" and the landscape, "Spring Morning."

Gunn's sculpture, handsomely carved from wood, introduces movement into the traditional sculptural elements of form and space. And he has done so successfully, especially in "Flurry" and "Swallows." "Wounded Bird" is a wonderfully conceived work showing a commendable spirit of invention along with tradition.

The exhibition arranged by the Berkshire Museum for this week in Tanglewood's "Glass Fish Bowl" includes a selection of paintings by Ralph Berkowitz taken from his one-man show at the Pittsfield museum. This should provide considerable interest among the students and staff at Tanglewood as the artist is dean of the music school there.

This exhibition was fully reviewed when it opened at the Berkshire Museum the first of the month and needs no further comment here except to mention that the artist's work is generally based on traditional material of the 20th-century movement but he has used traditions only as points of departure for his own creative ends.

FOURTH WEEK AT TANGLEWOOD

Concerts Wednesday, Friday, Saturday, Sunday

Lenox, July 23—The fourth week of the Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood opens with a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Ravel and Brahms by the Beaux Arts Trio Wednesday night in the Theater-Concert Hall. This will be followed by concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed on Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon.

Rudolf Serkin, celebrated concert pianist, will be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor with the orchestra Saturday night. Concerts are at 8.30 p. m. Fridays and Saturdays and at 2.30 p. m. Sundays.

The programs:

Wednesday, July 25
Trio in D minor ..... Mendelssohn
Trio in A minor ..... Ravel
Trio in C minor ..... Brahms
The Beaux Arts Trio
(Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano)

Friday, July 27
Overture, "Leonore," No. 2 Beethoven
Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5 Petrassi
Symphony No. 5, in F minor ..... Tchaikovsky
Charles Munch, Conductor

Saturday, July 28
Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky ..... Hanson
Piano Concerto in A minor Schumann
Soloist: Rudolf Serkin
Symphony No. 5 ..... Honegger
"La Mer" ..... Debussy
Charles Munch, Conductor

Sunday, July 29
"Romeo and Juliet," Suite No. 2 ..... Prokofieff
Violin Concerto ..... Hindemith
Soloist: Ruth Posselt
Symphony No. 1, in D major Mahler
Richard Burgin, Conductor

RETURNING to Tanglewood after making their debut at the Berkshire Festival last year are these members of the Beaux Arts Trio who will be heard in a chamber music concert tomorrow night at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall, left to right, Daniel Guiletz, violin; Menahem Pressler, piano, and Bernard Greenhouse, cello. The Beaux Arts Trio also will give a concert Saturday afternoon, Aug. 4, at 3:30 at the South Mountain Temple of Music in Pittsfield.

Beaux Arts Trio On Tanglewood Stage Tomorrow

The fourth of this season's series of six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts at Tanglewood, will be given tomorrow night in the Theater-Concert Hall when the Beaux Arts Trio (Menahem Pressler, piano; Daniel Guilet, violin; and Bernard Greenhouse, cello) returns after its Tanglewood debut last summer to perform trios by Mendelssohn (in D minor), Ravel (in A minor) and Brahms (in C minor).

The Beaux Arts Trio is an ensemble new to American concert life, although its individual members are musicians with long and distinguished careers as concert artists. Daniel Guilet came to the United States in 1941 after an extensive European career as a soloist and ensemble performer. Since 1951 he has been concertmaster of the former NBC Symphony Orchestra, now known as the Symphony of the Air.

Since his Town Hall debut in 1947 Bernard Greenhouse has performed in recital with orchestra and in chamber music ensembles in most of the principal cities in both Europe and America. In addition to his annual tours he is on the faculties of both the Juilliard and Manhattan Schools of Music.

Won Debussy Prize

The young Israeli pianist, Menahem Pressler, first gained international renown when he won the Debussy prize at the age of 17, after flying from Tel Aviv to San Francisco especially for the contest. He has since become a familiar figure on the concert stages of the United States, Europe and Asia.

On Friday evening Dr. Charles Munch will inaugurate the second weekend of concerts in the Music Shed by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra. Dr. Munch will again be on the podium for the Saturday evening concert when Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Schumann Piano Concerto, which has been programmed to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the composer's death.

Sunday afternoon Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a program which will feature his wife, Ruth Posselt, as soloist in the Violin Concerto by Hindemith.

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through Aug. 12
Berkshire Festival
BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
Next Wed., July 25 (Theater) at 8:30—The Beaux Arts Trio
Shed Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra
FRI. July 27, at 8:30—BEETHOVEN—PETRASSI—TCHAIKOVSKY (MUNCH)
SAT., July 28, 8:30—HANSON—SCHUMANN—HONEGGER—DEBUSSY (MUNCH)
Soloist: Rudolph Serkin, Piano
SUN., July 29, at 2:30—PROKOFIEFF—HINDEMITH—MAHLER (BURGIN)
Soloist: Ruth Posselt, Violin
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—Thurs. Aug. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestra—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma, Piano
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

HERALD TRIBUNE, WEDNESDAY, JULY 25, 1956

[111]

FROMM CONCERT GIVEN AT LENOX

Program Under Foundation's Auspices Offers Works by Orbon and Leland Smith

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 23—Contemporary music can be fun. The number of attractive pieces on a program of chamber music presented at Tanglewood tonight was gratifying.

It must have been especially pleasing to Paul Fromm, founder of the Fromm Music Foundation, who came from Chicago to hear the concert. This was the second at Tanglewood this season under the auspices of the Fromm Foundation, and from all reliable accounts the superior one.

Mr. Fromm is as worthy of attention in his own right as the cause he espouses. He is in the wine business, a man who found a refuge and a good life in this country. He loves music and has a passionate conviction that the living composer deserves encouragement and support. His foundation, built out of the fruits of his success in America, is dedicated to this work.

On tonight's program, there were first performances of two works commissioned by the Fromm Foundation. One might be called a hit; the other a miss.

"Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) by Julian Orbon, Cuban composer, turned out to be a personally felt, touching score.

A Quintet for Bassoon and Strings by Leland Smith, American composer, was a dreary work without any semblance of individuality.

Mr. Orbon, who, like Mr. Smith, was born in 1925, came from Havana to hear his brief work performed tonight. This was his second visit to Tanglewood; he was here ten years ago as a composition student with Aaron Copland.

The young Cuban's hymn, scored for soprano, string quartet, harp, flute, oboe and clarinet, is in the conservative vein of late romanticism. He employs this idiom with a naturalness that gives his music not only validity but eloquence. He knows how to be concise and expressive.

Marjorie McClung, soprano, and members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Seymour Lipkin, gave the work an affecting perforance.

Goffredo Petrassi, this year's guest composer on the Berkshire Music Center faculty, was represented by his Sonata da Camera. This piece, written in 1948, is scored for harpsichord and a small contingent of strings and woodwinds. It has a style of its own; if one were compelled to identify it more closely, one would say it reflects the influence of Stravinsky playing over eighteenth-century Italian lightness and precision.

As one of Italy's principal composers today, the 52-year-old Petrassi has used the twelve-tone system on occasion, but has never been slavish in his devotion to it. He has a meticulous ear for color and sonority, and while his style is not expansive, it interests and disarms the listener.

The composer was a modest and effective conductor tonight, and Sylvia Marlowe was at the harpsichord.

Samuel Barber's "Summer Music," written last year, was utterly winning. Scored for flute, oboe, clarinet, bassoon and French horn, this ten-minute work is a twentieth-century version of the serenade.

Two hundred years ago, occasional pieces like this could go on for six, seven and eight movements, but we think we need to be in a hurry, and Mr. Barber has wisely tailored his music to suit our tempo. Nevertheless, his little work sings from beginning to end, giving each of the instruments charming things to do. The first-desk players of the Boston Symphony gave the piece a delightful performance.

The program began and ended with two of the established figures of the contemporary scene.

De Falla's Concerto for Harpsichord, with Miss Marlowe as Soloist, started the evening, reminding us that the Spaniard at 50 was striking out on new grounds. The music has an odd effectiveness, with its alternating bits of lyricism and short-breathed staccato phrases.

Darius Milhaud's "Cantate de L'Enfant et de la Mer," with Mrs. Norma Farber as the reciter, rounded out a full and often rewarding concert.

Tanglewood Tales

Tanglewood's opera department is concentrating its major effort of the summer on Lukas Foss' three-act opera "Griffelkin," which students of Boris Goldovsky, who is staging the work, will perform with alternate casts on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 6 and 7. The composer, a member of the Berkshire Music Center's composition department since 1946, will conduct both performances in the Theater-Concert Hall. As has been the case with all past productions of the Berkshire Music Center opera department, admission to the "Griffelkin" performances will be by special tickets, available only to those who, by joining the Friends' organization, help support the summer music school of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Seats may now be reserved by inquiry to the Friends' office at Tanglewood, or by telephoning Lenox 600.

* * *

As a preview to the staged performances of "Griffelkin," composer Foss will lead the symphony orchestra of 100 scholarship students in a suite from his score at the weekly concert tomorrow. The orchestra which performs for the opera will be composed of members of the same student body.

* * *

"Griffelkin" uses a large cast, some 15 principals, a chorus of 9, and some 30 dancers who appear but do not sing. It is scheduled for European production in Stuttgart, Berlin and Stockholm after Tanglewood, and encouraged by the success of their collaboration, Mr. Foss and Mr. Reid hope to do further work together. Of the TV presentation, Howard Taubman, music critic of the New York Times, wrote: "The piece moves, and the orchestra is full of gay and fanciful comment, written with sureness of effect and telling transparency. In the second act, Mr. Foss achieves something more touching—a mood and an emotion that touch the heart."

Ground Breaking at Shadowbrook Will Attract Church Dignitaries

LENOX — Church dignitaries from all New England dioceses, headed by Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston, will participate in ground breaking ceremonies Tuesday for Shadowbrook—the new Jesuit Novitiate here, which will replace the building destroyed by fire on March 10.

1,500 To Attend

More than 1,500 relatives and friends of the Jesuits will attend the exercises. Formal ceremonies will be held first at Tanglewood in the Music Shed, provided by the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Ceremonies will conclude with the actual ground breaking on the adjacent Jesuit property at the site of the new Novitiate near the ruins of the old building.

Archbishop Cushing will deliver the principal address. Eight members of the New England Hierarchy will be present.

Ground breaking will be performed by the Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, D.D., bishop of the Springfield Diocese.

The Very Rev. William E. FitzGerald, S.J., provincial of the New England Province of the Society of Jesus, will deliver the salutation.

Anniversary Date

Although the appeal for $3,000,000 to rebuild Shadowbrook is only two-thirds completed, construction will begin on Tuesday—a day of deep significance to the Jesuits. July 31st will mark the 400th anniversary of the death of St. Ignatius of Loyola, founder of the Society of Jesus.

Joseph E. Sullivan of Lowell, national chairman of the fund campaign, will report on progress of the appeal. He announced yesterday that to date 11,000 donors have contributed $2,045,000.

The Rev. George V. McCabe, S.J., will introduce the campaign area chairmen and co-chairmen. These include:

Lawrence T. Callahan, North Shore area; Robert T. Capeless, Berkshire area; John P. Cooney, Jr., Rhode Island area; John E. Fenton, executive board; Charles J. Fleming, Worcester area; E. Clayton Gengras, Hartford area; William S. Ginn, Berkshire area; Thomas J. Groark, Norwich area; Thomas W. Grzebien, Jr., Rhode Island area; Dr. Solomon G. Hajjar, Merrimack Valley area.

Also John F. Havens, Hartford area; George J. Jacob, New Haven area; James V. Joy, Fairfield County area; James B. Kelley, Jr., Bristol County area; Dr. James J. Kelley, Rhode Island area; Judge Daniel M. Keyes, Jr., Springfield area; John A. Largay, Waterbury area; Daniel E. Marshall, Maine area; James J. Marshall, Worcester area; Adm. Edmond J. Moran, Fairfield County area; Dr. Richard L. Murphy, New Hampshire area; Harry J. O'Sullivan, Brockton area; Robert H. Ryan, special gifts, Boston; and Walter F. Sullivan, Central Massachusetts area.

Memorial Service

Following the ground breaking, a memorial service will be held at the graves of the four Jesuits who perished in the Shadowbrook fire. Archbishop Cushing will lead the prayers for the dead.

Berkshire Eagle, Wednesday, July 25, 1956—

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through Aug. 12

Berkshire Festival
BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

Next Wed., July 25 (Theater) at 8:30—The Beaux Arts Trio

Shed Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra

FRI. July 27, at 8:30—BEETHOVEN—PETRASSI—TCHAIKOVSKY (MUNCH)
SAT., July 28, 8:30—HANSON—SCHUMANN—HONEGGER—DEBUSSY (MUNCH)
Soloist: Rudolph Serkin, Piano
SUN., July 29, at 2:30—PROKOFIEFF—HINDEMITH—MAHLER (BURGIN)
Soloist: Ruth Posselt, Violin
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)

"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—Thurs. Aug. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestra—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma, Piano

TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Chamber music. The Beaux Arts Trio. Theater-Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox.

Petrovec

PRINCIPALS in last night's performance of Mozart's Don Giovanni (scenes from Act 1) presented by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center were, left to right, Don Giovanni, played by John Parella of Philadelphia, Pa.; Don Ottavio, Hal Roberts of Cambria Heights, N.Y.; Donna Ana, Lynn Rasmussen of Kenosha, Wis.; Donna Elvira, Madeline Palmer of Manchester, N.H.

[112]

Week's Events At Tanglewood

The ofurth week of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., opens tonight with a concert by the Beaux Arts Trio (Menahem Pressler, pianist; Daniel Guilet, violinist, and Bernard Greenhouse, cellist). Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concerts on Friday and Saturday nights, with Rudolph Serkin as soloist on the latter date in Schumann's Piano Concerto. Richard Burgin will conduct Sunday afternoon's Boston Symphony conetrt, with his wife, Ruth Posselt, violinist, as soloist in a Hindemith violin concerto.

The Boston Symphony and the Boston "Pops" Orchestras will give the evening concert in the "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit on Thursday, Aug. 9, with Heitor Villa-Lobos and Arthur Fiedler conducting. Jesus Maria Sanroma wil lbe soloist in Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F.

There will also be performances by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center at 4 p. m. and at 6 p. m., following a welcoming address at 5:45 by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the center. There will be singing by the Tanglewood Chorus under Hugh Ross at 7 p. m., during a period set aside for picnic suppers on the lawn. Dancing on the lawn will follow the concert.

Munch, Monteux to Share Podium at Tanglewood

Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux will share podium honors at Tanglewood this weekend as the Berkshire Festival programs move into the huge Music Shed.

* * *

DR. MUNCH will direct the programs tonight and tomorrow night and Mr. Monteux will direct the Sunday afternoon program. Evening programs are 8:30 o'clock and afternoon programs open at 2:30 p.m.

Last season the 12 Shed concerta attracted a total attendance of 108,336 for an average of 9,028 or one and a half times the seating capacity (6,000). The overflow picnicked on the Tanglewood lawns.

Tonight's program will include the Berlioz "Roman Carnival" overture; Debussy's "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun"; the second suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe" and Brahms' second symphony.

* * *

TOMORROW EVENING'S program will include the Tanglewood premiere of the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure," in concert form, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano, Albert Da Costa, tenor, and James Pease, basso, as soloists.

The Saturday evening program will also include two Tanglewood first performances by the orchestra, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" and Bohuslav Martinu's "Symphonic Fantasies." The latter was commissioned by Dr. Munch for the Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary. The Martinu score received the award of the New York Music Critics' Circle as the best new orchestral work performed in New York during 1955.

* * *

MR. MONTEUX will conduct the overture to Rossini's opera, "L'Italiana in Algeri" Sunday afternoon; also the Bartok concerto and the "C Major Symphony number 7" by Schubert.

Since celebrating his 81st birthday in April Mr. Monteux has conducted concerts in several European cities, including a week's stay in Rome. Returning to the United States at the end of June Mr. Monteux conducted the first two weeks of the Lewisohn Stadium concerts in New York and then journeyed to Chicago for three concerts with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra at the Ravinia Festival.

Remaining tickets for the concerts are on sale at the Tanglewood box office and telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawn is on sale before each concert.

unusual dolls.

Munch Opens New Season At Tanglewood

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., July 22—The first week end of concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra in the music shed at Tanglewood brought more than 20,000 music lovers for three concerts conducted by Charles Munch and guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

More than 6,200 were in the opening audience Friday evening when Charles Munch raised his baton to start the four-week season of concerts in the big music shed. The performance of the Brahms "Symphony No. 2, in D major" was so fine that one was assured of another memorable season of excellent performances which the large week-end audiences here have come to accept as normal.

Despite the heavy rain of Saturday which kept away many who normally are seated on the spacious lawns, there was a large audience for the performance of Wagner's "Die Walkure," Act I, which featured the soloists Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; and James Pease, bass. The first part of the program presented Barber's "Adagio for Strings" and Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques", composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

It was a rapt audience which listened to the excellent performance of Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun" at the opening concert. There was color and fire in the performance of Ravel's ballet music from his "Daphnis et Chloe." Throughout the evening the string section of the Boston gave an inspired performance. Mr. Munch conducted with such ease of manner and the orchestra responded with such splendor that it was difficult to realize what rehearsal had gone on behind the scenes in the days preceding.

The Sunday afternoon performance brought a large audience to the grounds as well as the shed to hear the 81-year-old Pierre Monteux conduct the program of Rossini, Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra," and Schubert's "Symphony in C Major."

Concerts this week will bring the music of Beethoven, Tschaikovsky, and Petrassi Friday evening; Rudolph Serkin as soloist in the Schumann "Piano Concerto in A minor" Saturday evening, and Ruth Posselt as soloist in the Hindemith "Violin Concerto" Sunday afternoon with her husband, Richard Burgin, concertmeister, conducting that concert.

The Sunday afternoon program will include Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" and Mahler's "symphony No. 1, in D Major."

S.M.

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE, TUESDAY, JULY 17, 1956

Da Costa, Met Tenor, Soloist at Tanglewood

Albert Da Costa, Metropolitan Opera tenor and former Amsterdam resident, will be one of the soloists singing in Wagner's Act I from "Die Walkure" Saturday evening at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. He will be heard again on the Aug. 12 concluding festival program.

* * *

SOLOISTS WITH Da Costa this Saturday will be Margaret Harshaw, soprano; and James Pease, bass.

Charles Munch will conduct both the Friday and Saturday evening programs in the Shed featuring the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra and Pierre Monteux will conduct the Sunday afternoon program.

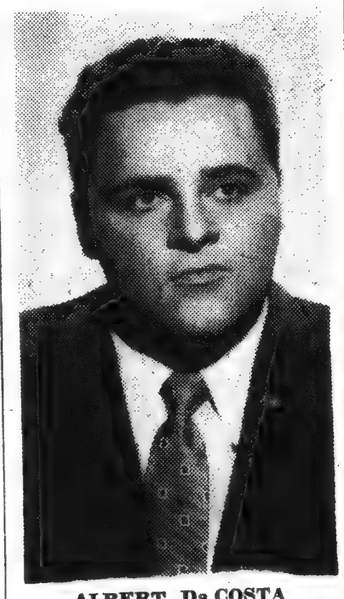
First of 12 concerts in the Shed will be presented on Friday evening. Tomorrow evening a special program will be presented by the Boston Symphony's Brass Ensemble and Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw and pianist, Ralph Berkowitz, in the Theatre-Concert hall.

* * *

EVENING CONCERTS at Tanglewood are at 8:30 o'clock and afternoon performances at 2:30 o'clock. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of the performance.

Saturday morning, public rehearsals are held at 10 a.m. beginning this Saturday as a benefit for the orchestra's pension fund.

Members of the Brass Ensemble playing tomorrow include Roger Voisin and Armando Ghitalla, trumpets; Harold Meek and Paul Keaney, French horns; Josef Orosz and Kauko Kahila, trombones; K. Vinal Smith, tuba; with William Gibson, trombone, assisting. Composers represented will include Gabrieli, Bonelli, Poulenc, Berezowsky, Wagner and Richard Strauss.



ALBERT Da COSTA
At Tanglwood Saturday

* * *

THE FRIDAY EVENING symphony program will include Berlioz, Overture, the Roman Carnival; Debussy, Prelude, Afternoon of a Faun; Revel, Rapsodie Esgapnole; and Brahms, Symphony number 2 in D major.

The Saturday evening program will open with Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings"; and include Bohuslav Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques"; and Act I from Wagner's "Die Walkure."

First Performances at Tanglewood Set Tonight

Two works commissioned by the Fromm Foundation of Chicago will receive their first performances tonight at the second concert of a contemporary chamber music under Fromm Foundation auspices at the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

THE CONCERTS were donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony. It will be open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center and to the public. Seats are unreserved.

The commissioned works are the "Quintet for Bassoon and Strings" by Leland Smith of the University of Chicago music department; and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" for soprano and eight instruments by Julian Orbon of Havana, Cuba, a 1946 Tanglewood composition student.

* * *

PARTICIPANTS in tonight's program include Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, violins; Joseph de Pasquale and Eugen Lehner, violas; Samuel Mayes, cello; Georges Moleux, bass; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Dorothy Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; James Stagliano, horn; and Bernard Zighera, harp; all members of the Boston Symphony.

Guest artists are Sylvia Marlowe, harpsichord; Seymour Lipkin, piano; Marjorie McClung, soprano; Norma Farber, reciter; and Goffredo Petrassi and Seymour Lipkin, conductors.

* * *

THE PROGRAM includes "Concerto for Harpsichord," Manuel de Falla; "Quintet for Bassoon and Strings," Leland Smith; "Himnus ad Galli Cantum," Julian Orbon; "Sonata da Camera," Goffredo Petrassi; "Summer Music," Smuel Barber; and "Cantate de l'Enfant et de la Mere," Darius Milhaud.

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., THURSDAY, JULY 26, 1956 department of the Berkshire Music Center will give the first staged performance anywhere of a three-act opera, "Griffelkin" by Lukas Foss, associate professor of music at the University of California, and a permanent member of the composition faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. Boris Goldovsky is producing the opera, and the composer will conduct an orchestra composed of students of Department I (Orchestra) of the Berkshire Music Center.

[113]

Social Briefs

Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller III will be weekend guests at the Curtis Hotel, Lenox.

Tanglewood Tales

Composer Lukas Foss first heard the story of "Griffelkin," a little-known German folk tale, from his mother, when he was a child of seven, and at the precocious age of eight tried setting it to music. The theme evidently remained vivid in his imagination, because he returned fresh to the subject two years ago. Hugh Ross, of Tanglewood's chorus department, introduced him to British poet Alastair Reid, a teacher of English literature at Sarah Lawrence College in Bronxville, N.Y., and although Foss was a continent away, teaching composition at the University of California in Los Angeles, a lively correspondence of some 50 letters and a number of drafts passed between them, until the present, rhymed libretto was achieved.

Meanwhile, on the strength of the promise he ha... field of opera with... "The Jumping Fr... County," based on... story, which the Ta... department premie... which has since ha... ductions in the U.... Mr. Foss received... to complete the wo... Television Opera ... telecast it national... ber. The composer... some points: "'Gr... a TV opera. It is... its first complete p... stage premiere. It i... tale nor children's... the story—of a devi... the world to do 24... and evil—does pla... which will make it... children as well as...

"In this work, as ... ing Frog,' a 20-y... Mozart opera will ... tected by the scholar. I have grown up with Mozart opera, and it is partly due to Mozart opera that I have dedicated my life to music. However, nowhere am I attempting to recreate the theater of the 18th century."

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. • Concerts through Aug. 12

Berkshire Festival

BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

Shed Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra

FRI. July 27, at 8:30—BEETHOVEN—PETRASSI—TCHAIKOVSKY (MUNCH)
SAT., July 28, 8:30—HANSON—SCHUMANN—HONEGGER—DEBUSSY (MUNCH)
Soloist: Rudolph Serkin, Piano
SUN., July 29, at 2:30—PROKOFIEFF—HINDEMITH—MAHLER (BURGIN)
Soloist: Ruth Posselt, Violin
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)

"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—Thurs. Aug. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestra—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma, Piano

TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records
OPEN REHEARSAL SAT. at 10 A.M.—ADMISSION $1.00

Music

Beaux Arts Trio Performs At Tanglewood Concert Hall

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FOURTH Wednesday evening chamber music concert at Tanglewood was played last night in the Theater-Concert Hall by the Beaux Arts Trio, Menahem Pressler, piano, Daniel Guilet, violin, and Bernard Greenhouse, cello.

The great success of the evening was mainly attributable to the wizardly piano playing of Pressler, who, by adjusting the tone of his instrument to that of his colleagues made the ensemble exemplary and exciting. There was, in addition, a penetrating grasp of the music at hand so that the performance was eminently satisfying on that score. On the other hand, the bowed instruments were not as sonorous as might have been necessary to make the evening more memorable.

* * *

RAVEL ... a shrug of compassion and a campaign of triteness, but it can be, as demonstrated last night, fresh and vivacious and the lovely romantic melodies are forever youthful.

Ravel and Brahms received a different but a proper approach; the Ravel was played with a discriminating brush while the color in Brahms was applied with powerful and vigorous strokes. Ravel was conceived as poetry; Brahms as drama. This required a broad palette of colors and a complete stock of technical resources.

* * *

THE PROGRAM was excellently devised. The subtle discretion of Ravel between the individual styles of the two German composers made a perfect and complete evening. The tumultuous applause of the audience ... evidence that ... to hear more. ...cording to our ... trio gave them ...d. We had heard ... beautifully pre... tists now pro... s a bonus, or as ... fragment from ...nent, moreover, ...he Beethoven B... which fits into ...ut does nothing ... meretriciously ...petence of the Conduct ...hestra

... music director ...mphony Orches... the Berkshire ...dent symphony ...tion of the con... ert it will give Thursday evening, ...ug. 2 in the Tanglewood Music ...hed. Dr. Munch will lead the students in a work in the interpretation of which he is world-renowned, the Berlioz "Symphonie Fantastique."

DURING intermission Sunday at Tanglewood, we fell into conversation with K. K. Paluev, who was shepherding a large brood of visitors from other lands, members of the secretariat of the U.N. in New York. This was their annual Berkshire weekend, a project Mr. Paluev launched some years ago, and which has allowed overseas folk and local citizens a chance to get a good look at one another. The visitors are housed with local families, and it has proved that everyone gets along well with everyone else, at least for the weekend.

Now, these visitors are not the big U.N. policy-makers. They are the trained staff who make the wheels go round and run the day-to-day life of the great building at the end of 42nd Street. Their opinions are probably closer to the man in their streets at home than those of the big brass. With this in mind, we interviewed two of the weekenders. First, was Ismail Osman of Afghanistan, who said he was most of all impressed by the almost limitless freedom we enjoy in the U.S. "It is the best gift in life," he said seriously. "Don't lose it for anything."

Russia is a next door neighbor of his home land, and we asked what his people thought of the new, friendly Soviet attitude. "It is the Russian people who are causing it," he said flatly. "They have lived long enough under austere rule. They want a change."

Next we talked with Robustiano Esperitis of the Philippines. He is employed by the Central Bank of the Philippines, and just arrived in New York from London where the bank had sent him to study economics. He will continue the study in New York, then Washington and return to his bank job at home. Freedom also was uppermost in his mind. He would have economic freedom for his home country, and he told how, toward this end, they were importing machinery and equipment to produce all sorts of consumer goods which otherwise would be bought from other countries. The U.S. and Britain, he said, provide most assistance in their struggle toward a favorable trade balance.

Tanglewood and the Berkshires, he added, were much more friendly than too-busy New Yorkers, a fact observed by many others, including native Americans.

—o—

[114]

Mac Morgan Will Sing at First Church

Mac Morgan will be soloist at the 10 o'clock morning worship service at the First Congregational Church on Sunday. He will sing "God Is My Shepard" and "I Will Sing New Songs of Gladness," both by Dvorak. Mr. Morgan has sung with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and is a well-known concert singer.

The Rev. William C. Hart will preach a book-review sermon on the new book by the Rev. Trevor Huddleston, "Naught for Your Comfort." Mr. Huddleston, an Anglican priest, was recently recalled from South Africa because of his aversion to government policies in that region. The book is concerned with race problems in that area.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173

JUL 23 1956

'Fantaisies' Impress at Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, July 21—The drizzly, disagreeable weather undoubtedly made a dent in the size of the audience (5750) here tonight at Tanglewood, but it did not dampen the ardor of the playing of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, nor daunt the enthusiasm of the listeners.

Charles Munch selected a most attractive program, one which for balance in style, engrossing interest and novel arrangement we would have whooped with joy to hear during the regular in-town season.

Barber's "Adagio" for strings opened the concert. If the composer had written nothing else, he deserves a place with immortal musical creators for this one piece alone. It is a moving, deeply felt composition, mounting steadily in tension until a heart piercing climax brings relief. Mr. Munch and the orchestra played it eloquently.

Next came Bohuslav Martinuss' "Fantaisies Symphoniques" a work praised before in these columns. This richly colored score, abounding in virtuoso display passages for the orchestra, intensely appealing melodies, and vigorous rhythmic currents, in one of the two pieces commissioned for the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 75th anniversary which promises to have more than a single season in the repertoire.

Tonight's performance was the fourth time I have heard it and "Fantaisies" was more fascinating than before.

—T. K.

Music: Lenox Concert

Full Boston Symphony Conducted by Munch

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 20—The full Boston Symphony Orchestra was on hand at Tanglewood tonight for the first time in this year's Berkshire Festival. Playing the opening of the regularly scheduled concerts in the Music Shed, the orchestra sounded as if it had had a long holiday and had returned with refreshed energy and enthusiasm.

The fact is that the Bostonians have been performing steadily since last fall—in their regular winter season, the "pops" and the Esplanade concerts. Could it be that they were not only responding to the eagerness of the Tanglewood audience but also working up a head of steam over their forthcoming European tour that will take them into the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia?

If they play in Leningrad, Moscow and Prague as they played here tonight, particularly in Ravel's "Daphnis et Chloe" Suite No. 2, it is a certainty that they will be a revelation.

Charles Munch, who conducted tonight, is a specialist in French music, and he gives a piece like the Ravel a shimmering web of sound held together with the utmost intensity.

Sitting up front, one felt that the tension and impact ... those dazzling sonorities in the concluding Danse General... were almost overwhelming. But there was no gainsaying the superb control with which conductor and orchestra whipped up a climax that seemed like a wild outburst of jubilation.

Charles Munch

This was a characteristic Munch program. It began with Berlioz' "Roman Carnival" Overture that also was built up with a kind of furious exhilaration. Mr. Munch has a way of letting the mood of the moment take hold of him and guide his interpretations. This habit may lead at times to a want of repose and balance; but the lack is more than adequately compensated for by the impression that the music is newly felt and communi... Berlioz Overture, in Debussy's "Apres-Midi D'Un ..." and in Brahms' second ...mphony, as well as in the ..., Mr. Munch con... though he were ex... the emotions of ... each piece afresh. There were touches of roughness in the Brahms symphony, but there was never a failure of vivid communication. That, in essence, is the best thing that can happen to music.

Berkshire Music Center Students To Sing Monday

Lenox, July 25—Five acts from 19th Century operas by Berlioz, Puccini, and Verdi, two of them scheduled for first Tanglewood performance, will be sung by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Monday at 8.30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall. The opera scenes will be given in Italian and in English, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky.

The performance is open to those who support the Berkshire Music Center through membership in its Friends organization. All seats are reserved.

The premieres are Act IV of Hector Berlioz' massive "The Trojans," composed in 1863; and Act I of Puccini's "La Rondine" (The Swallow). Scenes from Verdi's "Don Carlo" (1867), "Aida" (1871), and "Falstaff" (1893) complete the program.

On Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 6 and 7, the opera

Social Briefs

Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller III will be weekend guests at the Curtis Hotel, Lenox.

Tanglewood Tales

Composer Lukas Foss first heard the story of "Griffelkin," a little-known German folk tale, from his mother, when he was a child of seven, and at the precocious age of eight tried setting it to music. The theme evidently remained vivid in his imagination, because he returned fresh to the subject two years ago. Hugh Ross, of Tanglewood's chorus department, introduced him to British poet Alastair Reid, a teacher of English literature at Sarah Lawrence College in Bronxville, N.Y., and although Foss was a continent away, teaching composition at the University of California in Los Angeles, a lively correspondence of some 50 letters and a number of drafts passed between them, until the present, rhymed libretto was achieved.

Meanwhile, on the strength of the promise he had shown in the field of opera with his short work, "The Jumping Frog of Calaveras County," based on Mark Twain's story, which the Tanglewood opera department premiered in 1950, and which has since had nearly 40 productions in the U.S. and abroad, Mr. Foss received a commission to complete the work by the NBC Television Opera Theater, which telecast it nationally last November. The composer is definite on some points: "'Griffelkin' is not a TV opera. It is now receiving its first complete performance, its stage premiere. It is neither fairy-tale nor children's opera, though the story—of a devil sent out into the world to do 24 hours mischief and evil—does play in a world which will make it interesting to children as well as to grown-ups.

"In this work, as in 'The Jumping Frog,' a 20-year study of Mozart opera will easily be detected by the scholar. I have grown up with Mozart opera, and it is partly due to Mozart opera that I have dedicated my life to music. However, nowhere am I attempting to recreate the theater of the 18th century."

Music

Beaux Arts Trio Performs At Tanglewood Concert Hall

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FOURTH Wednesday evening chamber music concert at Tanglewood was played last night in the Theater-Concert Hall by the Beaux Arts Trio, Menahem Pressler, piano, Daniel Guilet, violin, and Bernard Greenhouse, cello.

The great success of the evening was mainly attributable to the wizardly piano playing of Pressler, who, by adjusting the tone of his instrument to that of his colleagues made the ensemble exemplary and exciting. There was, in addition, a penetrating grasp of the music at hand so that the performance was eminently satisfying on that score. On the other hand, the bowed instruments were not as sonorous as might have been necessary to make the evening more memorable.

* * *

RAVEL, whose trio ended the program, hesitated long to write for this combination because he thought they were incompatible and he thought finally, that it would be better to emphasize that factor rather than ignore it.

The program ranged from the often disparaged D minor trio of Mendelssohn through the Ravel to end with Brahms' C minor. A good character was given each one. It has been the rule in many circles to dispose of Mendelssohn, certainly this trio, with a shrug of compassion and a campaign of triteness, but it can be, as demonstrated last night, fresh and vivacious and the lovely romantic melodies are forever youthful.

Ravel and Brahms received a different but a proper approach; the Ravel was played with a discriminating brush while the color in Brahms was applied with powerful and vigorous strokes. Ravel was conceived as poetry; Brahms as drama. This required a broad palette of colors and a complete stock of technical resources.

* * *

THE PROGRAM was excellently devised. The subtle discretion of Ravel between the individual styles of the two German composers made a perfect and complete evening. The tumultuous applause of the audience was indubitable evidence that they would like to hear more. Unfortunately, according to our point of view, the trio gave them what they wanted. We had heard a three act play beautifully presented. The artists now proceeded to give, as a bonus, or as trading stamps, a fragment from another; a fragment, moreover, the finale from the Beethoven B flat, opus 97 trio, which fits into another frame but does nothing alone but display meretriciously the dazzling competence of the performers.

Notes and Footnotes

DURING intermission Sunday at Tanglewood, we fell into conversation with K. K. Paluev, who was shepherding a large brood of visitors from other lands, members of the secretariat of the U.N. in New York. This was their annual Berkshire weekend, a project Mr. Paluev launched some years ago, and which has allowed overseas folk and local citizens a chance to get a good look at one another. The visitors are housed with local families, and it has proved that everyone gets along well with everyone else, at least for the weekend.

Now, these visitors are not the big U.N. policy-makers. They are the trained staff who make the wheels go round and run the day-to-day life of the great building at the end of 42nd Street. Their opinions are probably closer to the man in their streets at home than those of the big brass. With this in mind, we interviewed two of the weekenders. First, was Ismail Osman of Afghanistan, who said he was most of all impressed by the almost limitless freedom we enjoy in the U.S. "It is the best gift in life," he said seriously. "Don't lose it for anything."

Russia is a next door neighbor of his home land, and we asked what his people thought of the new, friendly Soviet attitude. "It is the Russian people who are causing it," he said flatly. "They have lived long enough under austere rule. They want a change."

Next we talked with Robustiano Esperitis of the Philippines. He is employed by the Central Bank of the Philippines, and just arrived in New York from London where the bank had sent him to study economics. He will continue the study in New York, then Washington and return to his bank job at home. Freedom also was uppermost in his mind. He would have economic freedom for his home country, and he told how, toward this end, they were importing machinery and equipment to produce all sorts of consumer goods which otherwise would be bought from other countries. The U.S. and Britain, he said, provide most assistance in their struggle toward a favorable trade balance.

Tanglewood and the Berkshires, he added, were much more friendly than too-busy New Yorkers, a fact observed by many others, including native Americans.

—o—

Munch To Conduct Student Orchestra

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the Berkshire Music Center student symphony orchestra in a portion of the concert it will give Thursday evening, Aug. 2 in the Tanglewood Music Shed. Dr. Munch will lead the students in a work in the interpretation of which he is world-renowned, the Berlioz "Symphonie Fantastique."

Mac Morgan Will Sing at First Church

Mac Morgan will be soloist at the 10 o'clock morning worship service at the First Congregational Church on Sunday. He will sing "God Is My Shepard" and "I Will Sing New Songs of Gladness," both by Dvorak. Mr. Morgan has sung with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and is a well-known concert singer.

The Rev. William C. Hart will preach a book-review sermon on the new book by the Rev. Trevor Huddleston, "Naught for Your Comfort." Mr. Huddleston, an Anglican priest, was recently recalled from South Africa because of his aversion to government policies in that region. The book is concerned with race problems in that area.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173

JUL 22 1956

'Fantaisies' Impress at Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, July 21—The drizzly, disagreeable weather undoubtedly made a dent in the size of the audience (5750) here tonight at Tanglewood, but it did not dampen the ardor of the playing of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, nor daunt the enthusiasm of the listeners.

Charles Munch selected a most attractive program, one which for balance in style, engrossing interest and novel arrangement we would have whooped with joy to hear during the regular in-town season.

Barber's "Adagio" for strings opened the concert. If the composer had written nothing else, he deserves a place with immortal musical creators for this one piece alone. It is a moving, deeply felt composition, mounting steadily in tension until a heart piercing climax brings relief. Mr. Munch and the orchestra played it eloquently.

Next came Bohuslav Martinuss' "Fantaisies Symphoniques," a work praised before in these columns. This richly colored score, abounding in virtuoso display passages for the orchestra, intensely appealing melodies, and vigorous rhythmic currents, in one of the two pieces commissioned for the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 75th anniversary which promises to have more than a single season in the repertory.

Tonight's performance was the fourth time I have heard it and "Fantaisies" was more fascinating than before.

—T. K.

Music: Lenox Concert

Full Boston Symphony Conducted by Munch

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 20—The full Boston Symphony Orchestra was on hand at Tanglewood tonight for the first time in this year's Berkshire Festival. Playing the opening of the regularly scheduled concerts in the Music Shed, the orchestra sounded as if it had had a long holiday and had returned with refreshed energy and enthusiasm.

The fact is that the Bostonians have been performing steadily since last fall—in their regular winter season, the "pops" and the Esplanade concerts. Could it be that they were not only responding to the eagerness of the Tanglewood audience but also working up a head of steam over their forthcoming European tour that will take them into the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia?

If they play in Leningrad, Moscow and Prague as they played here tonight, particularly in Ravel's "Daphnis et Chloe" Suite No. 2, it is a certainty that they will be a revelation.

Charles Munch, who conducted tonight, is a specialist in French music, and he gives a piece like the Ravel a shimmering web of sound held together with the utmost intensity.

Sitting up front, one felt that the tension and impact of those dazzling sonorities in the concluding Danse General were almost overwhelming. But there was no gainsaying the superb control with which conductor and orchestra whipped up a climax that seemed like a wild outburst of jubilation.

Charles Munch

This was a characteristic Munch program. It began with Berlioz' "Roman Carnival" Overture that also was built up with a kind of furious exhilaration. Mr. Munch has a way of letting the mood of the moment take hold of him and guide his interpretations. This habit may lead at times to a want of repose and balance; but the lack is more than adequately compensated for by the impression that the music is newly felt and communicated.

In the Berlioz Overture, in Debussy's "Apres-Midi D'Un Faune" and in Brahms' second symphony, as well as in the [illegible], Mr. Munch conducted as though he were experiencing the emotions of each piece afresh. There were touches of roughness in the Brahms symphony, but there was never a failure to hold communication. That, in essence, is the best thing that can happen to music.

Berkshire Music Center Students To Sing Monday

Lenox, July 25—Five acts from 19th Century operas by Berlioz, Puccini, and Verdi, two of them scheduled for first Tanglewood performance, will be sung by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Monday at 8.30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall. The opera scenes will be given in Italian and in English, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky.

The performance is open to those who support the Berkshire Music Center through membership in its Friends organization. All seats are reserved.

The premieres are Act IV of Hector Berlioz' massive "The Trojans," composed in 1863; and Act I of Puccini's "La Rondine" (The Swallow). Scenes from Verdi's "Don Carlo" (1867), "Aida" (1871), and "Falstaff" (1893) complete the program.

On Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 6 and 7, the opera

(High Fidelity Aug 1956

BSO to USSR

DURING THE PAST YEAR we have been undergoing a Russian invasion. Focal points of the Soviet drive have been our recital halls and recording studios, which have fallen defenseless before such People's Heroes as David Oistrakh and Emil Gilels.

Apparently the American way to answer a move like this really is massive retaliation, and volunteers have not been lacking. Early this spring the clarion was sounded, in a published statement which ended: "... Ready and eager, if the President wishes, to be the first American orchestra to play in Moscow ... signed, Henry B. Cabot." Henry B. Cabot is, of course, the president of the Trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and it is the BSO that will be the first American orchestra to play in the USSR. As a matter of fact, so far as anyone seems to know, it will be the first American orchestra to play in Russia at all. Before World War I, American orchestras, whatever their merit, were not much in demand in Europe, and ever since World War I such devices as the cordon sanitaire and the Iron Curtain have precluded junkets into Russia. Just as a point of interest, no Russian orchestra seems ever to have played in America, either, a fact which, no doubt, is currently being mulled over by astute New York concert managements. For Warshchr seem to be SRO material nowadays, and might not 110 Comrades pull even better than two?

Whatever the conclusions of New York managements, the Moscow management (singular) seems to have no misgivings about the allure of Bostonians. The Russian government, indeed, has plunged into show business with a surety and sang froid not unworthy of a Billy Rose. The Ministry of Culture in Moscow, dealing directly with the BSO, handed out no loss guarantees for four concerts with the greatest readiness, though the Orchestra does not actually expect to make a profit. It doesn't make a profit in the United States either, of course.

The BSO's overseas tour, which begins August 14, naturally will not be limited to Russia. Starting out with two chartered airplanes (and some space on the Nieu Amsterdam), the Orchestra's 115 men, together with 40 wives, and 88 pieces of musical baggage occupying 1985.7 cubic feet and weighing 8 tons, will play 26-29 concerts (bookings were incomplete at the time of this writing) in 17-19 cities in 12 nations. Cities fairly firm in the itinerary include Cork, Dublin, Edinburgh, Copenhagen, Oslo, Stockholm, Helsinki, Leningrad, Moscow, Prague, Vienna, Munich, Stuttgart, Paris, Chartres, Leeds, and London. The portion of the tour west of the Iron Curtain will be subsidized in part by a government grant administered by the American National Theater and Academy.

After visit the Soviet Ministry of Culture takes over ... Bostonians to Leningrad without their wives ... concerts. Thence they proceed to Moscow, for ... one of which may feature the Beethoven Ninth ... with Russian soloists and chorus. They hope also to appear in joint performance with Oistrakh or Gilels, or both. Oistrakh played with them in Boston ... The Ministry also will furnish housing, meals, and entertainment, and the musicians already have been heard remarking to one another that the latter is purveyed by Soviet officialdom to foreign guests is supposed to be something really memorable. From Moscow, the Ministry will fly them to Prague, whence they will cross the Curtain again, back to Vienna.

It is stated, not without a glow of vicarious pride, that next summer's beginning, the Boston Symphony Orchestra was facing its journey into Communistry with the aplomb which Bostonians are reputed ... to bring to any adventure, however novel. There was to be no special supervision of personnel within the Curtain countries. They were expected, as a staff member put it, to get to rehearsals and performances ... time, just as they must in Boston, and the rest of what they might do would be their own business, also as in Boston. However, it was thought likely that the State Department would send someone to brief them before departure, on such matters as what not to try to photograph while in Moscow, what conversational topics to avoid, and the like. For the rest, reliance for the making of a favorable impression was left to natural Bostonian decorum.

That refers, of course, to deportment only. No one had the slightest doubt what kind of impression the BSO would make musically, and this is of considerable ... cultural importance, if that is the word I want. There is growing awareness of the need these days to show people not only behind the Curtain, but in Western Europe as well, that America is not a soulless Power concerned purely with dollars and gadgets. It would be hard to think of a more potent argument than the flawless glowing sound of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, irrefutable evidence of devotion to and labor for the most spiritual of the arts.

Anyway, at the time of the BSO's advent, Muscovites seemed to be taking to American musicians as heartily as the American public had received last winter's Russians. Isaac Stern had passed through in triumphal progress; Jan Peerce had won a five-minute standing ovation after singing in La Traviata with the Bolshoi company. The Boston Symphony Orchestra had no slightest doubt of being a sellout attraction — just as it is everywhere else.

J.M.C.

BOSTON HERALD, FRIDAY, JULY 27, 1956

Munch Conducts Premiere Tonight

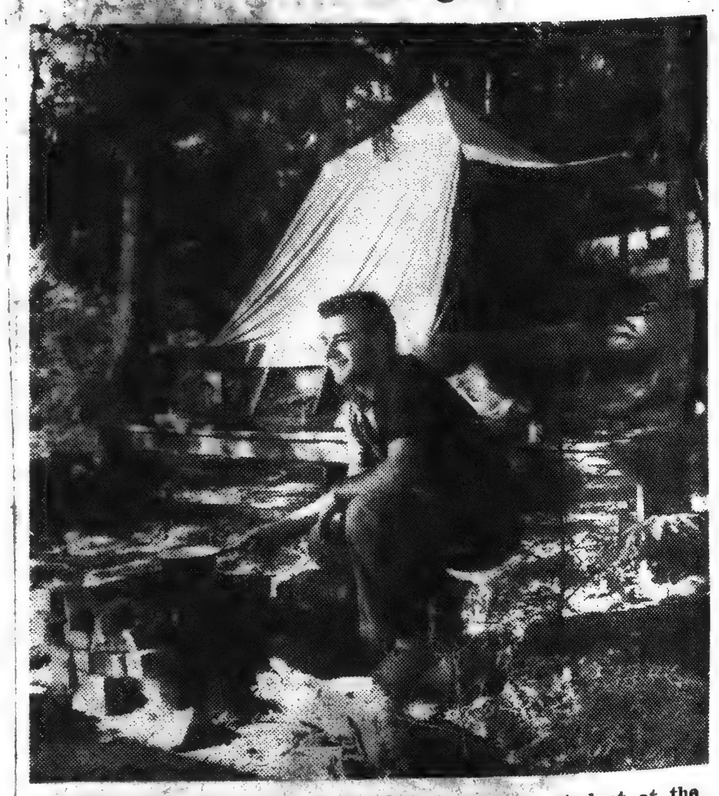
Charles Munch will conduct the Tanglewood premiere tonight of the Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 by Roman composer, Goffredo Petrassi, as the second week-end of concerts by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1956 Berkshire Festival gets under way in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30 p. m. In addition, the program includes the Second "Leonore" Overture, by Beethoven and Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony.

Tomorrow evening pianist Rudolf Serkin, who made his Tanglewood debut last summer at a notable concert which drew more than 15,000 persons, will return to perform with Dr. Munch and the Orchsetra the Piano Concerto in A Minor by Robert Schumann in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. The program will also include music by Hanson, Honegger and Debussy. Sunday afternoon (July 29) Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will make his only Tanglewood conducting appearance of the season in a concert which will also feature his wife, violinist Ruth Posselt, in a performance of the Hindemith Concerto.

[115]

EVENING TRIBUNE — LAWRENCE, MASS.—THURSDAY, JULY 26, 1956

Goldman At Tanglewood



Maynard H. Goldman, 18 Jasper street, a student at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, is living in a tent on the shores of the Stockbridge Bowl, Tanglewood in Lenox where the annual Berkshire Musical festival is being held. Mr. Goldman plays violin in the student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center.

(High Fidelity Aug 1956

AS THE EDITORS SEE IT

BSO to USSR

DURING THE PAST YEAR we have been undergoing [illegible] Local [illegible] the Boston Symphony Orchestra [illegible] this country [illegible] Early this season [illegible] Ready [illegible] Moscow [illegible] the Trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra [illegible] the BSO [illegible] American [illegible] the USSR [illegible] to know [illegible] Russia [illegible] World War I [illegible] either a fact which [illegible] by astute New [illegible] which seem to be SRO [illegible] for 110 Comrades [illegible]

Whatever the conclusions [illegible] the Moscow management [illegible] misgivings about the [illegible] at Boston [illegible] government, indeed [illegible] with a surety [illegible] Rose. The Minister [illegible] directly with the BSO [illegible] for four concerts with [illegible] Orchestra does not [illegible] It doesn't make [illegible] course.

The [illegible] scale [illegible] nature [illegible] will not be [illegible] to Russia [illegible] with [illegible] chartered air planes [illegible] face [illegible] New [illegible] from the Orchestra's [illegible] other with 40 w[illegible] and 88 pieces of mast[illegible] occupy 198[illegible] sheet and weighing [illegible] plates [illegible] concert [illegible] kings were [illegible] time of [illegible] were [illegible] 19 cities in 12 nations [illegible] cities [illegible] in the itinerary include Cork, Dublin, Edinburgh, Copenhagen, Oslo, Stockholm, Helsinki, Leningrad, Moscow, Prague, Vienna, Munich, Stuttgart, Paris, Chartres, Leeds, and London. The portion of the tour west of the Iron Curtain will be subsidized in part by [illegible] government grant administered by the American National Theater and Academy.

[illegible] takes [illegible] other w[illegible] to Moscow [illegible] brotherhood [illegible] ions. The [illegible] ish Ostrach [illegible] them in Boston [illegible] cherish hos[illegible] musicians alre[illegible] other than [illegible] overgrow[illegible] table [illegible] true who[illegible] roma[illegible] Symphon[illegible] ame[illegible] Dr[illegible] XIII[illegible] [illegible] chestra [illegible] formance [illegible] the test [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] at [illegible] Moscow what conversa[illegible] for the test [illegible] [illegible] to depart [illegible] No[illegible] for what k[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [

TIGHT BINDING

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 23 1956

Music at the Berkshire Festival

Munch and Monteux Conduct Weekend Symphony Concerts

By Harold Rogers

Lenox, Mass.

The dismal weather in the Berkshires doubtless kept thousands from attending the weekend concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. There were some empty seats in the Shed for the programs Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. By Sunday the weather had improved so that many listeners could sit on the lawn, but the number was comparatively few.

Inversely to the weather, however, the concerts themselves came off at a high performance level—as high as they have ever been at Tanglewood. It would be difficult to say how much of an effect the cool, damp air had on Charles Munch and his musicians Saturday night. Perhaps much, perhaps none; but the total effect was one of ravishing tone and lyrical expression.

* * *

Dr. Munch opened with Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings, one of the composer's most successful works. It is a piece that combines solid musical substance with a form that builds logically and inexorably to a fervent climax. The conductor then continued with Martinů's Fantaisies Symphoniques, otherwise known as his Symphony No. 6, composed for the current 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony.

It is not only the most successful of the works heard thus far among those commissioned by the orchestra to celebrate its diamond year (several have been postponed until next season). In itself it is a masterwork; and if but one masterwork emerges from 15 commissions, perhaps the expense is justified.

There is a strong emotional and stylistic relationship between Martinů and Bartók—the personal and original aproach, a high pitch of poetic intensity, the refined dissonances that inscribe fascinating patterns on the tympanum and awaken rare emotions in the heart.

* * *

The Fantaisies Symphoniques received the New York Music Critics Circle award as the best new orchestral work presented in New York in 1955. Dr. Munch has now conducted it many times. Saturday night he gave it a jeweled performance that brought out the scintillating nuances of the score.

For the second half of this program he conducted the first act of Wagner's "Die Walküre," with Margaret Harshaw singing Sieglinde, Albert Da Costa as Siegmund, and James Pease as Hunding. As is usually the case with Wagner, in this act, one must hike uphill along dreary shaded roads to reach a lookout on the mountain top where one is enthralled by the glorious view.

Miss Harshaw sang with her usual dedication and superb understanding of the Wagnerian roles. Today there are few if any sopranos who can equal her as a Wagnerian singer, and it is regrettable for the music world that her artistry is at present limited in other areas of song.

Mr. Da Costa, too, was astonishing for the brilliance and power of his ringing tenor. Mr. Pease, back from his European season as a member of the Hamburg Opera Company, demonstrated a basso more mature and secure, a rich and beautifully molded tone. The singing of these artists, plus Dr. Munch's vivid handling of the orchestra, brought the concert to a conclusion that was followed by cheers and numerous calls.

* * *

On Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux mounted the podium to give us another of his deeply satisfying concerts, opening with an incisive and sparkling reading of Rossini's Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri."

He continued with Bartók's inventive and often humorous Concerto for Orchestra—a brilliant piece of writing that displays the various choirs of the ensemble in solo roles. Here again one could marvel at Mr. Monteux's ability to move musical mountains with the tip of his baton.

He concluded with his magnificently paced performance of Schubert's "Great" C major Symphony. There were periods when his reading lapsed somewhat into the routine—now and again in the Andante con moto—but on the whole he gave us Schubert in one of his sunniest and most noble moods.

IN THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Friday, July 27, [illegible] Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony; no soloists. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 28, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony, with Rudolf Serkin, piano. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 29, at 2:30: Richard Burgin conducting the Boston Symphony, with Ruth Posselt, violin. . . . ¶ Wednesday, Aug. 1, at 8:30: A program of chamber music by the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet, with Rudolf Serkin, piano. . . . ¶ Friday, Aug. 3, at 8:30: Eleazar de Carvalho conducting the Boston Symphony, with Joerg de Oliveira, piano. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 4, at 8:30: Leonard Bernstein conducting the Boston Symphony in a memorial concert for Serge Koussevitzky, with Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and a chorus. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 5, at 2:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony with Zino Francescatti, violin. . . . ¶ Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 6-7, at 8:30: "Griffelkin," an opera by Lukas Foss. Presented by students of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center and produced by Boris Goldovsky. For information about operas, tickets, which are very scarce and must be ordered at least a week in advance, address the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Through Sept. [illegible]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544
JUL 22 1956

Wagner's Die Welkuere Big Hit at Tanglewood

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, July 21—Charles Munch tonight conducted the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkuere" at Tanglewood. This was the first such extended Wagner excerpt he had presented since he came to the United States.

The soloists were Margaret Harshaw, as Sieglinde; Albert Da Costa, tenor, as Siegmund, and James Pease, bass, as Hunding.

All told this wondrous music made a thrilling conclusion to the in the main series of the Berkshire Festival.

The Boston Symphony, so big and rich and [illegible]oso, provides what may have been for Wagner the ideal sound he heard in his mind's ear as he composed the work.

In the opera houses of this country, at least, you never hear Wagner from such large numbers, which means never with quite the amplitude of sound we had tonight.

Needs Symphony Hall

Considering the prevailing beauty of the performance, it may seem a trifle carping to mention that the reading did not have quite the blaze of detail, quite the dramatic flow and continuity it would have were these forces to work upon it again and present it at Symphony Hall during the season to come. Could it be done? It certainly ought to be possible.

In general, however, this was perhaps the finest Wagner conducting Mr. Munch has achieved since he came to Boston. It was all very musical and "singing" even though it became incandescent toward the end.

So, too, with the singers. Miss Harshaw has all of the power, and glory of voice for Sieglinde, and voices the music with true eloquence. Mr. Pease, developed in reasonance and expressive power during his years in Europe, was the finest Hunding I have heard. What a pleasure to hear the part sung with firm, carrying tone and great flexibility.

Mr. Da Costa was said to be singing his role for the first time. (Does this mean that next season, he may portray Siegmund at the Metropolitan?) The tenor is still young and his voice probably has not attained its maximum of power. Yet he is a true Heiden tenor, and he is an artist.

Other Theatre News on Pages 48-50

He sang every note, and even in the vast spaces of the open-at-the-sides music shed, with a powerful orchestra behind (and not in a pit below) him, he did not force. Here, plainly, is a most promising Wagnerian tenor of the future.

[illegible]

The program, originally designed as all-Wagner, later was altered to include in addition to the "Die Walkuere" music, only Samuel Barber's somewhat baroque-style Adagio for Strings, and the symphonic fantasies of [illegible].

The change was advisable, perhaps. Martinus work is a most original, well-wrought and well-wearing piece. It has real substance and stature; its use of dissonance is both logical and of beauty, and though each of the three movements may seem episodic, the more you know the piece, the more you realize all hangs together.

The Berkshire weather tonight was outrageously cold and rainy, which resulted in a comparatively small audience of but 5733 persons. When it came time for applause, at the end of the concert, nonetheless, the ensuing tumult sounded like a much bigger attendance.

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE, WEDNESDAY, JULY 25, 1956 GAZETTE PHONE [illegible]

BERKSHIRE CENTER STUDENTS—Three Schenectady students attending the 14th session of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., discuss their summer's work with Brazilian conductor Eleazar de Carvalho. Left to right the group includes Bruce B. Butler, Paul Hahn, Mr. de Carvalho and Kenneth Schermerhorn.

Three City Men Study at Berkshire Music Center

Three Schenectady men are among the 91 students from New York state attending the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer.

* * *

THE THREE are Bruce Baird Butler, string bass, 1038 Phoenix avenue; Paul Edward Hahn, French horn, 1045 Palmer avenue; and Kenneth Schermerhorn, 914 Hazlewood avenue, who is studying conducting.

Butler, a 1949 graduate of Nott Terrace high school and a 1953 graduate of the Eastman School of Music at Rochester, where he received a bachelor of music degree, plays in the student orchestra at the center. Most recently he has served as a bandsman in the U.S. Army Field Band and for the winter season he has been engaged as principal tuba player for the New Orleans Orchestra.

Hahn, who also is a graduate of Nott Terrace in 1949, plans to enter Potsdam State Teachers College this fall. At present he is a Multilith Machine operator for the General Electric Co. At Tanglewood he plays French horn in the student orchestra.

* * *

SCHERMERHORN, now in his second season at Tanglewood in the orchestral conducting department, will leave at the close of the Berkshire Center season for Milan, Italy, to continue his studies under the auspices of the Frank Huntington Beebe Foundation.

Schermerhorn first went to the center in 1950 as a trumpet player. The following season he spent with the Kansas City, Mo., Symphony, conducted by Hans Schweiger. From June, 1954, until May, 1955, he conducted 80 concerts in Germany, Austria, Italy, France, England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales with a 70-piece army orchestra organized by the state department to [illegible] the cultural [illegible] of American music and musicians.

He returned to the Berkshire Music Center [illegible] as an active student [illegible] conducting under Leonard Bernstein and this summer is continuing his studies with Brazilian conductor Eleazer de Carvalho. Last summer he won the Koussevitsky Memorial Scholarship for orchestral conducting.

CHARLES [illegible] music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is director of the center which annually draws some 400 students from every state, Canada and many foreign countries to study orchestra performing and conducting under the guidance of eminent musicians and teachers.

Occupations of the students at the center this year are many—ranging from priest, armed services officer, salesman and housewife to secretary, pharmaceutical chemist, trial lawyer and judge. The spread in ages is from 18 to 62.

[116]

TIGHT BINDING

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 23 1956

Music at the Berkshire Festival

Munch and Monteux Conduct Weekend Symphony Concerts

By Harold Rogers

Lenox, Mass.

The dismal weather in the Berkshires doubtless kept thousands from attending the weekend concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. There were some empty seats in the Shed for the programs Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. By Sunday the weather had improved so that many listeners could sit on the lawn, but the number was comparatively few.

Inversely to the weather, however, the concerts themselves came off at a high performance level—as high as they have ever been at Tanglewood. It would be difficult to say how much of an effect the cool, damp air had on Charles Munch and his musicians Saturday night. Perhaps much, perhaps none; but the total effect was one of ravishing tone and lyrical expression.

* * *

Dr. Munch opened with Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings, one of the composer's most successful works. It is a piece that combines solid musical substance with a form that builds logically and inexorably to a fervent climax. The conductor then continued with Martinú's Fantaisies Symphoniques, otherwise known as his Symphony No. 6, composed for the current 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony.

It is not only the most successful of the works heard thus far among those commissioned by the orchestra to celebrate its diamond year (several have been postponed until next season). In itself it is a masterwork; and if but one masterwork emerges from 15 commissions, perhaps the expense is justified.

There is a strong emotional and stylistic relationship between Martinú and Bartók—the personal and original aproach, a high pitch of poetic intensity, the refined dissonances that inscribe fascinating patterns on the tympanum and awaken rare emotions in the heart.

* * *

The Fantaisies Symphoniques received the New York Music Critics Circle award as the best new orchestral work presented in New York in 1955. Dr. Munch has now conducted it many times. Saturday night he gave it a jeweled performance that brought out the scintillating nuances of the score.

For the second half of this program he conducted the first act of Wagner's "Die Walküre," with Margaret Harshaw singing Sieglinde, Albert Da Costa as Siegmund, and James Pease as Hunding. As is usually the case with Wagner, in this act, one must hike uphill along dreary, shaded roads to reach a lookout on the mountain top where one is enthralled by the glorious view.

Miss Harshaw sang with her usual dedication and superb understanding of the Wagnerian roles. Today there are few if any sopranos who can equal her as a Wagnerian singer, and it is regrettable for the music world that her artistry is at present limited in other areas of song.

Mr. Da Costa, too, was astonishing for the brilliance and power of his ringing tenor. Mr. Pease, back from his European season as a member of the Hamburg Opera Company, demonstrated a basso more mature and secure, a rich and beautifully molded tone. The singing of these artists, plus Dr. Munch's vivid handling of the orchestra, brought the concert to a conclusion that was followed by cheers and numerous calls.

* * *

On Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux mounted the podium to give us another of his deeply satisfying concerts, opening with an incisive and sparkling reading of Rossini's Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri."

He continued with Bartók's inventive and often humorous Concerto for Orchestra—a brilliant piece of writing that displays the various choirs of the ensemble in solo roles. Here again one could marvel at Mr. Monteux's ability to move musical mountains with the tip of his baton.

He concluded with his magnificently paced performance of Schubert's "Great" C major Symphony. There were periods when his reading lapsed somewhat into the routine—now and again in the Andante con moto—but on the whole he gave us Schubert in one of his sunniest and most noble moods.

JUL 26, 1956

IN THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Friday, July 27, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra, soloists. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 28, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony, with Rudolf Serkin, piano. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 29, at 2:30: Richard Burgin conducting the Boston Symphony, with Ruth Posselt, violin. . . . ¶ Wednesday, Aug. 1, at 8:30: A program of chamber music by the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet, with Rudolf Serkin, piano. . . . ¶ Friday, Aug. 3, at 8:30: Eleazar de Carvalho conducting the Boston Symphony, with Joey de Oliveira, piano. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 4, at 8:30: Leonard Bernstein conducting the Boston Symphony in a memorial concert for Serge Koussevitzky, with Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and a chorus. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 5, at 2:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony with Zino Francescatti, violin. . . . ¶ Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 6-7, at 8:30: "Griffelkin," an opera by Lukas Foss. Presented by students of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center and produced by Boris Goldovsky. For information about opera tickets, which are very scarce and must be ordered at least a week in advance, address the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Through Sunday, Aug. [illegible]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544
JUL 22 1956

Wagner's Die Welkuere Big Hit at Tanglewood

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, July 21—Charles Munch tonight conducted the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkuere" at Tanglewood. This was the first such extended Wagner excerpt he had presented since he came to the United States.

The soloists were Margaret Harshaw, as Sieglinde; Albert Da Costa, tenor, as Siegmund, and James Pease, bass, as Hunding.

All told this wondrous music made a thrilling conclusion to the in the main series of the Berkshire Festival.

The Boston Symphony, so big and rich and virtuoso, provides what may have been for Wagner the ideal sound he heard in his mind's ear as he composed the work.

In the opera houses of this country, at least, you never hear Wagner from such large numbers, which means never with quite the amplitude of sound we had tonight.

Needs Symphony Hall

Considering the prevailing beauty of the performance, it may seem a trifle carping to mention that the reading did not have quite the blaze of detail, quite the dramatic flow and continuity it would have were these forces to work upon it again and present it at Symphony Hall during the season to come. Could it be done? It certainly ought to be possible.

In general, however, this was perhaps the finest Wagner conducting Mr. Munch has achieved since he came to Boston. It was all very musical and "singing" even though it became incandescent toward the end.

So, too, with the singers. Miss Harshaw has all of the power, and glory of voice for Sieglinde, and voices the music with true eloquence. Mr. Pease, developed in reasonance and expressive power during his years in Europe, was the finest Hunding I have heard. What a pleasure to hear the part sung with firm, carrying tone and great flexibility.

Mr. Da Costa was said to be singing his role for the first time. (Does this mean that next season, he may portray Siegmund at the Metropolitan?) The tenor is still young and his voice probably has not attained its maximum of power. Yet he is a true Heiden tenor, and he is an artist.

He sang every note, and even in the vast spaces of the open-at-the-sides music shed, with a powerful orchestra behind (and not in a pit below) him, he did not force. Here, plainly, is a most promising Wagnerian tenor of the future.

Other Theatre News on Pages 48-50

Changed Couple

The program, originally designed as all-Wagner, later was altered to include in addition to the "Die Walkuere" music, only Samuel Barber's somewhat baroque-style Adagio for Strings, and the symphonic fantasies of Martinu.

The change was advisable, perhaps. Martinus work is a most original, well-wrought and well-wearing piece. It has real substance and stature; its use of dissonance is both logical and of beauty, and though each of the three movements may seem episodic, the more you know the piece, the more you realize all hangs together.

The Berkshire weather tonight was outrageously cold and rainy, which resulted in a comparatively small audience of but 5733 persons. When it came time for applause, at the end of the concert, nonetheless, the ensuing tumult sounded like a much bigger attendance.

BERKSHIRE CENTER STUDENTS—Three Schenectady students attending the 14th session of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., discuss their summer's work with Brazilian conductor Eleazar de Carvalho. Left to right the group includes Bruce B. Butler, Paul Hahn, Mr. de Carvalho and Kenneth Schermerhorn.

Three City Men Study at Berkshire Music Center

Three Schenectady men are among the 91 students from New York state attending the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer.

* * *

THE THREE are Bruce Baird Butler, string bass, 1038 Phoenix avenue; Paul Edward Hahn, French horn, 1045 Palmer avenue; and Kenneth Schermerhorn, 914 Hazlewood avenue, who is studying conducting.

Butler, a 1949 graduate of Nott Terrace high school and a 1953 graduate of the Eastman School of Music at Rochester, where he received a bachelor of music degree, plays in the student orchestra at the center. Most recently he has served as a bandsman in the U.S. Army Field Band and for the winter season he has been engaged as principal tuba player for the New Orleans Orchestra.

Hahn, who also is a graduate of Nott Terrace in 1949, plans to enter Potsdam State Teachers College this fall. At present he is a Multilith Machine operator for the General Electric Co. At Tanglewood he plays French horn in the student orchestra.

* * *

SCHERMERHORN, now in his second season at Tanglewood in the orchestral conducting department, will leave at the close of the Berkshire Center season for Milan, Italy, to continue his studies under the auspices of the Frank Huntington Beebe Foundation.

Schermerhorn first went to the center in 1950 as a trumpet player. The following season he spent with the Kansas City, Mo., Symphony, conducted by Hans Schweiger. From June, 1954, until May, 1955, he conducted 80 concerts in Germany, Austria, Italy, France, England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales with a 70-piece army orchestra organized by the state department to demonstrate the cultural maturity of American music and musicians.

He returned to the Berkshire Music Center [illegible] as an active student [illegible] conducting under Leonard Bernstein and this summer is continuing his studies with Brazilian conductor Eleazer de Carvalho. Last summer he won the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship for orchestral conducting.

CHARLES [illegible], music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is director of the center which annually draws some 400 students from every state, Canada and many foreign countries to study orchestra performing and conducting under the guidance of eminent musicians and teachers.

Occupations of the students at the center this year are many—ranging from priest, armed services officer, salesman and housewife to secretary, pharmaceutical chemist, trial lawyer and judge. The spread in ages is from 18 to 62.

[116]

Benny Goodman To Play At Music Mountain On Sunday

BENNY GOODMAN . . . famous clarinetist who will play at Music Mountain this Sunday afternoon. A musical star in both classic and jazz fields, Mr. Goodman will play with the Berkshire Quartet in a Brahms Quintet on Sunday.

There will be an important change in the program of the fifth Sunday afternoon chamber music concert of the twenty-seventh Music Mountain season for Sunday, July 29, at Music Mountain, Falls Village. Benny Goodman, eminent virtuoso of the clarinet in the fields of jazz and classical music, will be the featured guest artist in a program of Brahms, Rainier, and Mozart. Natasha Magg, who was scheduled to appear with her husband, Berkshire Quartet cellist Fritz Magg, in Chopin's Sonata for Cello and Piano in G Minor, will be presented on Sunday, August 19, at 4 in the afternoon. Mrs. Magg and Fritz Magg will then perform the Chopin Sonata for Cello and Piano.

The program for Sunday, July 29, will be the Quartet in B Flat Major (K.458) (The Hunt) by Mozart; the Quartet by Priaulx Rainier; and the Quintet for Clarinet and Strings in B Minor, Opus 115 by Brahms. Benny Goodman, who appeared twice at Tanglewood during the summer in works by Mozart, will join the members of the Berkshire Quartet in the Brahms Quintet for Clarinet and Strings.

Benny Goodman, who has realized his popular success and acclaim in the field of jazz, was trained in the classic mold and is a very accomplished clarinetist in both areas —the area of jazz and the area of classical music. His wide international acceptance as one of the foremost men of jazz marks him a distinguished jazz clarinetist; and the enthusiastic acclaim of music critics for his appearance in classical music recital and concert marks him an eminent musician in the area for which his early music training prepared him.

The program for the sixth Sunday afternoon concert, August 5, will present Virginia Robinson, harpist, as the guest artist. The Program will consist of the Quartet in A Major (K. 464) by Mozart; the Danse sacre et profane by Debussy; and the Quartet in G Major, Opus 61 by Dvorak.

Koussevitzky Tribute Set For Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semifinal week of summer symphonic music, opening with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolph Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, August 1, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The three week-end concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon are held in the huge Music Shed, and will be by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (August 3); by Leonard Bernstein (August 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch (August 5).

Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the Boston Symphony's former conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will devote his concert as a mecrial to his patron, and it will consist of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and the Tanglewood premiere of Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon, and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum. Mr. Bernstein came to Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long his long association with the Berkshire music school as assistant to Dr. Koussevitzky in 1942.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann (July 29, 1856) with a performance of his second symphony, and will also give the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode.

Two Works to Have Festival Premieres

Compositions of Petrassi and Hanson to Be Heard

Noted Italian's Work Scheduled for Friday Concert and That of Head of Eastman School of Music Is on Saturday Program. — Dr. Munch and Richard Burgin on Podium.

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, is in the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music. Last night a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Revel and Brahms by The Beaux Arts Trio, was given in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the week-end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon.

Dr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer, who is guest teacher of composition this summer at the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, at Tanglewood.

The Saturday evening Festival concert is composed of works by Schumann, Honegger, Debussy, and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Howard Hanson, director of music at the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, Rochester, N. Y.

Both the Petrassi Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, on Friday night, and the Hanson Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky on Saturday evening were commissioned jointly by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitzky Music Foundation for the current, seventy-fifth anniversary of the orchestra, and were introduced to audiences during the past winter in Boston.

Rudolf Serkin, the celebrated concert pianist who appeared at Tanglewood in 1955 for the first time at a Berkshire Festival concert, and who attracted a near-record audience of 15,624, will be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor, on Saturday night.

Richard Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert consists of music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler, with Ruth Posselt—in private life Mrs. Burgin—as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Mr. Burgin, with William Kroll, heads the chamber music teaching at the Berkshire Music Center, where Miss Posselt is also on the faculty.

Coming Events

July 26-27-28 — Series "B" concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox. Evenings at 8:30; Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

Week's Events At Tanglewood

The fourth week of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., opens tonight with a concert by the Beaux Arts Trio (Menahem Pressler, pianist; Daniel Guilet violinist, and Bernard Greenhouse, cellist). Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concerts on Friday and Saturday nights with Rudolf Serkin as soloist on the latter date in Schumann's Piano Concerto. Richard Burgin will conduct Sunday afternoon's Boston Symphony concert, with his wife, Ruth Posselt, violinist, as soloist in a Hindemith violin concerto.

The Boston Symphony and the Boston "Pops" Orchestras will give the evening concert in the "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit on Thursday, Aug. 9, with Heitor Villa-Lobos and Arthur Fiedler conducting. Jesus Maria Sanroma will be soloist in Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F.

There will also be performances by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center at 4 p. m. and at 6 p. m., following a welcoming address at 5:45 by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the center. There will be singing by the Tanglewood Chorus under Hugh Ross at 7 p. m. during a period set aside for picnic suppers on the lawn. Dancing on the lawn will follow the concert.

Rita Hayworth Hurt

LONDON, July 24 (AP).—Film star Rita Hayworth suffered minor bruises in an automobile accident today.

[117]

Benny Goodman To Play At Music Mountain On Sunday

BENNY GOODMAN . . . famous clarinetist who will play at Music Mountain this Sunday afternoon. A musical star in both classic and jazz fields, Mr. Goodman will play with the Berkshire Quartet in a Brahms Quintet on Sunday.

There will be an important change in the program of the fifth Sunday afternoon chamber music concert of the twenty-seventh Music Mountain season for Sunday, July 29, at Music Mountain, Falls Village. Benny Goodman, eminent virtuoso of the clarinet in the fields of jazz and classical music, will be the featured guest artist in a program of Brahms, Rainier, and Mozart. Natasha Magg, who was scheduled to appear with her husband, Berkshire Quartet cellist Fritz Magg, in Chopin's Sonata for Cello and Piano in G Minor, will be presented on Sunday, August 19, at 4 in the afternoon. Mrs. Magg and Fritz Magg will then perform the Chopin Sonata for Cello and Piano.

The program for Sunday, July 29, will be the Quartet in B Flat Major (K.458) (The Hunt) by Mozart; the Quartet by Priaulx Rainier; and the Quintet for Clarinet and Strings in B Minor, Opus 115 by Brahms. Benny Goodman, who appeared twice at Tanglewood during the summer in works by Mozart, will join the members of the Berkshire Quartet in the Brahms Quintet for Clarinet and Strings.

Benny Goodman, who has realized his popular success and acclaim in the field of jazz, was trained in the classic mold and is a very accomplished clarinetist in both areas —the area of jazz and the area of classical music. His wide international acceptance as one of the foremost men of jazz marks him a distinguished jazz clarinetist; and the enthusiastic acclaim of music critics for his appeanrance in classical music recital and concert marks him an eminent musician in the area for which his early music training prepared him.

The program for the sixth Sunday afternoon concert, August 5, will present Virginia Robinson, harpist, as the assisting artist. The Program will consist of the Quartet in A Major (K. 464) by Mozart; the Danse sacre et profane by Debussy; and the Quartet in G Major, Opus 61 by Dvorak.

Koussevitzky Tribute Set For Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semifinal week of summer symphonic music, opening with a joint recital of chamber music of Schumann and Mozart by pianist Rudolph Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet on Wednesday evening, August 1, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The three week-end concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon are held in the huge Music Shed, and will be by Eleazar de Carvalho, director of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro (August 3); by Leonard Bernstein (August 4); by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch (August 5).

Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the Boston Symphony's former conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will devote his concert as a meorial to his patron, and it will consist of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the United States, and the Tanglewood premiere of Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), Kyrie and Gloria, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berksnire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon, and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum. Mr. Bernstein came to Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long his long association with the Berkshire music school as assistant to Dr. Koussevitzky in 1942.

Dr. Munch's Sunday concert, in which Zino Francescatti will participate as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann (July 29, 1856) with a performance of his second symphony, and will also give the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode.

Two Works to Have Festival Premieres

Compositions of Petrassi and Hanson to Be Heard

Noted Italian's Work Scheduled for Friday Concert and That of Head of Eastman School of Music Is on Saturday Program. — Dr. Munch and Richard Burgin on Podium.

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, is in the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music. Last night a concert of chamber music by Mendelssohn, Revel and Brahms by The Beaux Arts Trio, was given in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the week-end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon.

Dr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer, who is guest teacher of composition this summer at the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, at Tanglewood.

The Saturday evening Festival concert is composed of works by Schumann, Honegger, Debussy, and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Howard Hanson, director of music at the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, Rochester, N. Y.

Both the Petrassi Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, on Friday night, and the Hanson Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky on Saturday evening were commissioned jointly by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitzky Music Foundation for the current, seventy-fifth anniversary of the orchestra, and were introduced to audiences during the past winter in Boston.

Rudolf Serkin, the celebrated concert pianist who appeared at Tanglewood in 1955 for the first time at a Berkshire Festival concert, and who attracted a near-record audience of 15,624, will be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor, on Saturday night.

Richard Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert consists of music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler, with Ruth Posselt—in private life Mrs. Burgin—as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Mr. Burgin, with William Kroll, heads the chamber music teaching at the Berkshire Music Center, where Miss Posselt is also on the faculty.

Coming Events

July 26-27-28 — Series "B" concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox. Evenings at 8:30; Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

Week's Events At Tanglewood

The fourth week of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., opens tonight with a concert by the Beaux Arts Trio (Menahem Pressler, pianist; Daniel Guilet violinist, and Bernard Greenhouse, cellist). Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concerts on Friday and Saturday nights with Rudolf Serkin as soloist on the latter date in Schumann's Piano Concerto. Richard Burgin will conduct Sunday afternoon's Boston Symphony concert, with his wife, Ruth Posselt, violinist, as soloist in a Hindemith violin concerto.

The Boston Symphony and the Boston "Pops" Orchestras will give the evening concert in the "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit on Thursday, Aug. 9, with Heitor Villa-Lobos and Arthur Fiedler conducting. Jesus Maria Sanroma will be soloist in Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F.

There will also be performances by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center at 4 p. m. and at 6 p. m., following a welcoming address at 5:45 by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the center. There will be singing by the Tanglewood Chorus under Hugh Ross at 7 p. m. during a period set aside for picnic suppers on the lawn. Dancing on the lawn will follow the concert.

Rita Hayworth Hurt

LONDON, July 24 (AP).—Film star Rita Hayworth suffered minor bruises in an automobile accident today.

[117]

Jewish Advocate Boston

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., FRIDAY, JULY 27, 1956

Ruth Posselt to Be Soloist at Tanglewood This Sunday

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, this weekend moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music.

Charles Munch, music director of the Symphony, conducts two of the week end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday, July 27 and Saturday, July 28, evenings and the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon, July 29.

Dr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer who is guest teacher of composition this summer at the orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center.

The Saturday evening Festival concert is composed of works by Schumann Honegger, Debussy and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Howard Hanson, director of music at the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, New York.

Both the Petrassi Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, on Friday night and the Hanson Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitsky on Saturday evening were commissioned jointly by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitsky Music Foundation for the current, 75th, anniversary of the orchestra, and were introduced to audiences during the past winter in Boston.

Rudolf Serkin, the celebrated concert pianist who appeared at Tanglewood in 1955 for the first time at a Berkshire Festival concert and who attracted a near-record audience of 15,624, wil be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor, on July 28.

RUTH POSSELT

Richard Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert consists of music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler, with Ruth Posselt —in private life, Mrs. Burgin —as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Mr. Burgin, with William Kroll, heads the chamber music teaching at the Berkshire Music Center, where Miss Posselt is also on the faculty.

Tanglewood concerts are at 8.30 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays and the Sunday afternoon concert is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow audiences to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of the performance. A bonus for Festival patrons is the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a.m., July 28, for which a nominal charge is made of $1 for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

Munch to Conduct Petrassi Concerto At Lenox Today

Lenox, July 26—Charles Munch will conduct the Tanglewood premere Friday night of the Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 by composer Gofredo Petrassi as the second weekend of concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1956 Berkshire Festival gets under way in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood at 8.30.

In addition, the program includes the Second "Leonore" Overture by Beethoven and Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, both of which have recently been released by RCA victor in recorded performances by Dr. Munch and the Orchestra.

Mr. Petrassi, who composed his Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is this summer's visiting professor of composition at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Charles Munch conducted the world premiere of the work at a pair of Boston Symphoy concerts last December, and then conducted it in New York and various other eastern cities. It is in two contrasting movements, the first a Presto, the second an Andante tranquillo and Lento.

Tomorrow evening, pianist Rudolf Serkin, who made his Tanglewood debut last summer at a notable concert which drew more than 15,000 persons, will return to perform with Dr. Munch and the Orchestra the Piano Concerto in A Minor by Robert Schumann in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. The program also will include music by Hanson, Honegger and Debussy. Sunday afternoon, Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will make his only Tanglewood conducting appearance of the season in a concert which will also feature his wife, violinist Ruth Posselt, in a performance of the Hindemith Concerto.

A bonus for Festival patrons is the public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 10 Saturday. A nominal admission of $1 is charged for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Lowell Sun Thursday July 19 1956

MUSIC

ALFRED W. [illegible]

LOWELL—A change in policy will mark this year's schedule at the Organ Institute of Andover with the regular weekly series of recitals given on Thursday and Friday evenings. Previous to this Friday and Saturday were reserved for the series.

The opening concert this year will be played on Thursday evening, Aug. 2. There has been no official announcement, but it is certain that a program played on another instrument will be listed.

For the first time since the series was inaugurated, Arthur Howes, director of the Institute, will not appear in the artist series. His activities as a teacher and adviser will force him to be absent during the week - ends listed.

Largest Enrollment

There is much interest on the part of students in regards to the Institute this year. Possibly the largest enrollment yet recorded in the daily classes has been announced.

Possibly the interest in organ is growing and it could also be that the directing committee and faculty have made this possible. Aside from the large scale summer festivals, the Organ Institute has shown the largest growth.

One of the finest chamber music programs yet recorded in the history of the Berkshire festival was given at last Wednesday evening program. The Boston Symphony quartet conducted by the orchestra's concert master, Richard Burgin, marked the occasion.

The final movement of Haydn's "Quartet in E flat major" brought much sincere humor to those present. It seemed that this final expression on the part of the group more than sufficed for a not too interesting opening.

The evening's highlight occurred when the celebrated clarinetist, Benny Goodman, joined the group in a performance of Mozart's "Clarinet Quintet in A major."

Benny Goodman is one of the few who finds interest in both the long and short of it all. Basically, he is more at home in the lighter vein. However, in full credit to this fine musician, it is safe to say that if he did nothing else but play simple-styled scales, his knowledge of his chosen instrument is such that he musically speaks with great authority.

Tomorrow evening Charles Munch and the full 106-piece Boston Symphony orchestra will perform the first of this season's 12 Berkshire festival concerts in the giant music shed at Tanglewood. For this program, Dr. Munch has chosen Berlioz' overture, "The Roman Carnival"; Debussy's prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun; the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe"; and Brahm's Second Symphony.

Saturday evening, Dr. Munch conducts a concert performance of Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkure" with Miss Hanshaw as Sieglinde, Albert Da Costa as Siegmund, and James Pease as Hundling; also, Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and the Tanglewood premiere of Brohuslav Martinu's "Fantasies Symphonique."

On Sunday afternoon, Pierre Monteaux makes his first appearance of this season at Tanglewood as guest conductor in a program made up of works by Rossini, Bartok and Schubert.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
MORNING TELEGRAPH
Circ. D. 70,130
JUN 30 1956

Tanglewood Series Begins July 4

Symphony, choral and chamber music are presented again with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch. For the 17th summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12.

The '56 festival of 24 concerts begins July 4 with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On July 6 Charles Munch will conduct an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 24 1956

Tanglewood Opera Plans

A program of acts from five 19th-century operas will be given by students of the opera department of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, on Monday evening, July 30. At 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tnaglewood under the direction of opera department's head Boris Goldovsky, 30 students will perform works by Berlioz, Puccini, and Verdi.

Admission is through membership in the Friends, the organization through which contributions are made to assist the Berkshire Music Center. The program will consist of the fourth act from Berlioz' "The Trojans"; the first act of Puccini's "La Rondine" (The Swallow), never before done at Tanglewood; an act from Verdi's "Don Carlo"; Act I, Scene 2 from Verdi's "Falstaff"; also scenes from "Aida."

The operas will have scenery designed by Robert O'Hearn ("The Trojans"), the department's new designer; by technical director Thomas DeGaetani ("Falstaff"), and by Mr. O'Hearn's assistant, Edward Flesh ("La Rondine" and "Don Carlo"). Costumes will be by Leo Van Witsen. Mr. Goldovsky will provide piano accompaniment.

[118]

Louis Abrazall
Boston

Ruth Posselt to Be Soloist at Tanglewood This Sunday

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, this weekend moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music.

Charles Munch, music director of the Symphony, conducts two of the week end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday, July 27 and Saturday, July 28, evenings and the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin, takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon, July 29.

RUTH POSSELT

Dr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, and the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, noted Italian composer who is guest teacher of composition this summer at the orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center.

The Saturday evening Festival concert is composed of works by Schumann Honegger, Debussy and the first Tanglewood performance of a contemporary work by Howard Hanson, director of music at the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, New York.

Both the Petrassi Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5, on Friday night and the Hanson Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitsky on Saturday evening were commissioned jointly by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitsky Music Foundation for the current, 75th, anniversary of the orchestra, and were introduced to audiences during the past winter in Boston.

Rudolf Serkin, the celebrated concert pianist who appeared at Tanglewood in 1955 for the first time at a Berkshire Festival concert and who attracted a near-record audience of 15,624, wil be soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor, on July 28.

Richard Burgin's Sunday afternoon concert consists of music by Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler, with Ruth Posselt —in private life, Mrs. Burgin —as soloist in Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Mr. Burgin, with William Kroll, heads the chamber music teaching at the Berkshire Music Center. where Miss Posselt is also on the faculty.

Tanglewood concerts are at 8.30 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays and the Sunday afternoon concert is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow audiences to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of the performance. A bonus for Festival patrons is the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a.m., July 28, for which a nominal charge is made of $1 for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

Munch to Conduct Petrassi Concerto At Lenox Today

Lenox, July 26—Charles Munch will conduct the Tanglewood premere Friday night of the Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 by composer Gofredo Petrassi as the second weekend of concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1956 Berkshire Festival gets under way in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood at 8.30.

In addition, the program includes the Second "Leonore" Overture by Beethoven and Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, both of which have recently been released by RCA victor in recorded performances by Dr. Munch and the Orchestra.

Mr. Petrassi, who composed his Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is this summer's visiting professor of composition at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Charles Munch conducted the world premiere of the work at a pair of Boston Symphoy concerts last December, and then conducted it in New [illegible] and various other eastern cities. It is in two constrasting movements, the first a Presto, the second an Andante tranquillo and Lento.

Tomorrow evening, pianist Rudolf Serkin, who made his Tanglewood debut last summer at a notable concert which drew more than 15,000 persons, will return to perform with Dr. Munch and the Orchestra the Piano Concerto in A Minor by Robert Schumann in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. The program also will include music by Hanson, Honegger and Debussy. Sunday afternoon, Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orhestra, will make his only Tanglewood conducting appearance of the season in a concert which will also feature his wife, violinist Ruth Posselt, in a performance of the Hindemith Concerto.

A bonus for Festival patrons is the public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 10 Saturday. A nominal admission of $1 is charged for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORK, N. Y.
MORNING TELEGRAPH
Circ. D. 70,130
JUN 30 1956

Tanglewood Series Begins July 4

Symphony, choral and chamber music are presented again with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch. For the 17th summer since the Boston Symphony assumed the direction of the 19-year-old summer music festival, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 4 to August 12.

The '56 festival of 24 concerts begins July 4 with chamber music of Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven by the Kroll String Quartet. On July 6 Charles Munch will conduct an all-Mozart program, with jazz clarinetist Benny Goodman making his Tanglewood debut as soloist.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
JUL 24 1956

Tanglewood Opera Plans

A program of acts from five 19th-century operas will be given by students of the opera department of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, on Monday evening, July 30. At 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tnaglewood under the direction of opera department's head Boris Goldovsky, 30 students will perform works by Berlioz, Puceini, and Verdi.

Admission is through membership in the Friends, the organization through which contributions are made to assist the Berkshire Music Center. The program will consist of the fourth act from Berlioz' "The Trojans"; the first act of Puccini's "La Rondine" (The Swallow), never before done at Tanglewood; an act from Verdi's "Don Carlo"; Act I, Scene 2 from Verdi's "Falstaff"; also scenes from "Aïda."

The operas will have scenery designed by Robert O'Hearn ("The Trojans"), the department's new designer; by technical director Thomas DeGaetani ("Falstaff"), and by Mr. O'Hearn's assistant, Edward Flesh ("La Rondine" and "Don Carlo"). Costumes will be by Leo Van Witsen. Mr. Goldovsky will provide piano accompaniment.

[118]

Lowell Sun Thursday July 19 1956

MUSIC

ALFRED W. BURKE

